EDITORIAL COMMENT

NOT SUCH A BAD WORLD.

As we write these lines on Friday, Dec. 31, 1926, the last day of the old year, we find ourselves wondering about the world in which we have lived for a good many years and in which we hope to live a good many more. What kind of world is it, anyway?

We think of it, first, as a bad world. From this point of view, it is a dark picture.

The nations of the world are ill at ease. There is much talk about world peace; but there is also much talk about another war. There is selfishness and suspicion and distrust and antipathy and hatred. There has been an international agreement looking toward disarmament, but there is evidence that armaments are increasing and the cost of military and naval preparedness is constantly mounting.

There is widespread economic unrest. The age-long conflict between capital and labor is still being waged. There is manifestly an unequal distribution of wealth. The rich seem to be growing richer, and the poor seem to be growing poorer. In great cities there is, on one hand, the luxurious and profligate living of the immensely wealthy, and, on the other hand, the pathetic and tragic suffering of the poverty-stricken. Men and women and little children dying of hunger are living neighbors to those who live in palaces and fare sumptuously every day without a care for the suffering around them.

The world is in an intellectual ferment. This is an age of free-thinking. There is no respect for the body of knowledge accumulated by those who have gone before. The most sacred beliefs that have come down to us from the past are boldly, if not viciously, attacked by those who will have none of them. Philosophers as well as theologians are seeking after some new thing.

Sin is rampant and shameless. Human life is cheap—the most atrocious murders are committed just for the thrill of killing. The gravest charges are made openly against the purity of social life. Law is openly violated and brazenly held in contempt. Irreverence for sacred things is widespread, and blasphemous words and conduct are commonplace. Evil is entrenched and the forces of righteousness apparently are fighting a losing battle. Sin abounds.

Surely this is a bad world, and the sooner we are quit of it, the better.

But there is another side. Before we give up the fight and go hence, let us look at this other side.

God still exists—and he has not abdicated his throne. This is a solemn and satisfying thought. God is good, just, omniscient, omnipotent, the All-Maker and the All-Ruler. This is his world, for he made it, and he is still interested in it and in everything that tends to make it what he wants it to be. God has not given up hope—he is still working, through his Spirit and through men, to save the world.

Jesus Christ is still the Son of God, and he loved the world so much that he gave his life that men through him might be saved. Surely his death was not in vain. He evidently believed that righteousness would ultimately prevail, for he taught his disciples to pray for the coming of the Kingdom—and he would not have mocked the faith of his followers with a vain hope. He was "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief"—but he was an invincible optimist.

In spite of all the injustice and suffering and sin in the world, there are multiplied thousands of men and women who are consecrated, loyal, happy followers of Christ in the world to-day—men and women who are doing all in their power to stem the flood of evil and set up the bulwarks of righteousness in every realm of human activity. They are giving of their time and talents and means to the establishment, extension, and maintenance of the kingdom of God upon earth. These men and women constitute a mighty army, whose watchword is "Onward," and upon whose banners is inscribed the triumphant word, "Victory." Their Leader is omnipotent, and their faith is undismayed.

There are signs of a brighter and better day ahead. There is manifest a deep hunger in the hearts of men for spiritual rest and peace. No call for service in behalf of a good cause goes wholly unheeded. Great foundations for the promotion of justice and good will and for the betterment of mankind in every way are being established. Men of high position, great achievements—far-seeing men—are more and more laying emphasis upon the necessity of a moral basis for the building of a permanent civilization—and the principles of Christ are universally accepted as the standard of righteousness. The Golden Rule is more and more becoming operative in the dealings of men with their fellow-men, and the law of love is more generally accepted and obeyed than ever before in the history of the world. There has never been a time when the young people were more easily interested in altruistic movements or when they more gladly gave themselves to helping forward all good causes.

We cannot separate these signs of a better day from the influence and power of the Christian religion. On this last day of the year of our Lord 1926, it appears without controversy that Jesus Christ is the greatest blessing that has ever come to the world. Sin abounds—but grace does much more abound.

It is a world that challenges the best that good men can give. It is a field of limitless opportunities. What a field of usefulness for a good man, a brave man, a determined man—a man to whom difficulty is a spur to greater achievement! A real man is not looking for an easy job.

This is a beautiful world we are living in, too. To-day the sun is shining out of a blue sky. As we came to work this morning we saw roses blooming radiantly in some yards we passed. Yesterday evening a mocking bird mounted to the top of a barren tree and lilted a melody that was a sweet promise of verdant spring. We met friends during the day who spoke cheerily, greeting us with good wishes for the New Year. When we go home this evening loved ones will welcome us with tokens of affection, and the peace of God will rest upon the hearts that labored during the day.

With God in his heaven and Christ at his right hand and the Holy Spirit in the world working in and through and for men; with golden hearted men and women loyally and lovingly laboring for the ongoing of the Kingdom; with radiant signs of a better day shining all around us; with shining sun and blooming flowers and singing birds; with friends to cheer us along the way and loved ones to comfort and sustain us always—this is not such a bad world after all. God willing, we will make it a little better in 1927.

THE MISSIONARY INSTITUTES.

The missionary institutes being held throughout the church at this time as a part of the missionary cultivation campaign are tremendously important in preparing the way for the free-will offerings to be taken in February for the support of our missionary activities. The reports that have come to us from those already held in our patronizing territory are altogether encouraging. The pastors and leaders among the laity are attending these institutes with a mind to learn and a desire to do their full duty in carrying out the plans adopted by the recent General Conference.

These leaders of the church—and they are leaders by virtue of their official positions—are charged with a heavy responsibility. The carrying on of this special period of missionary cultivation is not merely a matter of individual whim or personal convenience—it is a part of the official program of the church and is directed to be done at the time specified. The legislation providing for this January-February campaign is not merely advisory—it is a part of the law of the church. Official leaders of the church cannot be less than loyal to the law of the church.

The real task at this tme is to give the information to all our people concerning our work in eleven fields and concerning the financial needs of the work. When the people know, they will do. We have no doubt about the response Mississippi and Louisiana Methodists will make to the call of their church when they become acquainted with all the facts in the case.

HOW TO EMPLOY WISELY WHAT IS LEFT.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The ending of any period of life, followed by the opening of another, inclines one to serious reflection.

The coming of a birthday, though it be one of merriment, sugests the solemn thought that the day of death is nearer by a year.

The passing of the Old Year and the coming of the New Year remind us also that life is passing fast away.

In old age such thoughts on the fleeting course of time are increasingly impressive. The years that remain are known to be far less than those that have passed.

What shall be done with the days and years that remain? However wasteful of time the youthful may be, the aged feel that of the days left them, none should be lost or bestowed on matters of small importance.

Rousseau said that " all time is lost which might be employed better." The last days, therefore, should be devoted to the best things. A choice must be made between even good things that one might do, if ample time remained, and effort concentrated on the best things daily.

But how shall we ascertain what are the best? What may be the best for one man to do may not be the best for another.

"To choose time is to save time," says Bacon. By what principle, or principles, then may we choose it for the best use when so much of it is gone that we feel it supremely important to save every moment of what is left?

In answering this question, we may be sure that in age we cannot direct our course without reference to the years that have gone before. Life's evening must take in a great measure its character from what has preceded. Late in life a lawyer cannot turn to preaching with any reasonable hope of a successful ministry, nor can any other vocation which has been followed for years be safely abandoned and a new calling be undertaken. The habits of body, mind, and soul have become too rigidly fixed to be easily changed.

Unless one has engaged in some immoral pursuit, which must be abandoned at all cost, he cannot wisely change his work late in life. In advanced years, "let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called" (I Corinthians vii:20).

But he must fulfill his calling with increased fidelity and diligence. It is never too late to improve; it is never too late to do one's work better than it was ever done before. Working in the twilight of life may bring forth the fairest and best results.

"Ah, nothing is too late
Till the tired heart shall cease to palpitate.
Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophocles
Wrote his grand Aedipus, and Simonides
Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers
When each had numbered more than fourscore years,
And Theophrastus at fourscore and ten
Had but begun his 'Characters of Men.'
Chaucer at Woodstock with the nightingales
At sixty wrote the Canterbury Tales;
Goethe at Weimar, toiling to the last,
Completed Faust when eighty years were past.
These are indeed exceptions; but they show
How far the gulf-stream of our youth may flow
Into the arctic regions of our lives
Where little else than life survives."

* * * * * * * *

"For age is opportunity no less
Than youth itself, though in another dress,
And as the evening twilight fades away
The sky is filled with stars invisible by day."

The four greatest of the Pauline Epistles—Ephesians, Colossians, Philippians and Philemon, commonly called "the Epistles of the Captivity"—were written when the aged Apostle to the Gentiles was a prisoner at Rome. To Philemon he writes, "Though I might be much bold in Christ to enjoin thee that which is convenient, yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee, being such an one as Paul the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ" (verses 8 and 9).

John Bunyan wrote "Pilgrim's Progress," a book which has gone through more editions than any other except the Bible, when he was above fifty years of age and while he was suffering imprisonment in Bedford jail with no books by him but the Bible and Fox's "Book of Martyrs."

John Wesley wasted no moment of time from the beginning of his long life unto its close, which fact accounts for the prodigious amount of work done by him. On one occasion another's delay caused him to wait needlessly, when he exclaimed, "I have lost ten minutes forever." "You have no need to hurry," said a friend who was standing by, to whom he replied, "Hurry! I have no time to be in a hurry." Time to him was too precious to be squandered in haste or indolence. He toiled systematically and tirelessly to within less than a week of his death, which occurred in his eighty-eighth year. Scarcely an hour before his departure he sat up and sang,

"I'll praise my Maker while I've breath,
And when my voice is lost in death,
Praise shall employ my nobler powers:
My days of praise shall ne'er be past
While life, and thought, and being last,
Or immortality endures."

All these mighty men lived under the eye of eternity, and especially during their last days. Thereby they redeemed time and exalted their labours to a heavenly level. Thus they viewed earthly things in their proper proportion and with a true perspective. To minds so placed, a severe spirit of power and an unwearying fidelity was most natural and most fitting.

Their time-view was illumined by the light of the endless life of the world to come, even as is the time-view of all true Christians. And this illumination from above shines with peculiar radiance upon a godly man's last days. In the faith which it inspires and stimulates he goes forth daily to do the work to which God calls him, and by a divine instinct fixes his attention on the tasks that he must discharge before nightfall comes upon him. His choice among even good things is directed by the Holy Spirit, to whose touch he is keenly responsive. He is not discouraged by hindrances nor hurried by conditions around him.

Neither sorrow or suffering diminish his zeal or distract his efforts.

The griefs of age are more frequent and poignant than any that have gone before them. Bereavements after bereavements follow one another in rapid succession; but they serve to quicken hope and ennoble labour. The faithful servant of God is tolling in sight of his heavenly home and in hearing distance of his "Company gone before." In full view of God and heaven he knows that the forces of evil can never triumph over the forces of good and that, therefore, his labour cannot be in vain. Wherefore he is steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

Like a veteran, not like a raw recruit, he fights even unto death, and finishes his warfare with a shout of victory.

In the consciousness of the near approach to such triumphs as soldiers of Christ, let those who have grown old in the divine service take leave of the Old Year and go bravely forward into the New Year, singing as they go:

"Lord, in the strength of grace,
With a glad heart and free,
Myself, my residue of days,
I consecrate to thee.

"Thy ransomed servant, I
Restore to thee thine own;
And, from this moment, live or die,
To serve my God alone."

Filled with such a spirit they cannot fail to employ wisely and well the remaining years of life.

SOME PREACHERS I HAVE KNOWN.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens was for years in charge of the German Methodist work in Texas and Louisiana. The chief characteristics of this man, as I noted them, were his profound faith in God, his wide range of learning, and his indefatigable industry. He combined thoroughness and thrift in the upbuilding of the interest of the church he loved so well. He was a faithful shepherd of the flock, an earnest, thoughtful preacher. Of poetic temperament, his prayers would frequently break into thrilling apostrophes to a throne of grace, in which he bore penitents and believers very near to the merciful Heavenly Father. As presiding elder, pastor, editor, scholar, he acquitted himself with marked success, and to many his name and memory are precious.

John Pipes was the faithful Achates of the Louisiana Conference. His deep piety, his unsullied purity of character, and his long years of faithful service—years when service meant sacrifice—gave to him a modest fame even in higher councils of the church. When placed on a responsible committee at a General Conference, Bishop McTyeire said, "You can trust him." He had the kind of faith that covered two worlds. Bending under the weight of years of toil, as a superannuated preacher, the bishop called him to lead the prayer at an Annual Conference. The opening sentence of that prayer abides with me through lengthening flight of time: "Oh, Lord, whether we live long or die soon, we are in thy hands." The alabaster box is broken; the rich fragrance lingers still.

John B. Cassity left his Kentucky home when quite a youth and joined that virile company of men who were seeking fortune in the then far western country. Much he would recount to us of wild frontier life—of its hardships and dangers. Still following his star of destiny, we hear of him under the tropic suns of British Honduras, coasting the Central American shores on a trading schooner. Under the ministry of Rev. N. B. Young, who was in the colony at that time, Brother Cassity joined the Methodist Church, South. His experience of spiritual things, not unlike the man himself, was strong and abiding. His was a purposeful and fruitful ministry. He had the grace of continuity. As an exhorter, calling men to life and repentance, I never saw his equal. He seemed altogether to disregard the flight of time in this work in which he was so earnest, so persistent, so successful. Hundreds were converted under his ministry, as the altar places at the camp meetings were crowded with penitents. Some men might have been content to see the chancel rail crowded; Cassity not infrequently ceased his strenuous exhortation only when it was filled within and without. People sometimes lost their heads under his fervent preaching, but they also lost their sins. Other men were better furnished from the viewpoint of the scholar, but few were more successful in winning souls to Christ.

John A. Miller was called, in his day, the St. John of the Louisiana Conference. He was a man of attractive, winning personality. The spirit of a minister and servant of his divine Lord seemed to go with him. Possibly he was more widely known in our State than any other Methodist preacher, for he had served as presiding elder in the Northern and Southern sections. People loved him for his sterling worth, his evangelical preaching, his brotherliness. Moreover, he had that rare gift of attending to his individual affars and the business of the church without concerning himself with things that were irrelevant. A successful and a popular minister is a rare combination; men instinctively knew John A. Miller loved them, and they loved him.

J. L. P. Sheppard, in the day of his strength, was probably the wisest counsellor and most useful man in the affairs of the Conference. The grace of common sense and sound judgment was his by native gift and development. With a loyal devotion to the church and her interests, he added a deep love for his fellow-man. His was the spirit of Abou Ben Adhem, as given us in that exquisite poem of Leigh Hunt. Sheppard's love for his Lord was of the kind that finds expression in deeds of consideration, kindliness, and usefulness during life. He was dependable—one could trust him with the assurance that no trust would be betrayed. Even in the latter years, when retired from the active ministry on account of age and failing strength, he was still interested in the great cause of Christian Education, and did much for our institution at Mansfield, in the time when its affairs were in a critical condition, and its future unpromising.

There are many others of our preachers, men who were prominently useful and faithful. But time and space would fail me to write of all. I think one of the joys of the coming larger life to us elderly men will be the communion and fellowship hereafter of those with whom we have wrought.

THE WOMEN AND THEIR RELATIONSHIP TO THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

By Mrs. Luke Johnson.

(An address delivered at the General Missionary Council, Louisville, Ky., Dec. 15-16, 1926.)

For thirty-two years the women of our church worked in an organization set up by the General Conference for the special "purpose of hastening the coming of the kingdom of God throughout the world."

For twenty-two years these same women worked in another organization for the "purpose of hastening the coming of the kingdom of God in our own land."

In 1910 the General Conference, in session in Asheville, N. C., made a new constitution for the General Board of Missions in which the two organizations referred to, viz., the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions and the Woman's Board of Home Missions, were made an organic part of the General Board in a way which had not hitherto existed. This was done presumably for the purpose of recognizing the actual participation of the women members of the church in the activities of the General Board and also for the purpose of bringing all sections of the missionary work more directly under one command.

These new plans wisely provided for the active participation of all the former separate organizations in the new and larger organization. A certain per cent of the membership of the new Board was guaranteed to women, and an equal number of secretaries was allotted to them. This united organization has functioned now for sixteen years as one body under the direct control of the General Conference. Some changes of administrative methods have been ordered in each succeeding session of the General Conference, which changes have always brought about a closer and a more effective relationship between all parts of the organization.

With this brief technical statement concerning the development of the organizations under which we have been working, the relation of the women of the church to the Board of Missions is evident. They not only have a relationship to it, but—they—are—of—it. Their relationship is exactly what the relationship of every other part of the membership is—they are its constituency. With an unreserved acceptance of this situation, much difficulty on the part of both the man and the women of the Board would be removed.

As one of the two women now on the Board who have been members continuously since women were given membership on it, I have had opportunity for some interesting observations. In the beginning, women were seemingly supposed to be representing the woman's organized work only—and perhaps they were. As such it may have been becoming in them to accept that place and function only in the interest of the organization they represented. This course was largely adhered to for some years, but with the experience born of active participation and with a larger information, there was a growing recognition on the part of the women themselves as well as on the part of a portion of the men of the Board that every individual member was responsible for its every interest. Sitting as they have for these sixteen years in review, and rendering decisions on every part of the work of missions of our church, the women have come to realize more and more that membership means responsibility for the whole task. They have, therefore, accepted this responsibility and have served in every capacity open to them. They have their places in every department, they are on nearly every committee, and three of their number serve continuously on the executive committee.

Perhaps some of you who have been long in the work will bear me out in the statement that the contributions of the women to the discussions and decisions from time to time have been no mean part. Their contributions of money are in both the treasury of the General work and of the Woman's work. No interest of the work of the local church can be divorced from them because they are a part of that local church, and their funds are recorded on that side of the ledger also. The funds of the women everywhere are in the General Treasury, and I have heard it said that the interest of all humankind "follows their dollars."

So it is not surprising that the women members of the Board have come to recognize themselves as an integral part of the Board itself and that they endeavor to contribute the best that is in them to its advancement. No detail of the work fails to receive their undivided interest, their earnest prayers, and their best efforts. With the new legislation giving these same women who serve in the General Board an opportunity to serve as members of the Conference Boards also, we may expect the same devotion and self-sacrificing labors in that field.

With this nearly ideal set-up of the mission forces of the church before us, we naturally ask why two separate organizations—a Woman's Missionary Council and a General Missionary Council. We might find ourselves prone to disagree with this process except for the fact that we have long been taught that we must take, and work with, men and women where and as we find them instead of where we think they should be. At times we find ourselves dreaming—dreaming of what our church would be to-day if the fathers of 1878 had given these timid women who knocked at the door of the church and asked for a real place to work, a place inside our church home instead of just outside in an attached organization. We can but wonder if the life of the church would have been richer, if the women themselves would have been bigger and broader and more helpful if the relationships had been different all these years. We do not know. But this we do know—that these years of leadership, these years of carrying a great burden and a great responsibility, these years of walking with God in efforts to carry his love to every creature, have developed the women to the point of their present ability to work and to serve for the good of all mankind. From this angle of thinking we content ourselves with present relationships, feeling sure that we will go on into yet greater paths of service and into more effective relationships on our mission enterprise.

As members of the church, women cannot be other than related to the whole program of the church, while the extra organization they have built up in the necessities of the case is in the nature of a "special." As a "Special" it has been necessary to throw around it the usual protection given specials, such as assurance that its funds shall not be diverted from the objects toward which they were given and at the same time provide it with latitude for the widest possible cultivation of its field.

We are led to believe, therefore, that the relationship of the women of the church to the Board of Missions is just what the relationship of the men of the church is—all members working together or in special groups as the needs of the church may indicate and demand. No program of the local church or the General Board should be launched without properly relating every part of the church to it. We confidently hope for a day when this may be done without reference to whether it is a man or a woman doing the task, but that it may be done solely on the basis of the need and the person best able to discharge the responsibility. If in the nature of the case different flanks or "specials" seem to be demanded, then they should be regarded as specials—all contributing to the great and undivided cause. In this event it should be remembered that it is the business of the church to carry the whole work of the church in a way that no part shall suffer by the activities of any other part. Our president, Bishop Beauchamp, recently said: "We are working in sections in our Boards and our habit is to emphasize what confronts our section more than what confronts the entirety of the church. All of us ought to think together on the base-line of our work."

If those of us who have long been in the organized work of missions and those of us who are setting in operation more kinds of machinery for its promotion, could keep ourselves saturated with this vital fact spoken by our leader, what might we not accomplish together? The women of the church are striving more and more to think and work together with you "on the base-line of our work."

BEGINNING AGAIN.

By W. Russell Maltby, D.D., President of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference.

A first of January question is always this: Can one being again? I know few more vital questions than that. Can one in any real sense begin again? When we are very young it seems an easy thing to do; we are so sure that we can repair our mistakes and forsake our sins and start all over again. The little children that are asleep in their beds to-night, they can do that many and many a time; a few tears will wash out a whole bad day, and they can start again. But we are different, we older people. The moderate achievements and the many failures of the past are all inside us. The trouble about our past failures is that they are not past; they are doing their work within us, and they ply their silent argument in the unconscious regions of our nature, and tell us, though we do not know they are telling us, that as we have been so we shall be.

Self-Acting Machinery.

And the authorities are mostly on the side of that argument. The people who study the make-up of the human mind are more and more impressed with this marvelous apparatus of habit which we all have within us and which seems designed to fix the past irrevocably upon us. They look into these natures of ours and find they consist of self-acting machinery for reproducing, not only the actions, but deeper still, the moods of yesterday, as though there were within us an enemy determined that there should be no real fresh beginning, and that we must be content only to repeat ourselves. So the authorities say, and there is a whole world of rather desolating experience all to the same effect, saying, "You cannot really begin again."

If one could begin again, is there anything we more desire? As soon as hope shows itself above that element in which it is usually submerged, as soon as hope can make itself heard, we have that longing to begin again, if it were possible, if the authorities would permit it. There is nothing we want more to do than to begin again.

Some preachers whom I have heard have preached from the text, "Ye must be born again." I wonder why they sometimes say that "must" in such a menacing way. I cannot see why any one should preach the gospel as though he were a man calling with a dog to collect a debt. It is not the way in which we should preach good news; and if we say it threateningly to people, perhaps they will answer defensively, "Must I?" If we said it aright, perhaps they would say, "May I?" For there is nothing we want more than such an indescribable new start as might be called being reborn.

Now there is nothing in which the New Testament is at once more characteristic of itself and more unique than in the way in which it preaches to us that you can begin again. That is what the grace of God achieves for people.

A New Beginning.

Every metaphor that could set out an indescribable new beginning is used by the New Testament. It is said to be like a new creation, like being born again, like being raised from the dead; it is said to be like passing from slavery into sonship, like a change of king and kingdom, like a going from darkness into light; and so forth. Every almost violent metaphor that could be caught in the hoop of a great and splendid beginning is used in this New Testament. I know that these metaphors have often been hardened into literalism, and then when they would not square with experience have been degraded into magic. But we must not turn away from a testimony so strong and irresistible as that of these men who knew. Christ does nothing for a man if he does not enable him to begin again.

So that would be my word to you this night: Begin again.

Begin Again With God.

First of all, we must begin again with God, and that means, I am sure, that we must begin again with our believing. Oh, I know that you will not all agree with me. Some practical people, so anxious to get to the business of amending their conduct, are impatient with this preliminary requirement of believing. Some of these rough-and-ready people say, "What does it matter what a man believes so that he lives right?" It seems a rather stupid thing to say.

If I remember aright, Othello killed Desdemona because he believed falsely that she was unfaithful, and then killed himself because he believed rightly that she was faithful after all. Do we not all know that what you believe, so long as it is vital enough, may make all the difference between heaven and hell in five minutes? Perhaps people have a wrong notion of what it means to believe, and perhaps they are thinking of believing something that is unintelligible to them or irrelevant to their lives. But when you come to the vital things with which religion is really concerned, to believe is really the beginning of all our deliverance.

Why do so many writers to-day write such unhappy books? Often when they are most unhappy it is because they are not sure that there is a meaning in things. If you think things out, human life must be either a revelation or a nightmare. If you cannot believe it is a revelation, you are sure to expect that it is a nightmare; and then if you write, how can you write anything but unhappy books? Oh, it matters all the world what we believe.

Damaging Unbelief.

So I want to say that we might begin again with our believing. Ah, your trouble is probably not that you are an unbeliever. But, then, what is unbelief?

Unbelief of the really damaging kind is not usually the kind that denies and questions and protests; it is the kind that gives continued assent in a stupor like people agreeing in their sleep. That is the unbelief of which we are in danger. To feign surprise in things without being surprised at them, to talk of wonderful things without awe—that is the deadly unbelief that most of us need to be delivered from.

We need to turn back again, and begin again with our believing. There are a great many unintegrated things shot down upon our lives, expreiences that we ought to have gathered into the body of our faith and annexed as parts of God's realm and we have not done it. Perhaps our faith now may be confused. Yet it is very wonderful and very beautiful to find how the old simple certainties, when once you begin to listen, reassert themselves, rise up again above the threshold of the mind, and once again talk to us of how the things by which the spirit lives, once given the chance, come again home to our hearts; and, then, oh, so many doubts and questions fade away as irrelevant things or are postponed easily to another day, while the soul again re-enforces its life with the things that God meant to give us. Begin again with your believing, and it will work out in life.

Meaning in Life.

One might begin just by believing that there is a meaning in life and things, and that if we miss that meaning we miss all that life really has for us; if we find that meaning and abandon ourselves to it, nothing really can do us any harm. That would be a beginning.

We might begin by believing what we have so often said, and said without knowing that it was an incredible thing: we might begin by believing that God is love; that he has not made any more creatures than he can remember; that he has not made a single soul that he cannot take care of, and that there are no problems for you or me that God is not near enough or kind enough to control. We might begin by believing again that God is love—that incredible thing I called it, if it were not that every bit of human love that we have ever known preaches its own message to us, and says that if we being evil do know how to give little bits of good gifts to those we love, how much more will our heavenly Father give good things to them that ask him! We might begin there.

We might begin by believing that he whose name is Saviour, and who has been honored under that name by countless men and women through the ages, is able to do a Saviour's work, to do it now, to do it always, and to do it all. We might begin by believing such things as that.

Our Prayer Life.

Next, I say, if we are to believe in God again, we might begin afresh with our praying. I know there are a great many people who are proving to us that now they cannot pray because there is no time. Very well, I am not going to try to meet that argument with detailed reasoning.

All I will say to any such is that if you cannot find time to pray, you cannot be a Christian, and you might as well give up the attempt to know anything of the Christian life. Or if you can only find time to pray with your eye on the clock, and hat in hand, and edging to the door; if when you come to God you come like those irritating people who are all breathless and in a hurry and cannot be persuaded to sit down; if that is the way you pray you cannot make much of the Christian life.

Could I persuade anybody to begin again in prayer, to sit down quietly, to dismiss the panic from their minds, and tell themselves that there is plenty of time, that they are not nearly so tired as they think, and that nothing will really go very wrong if they take time to pray—could I persuade anybody to do that, I think I should have done them about the greatest service one human being could do to another. We must begin again with our praying.

Our Own Beginnings.

That last word I have is this: We must begin with one another. Yes, with God first, and then that will teach us how to begin again with one another.

Strange, is it not, that God thinks more about us than we think about one another? We could, all of us, go to God and give a quite decent catalogue of our neighbor's defects and failures, and then we should have to fall back upon God himself to tell us of their virtues and excellencies and lovable things. Is that true? We must begin again with one another. We think we know one another because we have been long together in a kind of unblessed contiguity very often. I heard one of these critics discussing his neighbor and say, "I ought to know him; I lived ten years with him." Perhaps that is why you do not know him. For it is very often so. We need to begin again with one another. God give us a good year just ahead of us in 1927!—Methodist Episcopal Press.

TO THE PREACHERS AND MEMBERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At the last session of the Annual Conference I was appointed Commissioner of Superannuate Endowment Homes, and to assist in raising the Superannuate Endowment Fund in the Mississippi Conference. I shall be glad to assist the brethren in any way that I can. We must co-operate in every way in raising this fund. If the preachers will send me the names of the committee appointed by the quarterly conference for each church, I will be glad to correspond with them.

See question No. 6, Page 58, of the Discipline. I have secured $61.50 on the Superannuate Fund since Conference and have the promise of two lots in Jackson for the Superannuate Homes.

To me this is the most important work before the church. The General Conference has given us right-of-way during this quadrennium. Let us not forget the preachers who have labored with and for us and who are fast passing on.

I think that it would be a splendid custom to take the flowers that we have in our churches on Easter Sunday and put them on the preachers' graves at the places where they have been buried. I would appreciate it very much if the preachers or any one would give me the burial place of any of our sainted dead whose names appear in the Conference Journal. Address me, J. M. Morse, 144 Adams St., Jackson, Miss.

Very cordially your brother,

J. M. MORSE.

THE DEATH OF REV. I. L. PEEBLES—A DELAYED NOTICE.

If delay in giving notice to the death of Rev. Isaac Lockhardt Peebles seems strange, consider it as due to oversight only. The day of his death will be the anniversary of East End, Meridian's great sorrow. But it was his brightest day. Almost to the last hour of life on earth his mind seemed to repose in majestic poise and serenity while the light of victory shone upon his brow. Every lineament of his grand face reflected Christian character, and his whole presence breathed the saint hero. There was no fear with him when the end came. His silent testimony to the power of divine grace to sustain in the last great crisis rang clear with the note of victory. To his consciousness the loved ones and friends watching by his bed were no more really present than was that great Friend who had accompanied him in life. His faithful and devoted wife and children are comforted in the fact that he lived for the glory of God and the good of others.

The remains of our brother were tenderly borne to East End Church, where his pastor, assisted by his presiding elder, Rev. Robert Selby, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Revs. W. B. Jones, J. Loyd Decell, W. W. Moore, and W. H. Saunders, conducted the funeral, and thence he was borne to the cemetery. He was buried in hope.

A suitable memoir written by Dr. A. F. Watkins will soon be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

PREACHERS' CHILDREN IN AMORY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I was just sitting here, thinking of the heritage that has been left to Amory Methodism by some of the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference in the person of their children. There are seven sons and daughters of Methodist preachers living in Amory and the following statement will show how they are letting their influence be felt for the church: Mrs. C. P. Alexander, daughter of Rev. T. J. Durrett, is now and has been superintendent of the Beginners' Department for years; C. M. Harrison, son of Rev. K. M. Harrison, is a leader in the large men's Bible class in the church; A. M. Sargent, son of Brother Sargent, is active in League work and was president at one time of the men's Bible class; Mrs. W. H. Robinson, daughter of Rev. J. C. Park, is president of the large woman's class and active in musical circles of the church; Mrs. J. S. Mayfield, daughter of Rev. R. O. Brown, is a worker in the Junior Department of the Sunday school and chairman of a circle in the Missionary Society; Mrs. Roy Armstrong, daughter of Rev. W. A. Bowlin, is rearing a nice family of children for the church—her little children are always present at practically every service, prayer meeting and preaching; Mrs. Porter Roberts, daughter of Rev. W. M. Young, is active in the Missionary Society. All these people show in their lives that they were reared in a Christian atmosphere and are trying to let their lives count for the church.

DISTRICT MEETING AT BOONEVILLE, JAN. 13.

The Corinth District Missionary Institute will meet in Booneville, January 13, at 9 o'clock. There will be both a morning and afternoon session. All the pastors of the district, charge lay leaders, superintendents of Sunday schools, presidents of Missionary Societies, together with the district secretaries of the Woman's Missionary and Epworth League work, and all others who can, are urged to attend the meeting.

Speakers from the central office and also our own Conference secretary of missions will be present.

Our church has called—we will respond.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

TO MISSISSIPPI PASTORS.

May I call your attention to the fact that January 16th will be the eighth anniversary of the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and suggest that you and your congregation give some suitable recognition and emphasis to this important milestone in the progress of our great country? The rising generation needs to know the import of this event, justly to be classed as one of the outstanding achievements of our nation.

The anniversary day is Sunday this year. It would help law enforcement very much to hold a special service on that day, or on the nearest Sunday to this, possible. From any standpoint whatever considered, this is an important day. It is so religiously, morally, socially, educationally, scientifically, and economically. Mississippi ratified on January 8, 1918, in both houses within thirty minutes, and holds the distinction of being the first State in the Union to ratify. Within twelve months forty-five others followed. No such support was ever given any other Federal Constitutional Amendment.

T. J. BAILEY,
Superintendent Anti-Saloon League.

IT CAN'T BE DONE?

We are told that Rear Admiral McGowan, Paymaster General of the United States Navy, has had a little card printed and circulated in his department which has on it in gray type a background of "It Can't Be Done," and then in bold, black type across this is printed "But Here It is." The card is designed to prevent easily discouraged clerks from giving way to their natural besetment, and no doubt it helps a little in that direction.

There are a few sturdy souls who cannot be discouraged, but to most of us whenever an extra difficult task presents itself, especially if that task be new, "It can't be done" seems to spring spontaneously from our lips, and in most cases we fear that means "It won't be done." We all recognize that there are impossibilities, but there are a great many tremendous difficulties which are not impossibilities. They can be done. It will mean toil, hardest toil; it will mean planning, wisest planning; it will mean co-operation, widest co-operation; and it will mean patience, unlimited patience; but still—it can be done.

The world has been held back greatly by the vision of impossibility. There has seldom been a great invention which has not been laughed at for centuries as an attempt at the impossible. The locomotive, the aeroplane, steel ships, concrete ships, submarines, and a thousand other things now familiar to all of us, were once buried in the graveyard of the impossible. And there are doubtless a thousand more important things which are awaiting similar resurrection, and an admiring world will gaze in pleased astonishment at the new arrival and whisper "Here it is."

Some of our readers are up against this very problem to-day. Possibly not one of your friends believes you can achieve the seemingly impossible task which has been laid upon you; but something within you refuses to be discouraged, and if you can only keep up heart you will succeed in doing what others think cannot be done. Long ago Paul faced a similar situation, and he met it with the bold "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." When we get down to facts, there can be nothing really impossible to a God-inspired, God-strengthened man.—Christian Guardian.

NEW YEAR GREETINGS TO ALL THE BRETHREN.

Dear Brethren: I am writing this short note to you through the courtesy of Brother Carley.

A great many have spoken to me about evangelistic meetings for the new year. I am now making up my slate for 1927, and will appreciate correspondence in reference to dates, if the Lord leads you my way in thinking about your church revivals.

I had a great year last year. The Lord was with me, as I went to the brethren. God helped me in seventeen meetings, with a great many souls blessed and saved—thanks to His presence and power.

I am not carrying any singer this year, and, therefore, have no heavy expenses. I, however, will help any brother secure a singer if one is desired.

I am ready to respond to any call, small or great, and have adopted the policy of first come-first served. So if you desire my help for the coming year in evangelistic work, write now.

May the Lord bless and keep us all.

Sincerely,
CLAUDE P. JONES.

HARD TO BE COUNTERFEITED.

A man can counterfeit love, he can counterfeit faith, he can counterfeit hope and all the other graces, but it is very difficult to counterfeit humility. You soon detect mock humility. They have a saying in the East among Arabs, that as the tares and the wheat grow they show which God has blessed. The ears that God has blessed bow their heads and acknowledge every grain, and the more fruitful they are the lower their heads are bowed. The tares which God has sent as a curse, lift up their heads erect, high above the wheat, but they are only fruitful of evil. I have a pear tree on my farm which is very beautiful; it appears to be one of the most beautiful trees on my place. Every branch seems to be reaching up to the light and stands almost like a wax candle, but I never get any fruit from it. I have another tree, which was so full of fruit last year that the branches almost touched the ground. If we only get down low enough, my friends, God will use every one of us to his glory.

"As the lark that soars the highest builds her nest the lowest, as the nightingale that sings so sweetly sings in the shade when all things rest; as the branches that are most laden with fruit bend lowest; as the ship most laden sinks deepest in the water; so the holiest Christians are the humblest."

The London Times some years ago told the story of a petition that was being circulated for signatures. It was a time of great excitement, and this petition was intended to have great influence in the House of Lords; but there was one word left out. Instead of reading, "We humbly beseech thee," it read, "We beseech thee." So it was ruled out. My friends, if we want to make an appeal to the God of heaven, we must humble oprselves; and if we do humble ourselves before the Lord, we shall not be disappointed.—D. L. Moody.

CASH VALUE OF EDUCATION.

The cash value of an education is approximately $70,000, according to a statistical survey conducted by Dean Everett W. Lord, of the College of Business Administration of Boston University. The survey was made in connection with an investigation into the earning capacity of undergraduates at the college. Of forty-three graduates in the class of 1924 who as freshmen were earning $20 a week or less, thirteen had increased their salaries on the average of 68 per cent when they received their degree. Fifteen had doubled their earnings; seven had tripled them; five had quadrupled them; two had increased them fivefold, and one was earning six times as much as when he was a freshman.—Selected.

"TABLE NUMBER THREE."

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

In the Advocate of Dec. 16, 1926, under the above caption, Rev. J. B. Cain, one of the statistical secretaries of the Mississippi Conference, pointed out some interesting and vital facts in connection with the Annual Conference reports to which, by way of emphasis, I desire to call the attention of the readers of the Advocate, especially the preachers and district stewards.

Brother Cain first points out the fact that the gulf is continually growing wider between the percentages paid on pastors' salaries and the benevolences. His statement is, "Twenty years ago our Conference paid ninety-six per cent of the benevolences; this year perhaps not more than sixty-six per cent."

One reason for the decrease in the percentage on the benevolences is the annual increase for many years in the assessments. For example, the figures for my own charge, as compared with the figures of last year, show an increase of $100 on one item alone, and the total assessment for all purposes, including the assessment for the presiding elder, is $776, which is $176 more than half the assessment for the support of the pastor. Now, what is the remedy? Call a halt on this annual increase till the gifts of the people catch up with the assessments. What is the use anyhow of making assessments which we well know will not be paid? To do so only serves to discourage the people from making an effort to do what they really could do, and would do, if the assessments were placed within their reach.

In another paragraph of Brother Cain's article, he says: "The distribution of the assessments is an interesting study. Two districts seemed to have some reasonably equitable rule for distribution; in others they varied from twenty per cent of the pastor's salary to a hundred and sixteen per cent, one small charge actually having $79 more for benevolences than for the pastor's salary. Likewise the assessments for the presiding elders varied from six per cent of the pastor's salary to twenty-four per cent." Now, what is the cause of this unequal distribution which, as I know by experience, works a hardship on many pastors and charges? When Brother Cain indicated in the quoted paragraph that the distribution was made upon the basis of the salary assessed for the pastor, he put his finger upon the sore spot and pointed out the tap-root of the whole trouble. Can any reader of the Advocate, preacher, layman, or laywoman, tell me why the pastor's salary should be made the basis for distribution at every district stewards' meeting? There is no law for it; yet as far back as I can remember, and, for aught I know, as far back as the memory of the present generation goes, the basis for distribution has been the preceding year's assessment for the pastor's salary. Who suggested it? Did the presiding elders do it, or the laymen, or the pastors themselves? When was it first adopted as a plan of distribution? To trace its history would be an interesting, if not a profitable study.

To use the pastor's salary as a basis for distribution is unjust and unfair, and the results are necessarily unfair and unjust. But what is to be done about it? The custom is hoary with old age, and it is well known that it is exceedingly difficult to dislodge an old custom. I have called the distribution upon the basis of the pastor's salary a custom. It is that, and nothing more—a bad custom. I repeat, there is no law for it. The usual procedure is for the presiding elder to announce an early date in the new year for the district stewards' meeting, inviting the pastors to be present, although the latter have no vote; sometimes the pastors, by courtesy of the district stewards, are granted the privileges of the floor, but so far as their influence is concerned in securing for themselves and their charges an equitable adjustment of assessments, they might as well have stayed at home. Now, having met for the consideration of the regular business of the stewards' meeting, the presiding elder states that, in order to facilitate the work, he had, previous to the meeting, requested several of the brethren to figure out the distribution, and the figures are read. Then, some one of the laymen moves that the distribution already made be adopted, and it is unanimously adopted—by the laymen. So there you are—the thing is done; and the pastors go forth to approach the unapproachable and to "raise" the unraisable. What is to be done about it? Apprently, nothing; and nothing can be done as long as the pastor's salary is used as a basis for distribution.

Some years ago, I wrote an article for the Advocate, in which I suggested a solution for the problem which I believed, and still believe, would relieve the whole situation of any dissatisfaction. My suggestion, which I repeat here, although doubtless it will go unheeded now as it did when first made, involves what I consider a more equitable basis for distribution, viz: The substitution of the amount paid the pastor the previous year for the pastor's assessed salary. Before it will ever be possible to have an equitable distribution, the ability and willingness of the people to pay must be considered; and, in my opinion, the assessed salary for the pastor indicates only what a few men, the stewards, think the pastor should have to barely sustain the life in the bodies of himself and family. What was paid on the pastor's salary the previous year unmistakably shows the ability and willingness of the people to pay; and, when reduced to its last analysis, ability and willingness constitute the fundamental elements which should enter into the consideration of any equitable plan for distribution of the benevolences and the salary of the presiding elder.

In closing, allow me to say with all possible emphasis, whether any one hears and heeds my voice or not, that the pastor's assessed salary is unfair and unjust as a basis for distribution, and as long as that basis is used the results will be disastrous and work hardships on some preachers and churches, especially the smaller charges. Again I repeat, the only fair, just, and equitable basis for distribution is the amount paid the previous year on the pastor's assessed salary. Any other method will deter the stewards from increasing the pastor's salary, because they know that any increase in the assessment for the support of their pastor means an increase in all other assessments for the following year. For example, my board of stewards this year increased my salary approximately $200 over that of last year, which inevitably means that next year there will be an increase of from fifty to a hundred dollars on all items of the apportionment to the Meridian District.

A COMMUNICATION FROM THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE LAY LEADER.

Dear Dr. Carley: Following the report of our Conference Board of Lay Activities adopted at the last Annual Conference, I have outlined to the district lay leaders the following. I am requesting them to have a consultation with the presiding elders and associate lay leaders and then arrange for a meeting of the district board at an early date and there stress the matters as hereinafter set out. In order to give our program the widest publicity, I would like to put this in the Advocate.

With best wishes for the New Yaer,

Yours sincerely,

T. W. HOLLOMAN,

a. The organization in each charge and church of the local board of lay activities as provided in the Discipline and the creation of the pastor's cabinet.

b. Fix March 1 as the date by which an every-member canvass shall be made in each charge to secure the benevolences, and by which a report of the results shall be made through you to me. The connectional interests of the church are losing $1,500,000 per year through failure to pay the assessments in full. The loss during the last quadrennium was about $6,000,000. Our hand is palsied and the Lord's work lags and we resort to emergency measures because we have too little interest, energy, information, conviction and love to make our dollars worth one hundred cents. And yet a little more than fifty cents per member per year, or about one cent per member per week, would wipe out this deficit. The General Conference did not increase the assessments which it lays. In spite of our growth in numbers and wealth, the assessment is the same for this quadrennium as for the preceding one. It ought to be easier, therefore, to pay up. This obligation must be brought home to laymen and preachers.

March 1 is the date fixed by the Annual Conference in adopting your report.

c. Arrange, if you can, for stewardship classes in every church. I think the pastor is the best man to teach them where it does not put upon him too much burden. It seems to me he could want no better evangelistic opportunity. Dr. Crawford's book, a copy of which was sent you some time ago, is the recommended text book. If we have the energy and time to do this in the various churches, I have no doubt that we will solve our financial difficulties and help bring about a revival of religion in the home and the church.

d. Plan to orgnaize a Wesley Brotherhood in every charge. If this is done, instruction in stewardship becomes easy and the circulation of the Methodist Layman is solved. Men certainly want fellowship. Witness our lodges. Before the church loses its opportunity entirely, let us band together our men in Christian love and for Christian fellowship and service.

e. Lay plans to circulate our official organ, the Methodist Layman, and don't forget our Advocates, either.

f. Co-operation of our Boards in every feature of our church program is the law that governs us, and should be our pleasure.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

Place—West Point. Time—Jan. 11.

The Columbus District Missionary Institute will be held at West Point, Miss., on Jan. 11, 1927, beginning at 10 o'clock a. m.

We are expecting representatives from the General Board and the Conference Board of Missions to be with us.

We want the following to attend: All pastors, lay leaders of charges and churches, district lay leader and his two associate district lay leaders, Sunday school superintendents, presidents of Missionary Societies, Epworth Leagues, and boards of steward; also, the missionary committees of each charge, and any others interested in Missions. We want one or more carloads from each of the charges in the Columbus District.

Yours for service,

J. B. RANDOLPH, P. E.

GIFTS RECEIVED FOR DAY NURSERY.

I want to thank the good people for their kindness to the Day Nursery during Christmas week, for their gifts of toys, boxes of clothing and cash.

I received $25 from the Woman's Missionary Society at Clarksdale; $6 from the Epworth League at Tylertown; and Mrs. M. E. Gale paid for the ceiling of the kitchen and finished ceiling the play room, amounting to about $35.

There still remains about $700 indebtedness on the nursery. If twenty-eight other Missionary Societies in the Conference would follow the Clarksdale society's example, this debt would be paid.

MY LIFE TO GIVE.

"Just as I am, thine own to be,
Friend of the young, who lovest me,
To consecrate myself to thee,
O Jesus Christ, I come.

"In the glad morning of my day,
My life to give, my vows to pay,
With no reserve and no delay,
With all my heart I come.

"I would live ever in the light,
I would work ever for the right,
I would serve thee with all my might;
Therefore, to thee I come.

"Just as I am, young, strong, and free,
To be the best that I can be
For truth, and righteousness, and thee,
Lord of my life, I come."

WHEN LUCY ACTED NURSE.

By Mary David Ammerman.

Crash! Bang! Down came the planks that Lucy and Jimmie had had so much trouble to get to stay in place.

"Oh, oh," cried the little eight-year-old girl, jumping up and down and waving her hands wildly in the air. "My dolly, my dear dolly with the sleepy eyes that auntie gave me Christmas. The planks fell on her and I heard her head when it smashed. Oh, dear, oh, dear!"

"An' my magic lantern and my big top she gave me is done smashed, too," howled her small brother, rubbing his eyes with his grimy fists.

You see, it was enough to make anybody cry, for they had worked hard all the afternoon to build a two-story play-house, like Lucy had read about, and now to have it fall down and ruin what few playthings they had was terrible.

Their mother heard their crying and came out to see what was the matter; but there was very little that she could say to console them. She was a poor widow and knew that it would be a long time before she could buy them even cheap toys. Still she promised to give them a large box for a house and said that she would sew a rag head on the doll and try to straighten the top with the hammer. She then told them to be good children as she was going over to see a sick neighbor.

So, with an occasional sniff and dropping a few more tears, the children set about dragging out the fallen planks to get at the ruined toys. But presently Jimmie called out: "Look, Lucy! There comes a man awalkin'. My, ain't he dirty!"

"I should say he is," replied Lucy, leaning on the fence to look more closely at the approaching figure. "And, look, Jim! He's hurt. His face is cut, poor man."

They both then climbed over the fence to get a better view of the man, who was certainly a terrible looking figure. Dust and mud were all over his shoes and clothes, and his face was smeared with blood from a cut on his cheek which he kept wiping with a dirty handkerchief.

"Oh, poor man," cried Lucy as he came nearer. "Your face is cut awful."

"I know," cried Jimmie, "it's robbers is been fightin 'you and tooked your money. I'll show you where the sheriff lives just down the road. He'll catch 'em for you."

The man stopped and looked at the children in a puzzled kind of way, still trying to wipe the blood from the cut, but he didn't say a word.

"Oh, but Jimmie," put in Lucy, "he mustn't go till I get some water and a towel and clover salve for his cut. You sit down by the fence, Mr. Man, and I'll be back real quick. Mother's over to Mrs. Dales."

The man smiled and sat down by Jimmie, who immediately began to tell him all about the ruined playhouse and the broken toys and how they could never expect to have any more like them, as their aunt was now dead.

But Lucy was soon back with water and salve and took off the man's cap to wash his face before applying the medicine. She was much surprised to see that the upper part of his face was quite clean and white and his hair nicely trimmed.

"Thank you, little maiden," he said, rising, "you're a born nurse. And if you will show me the way to a blacksmith shop I will be very grateful. Robbers did not get after me, but I have a broken bolt in my auto that is stuck in the mud back there, and I cut myself trying to fix it."

Both children went with him to a smithy down the road a little way, and the blacksmith showed the man a nearer way back through the fields, but when he bade them good-bye he wrote their names down in a little book and gave them a silver dollar which Lucy didn't want to take, but he handed it to Jimmie and wouldn't take it back.

A week later as they were playing in the box house with the fixed up playthings, a large truck came up the road and stopped in front of the house.

"Is this where Lucy and Jimmie Lander live?" the driver bawled.

"Yes, sir," replied the astonished children.

"Well, kiddies, here's something for you," he said, as he and another man lifted down and carried into the yard what at first looked like an immense red box. But as the men set it down under a tree they saw that it was a little house not much taller than their heads.

"Is it for us?" questioned Jimmie with wild eyes.

"It's a mistake, Mister," gulped Lucy. It was heart-breaking to see that there was such a wonderful playhouse in the world, meant for some one else.

"'Deed it ain't any mistake," replied the man, pointing to a card hanging on the door.

"For Lucy and Jimmie, who nursed me into being a better man."

One room contained dolls and doll-furnishings, the other all kinds of boys' playthings, and there was a purse for the mother containing one hundred dollars.—Exchange.

THE TORTOISE.

It had been a great trial to little Widow Hadassah bringing up her only son without the help and advice of a man, for when the lad was but a child his father had died, and Shabdiz was of a very different nature from his gentle, active little mother.

He was now a strapping youth of some fourteen years, and as unwilling a boy as you could ever find. Together they lived in a village in one of the outlying parts of Persia, and Shabdiz would have been in a bad way but for the ceaseless attentions of his mother. But there are times when even a mother can become exasperated, and today Widow Hadassah was beyond herself.

"How many more times am I to ask thee to take that basin of milk to yonder pilgrim? Is it such a very dreadful thing I ask you to do? Is it too much trouble even to walk a few paces to give food to a poor, weary traveler?"

"And why should I go?" answered the boy rudely. "That man looks healthy enough to earn his own food. I do not think he ought to be encouraged to beg."

"That comes well from thee, my son," answered his mother sharply; "if thou wert left to fend for thyself it is as likely as not thou wouldst choose the easiest means of earning thy bread and butter. Besides, who knows what difficulties this man has had to overcome? To every well there is a bottom, and an end even to my patience."

Shabdiz knew just how far he could go with his mother, and though he saw he would have to carry the pitcher he was determined the pilgrim should not get the milk. Rising as slowly and laboriously from his seat as possible, he dragged himself across the room, being as irritating as he could to his mother—for irritating it is for a quick, active person to watch the tarrying, dawdling ways of a lazy person. Carelessly taking up the pitcher he slunk out of the room, and down the road.

Scarcely had he gone than there was a crash and the sound of broken china.

"Oh, that boy, that boy!" said Widow Hadassah, putting her hands up to her ears. "If he has not been and spilt the milk, and broken my best pitcher, too. Was there ever such a boy?" she added, hurrying to the door, to see the extent of the damage done. "May Allah treat him as he deserves."

No sooner were the words out of her mouth, than the broken pieces of the pitcher fastened altogether on the boy's back, thereby making him a shell which he was destined to carry for all time.

So runs the old Persian legend. The natives believe that the tortoise was indeed a boy, and their name for a tortoise, Oasseh pusht, meaning basin-back, lends truth to the story.—Selected.

SIGNS OF RAIN.

The hollow winds
Begin to blow,
The clouds look black,
The glass is low;

And soot falls down,
The spaniels sleep,
And spiders from
Their cob-webs creep.

Loud quack the ducks,
The peacocks cry,
The distant hills
Are looking nigh.

How restless are
The snorting swine,
The busy flies
Disturb the kine.

Low o'er the grass
The swallow wings.
The cricket, too,
How sharp he sings.

Through the clear stream
The fishes rise
And nimbly catch
The thoughtless flies.

The frog has changed
His yellow vest,
And in a russet
Coat is dressed.

'Twill surely rain,
I see with sorrow,
Our jaunt must be Put off to-morrow.

—Exchange.

"TIME OUT."

"So you were late to school, Bessie?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Why didn't you run, dear?"

"Because you told me never to deceive, Mamma."

"But how would that deceive, my child?"

"It might give some one who saw me running an idea I was anxious to get three, and I wans't."
—Zion's Herald.

A party of Scots was returning North after a holiday in London, and several porters were helping them to stow away their trunks and suitcases.

When the work was finished, they hung around the carriage door expectantly, but no tip was forthcoming.

At last one of the porters ventured a gentle reminder. "Ain't you goin' to give us anything?" he asked.

"Of course, of course!" replied one of the Scotsmen. "I was forgetting. Boys"—turning to his friends—"let's give these porters three cheers!"—Selected.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

TO OUR PASTORS.

The Business Manager of the Advocate has sent to all the preachers the necessary envelopes, blanks, etc., for putting on the Advocate campaign. If any one of them has failed to receive this literature, a card to the office to that effect will bring a supply immediately. Now is the time to put the Advocate into the homes of all our people.

THE DEATH OF REV. ISAAC LOCKHART PEEBLES.

The recent death of Rev. I. L. Peebles removed from the Mississippi Conference, and from Methodism generally, one of its saintliest characters. Brother Peebles was a unique man. The two outstanding characteristics of his life were his passion to do the exact will of God and his thirst for knowledge. He was a constant student and an indefatigable worker. He was "instant in season and out of season" in the service of his Lord. He was a voluminous writer, many leaflets, pamphlets, and books having come from his industrious pen. He may not have been correct in all his conclusions—but woe to the man who thought he could not give a reason for the faith that was in him! He had memorized large portions of the Bible and, armed thus with the sword of the Spirit, he was unafraid of any of the wiles of Satan. We shall not soon see his like again.

"He giveth his beloved sleep"—and we rejoice in the thought that our friend and brother is resting sweetly in the home of the saints. His family have the assurance that all is well with him, and his friends know where to look for him. A faithful servant of God has finished his labors and entered into rest.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Centenary College, Shreveport, La., enrolled 666 students during 1926.

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon is now making his home in Charlotte, N. C. His address is 707 East Morehead Avenue, that city.

The Big Brothers' class, Greenville, Miss., is observing a series of special days, which are attracting attention and enlarging the influence of the class.

Rev. D. E. Vickers has been very cordially received for the fourth year at Ocean Springs and Handsboro. The work has begun well, and the outlook is for the best year of the quadrennium.

Rev. W. J. Wood is beginning his third year on the Dublin and Mattson charge under the most favorable auspices. One of the fine things he has done is to put the Advocate into the homes of all his people.

Sunday, Jan. 16, is the anniversary of the adoption of the Federal Prohibition Amendment. Many preachers will take advantage of the day to speak of the issues that underlie the policy of prohibition.

Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Wainwright arrived in this country from Japan on Dec. 24. Dr. Wainwright is scheduled to deliver the Fondren Lectures at Southern Methodist University early in the spring.

Dr. William R. Webb, founder of the Webb School at Bell Buckle, Tenn., died at his home in Bell Buckle on Dec. 19. Dr. Webb was affectionately known to thousands of people as "Old Sawney." He was a great teacher.

The Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will hold its annual meeting in Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 8-10. Dr. J. R. Countiss, of the North Mississippi Conference, is president of the Association.

The people of Chunky, Miss., continue to express their appreciation of their pastor, Rev. John W. Ramsey, by substantial tokens. The congregation at Meehan is also joining in the welcome, a group of ladies from that church having recently taken an automobile load of substantial gifts to the parsonage.

Dr. J. B. Mitchell, the new pastor of Rayne Memorial, this city, is rapidly regaining his strength after the illness that delayed his coming to New Orleans, and is entering vigorously upon his work. Large congregations are attending the preaching services.

Rev. R. T. Ware, our pastor at Texas Avenue, Shreveport, La., requests the Advocate to call attention to an error in the Louisiana Conference Annual. All financial claims upon the church, including the Mission Special, were paid in full, as follows: General and Conference work, $647; district work, $24; pastor's salary, $2,400; presiding elder's salary, $336.

Dr. O. E. Goddard, foreign secretary of the Board of Missions, spoke at the New Orleans District Missionary Institute at the First Methodist Church on Friday evening of last week. Under the leadership of Rev. J. G. Snelling, Louisiana Conference Missionary Secretary, the January-February campaign is being well organized throughout the Conference.

Mr. Robert S. Wynn, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Wynn, has been made professor of mathematics and engineering in the Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, Ruston, La. Professor Wynn took his degree in engineering at Tulane University a year or two ago. He is splendidly equipped for the position to which he has been called.

Rev. H. L. Johns, the beloved pastor at Natchitoches, La., has just undergone another operation at Touro Infirmary, this city, and is doing well after the ordeal. His friends will remember him in their prayers. During his absence from his charge his pulpit will be supplied by Rev. C. C. Wier, Rev. A. K. McLellan, Rev. J. G. Snelling, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and Rev. Henry Rickey.

Henry Polk Lewis, Jr., son of Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Lewis, of Ruleville, Miss., was one of four students of the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College who attended the recent Students' Conference at Milwaukee. He went as the representative of the Character Builders Sunday school class at Starkville, composed of Methodist students of the college.

Rev. Joseph B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, authorizes the Advocate to state that Rev. Thos. H. Mills, at his own request, has been released by Bishop Candler from the Longview charge, and that Rev. William I. Henley has been appointed to serve the charge until the next meeting of the Annual Conference.

The district parsonage of the New Orleans District was entered by a burglar one night last week and the presiding elder, Dr. R. H. Harper, found himself without a watch and some $20 in cash the next morning. Some of Dr. Harper's friends, learning of his loss, presented him a new watch on Friday evening of last week, taking advantage of the meeting of the New Orleans District missionary institute to do so.

Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, has declined to accept the secretaryship of the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he was unanimously elected by the bishops following the sudden death of Dr. David D. Forsyth, for many years secretary of the Board. Dr. Cherrington, who is a layman, feels that it is his duty to continue in the temperance work.

The "White Gifts for the King" Christmas service at the First Methodist Church, Aberdeen, Miss., was unusually interesting and inspiring. The church was beautifully decorated, and an appropriate pageant was artistically rendered. In addition to the gifts of material things, including $160 in cash for the Superannuate Fund, three little girls gave themselves to the King and were received into the membership of the church. Rev. R. G. Moore is the pastor at Aberdeen.

Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., is giving a series of sermons on Sunday evening on the general topic, "Christian Apologetics." His subjects are: "Why I Am Not an Infidel;" "Why I Believe the Bible to Be the Word of God;" "Why I Believe in the Efficacy of Prayer;" "Why I Believe in the Deity of Jesus Christ;" "Why I Believe in the Sovereignty of the Church Over All Other Institutions."

President Coolidge, in his budget message to Congress, used these significant words: "Whatever is necessary to put into effect the expressed will of the people as written into the Eighteenth Amendment and the will of Congress as expressed in the Volstead act, will be done. Whatever funds may be necessary to vindicate the law and secure compliance with all its provisions should be provided. The constitutional duties of the President and the Congress make any other course indefensible."

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of Franklinton, La., sends us the sad news of the death, on Saturday of last week, of Mr. S. K. Cozine, a consecrated member of the Methodist church at Franklinton. He was a member of the board of stewards and president of the men's Bible class. Funeral services were held at the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Brother Sweeney and Rev. Mr. Carroll, of the Baptist church. The deceased was 81 years old. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

Rev. Henry T. Young, of the Louisiana Conference, one of our most efficient general evangelists, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week. He was returning from the meeting of the evangelists in Nashville, and reported a good meeting. Brother Young stated that he has two open dates—one in January and one in February—that he will be glad to have taken. He will go wherever he is needed. Rev. O. H. Scott, of McComb, Miss., formerly with Dr.

L. J. Miller, will be associated with Brother Young this year as singer and helper.

On the occasion of the commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his consecration as bishop in the Protestant Episcopal Church, Bishop Brent had this to say concerning pastoral visitation: "There is no room for doubt that in house-to-house visiting to-day lies the strength of the church. The rector who fails to come to know his people in their homes, who, if he calls at all, does so perfunctorily, or on the occasion of a marriage or funeral only, is not a pastor. He may be a signboard, but he is not a reservoir of spiritual influence, let his pulpit eloquence be that of angels, and his organizing gift that of a Napoleon. We usually think of Phillips Brooks as a preacher. He was first a pastor, and then, because of it, a preacher. He is quoted in Bishop Lawrence's Memoirs as saying: 'I wish that I could devote every hour of the day to calling on my people. I know of no happier or more helpful work that a pastor can do, and I call as much as I can. How is it possible for one to preach to his people if he does not know them, their doubts, sorrows and ambitions?'" This is mighty good Methodist doctrine.

BELIEF.

If I were asked what I believe, I could not help but say,
The gentle and the simple creeds of boyhood's
yesterday;
The tender faith in Bible things, the truth, the way, the right;
The Golden Rule to live one's life according to the light;
And everywhere the thought of God, that we are everywhere
The children of one Father's love and of His heavenly care.

If I were asked what I believe, I know my thoughts would go Back to the little child at prayer in the soft even-glow;
And I can think of nothing else so beautiful, so sweet,
As prayer beside my mother's knee, who tried to lead our feet
In paths of righteousness and truth where none could go astray
From that dear life of simple trust in childhood's
yesterday.

If I were asked what I believe, I'd have to say, as then,
A simple faith in God's command, a manlier trust
'mong men,
A clear and more abiding course t'ward that which men might call
The straight-out-from-the-shoulder faith of Peter and of Paul;
The teachings most of all that came to us in Sunday school,
Way back in little childhood's land, the land of Golden Rule.

THE BIBLE—ALL THINGS TO ALL MEN.

The Bible is to religion what the Iliad is to poetry.—Joubert.

Every leaf is a spacious plain; every line a flowing brook; every period a lofty mountain.—Hervey.

The Bible is the most thought-suggesting book in the world. No other deals with such grand themes.—Herrick Johnson.

The Bible is God's chart for you to steer by, to keep you from the bottom of the sea, and to show you where the harbor is, and how to reach it without running on the rocks and bars.—H. W. Beecher.

The Bible is a window in this prison world, through which we may look into eternity.—Timothy Dwight.

Like the needle to the North Pole, the Bible points to heaven.—R. B. Nichol.

Do you know a book that you are willing to put under your head for a pillow when you are dying? Very well, that is the book you want to study when you are living. There is only one such book in the world.—Joseph Cook.

The Scriptures teach us the best way of living, the noblest way of suffering, and the most comfortable way of dying.—Flavel.

ALONE WITH GOD.

Alone with God;
And while we pray
Our cares take wing and fly away;
As on his breast
We sweetly rest,
Our sorrow's night is turned to day
Alone with God.

Alone with God;
'Tis heaven below,
His deep, unchanging love to know.
To be shut in,
Away from sin,
Away from sorrow, care and woe;
Alone with God.

Alone with God;
O, hallowed spot
Where many a lesson has been taught,
And victory won,
Through his dear Son;
In many a battle that was fought
Alone with God.

Alone with God;
Whom we adore;
Drawn are the shades and closed the door
In this retreat,
In service sweet.
We learn to love him more and more.
Alone with God.

A FRIENDLY NOTICE TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The subscriptions that were received last year in connection with the special "Every Family" proposition will have to be discontinued as soon as they expire. This is in keeping with the terms of the special proposition and is necessary because the special price does not allow any margin for carrying the subscriptions beyond the date of expiration. The special proposition has been renewed this year by authority of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate; but former lists will have to be discontinued unless renewed. We make this statement that subscribers at the special rate may understand the situation if they do not receive the paper after the expiration of their subscriptions. We hope we shall not lose a single subscriber.

IN THE BEGINNING.

Like the author of Genesis, the writer of the Fourth Gospel does not undertake to say how far back that beginning was. He had been thinking about the matter a long time. He was a man of prayer and of daily communion with God. He was familiar with the philosophies and the religious beliefs of his day. Then, as now, sincere and wise men differed in their judgments and beliefs regarding the when and how of creation. But to John the vital question about creation is not the question of time (when), nor of method (how). For him the deeper and more important concern is the question of the almighty Power, the creative Mind, the omnipotent Person, back of the whole process and product of creation. Whose handiwork is man, and the visible universe in which he lives? Whose infinite mind and will do these reveal? How are they related to the revelation of God in Christ? These are for us, as they were for John, the all-important questions. If once these questions are rightly answered, we may rest content, keeping our minds open for further light regarding the when and how.—Henry H. Meyer.

TWO INSECT CARPENTERS.

Think of boring a hole almost four inches deep in a tree trunk with a horse-hair! That is something that no one really could do, but on a summer day you may see some one who seems to be doing it.

That "some one" is Mrs. Ichneumon Fly. She has four gauzy wings and six legs, and what looks like a horse-hair tail three or four inches long. But it isn't a tail, and it isn't horsehair. It is the most wonderful gimlet in the world. God has equipped her with it.

When Mrs. Ichneumon gets ready to lay her eggs, she goes to the trunk of a tree, perhaps a big maple, and begins boring a hole with this wonderful gimlet of hers. When she thinks she has made the hole deep enough, she sends an egg down through the middle of the gimlet, which is hollow, and leaves it at the end of the hole which she has made.

Perhaps some one else is living in that maple tree, for there is another insect carpenter that lays her eggs there. The other carpenter is Mrs. Horntail. She, too, has a strong gimlet, but is a much shorter gimlet than Mrs. Ichneumon's, so that her eggs are laid nearer the outside of the tree.

When the little Horntails hatch, they begin gnawing their way into the tree, for there is nothing in the world that little Horntails like to eat better than wood. And there is nothing that a little Ichneumon Fly likes to eat better than a little Horntail. In order that her children shall have food which they like best, Mrs. Ichneumon Fly bores those deep, deep holes, which she hopes will end in a tunnel that some little Horntail is making.

Sometimes the little Horntails eat so much of the wood that they do a great deal of harm to the trees. That is why we call Mrs. Ichneumon and her family good friends of ours, and of the times. —Dorothy Arno Baldwin, in Christian Intelligencer.

MRS. ANNA ALLEN HAMER was born Nov. 26, 1874, and died Nov. 25, 1926. She was married to Ransom Hamer, Nov. 10, 1895. To mourn her going away she left her husband, two daughters, Artie and Dollie; three brothers, Frank, Cell and John Allen; besides a host of other kindred and friends. Mrs. Hamer joined the Methodist church about thirty-seven years ago, and at the time of her death she was a faithful and devoted member of Salem church, on the Kilmichael charge. Revs. Carroll Varner and H. N. McKibben conducted the funeral services, and her body was tenderly laid to rest in the Salem cemetery in the presence of a large congregation of sorrowing loved ones and friends. However, they sorrow not as those who have no hope, for often Mrs. Hamer talked to those near and dear to her of her hope in the life to come. Salem church and community have lost a good woman, her husband a devoted wife, and her children a loving, self-sacrificing mother. As her former pastor I have spent many happy and profitable hours in her Christian home, and I now feel that I have lost a true friend. To her loved ones and friends I wish to offer my tenderest sympathy, and commend them to the love and care of our great Savior. Jesus has promised to be our help in time of trouble, and if we trust him, he will give us strength to help us bear our burdens and sorrows. May our blessed Lord be very near these loved ones in this hour of grief.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH.

The subject of this sketch, RICHARD HANCOCK, JR., was killed in an automobile wreck near Satartia, Miss., Dec. 9, 1926, about 7 o'clock p. m. The funeral services were conducted at the family residence by Rev. J. H. Moore, pastor of the Methodist church. His pallbearers were: Halbert Oliver, Aubrey Broomfield, W. C. Martin, Byrd Martin, Sterling Cotton, and Johnnie Graham. The interment took place at Mount Olive cemetery. The floral offering witnessed to the high esteem in which the deceased was held, as well as the many expressions of love and friendship made to the writer. The life of the deceased was in many respects very beautiful. He was 25 years of age, and lived most of his life in Bentonia, Miss. He was a member of the Methodist church, and junior steward in the same. He was always ready to help in the support of his church, was of a splendid disposition, cheerful, kind, and big-hearted, with a smile for every one. To know him was to love him—his friends were numbered by his acquaintances. He had splendid business ability, and was making a fine success in the financial world. Members of his immediate family left to mourn his untimely departure are: His father and mother; three sisters, Laura, Dolly, and Etta Mae; three brothers, Lee Rande, Robert, and Marion; and his grandmother, Mrs. M. Kennison. His going is felt as a distinct loss to Bentonia. However, while his body has been laid to rest, we feel that his character still lives with us, and his influence will continue for good upon all who knew him. While he is lost to our material vision, we shall ever feel his spiritual presence, and look forward to the day of a happy reuniting.

A FRIEND.

SOUTHERN METHODIST UNIVERSITY STUDENTS SUPPORT MISSIONARY.

Oversubscribing the Earl Moreland fund by $1,400, Southern Methodist University students carried out their slogan to "make it a happy Christmas in Happy Porte" during the first hour of the week's campaign from Dec. 8 to 15, inclusive. The goal of the drive was set at $2,000, and pledges made during the chapel hour amounted to over $3,400.

Earl Moreland is a graduate of Southern Methodist University, and is now vice president of Porte Allegre College in Porte Allegre, Brazil. When he received his master's degree in 1921, his fellow-students pledged themselves to support him in his work. Since that time it has become a tradition, and every year a campaign is conducted to raise his salary. This year it was conducted by Fred R. Harrison, of Fordyce, Ark, a student in the Theological School.

Earl Moreland was born in Oklahoma, where his father is now presiding elder. He entered the Southern Methodist University medical school, which was held in Dallas the year before the university was formally opened, and in 1915, the first year of the school, was enrolled as a sophomore. He received his B.A. degree and went to Washington, D. C., where he served a year as assistant pastor to Dr. Clovis G. Chappell at the Representative Methodist Church.

Returning to Southern Methodist University, he took up work for an M.A. degree, and at the same time was Educational Director of the Highland Park Methodist Church. He was active in practically all student activites, and was especially interested in working out a definite religious and social program on the campus. During the years he was a student, he was manager of the football team, helped to rewrite the student constitution, worked his way through school, was a member of the Varsity Quartet, and in his last year was voted the most popular man in the university.

In 1924 he married Miss Louise Hardy, who was active in mission work. He will return to Southern Methodist University the first of January for a short visit on his leave of absence following five years of successful work in Brazil.

NOTES FROM THE MORTON CHURCH.

On Sunday, Dec. 26, Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Newton District of the Mississippi Conference, preached at the Morton Methodist church, in the place of Rev. Thomas A. Ferguson, pastor, who is visiting relatives and friends in South Mississippi. Brother Alford took as his subject, "Accomplishing the Task," or reaching the goal as set by the Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He handled his subject in a masterful and scholarly way, and proved by his argument that the Newton District is able financially, morally and spiritually to meet every demand of the church. There are within the bounds of the Newton District over twelve thousand members of the Methodist church, whereas the assessment for the whole district is less than $7,000. Brother Alford is one of the outstanding presiding elders of our great church—he has the zeal, the business ability and the spiritual devotion that ought some day cause the General Conference to elect him one of our bishops.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Blackwell, with their sons, Walter and Clifford, formerly members of the Morton church, but now members at Picayune, visited relatives and friends here last weekend and attended Sunday school and church services on the 26th. The Blackwells were good workers in our church, and it was regretted by our membership very much when they moved away.

Our church has recently been rewired and new electric fixtures installed so as to be ready for the high tension wires of the Mississippi Light and Power Company, which will reach here in about two weeks.

TERRIBLE PAIN

Alabama Lady Tells How She Obtained Relief by Taking Cardui. Feels Fine and Enjoys Life Now, She Says.

Talladega, Ala.—Mrs. Mary Hardy, 406 Henderson Avenue, this city, says that seven years ago she "got down sick" and was unable to attend to her housework.

"I have never been so weak before or since," she says. "I had a terrible pain in my side—so sore in my side and the lower part of my body.

"Across my back ached, and I was so nervous I couldn't stand up. I had just about given up when some one who came to see me began talking about Cardui. This caused me to get it. I took about two bottles before I saw much improvement.

"After this, though, I picked up right away. I slept better at night. I was hungry, enjoyed my food, which I hadn't done for some time.

"The pain and soreness gradually left my side. I regained my strength. I took about six bottles and left off for awhile, then took two or three more. . . I feel just fine, enjoy life and can work now, too."

Cardui is purely vegetable, and contains no harmful drugs. It has helped thousands of suffering women and should help you, too. NC-168

THE PASSING HOURS OF 1927.

What wilt thou do the new year for God or man?
To prove thyself a part of his great plan,
Who sent thee forth some noble work
to do,
Some cross to bear, a life to live that's true?

What wilt thou do to ease another's load?
To help some wayfarer along the road?
What word of cheer from thee will make the day
Less dreary to some toiler on the way?

From rise to set of sun the golden hours
Will pass swiftly, but while passing
they will be ours;
Priceless as jewels in a monarch's crown—
Rightly improve them ere life's sun goes down.

TO THE MISSION STUDY SUPERINTENDENT.

We wish to call to your attention the special campaign for missions being put on for the months of January and February. The General Department of the Board of Missions is carrying this forward under the action of the General Conference. One of the educational features of this campaign will be a Church School of Missions, conducted by the pastor. The text used will be, "Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions," which has been prepared specially for this purpose by Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

It is very greatly desired that the women of the church shall help to make this School of Missions a success by forming classes in the school and studying this text. "Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions" may be substituted for either a home or foreign study book, and will count for credits wherever taken in a Church School of Missions. It may not be used for a mission study book for classes of women who do not co-operate in a Church School, but will be credited wherever this is done.

Will you not give your pastor your heartiest co-operation when he begins the promotion of this campaign, doing what you can to develop the School of Missions? Groups of women will find the study of the above mentioned book most profitable.

BUSINESS MEETING AT HAYNESVILLE.

The ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society held the last business session of the year Monday afternoon at the church. The program was as follows:

Song, "Jesus Calls;" devotional, "If Jesus Came To-Day, Could We Stand the Test in Following Him?" Acts 1:12-14; 2:1-4; prayer, Miss Winnie Camp; minutes, reports of officers; treasurer, dues paid in full, small amount due on pledges; local treasurer, amount on hand, $103.66; funds from bazaar, $76.25. Voice agent reported seventeen subscribers to the Missionary Voice. The Society voted to make an immediate payment of $100 on the church debt; $10 to the Wesley House at Houma; $5 for Christmas presents for children of St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, the remainder of the funds to be placed on the Belle Bennett Memorial pledge. New officers were elected for 1927.

PRAYER.

By Margaret E. Sangster.

Lord, let me like a lighthouse stand,
Above life's troubled sea,
And let me speak of love and land,
Across its mystery.
Let me give to some mariner,
Who fears the stormy gloom,
The comfort that a candle brings
To a long, lonely room.
Lord, let me like a lighthouse stand,
Lord, let my glow be like a hand
That draws a lost soul near!

ZONE MEETING AT GIBSLAND, LA.

A goodly number of the Methodist W. M. S. of this church attended a zone meeting of the W. M. S. at Gibsland on Monday afternoon. Mrs. Chas. Byrd and the Gibsland W. M. S. were hostesses and the meeting was in the school auditorium, as the Methodist church is in process of construction. Mrs. V. C. Pipes, of Arcadia, who is leader of the zone work, led the program and conducted the devotional, basing her remarks on the 27th chapter of the gospel by St. Luke. Her subject was: "If Jesus should come to-day, would He find us busy in His service?" Mrs. G. A. Morgan, our new pastor's wife, of Arcadia church, was present and talked on "Woman's Place in Missions." Mesdames D. R. Shehee and ... O. Collinsworth gave a dialogue, "Why I belong to the W. M. S." A song, "Let the lower lights be burning," by Mrs. N. D. Huie and L. M. Wimberly. A story of the life of Bell Bennett by Mrs. W. E. Conger. A poem, "In Memoriam" (Belle Bennett), written by Hortense McClesky, was read by Mrs. Paul Melton. A vocal selection, "Gather them all for Jesus," by little Sunshine Shebee and Faye Wimberly, were some of the interesting features of the program. A new W. M. S. has been recently organized at Bienville and was introduced by Mrs. Pipes. The president of the Bienville organization, Mrs. Wilson, in turn presented the members of the Society. The poem, "The Master Calls," was read by Mrs. Pipes, and the meeting closed with a song, "Have Thy Way, Lord," and prayer.

ZONE MEETING AT KENTWOOD.

There was a very interesting, profitable and Spirit-filled zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society held on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 30, at the Kentwood Methodist Church. About fifty-five ladies were present and enjoyed the program that was rendered by the Amite Auxiliary, which was presided over by the ... president, Mrs. C. S. Stewart, of Amite, and was as follows:

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JAN. 9.

Subject: "The Standard of Christian Living."

Lesson Text: Luke 6:27-38.

Golden Text: "Ye therefore shall be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect." Matt. 5:48.

Teaching Points:

1. Hindrances in the way of understanding the Christian law of love must not be allowed to interfere with our practice of it.

2. No human being, not even an enemy, is to be excluded from the benefits of this law of love.

3. Those who sincerely practice the Christian law of love may expect great rewards.

4. The example of our Heavenly Father is held up by Christ for our imitation. It is his love for us that makes him merciful.

5. In our dealings with our fellowman we are not to judge harshly or condemn unjustly. Justice must be tempered with mercy.

6. Our practice of the law of love must be without reservations.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The second session of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Council met at 10 a.m. in Alexandria, Dec. 30. The first session was organized and held in March at Mansfield.

Dr. W. W. Drake was elected president of this Council and Prof H. W. Rickey, of Louisiana College, Secretary. The following presiding elders were present: Rev. C. C. Wier, Rev. H. N. Brown, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., Rev. K. W. Dodson, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, and Dr. W. W. Holmes. Conference Superintendent of Teacher-Training, Dr. A. S. Lutz, was present. Rev. B. C. Taylor, of New Orleans, Superintendent of Adolescent Work, was here. Mr. T. W. Holloman. Conference Superintendent of Administration, took an active part in our program. Miss Cora Perkins represented the General Board Staff of Nashville and rendered a great service. Three of our district secretaries were present—Dr. F. C. Wrenn, of the Minden District, Prof. H. W. Rickey, of the Alexandria District, and Mr. A. M. Mayo, of the Lake Charles District.

In addition to the above leaders, the Conference Extension Secretary, Rev. A. K. McLellan, and many welcome visitors were present. The general theme of the Council was, "Building Together Our Program for the New Year."

The pastor at Alexandria, Dr. Cleanth Brooks, was Council host and did his part well.

Dr. O. E. Goddard was a welcome visitor at part of our session and gave much inspiration. He talked on "Sunday School Evangelism."

The following members of the Conference Council sent their regrets at not being able to be present: Mr. J. H. Carter, Prof. Raulins, Dr. N. E. Joyner, and Rev. Marion Monk.

Each district in our Conference is expected to hold a district council meeting during the early part of the year. Alexandria and Ruston have had their meeting. The Baton Rouge District will hold theirs next Wednesday at Hammond at 1 p.m. Each of the Councils has planned a whole day Sunday school conference. There will be a "set-up meeting" in Homer, Jan. 16, at 2:30 p.m., for a Standard Training School. The prospects for this School are great and may take the lead of all our schools. Haynesville, Athens, Homer, and other schools make this prospect so promising.

All Sunday school leaders in Louisiana are looking forward to the Statewide Conference to be held at Monroe and West Monroe, Mar. 29, 30, 31. The Conference Staff is now working on the program.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

"IN THE BEGINNING———"

I do not feel that I should apologize for a seeming lack of work done this month, because there actually has been done quite a bit.

We were quite fortunate in getting located so easily in Alexandria because of the wonderful kindness of Rev. and Mrs. C. D. Atkinson, who directed us so that the problem of a house was quickly solved.

We attended the pre-sessions of Conference Superintendents and Extension Secretaries and the General Council in Nashville December 8-18. It would employ too much space to recount the magnificent and constructive things that were done there. We shall enumerate a few of our general impressions as follows:

1. We were grateful for the opportunity to sit down among the leaders of Southern Methodism's great program of Religious Education.

2. We were enthralled by the whole-hearted earnestness of those who are responsible for the training program at Nashville and in the various Conferences.

3. We were convinced that these consecrated Christian men and women in our Central Office deserve our heartiest coo-peration in "Our Common Task."

4. We were aflorded a peep into the "Inner Chamber," where sat the consecrated and earnest men and women of our church. There we caught a glimpse of the dynamic force and consuming power pictured there as this group faced and sought to solve weighty and perplexing problems and plan wisely and rightly for the future of Christian training in our church. The sheer force of it grasped and held. There came to me a vision of the tremendous power of training aright for Christ and His Kingdom. How fortunate it would be if more of our workers could be there!

Since getting back from Nashville we have perfected plans for promoting Missionary Education in the Sunday schools and, also, a plan of work for Sunday School Extension for 1927. These will appear shortly in letters and in the Sunday School Outlook, to pastors, superintendents, district superintendents of missionary education, and other Sunday school workers.

We have to date written 49 letters in the interest of this work.

At the Sunday School Council, Dec. 30, we presented plans as stated

WOMAN COULD NOT SLEEP

Her Mother-in-Law Knew A Remedy

Mrs. Belle Thompson was in a very weak and run-down condition for four years. She had great difficulty in getting to sleep at night and even then did not sleep soundly. She would wake up again and again. Besides this her appetite was poor. "My mother-in-law told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash," she writes. "I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound and I was not the same woman at all. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does me more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me." —Mrs. Belle Thompson, R. 2, Rossville, Georgia.

Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health? If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped others, why shouldn't it help you?

above. The presiding elders present kindly gave a brief interview to present the plans to them and most graciously consented to render every assistance.

Our Council Meeting was well attended and much was accomplished in a most constructive way. Many expressed themselves as well pleased with the proceedings of the day.

We have received requests for Cokesbury Schools from several of our pastors and superintendents. A letter to-day from Brother Jas. A. Knight asks for a Cokesbury School in January. We were glad to receive such a message and began at once to lay plans for this school. We hope that many requests for schools will come during the winter months, then the summer months will not be overcrowded. We request our pastors and superintendents and other Sunday school workers to send all requests for Cokesbury Schools and reports of schools or classes held to our office in Alexandria. This will save you time, as we have material on hand ready to send at your request. We are ready now to send out examination questions to local classes on request.

The Conference Superintendent and Sunday School Extension Secretary have a joint office at 611 Commercial Bank Building, and we shall be glad to receive a visit from you.

The Sunday School Extension Secretary wishes a happy and prosperous New Year, and may the blessings of God be upon you and yours. May our service to Him be unfailing and consecrated.

We plead for your prayers, your help, your sympathy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

There are many excellent people who seriously object to making "drives" for money for the church to use in extending the Kingdom. Their objections are well founded. Giving should come as a result of a knowledge of the needs; it should express our love for Christ; it should contribute to the building of Christian character in the person who gives. Making an intense "drive" for souls is likely to have a bad effect on the driver and the one who has been driven. There is no record that we know of where Jesus is seen as a "driver" for money or men. The main purpose of the church is to win the loyalty and love of every one to Jesus Christ. "He that winneth souls is wise." Every disciple is called to be "fishers of men." The "drive" for money and for souls is apparently successful. The point I am trying to make is, is the drive the best method, is it the method Jesus taught and practiced? To be sure, it requires the deepest consecration and skill and tact on the part of pastor, superintendent, parent, or teacher to present Christ in such a manner that Christ will be accepted. The pastor is not called upon to minify his pulpit ministrations in the least, but he is asked to help train a number of men and women in the art of winning souls. Training comprehends much prayer, hard study, and full consecration. All this can not be done in three short months, but we can make a beginning. The tragedy is, so few are willing to subject themselves to the training process. If we can get one person out of ten who will let the Spirit lead and teach, something great is sure to take place. The Bible, the literature furnished by the Sunday School Board, books on evangelism, can be used at the prayer meeting hour to good advantage in making evangels of the teachers and others. If ever the Kingdom is established fully in any community, it will be established mainly by the people who live in the community. There is yet something to be learned about winning souls as well as about getting money. Let us be learners. Be wise enough to give literature on Evangelism a fair trial. Ask for it and use it for all it is worth. Jesus meant much more than we think when he said, "Go teach."

Rev. R. B. Pearson, pastor at Ashland, has ordered the Wall Chart of the Program of Work for his Sunday school at Ashland; and so has Rev. W. C. Newman, of Houlka, done likewise. The pastors at Ackerman and Buena Vista are planning to have training classes at an early date. Batesville, Hernando, and Lula have agreed to give the missionary program once a month.

We have training schools scheduled as follows: Clarksdale, April 12-17; Ruleville, April 18-23; Greenville, April 24-29; Aberdeen, May 9-14; Grenada, June 6-11. Batesville, Corinth and Kosciusko are on the list, but dates have not been settled. There is more interest manifested in these schools than at any time in the past. The matter of laying by a small sum for training the teachers of your school should be settled in the beginning of the year.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

To break up a cold overnight or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, sore throat or tonsilitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the purified and refined calomel compound tablet that gives you the effects of calomel and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

To date we have six on the Leadership Training Honor Roll for the Conference year. This is a mighty good start. Several have written for questions and have asked the loan of books in order that they may take training. I trust that they will not only take training themselves, but hold training classes in their various Sunday schools.

The Board has decided to place the name of each charge where a Training Class takes the examination on the Honor Roll. We hope this will encourage many charges to go through the examination. Several charges are now planning for classes. We are try-

TRAFFIC OFFICERS TO AWARD GOOD CONDUCT EMBLEMS TO MOTORISTS.

If you are an automobile owner and were not arrested during the year 1926 for speeding, reckless or drunken driving, and if you did not figure in any serious collision, you will be awarded an attractve Good Conduct Emblem for your car by the International Association of Automobile Traffic Officers, by applying by mail.

This was announced at National Headquarters, 505 University Street, Seattle, Washington, by Mr. Jack Howell, Executive Secretary, who says: "It is the object of our Association, through the awarding of these emblems, to create a spirit of co-operation and understanding between the motorist, the pedestrian, the traffic officer and the judge."

Mr. Howell, who is aided by some of the most outstanding public officials in the United States, continued that, "Parking violations, orten caused by misunderstanding of the traffice code, will not be held against the motorist in the awarding of these Good Conduct Emblems, as quite frequently proper signs are not displayed to warn the motorist.

"This nation-wide association was formed the first of this year for the purpose of establishing the 'Golden Rule' in traffic, for the abolishment of obsolete traffic rules and systematically assisting in the protection and education of the pedestrian as well as over twenty million motorists; to establish a department where the complaints and suggestions of the motorist and pedstrian may be given consideration and acted upon; to teach that the good traffic officer is a gentleman, is as human as the motorist and pedestrian and is their friend performing his duty for the protection of their life and property."

The membership of the International Association of Automobile Traffic Officers consists of traffic officers, chiefs of police, city and traffic engineers and prominent police and traffic judges throughout the United States and Canada, who are co-operating in the solution of the great present day motor vehicle traffic problems.

FROM THE COALVILLE CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: A few days after Conference, we loaded our things on a truck and started to Coalville. When we arrived, we found several of the good ladies at the parsonage with a warm supper ready for us. The next evening quite a crowd came in and gave us a good pounding, which we appreciate. Good things to eat continue to come in. Since we began to write this letter, a man brought a sack of flour, sent by that faithful man of God, Rev. G. W. Huff. He is crippled with rheumatism and has other ailments that keep him at home; but he still loves God, the church, and the brethren. It is a pleasure to be associated with him and Brother Fayard, who, perhaps, has done more for Methodism in this section of the country than has any other one man.

This is a four-point work, giving half time to Coalville church, which is one of the strongest country churches in the Conference. The parsonage is located there, about twelve miles from Biloxi, which is our post office. It is a good, new, comfortable building. We have here some of as fine people as we have ever served. They are loyal to the church and love their pastors. We have been around the circuit twice and have heard but very little criticism of any former pastor. This speaks well for them. But if we had, we would not go into print with it, for we remember the obligation we took forty-three years ago when we joined the church, which forbids speaking evil of ministers.

The work is starting off nicely. We have good congregations. We have organized an Epworth League at Cedar Lake, and expect to organize one at Coalville in a few days. This pastor does not claim credit for the one organized. He does not desire honor for work done by a former pastor over which he lost sleep, prayed, and shed tears. He would rather suffer wrong at any time than to do another an injustice.

Our new presiding elder is starting off well. He was once pastor of this people, and they love him and are glad to have him on the district. He has the work at heart, is kind and brotherly, is planning for great things, and we predict for him a good year.

Yours truly,
W. W. MURRAY, P. C.

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR 1926.

Dear Sir: I send you the following concerning lynchings for the past year as compiled by Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research. I find there were 29 persons lynched in 1926. This is 13 more than the number 16 for 1925; 13 more than the number 16 for 1924; less than the number 33 for 1923, and 28 less than the number 57 for 1922. The courts had acquitted one of the victims; 20 of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law, 8 from jails and 12 from officers of the law outside of jails; 2 of the persons lynched were women.

There were 33 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings; 4 of these were in Northern States and 29 in Southern States. In 27 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In 6 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. In 4 instances during the year, persons charged with being connected with lynching mobs were indicted. Of the 34 persons thus before the courts, 9 were sentenced to the penitentiary: 8 for terms ranging from 4 to 20 years, and 1 for life.

Of the 29 persons lynched, there were 22 Negroes, 6 whites, and 1 Indian. Five, or less than 17 per cent of those put to death, were charged with rape or attempted rape. The offenses charged were: Murder, 8; rape, 2; attempted rape, 3; killing officer of the law, 5; wounding officer of the law, 2; attacking woman, 1; insulting woman, 1; frightening woman, 1; burglary, 1; charge not reported, 5.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are: Arkansas, 2; Florida, 8; Georgia, 1; Kentucky, 1; Mississippi, 4; New Mexico, 1; South Carolina, 3; Tennessee, 1; Texas, 7; Virginia, 1.

Yours very truly,
R. R. MOTON,
Principal, Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative—Not a "Physic"

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help, else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off—Adv.

If Back Hurts Begin on Salts

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.

The District Workers' Meetings up to the present have been most helpful; each of the districts has planned for a workers' meeting. At this date, four District Workers' Meetings have been held—Brookhaven, Jackson, Meridian and Newton. Some of the goals they have set have been larger than any efforts attempted before.

The Brookhaven District agreed to place 15 Programs of Work; to attempt to have 8 ranking C Type schools and 2 ranking B Sunday schools. They set as their goal 6 ranking Elementary Departments and 6 schools to observe Children's Week; 200 Standard Training awards, 75 Cokesbury awards; 100 per cent for Sunday School Day and 90 per cent mission observance, with 10 per cent increase in enrollment. They made arrangements for six circuit institutes and for five Cokesbury Training Schools.

The Jackson District placed 25 as the number of Programs of Work to be placed, with 10 ranking C Type Sunday schools and 4 ranking B Type Sunday schools; 4 Standard Elementary Departments and 15 ranking Elementary Departments; 20 to observe Children's Week; 500 Standard Training awards and 50 Cokesbury awards; 100 per cent Sunday School Day observance with 75 per cent increase missionary observance; 10 per cent enrollment increase; six circuit institutes and 11 Cokesbury Schools. The other districts will be tabulated and placed in the News Letter. The work so far indicates a most healthy increase over last year.

Remember the workers in your prayers, and may the blessings of God be with you each and every one.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

CHURCH LOYALTY.

In writing the caption to these paragraphs, we have in mind primarily loyalty to the program of the church as formulated, approved, and adopted by the church in its law-making assembly.

This program is a great one—it has to be, for ours is a great church. It calls for a great deal of work, unflagging zeal, careful planning, the giving of much money, the expenditure of much time and energy. It is such a program as befits a great church in a time of great world need.

This program cannot be carried out by those who are lacking in loyalty to the law-making authority of the church. There may be difficulties in the way of putting on the program in some places—we know there are such difficulties—but their existence does not justify any leader in failing to put it on. The program has been adopted, its provisions have been made clear, definite instructions have been sent out, the command has been given; now, the only thing for the loyal church leader and church member to do is to go to work.

To give point to this matter of church loyalty, we quote from the Discipline of 1926, Section V, Paragraph 483, Article XXII, dealing with the duty of the preacher in charge concerning the missionary work of the church: "He shall see that each League holds a monthly meeting for the study of missions, that the Woman's Missionary Societies are organized in every church where at all practicable, and especially conduct through the months of January and February, as directed above, an intensive missionary cultivation, during which time he shall hold missionary mass meetings, seek in every way to educate and inspire his people concerning the evangelization of the world, and through the missionary committee conduct an every-member canvass in every congregation to secure a free-will offering for missions in addition to the assessment."

This legislation is that of the very latest General Conference. It is not merely advisory or suggestive, but mandatory. It does not say that the preacher in charge "may" do these things, but that he "shall' do them. This legislation is not old enough for it to have fallen into "inoccuous desuetude"—it is fresh from the hands of the representatives, both lay and clerical, of all the Annual Conferences. It was made to be carried out.

There ought not to be a single pastoral charge in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which this legislation is not carried out in every single congregation. Simple church loyalty requires it. And the members of the church are as much bound by the obligation of loyalty as the preachers are.

EVANGELISM THROUGH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The end of all the work of all the organizations of the church is to bring about the salvation of the individual through faith in Christ, and to nurture in the Christian faith those who have thus accepted the Savior. This nurturing process involves, of course, opportunities for expressional activities in promoting the interests of the Kingdom of God; but the primary task of the church is to get people saved.

The Sunday school is at once the best field and the best agency for evangelistic work that the church possesses. It is the best field because it reaches people of all classes, all ages, and all conditions of society in the community, especially among the children and young people; and it is the best agency because it deals directly and continuously with the individual in application of the principles of Christ as they are authoritatively laid down for us in the Bible.

It is no wonder, therefore, that the church is coming to realize what a tremendously effective agency the Sunday school is for carrying out its primary aim, and that the Sunday school is more and more being used to bring the unsaved to Christ. It is in keeping with this use that a definite period of time each year has been set apart for specific evangelistic activity through the Sunday school.

One of our Conference Sunday School Superintendents, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of the North Mississippi Conference, has consistently emphasized in his work the truth that "the permanent redemptive forces of a community are the resident forces." This statement is simply a striking way of saying that if a community is to be saved, it must be saved through the regular, persistent, consecrated efforts of those living in the community, rather than by spasmodic efforts occasionally made by those brought in from the outside. This is not a condemnation, or even a criticism, of what we are accustomed to call "revivals," or of the labors of those who are called in from time to time to assist in the work of evangelization; it is a recognition of the fact that a community cannot be saved apart from itself, and that periodic emotional stresses in the religious life are not sufficient to maintain permanently the vital facts of religious experience.

We have recently had brought to our attention some facts that have great significance in this connection. An investigation, extending over a period of five years and embracing five thousand churches, showed that of one hundred members brought into a church through spasmodic revival efforts, only thirteen at the end of the period retained even nominal connection with the church, while of one hundred brought in through the Sunday school, having a background of religious training, sixty-six remained in active connection with the church and fifty per cent of them were actively engaged in the work of the church. These facts, taken in connection with the further fact that approximately eighty-five per cent of the membership is recruited through the Sunday school, would seem to fix beyond question the place of the Sunday school in our program of evangelism.

Wise are the pastors, therefore, and the leaders of Sunday schools who follow faithfully a program of evangelism through the best agency for evangelistic effort the church possesses.

IN DANGER OF BEING FORGOTTEN.

We have never felt that it is an exact characterization to speak of the superannuated preacher as the "forgotten man;" we are afraid, however, that there is danger that this may become the proper term to use.

When the Special Effort in Behalf of Superannuates was undertaken a comparatively short time ago, there was great interest manifested; much enthusiasm was aroused, and many of the congregations in the church put on the campaign according to the plan, securing pledges to cover their quotas, and many of them making the first year's payment in full; some churches even paid the five years' quota in full.

But the Minutes of the Annual Conferences seem to show that there is a steady falling off in the receipts for this sacred cause each succeeding year. How is this to be explained? Is the cause any less sacred? Is the need any less urgent? Has the church become poverty-stricken within the past two or three years? Surely we cannot answer these questions in the affirmative.

What is the trouble, then? Is it that we are in danger of forgetting the needs of these worn-out servants of the church; of forgetting the pledges we made in good faith; of forgetting the obligation we are under to those into whose labors we have entered?

These superannuates are our living heroes of the Cross. What a tragedy it will be if we forget all about them, in spite of our promises and pledges, and let them go down to their graves in suffering and want!

HOW RICH IS HE?

We read the other day of a man who is reputed to be one of the richest men in the world. He is a titled Englishman, with whose name we are not familiar. It seems that he is famous for his scale of living, especially for the luxuries he provided for his table. He had men employed to secure famous recipes for him from all over the world, and it was not unusual for some special dainty to be hurried to his home by special train or airplane. He is known as an epicure of the epicures. But now he is sick, and all he is allowed to eat is—chicken broth! The man who was accustomed to rare and costly viands from the four quarters of the earth now has to be satisfied with the simple food that any barnyard can furnish. We imagine that Mr. Jiggs with his corned beef and cabbage is happier—and richer—than he.

AN INTERPRETATION.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Some readers of the Bible fail to catch the full value of the opening verses of the Gospel of John, and especially of the term, "Word." They may know that "Word," in a sense, means Christ, but what is gained by the use of the term in that sense is not understood.

Let us try to put ourselves in John's place. He was a young Galilean fisherman, a son of Zebedee, and younger brother of James. He was evidently the youngest of the apostolic college, and is designated as "the disciple whom Jesus loved." He must have been poorly educated when he and his brother became members of that company called "the twelve," or "the apostolic college." We are inclined to wonder that with such handicaps as a fisherman's life on Galilee at that period of Jewish depression suggests, this young Jew should get such a grasp of the Greek language, which was not his mother tongue, that he should write five books of the New Testament, using statelier, purer and stronger Greek than any other of the writers in that group except Paul, whose education was ample, and whose native tongue was Greek. But such things have been here and there where energy, intellectuality and consecration rule the life. Greek was the most elegantly expressive and musical language on earth at that time. In Italy it was greatly feared that it would crowd out the Latin, the native tongue of Rome. This Jewish boy John, a Galilean fisherman, under the leadership of the Christ, and later of the Holy Spirit,

"Broke his birth's invidious bar,
And grasped the skirts of happy chance
And breasted blows of circumstance,
And grappled with his evil star,"

and saw much of the glories of heaven and revealed in them, and wrote about them for us; and revealed more fully and clearly to us the real Christ.

John begins his Gospel with an utterance that suggests Greek philosophy; and far outreaches anything Greek philosophy ever suggested: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." What a magnificent ascending concatenation: "The Word—The Word was with God—The Word was God!" Two modern language versions of the New Testament are before me; one of these follows the Authorized Version and the Revised by using the term, Word; the other uses the Greek Logos, spelled with English letters. In this connection the two words mean the same. It is perfectly and plainly evident that John would have us think Christ where he writes Word. Suppose we simplify for the children, and for some older folks, who love simplicity, by putting Christ where John wrote Logos: "In the beginning was the Christ, and the Christ was with God, and the Christ was God." Let us go on further: "All things were made through the Christ, and without the Christ was not anything made that hath been made." All of this emphasizes tremendously that Christ the Son of God is, as our Second Article of faith puts it: "The Son, who is the Word of the Father, the very and eternal God, of one substance with the Father." Why do we, following John, say that Christ is the Word of the Father? It is because to us Christ is the full expression of God and of the revelation of God's thought so far as human minds can possibly grasp such mighty things.

John then passes into another very beautiful figure: "In him was life, and the life was the light of men." The Christ life enlightens us men and women. Nelson, whose mother was a French Protestant, concluded to be an infidel, and began by reading Voltaire; but Voltaire's ignorance of the Bible drove Nelson from his resolution, and led him to write a book in defense of his mother's religion. When a young man I undertook to read one of Ingersoll's lectures, but threw it aside disgusted with this infidel's crass ignorance of the Bible. "In Christ is life"—a higher life—and this higher life is light. John then says: That "Christ is the Light of the World."

There follows a startling statement: "There was the true (the real) light which lighteth every man coming into the world"—or as the Authorized Version says, "That cometh into the world" —or as the Revision puts it: "as he cometh into the world." There are before me four distinct versions of the Greek New Testament, and they all agree, making it perfectly clear that these words were used by John. They express the truth set forth in our service for the baptism of infants: "All men though fallen in Adam are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer, heirs of life eternal and subjects of the saving grace of the Holy Spirit." Yet there are some very worthy men, because, we suppose, of preconceived theological notions, who try to force into these plain words of John some other sense. Their efforts are vain; for Christ, as reported by Matthew, Mark, and Luke, declared of some little children who were being denied their sacred rights in religion: "To such belongeth the kingdom of God." Matthew relates a startling story. "He called to him a little child, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye turn, and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me: but whoso shall cause one of these little ones that believeth on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depth of the sea."

John passes from this joyous statement about the Light of the World lighting every earth born child of our race, "as he is coming into the world," thus giving to every child a chance to reach the highest and best; and he utters one of the saddest sentences he ever penned: "He came unto his own (the chosen Jewish people), and they that were his own received him not." Then he rushes on to a veritable shout of glory: "But to as many as received him he gave the right to become children of God." This supreme right is ours: how do we use it?

"Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we, that have not seen thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
Believing where we cannot prove,

"Thou seemest human and divine,
The highest, holiest manhood thou:
Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours to make them thine."

THE HUNDRED PER CENT HABIT.

Both of our Mexican Missions have contracted the hundred per cent habit—that is, the habit of paying all assessments 100 per cent.

During the year 1926 the Western Mexican Mission, writes the Rev. J. P. Lancaster, superintendent of the Eastern district, met all obligations in full 100 per cent in accordance with its usual custom.

The Rev. F. S. Onderdonk, in charge of the Texas Mexican Mission, reports that all members of this mission also paid all assessments in full during the past year. In this respect the two Mexican Missions surpass any other Conference or Mission of the entire church.

The 1,826 members of the Western Mexican Mission cntributed during the past year for all purposes $13,065.07. They paid in full the forty cents per member special asked by the Board of Missions for missionary maintenance in 1926; they came out 100 per cent on the $200 promised each year for five years to the Superannuate Endowment Fund; they contributed in full their share of the fund for pastors' salaries, totaling $3,119.50. The membership of this Mission shows a net increase of 317 for the year, the total membership to date being 1,999.

Not only have the members of the Western Mexican Mission paid all past obligations, but they are looking toward the future. They have accepted the $400 quota assigned to them as their share in the $1,000,000 free-will offering for missions that will be taken at the close of the special missionary-study period during the months of January and February, 1927, and it can be confidently counted on that this amount, too, will be paid in full, says Mr. Lancaster, for the Mexican Christians who belong to this mission know no other way of doing—they have contracted the hundred per cent habit.

To some people $400 may seem but an insignificant part of the great $1,000,000 missionary offering, but not when one recollects that the assessments levied upon the Mexican Methodists are upon the same decimal basis as upon the members of any other Methodist church. Four hundred dollars is all that these Mexicans have been asked to give; they have already accepted their quota and are planning out of their dire poverty —for they are desperately poor—to meet their quota in full. And it will be paid—100 per cent! —Missionary Bulletin.

ANNUAL MEETING OF EVANGELISTS.

Decrying modernism as unsettling the faith of many and hindering the progress of the kingdom of God, general evangelists of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the closing session of their annual meeting, Dec. 29, went on record as being opposed to modernism in its four constituent elements, which they named as rationalism, liberalism, destructive higher criticism, and evolutionism.

With the adoption of strong resolutions opposing modernism, endorsing of Senator Borah's resolution for international outlawry of war, pledging allegiance to the Methodist Assembly at Lake Junaluska, N. C., and acceptance of Bishop James Cannon's invitation to hold an evangelistic conference at that place next summer, evangelists brought to a close their annual conference Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 29.

Memphis, Tenn., was selected as the next meeting place of the evangelists in the regular annual conference. The date will be Dec. 10, 1927.

The new board of control was elected as follows: Dr. W. M. McIntosh, Columbus, Miss.; Rev. Lovick P. Law, Siloam Springs, Ark; Rev. J. B. Andrews, Siloam Springs; Rev. W. B. Hogg, Memphis. Rev. Burke Culpepper was re-elected secretary and treasurer for the ensuing year, and Dr. J. W. Perry, Nashville, Tenn., by virtue of his office as secretary of home missions, will remain at the head of the department of evangelism for the present Methodist quadrennium, 1926-30. The board of control will arrange for the regular and called meetings of the church's evangelists. No new members were elected at the present session.

The department of evangelism includes more than 100 active evangelists and evangelistic singers, authorized by the church to assist pastors in holding revival services. They are amenable to the discipline of the church and render yearly account of their service as do members of the pastorate.

The resolutions on modernism were as follows:

"Whereas, modernism during the past few years has made serious inroads upon the religious life of America; has injected the poison of skepticism and infidelity into many of the leading institutions of learning throughout the land; and,

"Whereas, it has confused and unsettled the faith of multitudes of people and thus hindered the progress of the kingdom of God in the world;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the general evangelists of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in convention assembled, put themselves on record as being opposed to modernism in its four constituent elements of rationalism, liberalism, destructive higher criticism, and evolutionism.

"Further, be it resolved, That we take this occasion to express and to emphasize our firm and unshaken faith in the great fundamental doctrines of historical Christianity, such as the divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the Genesis account of the creation and fall of man, the Virgin Birth, the sacrificial atonement, and the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ."

The resolutions were signed by J. W. Carter, Lexington, Ky.; John C. Patty, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Andrew Johnson, Wilmore, Ky.

Evangelists declared the meeting just closed to be one of the best in the history of the organization. The majority of the 100 members of the evangelistic body were present.—Secular Press Bureau.

A LEGAL MATTER OF INTEREST.

By Hon. T. W. Holloman.

The effect in Louisiana of the so-called trust clause in our Discipline has been a matter of concern. Substitutions and fidei comissa are prohibited, and the taking of property out of commerce by trust clauses or other devices has been in disfavor.

In 1817 Julian Poydras made a donation to the Female Orphan Society of certain property, with the condition that it should never be alienated. Some ninety years later the donee contracted to sell a part of the property to the Y. M. C. A. The purchaser declined to carry out the purchase on account of this condition. The Society brought suit to compel the defendant to accept title. In a decision in which the court reviewed the law and the policy indicated thereby, the Supreme Court of Louisiana held that a condition of inalienability attached to a donation for pious uses was void, and reputed not written as creating a tenure of property not provided by our Code and as putting the property out of commerce, contrary to public policy.—Female Orphan Society vs. Y. M. C. A., 119 La., 278.

The Court said that it must not be understood as holding that a donor could not make a donation on such terms that it should lapse and the property revert to him or his heirs on breach of the condition, or that a particular destination could not be attached to property given for such uses. It held that this was well settled by the McDonough Will Case, 8 La. Ann., 256, and by other cases.

It may be noted, however, that our Court has frequently held that gifts for pious uses are highly favored as being for the public good. The term includes the use of property for religious, charitable, educational and scientific purposes and the advancement of the arts. And by statute property may be conveyed to trustees for such purposes.

The trust clause in the Discipline reads as follows (the language in parenthesis is that used in the purchase of parsonage property):

"In trust, that said premises shall be used, kept, maintained, and disposed of, as a place of divine worship for the use of the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; (residence for the use and occupancy of the preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who may from time to time be appointed in said place); subject to the discipline, usage, and ministerial appointments of said church, as from time to time authorized and declared by the General Conference of said church, and by the Annual Conference within whose bounds the said premises are situated."

It is seen that in this language there is no attempt to stipulate the inalienability of the property. The object of our church law is, as I understand it, to secure a fee simple title in the church to such property as it holds—to make sure that title is in the church and subject to its control and not in and subject to the control of a set of individuals or the trustees of a corporation. This is indicated by paragraph 240 of the Discipline.

The language seems simply to state the object or destination of the property and to secure the control of the church, according to its discipline usage, in the use, maintenance and disposition of the property. And the Supreme Court of Louisiana has so held in the case of Board of Trustees of the Seventh Street Colored Methodist Episcopal Church vs. William Campbell, 48 La. Ann., 1543.

This church, commonly called the Calvary or Mount Calvary Church, was incorporated. It had purchased certain church property and at the end of the deed was a trust clause, which is identical with that in our Discipline, mutatis mutandis. It contracted to sell same to the defendant, who declined to take title because the property was held "in trust, and really for use only." The quarterly conference and the preacher in charge authorized the sale.

Plaintiff sued defendant to compel him to accept title. Judge King, of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans, decided for plaintiff, and the judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court, Judge Nicholls, then Chief Justice, being the organ of the Court. The Court held, using the language of the syllabus which is in accordance with the decision:

"Where, in an act, a vendor declares that he sells the property with full warranty without a word of reservation, exception or limitation, a clause at the very close of the act which declares 'In trust that said premises shall be used, and kept, maintained, and disposed of as a place of divine worship, for the use of the ministry and membership of the Colored (Methodist) Episcopal Church in America, subject to the discipline, usage and ministerial appointments of said church, or from time to time authorized and dedeclared by the General Conference of said church, and the Annual Conference within whose bounds the said premises are situated,' is no part of the contract between the vendor and his vendee; it is an enunciation foreign to the disposal of the property, in which vendor who had parted absolutely with his entire interest had no concern. It is merely a clause declaratory of the object for which the purchase was made."—Board of Trustees of the Seventh Street Colored Methodist Episcopal Church vs. William Campbell, 48 Ann., 1543.

The Court then referred to the fact that the property had certainly not passed out of commerce, and said:

"* * * There must be, therefore, some present method by which the property can be disposed of. We know of no one but the plaintiff who could dispose of it. It holds the legal title, and if there be any person or persons having any vested interest in it, they have not been made to appear. It may be that the plaintiff corporation, as a condition of placing itself subsequently in religious connection with a religious body known as the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America, has been made to consent and has consented to deal with the property according to the rules and regulations of that body, and that in so doing they have consented to subordinate, for certain purposes, their powers to the control or supervision of a superior body, but if they have done so the only interest which defendant has in that matter is that the Board of Trustees should have exercised their powers in the manner and form and under the conditions it had agreed to. If it has done so and the controlling, superior body approves and consents to the transfer, defendant can have nothing to apprehend. The property will have been freed from further control and will pass unfettered and free into defendant's ownership. * * *"—Board of Trustees of the Seventh Street Colored Methodist Episcopal Church vs. William Campbell, 48 Ann., 1549.

So far as I know, such a clause has not been construed in any other case, but the principle here has been affirmed in a number of subsequent cases and this case cited as authority. It seems to me that this decision determines and settles the effect of our trust clause in Louisiana.

TO THE PASTORS OF LOUISIANA METHODISM.

Upon recommendation by the Board of Temperance and Social Service and by unanimous vote of the Conference at the recent session at Homer, Rev. A. W. Turner was appointed Legislative Director of the Louisiana Legislative Prohibition League. Brother Turner needs no introduction to Louisiana Methodism. His constructive work in the interest of Prohibition for many years past, his unusual record of being instrumental in placing on the statute books of the State most, if not all, the legislation favorable to the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, is all the commendation necessary.

Brother Turner is now making out his schedule of dates for the year and it is hoped that the pastors will open their pulpits to him that his message, which is vital to our needs at this time, may be placed before our people.

W. C. CHILDRESS, President,
Conference Board of Temperance and Social Service.

THE SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE.

"I do not know of anybody in any church in the connection who has given so generously to the cause as a poor mother here on the Georgetown circuit in Texas," declares the Rev. D. W. Carter, of the Texas Mexican Mission, who has charge of the work among Mexicans.

"Recently while raising our annual collections I appealed to the congregation to give in the spirit of sacrifice and to do all that they possibly could. One woman, the mother of a large family, whose aged husband is unable to work, came forward and gave me $5 which she and her children had earned picking cotton. This was indeed a sacrifice on her part. I do not know of anybody in the church who has done more—or even as much."

Mr. Carter, who is 78 years of age, has been in charge of this circuit ever since his superannuation, and has built two chapels for the members at no expense to the Board of Missions. The total membership of this circuit is 55, and a meeting is held annually in special effort to increase the membership. There was never any organied work on this circuit until opened by Mr. Carter.

There was no school for Mexicans in Georgetown until Mr. Carter brought up this matter before the members of the school board. Such a school has been opened and is proving a great success. Two boys who were sent from this mission to the Wesleyan Institute at San Antonio, Tex., have made good.

There is a great opportunity for work among the many Mexicans in the State of Texas. "I cannot do more than I am doing, on account of my age," says Mr. Carter, "but if we had the men and the meaus this work could be greatly extended."—Missionary Bulletin.

The fact is, God can use any sort of man and every peculiarity of man—only let the man give himself as he is to God. This is what Elijah did—utterly surrendered his nature to God.—Pulsford.

REPORT OF THE FINDINGS COMMITTEE OF THE MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

In this the first session of the Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, an organization provided for by the General Conference of 1926, we have been brought face to face with the world missionary situation as our church is related to it. We have been made to feel afresh something of the world's great need and the critical significance of the present hour.

With opportunities such as we have not had before, we witness steadily decreasing payments for the support of our work in world evangelization. The only response the church has made to the critical situation created by our failure to collect Centenary pledges in full, has been to cut appropriations to missons, both home and foreign. At the same time we have been contributing in increased measure to our local or home church interests.

Great numbers in our church are suffering from spiritual nearsightedness. When our Lord was upon the earth in the flesh, he was moved by compassion when he saw the multitudes, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd; but apparently his church is not so moved with compassion to-day, although the multitudes are far more numerous and as fully bewildered, and as pitifully shepherdless as then.

The awful fact in life is that this is a lost world. Despite all the discoveries of science, the progress in secular education, and the increase in comfort and luxury, the world at large is still dominated by St. John's sinister trinity—"the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life." The best news that ever came to this lost world was the message of the angels, "for unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, Christ the Lord." The glory of this message is that he came to save all lost men and women of every nation, and he commanded as his last general order to his disciples that they should go into all the world and carry the good news of salvation to every creature. And these disciples went everywhere preaching the Word, loyal to their Savior and Master in spite of persecution, even unto death.

Are our Methodist people really loyal to our Lord? Are we earnestly, persistently, joyfully, obeying his last command to carry the story of his deathless love to lost men and women? Multiplied millions of lost men and women whom Jesus came to save from sin, have never yet heard the story of his wondrous love.

Now our people are utterly failing to obey our Savior's command at the very time when our country is the richest, most prosperous nation the world has ever known. We have increasing billions of money in savings banks, increasing billions in protection in life insurance; and we probably spend more money for gasoline on one Sunday, certainly in one week, than we give to missions in a whole year. It is tragic.

Before a situation that calls imperatively for advance, we have been simply holding the line. Further reduction of appropriations would mean the breakdown of organization and morale among our faithful workers on the field that would be well-nigh irreparable. To sound a retreat would be base disloyalty to our Lord, a violation of all the glorious traditions of our past, and would make us unworthy to bear the name of that illustrious and apostolic leader, whose most characteristic utterance was, "the world is my parish."

We would call attention to the vigorous and forward-looking missionary policy found in the legislation of the General Conference of 1926.

1. The months of January and February of each year were set aside by the General Conference as a period of missionary cultivation in each congregation, at the conclusion of which a free-will offering for missions is to be taken.

Paragraph 467, Article VI, of the Discipline reads: "The revenues for the general work of the Board shall be derived from apportionments distributed to the several Annual Conferences for collection in every congregation, from Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, free-will offerings taken in every church each year during the months of January and February, within which period a special missionary cultivation campaign shall be conducted through the whole church in every congregation, when each member of the church shall be given an opportunity to make a free-will offering for maintaining the general work of the Board."

2. We call attention to the objective or goal to be striven for as the fruitage of this period of special missionary cultivation, namely: raising of at least one million dollars over and above income from regular sources, as shown in Paragraph 467, Article VI, "This free-will offering shall be in addition to the missionary assessments for the year and shall not include the income from the Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues."

3. The General Conference has made provision and given specific instructions for carrying out a special period of cultivation and the taking of a free-will offering for missions each year during the quadrennium, as shown in the Discipline.

Paragraph 482, Article XXI. "The presiding elder shall preach annually on missions in each charge in his district, see that adequate plans are adopted for the missionary education of all the churches and for raising missionary funds, conduct with his preachers and lay representatives a missionary institute early in the Conference year, in which institute he shall lay plans for a district-wide observance of intensive missionary cultivation during the months of January and February, as directed in paragraph 467."

Paragraph 483, Article XXII. "The preacher in charge shall preach frequently on missions—hold a school of missions annually in every church in his charge, and shall otherwise promote the cause of missions in the congregation. He shall * * * especially conduct through the months of January and February, as directed above, an intensive missionary cultivation, during which time he shall hold missionary mass meetings, seek in every way to educate and inspire his people concerning the evangelization of the world, and through the Missionary Committee conduct an every-member canvass in every congregation to secure a free-will offering for missions in addition to the assessment."

4. In keeping with Paragraph 483 of the Discipline let each pastor in our great church be urged by the Conference Missionary Secretary, through the presiding elders, to organize at once (if he has not already done so) a missionary committee in each congregation. This committee should form the nucleus for a study class, and, with others, enter immediately upon the study of the book, "Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions."

We regard as of supreme importance the organization and use of missionary committees in each congregation as directed by the Discipline. The organization of this committee and the every-member-canvass for a free-will offering for missions are General Conference requirements that must not be evaded. The integrity of the Missionary Institute must be preserved for the express purpose for which it was created by the General Conference, namely: missionary cultivation and the promotion of plans for the realization of the spiritual and financial objectives set forth in this General Conference legislation for the enlargement of our missionary operations.

SUNDAY SCHOOL EVANGELISM—PERSONAL REVIVAL.

By Rev. W. B. Ricks, D.D.

Some one has truly said that the ideal church and Sunday school are one where the whole church membership is at Sunday school and the whole Sunday school is at the preaching service. In that event the evangelism of the church and the Sunday school would be one and the same and would be designated personal.

The Sunday school, which has more to do with the religious training of the childhood of the church than any other organization, is largely charged with bringing the children into fellowship with Jesus and schooling them in Christian living. If the Sunday school fails in this task, it has failed woefully, for it is not a club or mere religious school, but a soul-winning and soul-developing agency. It should undoubtedly be the greatest evangelistic agency of any organization in the world. It should be a rare thing for a boy or girl to regularly attend a Sunday school and pass beyond the teen age without having been brought into vital fellowship with Jesus and having made a definite and determined decision to follow him.

If, however, the Sunday school is to do this evangelistic work, it must have such a program and goal of vital Christian instruction and education as to produce religious conviction, decision, and daily effort in Christian living. This end cannot be attained through haphazard methods. If the world is ever to be won to Jesus Christ, it must be done largely in youth and through religious instruction and personal touch by individuals of a truly Christian experience—by men and women who are born of God. Definite times should be set and special efforts made each year to bring the pupils to a definite decision for the Christian life and to renew those who have become calloused or indifferent.

In view of these facts and truths, which would be admitted by most Christian people, the program of evangelism outlined by the Evangelistic Committee of the General Sunday School Board for the months of January, February, and March of this year, culminating with Easter, should be heeded by our pastors and Sunday school leaders. It has been suggested by the committee that this outlined plan can be changed or modified to suit each situation.

If the whole church should be in the Sunday school and the Sunday school in the preaching service as suggested in the beginning of this article, then in many places the pastor should plan in this three months' effort to use the whole church and all its organizations to work together with the Sunday school, promoting prayer, Bible study, and personal workers' bands and having for the last week or ten days of the said period preaching services by the pastor.

As a pastor in several States I used this method a number of years and had really great revivals, receiving scores of members on profession of faith, with permanent and wholesome results. And the teachers and officers of the Sunday school and the workers of the whole church who, with soul passion led their pupils and others into definite and permanent decisions to live and work with Jesus, came into more vital Christian experiences. Thus the church, with all its agencies, served the whole community in the spirit of the Master.

This sort of program each year can be worked and ought to be worked in the country and village churches and Sunday schools, as well as in the towns and cities. Then our evangelistic efforts will not be so spasmodic and we will be working more in harmony with our Lord when he set a child in the midst and said "of such is the Kingdom of God."

Murfreesboro, Tenn.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are living in a day when the moral structure of society is being shaken to its foundations. War from without, menacing forces from within, have forced democracy to a supreme test. The only power which can insure right social relations and right individual life is the gospel of Christ. To spread this gospel is the work of the church.

There is no other way to do this task save by the seemingly slow process of training up Christian leaders in every walk of life. Christian leadership is not an accident. Men and women capable of such leadership in this day are the product of thorough religious education. Then the church will make one great mistake if it loosens its hold on its colleges. Extinguish the church colleges and you put out the eyes both of the church and the State.

The Christian college is like unto a manufacturing plant—it takes the finest raw material the church can furnish, multiplies its value a hundredfold and returns it to the church in a life-giving stream of intelligent faith, trained power and consecrated leadership.

Just now we have before us the one question: Will we loosen our hold on our church college at Brookhaven, Miss., and close up that life-giving stream of intelligent faith, trained powers, and consecrated leadership?

I want to visit your church and present this matter to your congregation, and the matter of endowing Whitworth College. For we have before us the greatest problem that ever confronted the college in its long history. The endowment must be raised, and in a way that will reflect credit to our great church. Then will you please arrange an engagement for me to visit your congregation and present the interest of the college and the endowment? It is going to take the co-operation and best efforts of every leader in the Mississippi Conference.

What do you think of making a quota for each charge, based on the pastor's salary, say one and one-half times the salary assessed, going over a period of three years, paying one-third of it each year? If we would adopt this plan, we would get the $500,000 and the college would be endowed.

Please write me what you think of this plan, and also arrange a time that I can come to your charge.

Thanking you for this co-operation, I am,

Yours for the cause,

R. A. MADDOX.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE ADMINISTRATIVE COMMITTEE OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA, OCT. 22, 1926.

On recommendation of the Committee on Temperance and Prohibition, voted:

"That the Administrative Committee call the attention of pastors to the significance attaching to Sunday, Jan. 16, 1927, as the anniversary of the adoption of the Federal Prohibition Amendment, and suggest that they make appropriate recognition of the occasion, with a view to emphasizing the moral and spiritual issues that are involved in the prohibition movement and the resposibility of the churches in connection therewith. It is further recommended that denominational agencies, the religious press and local federations of churches be invited to co-operate in calling attention to such a recognition of the day."

To celebrate the seventh anniversary of constitutional prohibition, the administrative committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is calling upon the churches in America to set apart Sunday, Jan. 16, 1927, for special sermons and addresses upon the great value of the prohibition law; the good results obtained therefrom; and the necessity for constant vigilance because enemies of prohibition are still continuing their fight against the enforcement of the law.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., who represents the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the administrative committee, and is also a member of the committee of seven on temperance of the Federal Council, says this is the first time that the administrative committee, which is the executive arm of the Federal Council, has made such an appeal, and it indicates the determination of the great religious bodies to stand by the prohibition amendment and demand its enforcement.

ANNUAL REPORT, LOUISIANA DEPOSITORY, AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

The voice ceases, the Book abides.

The distribution from this depository for the year 1926 has been 2,599 Bibles; 6,701 Testaments; 60,940 portions—a total of 70,240 volumes. Fifty-nine thousand four hundred and fifty-five have been sales; 10,785 have been donations. Total value, $3,385.96; $3,024.25 have been sales, $361.71 have been donations and discounts.

We gave away 5,000 Portions of the Scriptures to the poor children again this year—3,000 to the white children on Dec. 24, 2,000 to the colored children Christmas day. Half of these were paid for by a good lady of New York, the other half by friends in New Orleans, and booked as sales.

We have distributed at night between the hours of 9 and 12 in the slum districts 5,458 volumes of the Scriptures, value $54.53. We received from churches and individuals for this work $56.

We have visited during the year 114 steamships and supplied them with 2,688 Portions of the Scriptures. These were sent here from New York for this work, and are not included in the above report. We have received a donation of $5 in cash for this work.

We have received personal donations of $66.50 applied on depository rent. A good lady of Bridge Hampton, N. Y.; Mr. T. McComb, and the First Presbyterian Church of New Orleans have paid the larger part of this.

When Louisiana was admitted to the Union in the year 1812, there was a long search for a Bible on which to administer the oath of office. Ultimately, a priest offered his copy of the Latin Vulgate. It was estimated that there were at least 78,000 homes in which no copy of the Scriptures was available. But now, God be praised, there is an average of 190 volumes of the Scriptures leaving this little sub-depository every day in the year.

There never has been a time in the past which has offered so many facilities for the world-wide spread of the Gospel as are before us to-day.

"Say not ye, there are yet four months, and then cometh harvest; behold I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look on the field: for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35).

To those people who have been so kind to us and have shown readiness to co-operate with us, we wish to say: Stretch your imagination as you will, you will never be able to understand fully what your help has meant to us, for which we thank you.

Yours in the name of the Master,

G. A. PERKINS.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Missionary Institute for the Meridian District, which was held at Central Church, Meridian, Jan. 6, 1927, was considered from every viewpoint one of the best ever held in the district. Several days before the time for the institute, Brother Selby, the presiding elder of the district, had invited representative men from over the district to meet with him as a committee, to plan a program for the institute. Notices both from the presiding elder and a committee had been sent to those who were expected to attend, and the attendance was certainly gratifying. It was estimated that there were two hundred people in attendance. Every pastor in the district was present, also district secretaries of the Woman's Missionary work and Epworth League work.

Strong and inspiring messages were brought by Rev. Robert Selby, Rev. J. L. Neill, and Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader. Mr. W. D. Hawkins brought encouraging words, and explained the plan to be followed.

It was thought wise to hold two group meetings in the district, one north and one south of Meridian, as a part of the cultivation work; these were provided for and are to be held at Porterville and Shubuta.

I am sure all left feeling that it was a great meeting, and will mean much to the missionary interests of our church.

A REQUEST TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF THE PROHIBITION AMENDMENT.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you kindly ask the readers of the Advocate to observe Jan. 16 as the seventh anniversary of National Prohibition?

Each pastor will determine just how much time he will give, as well as the plan that appeals to him as being best for his congregation.

Some layman may be secured for a short talk on "Law Observance."

Special effort to reach all of the Sunday schools should be included in the plan.

Legislative Director, Louisiana Legislative Prohibition League.

EVANGELISTIC TENT AVAILABLE.

Dear Brother Carley: The Committee on Evangelism owns a tent, a good one, which is for rent at $25 per week to any one needing it. I would like to mention this through the Advocate, as this tent should be kept busy. It has good side walls, and is in first-class condition. Those desiring to use it should write our Missionary Secretary, Rev. J. G. Snelling, 815 Washington Avenue, New Orleans, La.

RESOLUTION ON REFERENDA ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE COUNCIL, WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1, 1926.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this National Temperance Council that the temperance forces of the United States should not be diverted from the main issues in any election by giving attention to so-called wet and dry referenda on the Eighteenth Amendment or the National Prohibition Law, which referenda are without authority under the Constitution, and which are legally futile and can have no binding effect.

In any State referenda having to do with laws or State constitutional provisions which will have a legal and binding effect, the temperance forces should take an active part.

If the church is to have any real influence on our industrial life, it must have courage. It must expect to be misunderstood at times and criticized. It must pay the price of sympathy with the labor movement—or else forfeit its hold on the working masses as tragically as it has been forfeited in Germany. The church had better make occasional blunders than timidly abdicate the field.—Worth M. Tippy.

A few months ago, I stood one day in Westminster Abbey at the tomb of the young Unknown Soldier. He died because the politicians told him that thereby he would help to make an end of war. I crossed the street to the House of Parliament and heard sixty million pounds voted in new taxation for the British navy. Similar incidents can be observed in France or the United States. Is it any wonder that hosts of young people all over the world are in a state of almost chronic revolt against the complacency of their elders toward war?—Walter W. Van Kirk

WANTED—A SPIRITUAL CHURCH.

By Rev. O. E. Goddard, D.D.

(Article No. 1)

The church is a spiritual institution. Its capital stock is spirituality. A church spiritually bankrupt can win no victories. Such victories as we have won were won by reason of our spiritual resources. The failures we have made grew out of inadequate spiritual powers. All departments of the church need spiritual power. A genuinely spiritual church is the desideratum of the hour. All our chief pastors, all our editors, all our presiding elders, all our pastors, all our college presidents, all our connectional officers, all our leading laymen and our good women, not a few, would agree that our paramount need is genuine spirituality. With this we can conquer—without it we fail. With it we are invincible—without it we are impotent.

But there might not be such unanimity of opinion as to what genuine spirituality is. Some things pass for spiritual manifestations that are not of the Spirit. It is important that these pseudo spiritual manifestations be cognizable. Emotionality is sometimes mistaken for spirituality. In former years, the emotional church members were supposed to be the spiritual members. It seemed to be supposed that activity of the lachrymal glands indicated the presence of the Spirit. But we have learned that spirituality cannot be measured by the amount of briny fluid that the lachrymal glands secrete. The Spirit has much more useful and dignified functions than making people cry. A spiritual man may or may not exhibit emotions. An emotional man may or may not be a spiritual man. Orthodoxy is sometimes mistaken for spirituality. Orthodoxy is commendable, desirable. But a man may be orthodox, may be loud in his affirmations of his orthodoxy, yet in no sense spiritual. Sometimes church loyalty is mistaken for spirituality. Church loyalty is most commendable. But a man may be an ardent Methodist, a most loyal Baptist, yet not the least bit spiritual. Much less can you judge a man by his claims to great spiritual experiences. Some of the most unethical people I have ever known claim marvelous spiritual experiences.

Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." This is an infallible test. He who has the fruits of the Spirit is a spiritual man. He who has not the fruits of the Spirit is not a spiritual man. What are the fruits of the Spirit? "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."

If we desire to know if a man is spiritual, we should not ask, "Is he emotional, orthodox, loyal or loud in his profession of spiritual experiences," but: "Has he the fruits of the Spirit? Does he love God and his fellow-men and act accordingly? Does he have the joy of the Lord? Is he a peaceable man? Does he suffer long and yet is kind? Is he meek? Is he good? Is he temperate? Has he faith?" If these be in him and abound, he is neither barren nor unfruitful. If he have these fruits, he is a spiritual man, even if some self-appointed heresy-hunter calls him a heretic.

No man can by obedience to any set of rules or outward performances produce the fruits of the Spirit. They come from the Spirit dwelling within. He who would be spiritual must have the Spirit in regenerating power; know him in assuring power—"The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God." We must know him in his guiding power. "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he shall guide you into all truth." We must know him in his Pentecostal power. "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost has come upon you." We must know him as our intercessor. "The Spirit himself maketh intercession for us with groanings that cannot be uttered." He who knows the Holy Spirit in all these functions will bear in his life spiritual fruits. Some people are skeptical about the conscious touches of the Holy Spirit because they have never experienced them. They have not experienced them because they have not maintained a courteous attitude toward the Holy Spirit. Some people resist the Holy Spirit. Some rebel against him. Some vex him. Some quench him. No man who assumes any of these antagonistic attitudes will ever know the secret of his power or be able to bear spiritual fruit. But if we yield ourselves to him, and allow him to have his way in our lives, we may have the fruits of the Spirit. A church with these fruits is a genuinely spiritual church.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Among a collection of paintings which it was my privilege to see quite recently, one especially attracted my attention and study as I sat and enjoyed the scene the artist had so skillfully depicted—a sketch of meadow land, a group of haymakers with their carts and implements, a dappled, saffron sky, the clouds catching the golden glints of the sun hastening to its setting, and beyond the meadow and winding brook among the forested hills. The genius who had so exquisitely created this picture named it "After the Storm." Though I am neither a painter nor a musician, I enjoy fine paintings and good music. I learned a lesson from this picture. May I not pass it onward to others?

If I drew near, it seemed rough and rather uncouth, but some one skilled in such matters had provided a comfortable seat, that one might have the right perspective. From this vantage point meaning, life and beauty of it all could be seen, doubtless as the artist intended. The "proper perspective" is seeing things in right proportion, understanding life in its relation to God, to men, to the great busy world about us.

For life is not all introspective or all prospective. As this new year comes to us with days of gracious opportunity, its nights that draw sable curtains about us, and give time for thought and rest, let us see things aright, catch the meaning and worth of this vaster picture in its proper perspective. Oh, how eager, how hungry, people are for comforting truth! Normal folks I mean, not cranks, criminals, and crooks—just you and I, our friends and companions. This life picture puzzles them; it has always puzzled men until they get a right view from the Christ who would bring all men to see as he saw. Instead of so much talk about new resolutions, and the vast amount of humorless humor wasted thereon, the world would be wiser and better if it would readjust its affairs in many ways; I rejoice in this supreme fact: He who holds the life and destiny of all of us has the right perspective. He knows, he sees, he understands. Wherefore comfort yourselves with these words, and follow him in his way.

Simon Peter, servant and disciple of our Lord, challenges the admiration and enlists the sympathy of every strong, virile man who is trying to live a Christian life. No one that has studied this wonderful personality ever attributed consistency to him. His denial, his profanity, his rashness are so intensely human, so far removed from the high ideal of the divine life, that we sometimes wonder how he ever won the saint's reward at the end. He was a miracle of grace, a wonderful example for all time of Christ's mercy and love. There were so many turning points in his life that we sometimes marvel how he ever headed in the right direction. Some artist, I believe, has endeavored to paint that touching scene on Galilean shores, where he had the last earthly interview with his risen Lord. After that thrice repeated question and answer, so tender, so appealing to one's sympathy, so filled with the spirit of understanding and devoted love, Peter was apparently ready and willing for any venture, any enterprise, for his Master; yet the old, ever curious, nature again asserts itself. Seeing John following, he asks, "Lord, what shall this man do?" Jesus answered, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" Oh, Simon, you were intensely human, so replete with many frailties and weaknesses, so much of a failure as a leader, yet led so many forlorn and dangerous actions, that you are a continuous paradox and a wonder! We only hear of one break he made after Pentecost, when he acted in a double-minded way with the Gentile converts; but we are willing to pardon this, because all his life he had imbibed the prejudices of his own race. And there is no record that he ever answered back to Paul's just rebuke in the matter. Tradition has it that the Master's last message to him was fulfilled in his death. "When thou art old another shall gird thee and lead thee whither thou wouldst not." And that was about the time he was superannuated. Some old preachers can no longer gird themselves for the battle. Don't let them die on the crosses of neglect and poverty. For that is a mighty lingering and painful kind of passing.

WANT TO BE A TEACHER?

"A teacher must be a leader. If you can't lead you can't teach," is the advice of Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, President of the University of Missouri, in the January installment of the "Life Job Series" in the American Boy Magazine.

"A teacher's job is genuinely big; he's helping to make men, helping to shape the nation," Dr. Brooks writes. "Then there are more personal elements worth considering—such as chances for study and research, opportunities for leadership in his association with other men, pleasant social opportunities, long vacations that give a man time for travel and writing and other special hobbies."

"What training should a teacher have?" President Brooks was asked.

"Four years of college training, at least—two years of straight college work, and two years of professional training. Better to have three years of professional training, if possible," he advised the American boy interviewer, from the American Boy Magazine.

"What opportunities are there for teachers?" was the next question.

"Good men are in great demand for grammar grade and high school teaching in our public schools," he answered. "There are attractive openings in private schools, too, for men of somewhat exceptional education and particularly pleasing personality. Some private schools pay unusually good salaries, but there are, naturally, fewer openings in that field.

"High school teaching gives you closer contact with your boys than you'll get, as a general thing, in college teaching. If you want to teach boys, there isn't a happier job in the world than being principal of a small high school. If you want to teach Latin or science, if your primary interest is in the subject rather than in the student, you'll probably be happier in a college.

"Many men start up by way of the small high school principalship. Not infrequently, a man has such a principalship offered him as soon as he has been graduated from college. More frequently, he goes from college to the high school classroom, and if he makes good there, has a small principalship offered him within two or three years.

"High school teachers' salaries vary greatly, but you're likely to draw around $1,600 a year as a beginner. A college instructor usually starts at $1,500 or $1,600, and may make $200 or $250 more for six or eight weeks of summer school work. The maximum salary for the average college instructor is $2,000 a year. To get more he must climb up, toward a professorship. If he does, he may estimate his probably annual salary from year to year by allowing $100 to each year of his life—that is, thirty-two, he'll probably be getting $3,200 a year; at forty-five, $4,500; and so on. Those figures are a little above the average, but are a fair approximation.

"We need enthusiastic men on teaching staffs," Dr. Brooks concluded, "men who like to work and want to stay in it. There is a great satisfaction in molding boys into good men. Teaching is a good life work."

The Home Circle

NOT LOST.

All we have done, or nobly failed in doing,
All we have been, or bravely striven to be,
Makes for our gain, within us still surviving
As power and larger possibility.

All, all shall count; the mingled joy and sorrow
To force of finer being rise at last;
From the crude ores in trial's furnace smelted
The image of the perfect life is cast.

THE ADVENTURE OF PETER PIPER.

Essa went to the window for about the tenth time that evening. All she could see was the cold rain beating in gusts down the pane, and her own anxious little face reflected against the dreary darkness.

"Oh, dear, I do wish Peter Piper would come home soon," she sighed.

Billy looked up from the lessons he had been trying to do at the big living room table; "I wish he would, too. It's such an awful bad night. You don't suppose he's still up—"

"Dear me, no!" Essa answered so quickly that Billy didn't even finish his sentence. "Only," and she looked very much worried indeed, "only he just might be—and—I'm afraid if he's up there on a night like this he'd—die!" She hardly managed to keep the sob out of her voice as she finished.

"Aw, don't worry, Essa," Billy comforted bravely, "He's down long ago, I bet, and, anyway, you know about a cat having nine lives."

Mother had been busy all evening at her little writing desk in the alcove, but now she appeared with a cheery little half-yawn and announced: "Nine o'clock. Bedtime for a pair of young persons known as Essa and Billy. Come, clear away your books! Why, what's the matter, children? You look like a funeral!"

"It's Peter Piper, mother," said Essa. "He hasn't come home, and we're afraid he's up a telegraph pole on James Street, and it's so rainy and windy out that we're afraid if he is, he'll be dead by morning."

"If he is, how did he come to get up there?"

"Well, when you sent me down to the store, after I came home from school, he followed me up the street, like he does, you know, and when I got that far, Billy came tearing along with Tom and that new bulldog of Tom's, and Peter started up the nearst telegraph post like a shot. I called and called, but he wouldn't come down as long as the dog was there, so I had to go on. I 'spected he'd get down all right, 'cause he wasn't up very far, and he's always climbing, you know, and then, when it started to rain, I just hurried home and didn't even go around that way to look if he was still up. I didn't really start thinking about him until after supper, he wasn't home."

Mother pursed her lips and thought very seriously. "If we'd thought of it earlier, you might have run over just to ease your minds, but it's too late and stormy for you to go now, and daddy won't be home from his meeting until eleven, so I'm afraid there's nothing to do but go to bed and forget about it until morning."

Billy went to sleep much sooner than Essa, but all night he dreamed of roaring lions and yawning precipices and cold waves rolling over him and making him gasp and shiver. He wakened very early, and, slipping on his bathrobe, crept downstairs. No Peter appeared with a bound and a "purr-r-meou," to brush delightedly against his legs. He went back and dressed hurriedly, and then slipped out as quietly as a mouse.

The rain had stopped, but it was damp, and the wind was chilly and raw. He began to run to keep himself warm. As he turned the corner on to James Street, his heart almost stopped beating, for he thought he heard a faint, pitiful "meouing." Sure enough, there was poor Peter, draggled and wailing, at the very top of the fifty-foot pole. Billy called, and Peter cried more loudly in response, but he was plainly too terrified even to attempt to get down. Billy tried to climb up after him, but the bottom spike was too high for him to reach, and Peter was right up above the cross-pieces, so he could not have gotten hold of him if he had been able to get up. There was nothing to do but run back home for help.

He burst in like a small hurricane, and shouted: "Mummyy! Daddy! Peter's away up at the very top of a telegraph pole, and he's half dead with the cold and wet. Come 'n' help get him down!"

Mother was at the door in a second with a cape around her shoulders, and Essa was out in the hall with her hair wild and her eyes wide.

"Come and tell us what to do, daddy," mother called when she had gotten the story straight. "Poor Peter Piper has been up at the top of a telegraph pole all night, and the children are half sick over it. How are we going to get him down?"

"I don't know, I'm sure—unless you call out the fire department, and get the hook-and-ladder fellows up after him," father replied sleepily.

"Nonsense," said mother with a little laugh. "But that gives me an idea—I know what I will do. I'll call up the nearest police station, and see what they suggest for a pussy in distress."

The officer at the station was most obliging. "We'll fix it up for you, ma'am," he promised readily. "We'll have one of the telephone linemen climb up and bring him down."

Billy rushed out again to be on the spot, and it really wasn't very long before the man came along, grumbling good-naturedly about cats in general and this cat in particular. However, he was sorry for Peter when he saw how exhausted he was, and brought him down very gently.—Dora Smith Conover, in Christian Guardian.

A STORY FROM OLD DAMASCUS.

By Dr. J. M. Rowland.

Among the stories full of human interest that I brought back from the East none is more interesting than the one related by Mr. Shimeai, the manager of the Damascus Palace Hotel, where we were guests during our stay in the oldest city of the world. Mr. Shimeai is a charming Syrian of the higher type and leaves pleasant memories in the hearts of those who stop at his hotel. He takes as much interest in you as if you were members of his family.

It was Sunday afternoon and we had conducted our religious service in the hotel parlor. The manager in a quiet and modest manner, said: "Would you like to hear my story of the war? It shows a miracle of God." He spoke as if there was a great experience in his heart, and he had to give public testimony to the faith that was in him. This is the tale he told:

During the war, when the Turks were so oppressive in this part of this world, the officers were searching all houses and opening all mail. They searched his home in Baalbek and found a book of anti-Turkish propaganda, which some one had mailed him with his name in the front page. He had not been to his old home for some time, and had not seen the book. Officers located him and wired to Damascus for his arrest. He was cast into prison and soon tried before the military court, which condemned him to death. He was ordered cast into a horrible underground prison, where he would be tortured with the lash for several days and then shot to death. It was a horrible place, full of mud and filth, with swarms of rats and insects everywhere. In his despair, he wished he might die, but in the moment of his darkness, he remembered the words of the twenty-third psalm: "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures—yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me." In that moment sweet peace entered his heart and he had the assurance from God that he would be delivered.

A prominent Turkish official and editor of the Turkish paper had been befriended by Mr. Shimeai. He often stopped at the hotel. This very day this Turk came to the hotel for lunch, and, as he took his seat at the table, he asked for Mr. Shimeai, and was told he had been condemned to death and was in the underground prison awaiting his execution. The Turk arose from the table without eating and hurried to the headquarters of the Dictator of all Turkey, Kemel Pasha, who, at that time, was in Damascus for some weeks' stay. The dictator admitted him, thinking his mission was an urgent matter of war. The dictator had absolute power, and whom he would kill he could kill, and whom he would he could save. He was at lunch and the editor went at once to the point, telling Kemel Pasha his friend, Mr. Shimeai, was condemned to death and must be set free. Kemel Pasha had spent several days at the hotel and remembered Mr. Shimeai. Because he was the editor's friend, the dictator of all Turkey turned to his telephone and ordered the prisoner brought from his dungeon and set free.

There was a light in the eyes of this Syrian gentleman and a smile on his face as he related this experience. Below in the streets come up the heathen rabble, that had made some of us think the raging of the heathen was about all there was in this old city, but there are stories like this that shine out as true gold in all this garbage of the East.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE DAY OF PRAYER FOR MISSIONS.

To what extent are our girls and young women sharing in the plans and privileges of the Day of Prayer for Missions? Are they definitely organized for interdenominational co-operation? Is it too much to ask that each local interdenominational group appoint a committee—an exceedingly wise committee—who, with the leaders of the young people, will be responsible for their participation in this first world-wide observance of the Day of Prayer?

What an opportunity to bring them—our successors of ten, fifteen or twenty years hence—new visions of unity, new inspirations for service! They need to feel the thrill of comradeship in this vast army of women from all the great Protestant communions, united in the fellowship of prayer. Nothing will prepare them more adequately for those broader conceptions of our common task; nothing will develop in them more splendidly that catholic sympathy and that sense of inter-denominational partnership which are marks of this new day in Missions.

What an opportunity to teach them the need of constant spiritual reinforcement! They must know that the doing of things is not enough. Stevenson calls this feverish, restless activity which tempts us all to-day "a symptom of deficient vitality." It is the force of soul that is missing. Richard Roberts warns us that our pre-occupation with machinery and organization is "a symptom of the deficit of life in ourselves." Our Day of Prayer ministers to the restoration of personal power. After all, how can we give if there is nothing in ourselves to give?

What an opportunity to teach the real value of silence! In the moments of quiet meditation we learn that it is in silence that high thoughts and deep emotion are born. The Day of Prayer taps unsuspected reservoirs of spiritual energy as earnest Christian women, with the burden of the world's need of Christ upon their hearts, listen to catch the eternal music of the Inner Voice. "One hour of such listening," says Mrs. Herman, "may give us a deeper insight into the mysteries of human nature, and a surer instinct for Divine values than a year's hard study or external intercourse with men."—Bulletin.

"I noticed that customer you just attended to didn't buy anything, yet he seemed pleased," said the eagle-eyed floorwalker. What did he want to see?"

"Me at 8 o'clock to-night," replied the pretty assistant, blushing.—Exchange.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman, Louisiana Conference evangelist, was scheduled to begin a meeting at Eldorado, Ark., immediately after the holidays.

We thank Rev. James W. Sells, pastor of "The Church with the Amber Lights," Pascagoula, Miss., for a copy of the beautiful little calendar he is distributing.

Mrs. A. J. Bonnette, of Shreveport, La., kindly writes: "I receive my paper on Thursday of each week, and I find myself looking forward to that day. It is like a true and tried friend, always welcome."

At the first quarterly conference of the Covington charge, Louisiana Conference, held on Jan. 2, the salary of the pastor was increased and plans made for a larger work this year. Rev. H. W. Jordan is serving this charge for the first year.

The late P. M. Barringer made a bequest of $10,000 for the establishment of a loan fund to aid worthy young men and women to get an education at Duke University, preference being given to applicants from Rowan County, N. C., where Mr. Barringer spent most of his life.

Dr. H. C. Morrison, accompanied by his wife, spent a day or two in New Orleans last week, en route from Kentucky to Florida to escape the cold weather. Dr. and Mrs. Morrison were guests at the reception to Dr. Mitchell and family given by Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Reily.

On Thursday evening, Jan. 6, a reception was tendered Dr. W. B. Mitchell and his family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Reily, this city. Dr. Mitchell is the new pastor of Rayne Memorial Church. The reception was largely attended and was a delightful occasion in every way.

The "Big Brother" says of Judge Percy Bell's address to the class on Christmas Sunday: "The address by Judge Percy Bell Sunday morning before the Big Brothers Bible class was one of the most beautiful that has ever been heard by its members."

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, is in Louisville, Ky., this week on business before the Board of Church Extension. Brother Gunn is president of the Conference Board of Church Extension.

Dr. John F. Foster, our pastor at New Iberia, La., is giving full proof of his ministry, as usual. He has made 186 pastoral calls since Conference, in addition to meeting other demands upon his time. A recent prayer meeting had an attendance of sixty-six.

On Friday night, Feb. 14, Rev. M. L. Burton will deliver an address on missions at the Methodist church—"The Church with the Amber Lights"—in Pascagoula, Miss. The congregations from Kreole, Americus, Escatawpa, and Moss Point are expected to join in the service.

Rev. James H. Felts, our pastor at Greenwood, Miss., is busy about the manifold tasks of his great pastorate. He is planning for a great revival effort, beginning on April 19. Brother Felts is the retiring president of the Kiwanis Club of Greenwood.

We learn from the Messenger of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., that the following memorial endowments have been established in that church: C. W. Blair, Sunday school endowment, $3,000; C. W. Blair, current expense endowment, $2,500; Mrs. F. T. Whited, Missionary Society endowment, $3,000; John P. Scott, memorial fund endowment, $5,000.

We learn from the Methodist Layman that Wesley Brotherhoods have recently been organized at the following churches in our territory: East End, Meridian; Kingston Church, Laurel; Walnut Grove, Miss.; Wesley Memorial, Biloxi; Ponchatoula, La.; Parker Memorial, New Orleans; First Methodist Church, New Orleans. The laymen of the church are going to do great things this year.

A note from Mrs. James S. Duke, Birmingham, Ala., brings us the sad news that Brother Duke has been in the Norwood Hospital at Birmingham since Dec. 26, suffering with high blood pressure and a serious nervous condition. Brother Duke, formerly of Mississippi, is secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of the Stockham Pipe and Fitting Co., Birmingham. Let all his friends pray for his speedy restoration to health.

The Presbyterian Hospital, this city, will celebrate its twentieth birthday on Saturday, Jan. 15, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, at the Corinne Casanas Memorial Building, 822 Girod Street. At the same time, the graduating exercises of the class of 1927 of the Training School for Nurses will be held. The Presbyterian Hospital is one of the great institutions of its kind in New Orleans.

Rev. F. J. McCoy is beginning his tenth year as pastor of our church at Houma, La., in the French section of the State. On the Sunday before Conference he received twenty-four members into the church, and on the Sunday after Conference he received eight. The membership of the charge is now 229, with all the organizations of the church at work.

Dr. H. S. Spragins, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., writes: "We begin a meeting on Sunday, Jan. 9, with Dr. Arthur J. Moore, of First Church, Birmingham, Ala., doing the preaching, and Mr. James V. Reid, of Fort Worth, Tex., leading the singing. The meeting will continue for two weeks, and we are expecting large results from this special evangelistic effort."

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., whose episcopal district includes the Congo Mission, expects to sail for Africa early in February. He will probably go by way of Cape Town on the south, or by Mombasa on the east coast. He will be absent until the spring meeting of the College of Bishops in Nashville, May 2. He will hold the Annual Conference of the Congo Mission at Wembo Nyama, about March 3.

The distressing news comes to us from Dr. H. S. Spragins, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., of the serious illness of Mrs. Charles B. Galloway. At the time Dr. Spragins wrote, it was reported that there was a slight improvement in her condition. The editor of the Advocate has a deep affection for Mrs. Galloway that dates back to his days as a student in Millsaps College, her friendship being one of his most precious possessions. He joins with her multitude of friends in earnest prayer for her recovery.

Dr. W. G. Henry, of Emory University, will conduct a tour through several European countries, from June 15 to Aug. 15. Arrangements can also be made on this tour for a trip through the Holy Land. The cost of the tour will be remarkably reasonable. Dr. Henry was formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, being pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson. He is now professor of Religious Education in Emory University. Those who may be interested in making this tour with him should write to him at Emory University, Georgia.

The editor of the Advocate, upon invitation of Rev. J. G. Snelling, Louisiana Conference Missionary Secretary, had the pleasure of attending and speaking before the Shreveport District Missionary Institute at Shreveport on Monday of this week. Dr. W. W. Holmes, the presiding elder of the district, had made careful preparation for the meeting, and there was a full attendance of pastors and laymen, men and women. The interest was gratifying, and there seems to be no doubt but that the Shreveport District will do all—and more—that is expected of it. The meeting was held in the First Methodist Church, of which Dr. R. E. Goodrich is the greatly beloved and highly successful pastor. In the afternoon, the district stewards met, after which there was another meeting of the pastors and laymen to discuss the work of the district generally. Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Sunday School Superintendent, was present and spoke in the interest of the Sunday school work. It was altogether a pleasant and profitable day.

A FRIENDLY NOTICE TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The subscriptions that were received last year in connection with the special "Every Family" proposition will have to be discontinued as soon as they expire. This is in keeping with the terms of the special proposition and is necessary because the special price does not allow any margin for carrying the subscriptions beyond the date of expiration. The special proposition has been renewed this year by authority of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate; but former lists will have to be discontinued unless renewed. We make this statement that subscribers at the special rate may understand the situation if they do not receive the paper after the expiration of their subscriptions. We hope we shall not lose a single subscriber.

TO OUR PASTORS.

The Business Manager of the Advocate has sent to all the preachers the necessary envelopes, blanks, etc., for putting on the Advocate campaign. If any one of them has failed to receive this literature, a card to the office to that effect will bring a supply immediately. Now is the time to put the Advocate into the homes of all our people.

A CORRECTION—AND SOME NEWS ITEMS.

Dear Brother Carley: I notice in the recent North Mississippi Conference Minutes that Myrtle Circuit is not credited with having paid anything on the benevolences, while the charge paid $198 for those causes. Kindly make this correction in the Advocate.

Our fourth year here has begun more favorably than any previous one has. Rev. E. H. Cunningham, our splendid presiding elder, held our first quarterly Conference on January 2 and 3. He preached two fine sermons and we had the best conference from every standpoint that we have ever had.

We hope and believe this will be our best year here.

This is a splendid people to serve.

Rev. J. T. Gullett, our Conference evangelist, was here, too, and preached a great sermon on Sunday night.

With best wishes,

J. L. NABORS, P. C.

LAY DELEGATES AT THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The last General Conference provided for an increase in the number of lay delegates to the Annual Conference, providing for one lay representative for every eight hundred church members or the majority fraction thereof.

Our law-making body evidently thought that this was a move in the right direction, because the legislation was passed by a good majority. It has been estimated that this would increase the lay membership in the Annual Conferences approximately forty per cent.

We are considerably concerned about the situation. We are not at all sure that any great benefit is to be derived from the increase unless something radically different is done to provide an adequate and thoroughly interesting program for these lay members of the Conference.

What has been the situation with reference to the attendance and participation of lay members in the Annual Conference in the past?

It is a rare thing to find more than fifty per cent of the lay members present, unless some special matter like unification is being voted on, or delegates to the General Conference are to be elected; and a large number of these remain for only two or three days at most. A careful examination of the records also will reveal the fact that many of these laymen are on the several Conference boards, and, aside from the service rendered in this way, participate very little in the proceedings of an Annual Conference.

Certainly we are all agreed that it is desirable, nay imperative, that our laymen be informed of the proceedings of the church as to its organization, its history, and its program of work. Thoughtful men throughout the church are asking this question: What can we do to provide for an adequate program at the Annual Conference that will be instructive and inspiring to our laymen and will draw them in sufficient numbers to be productive of the greatest possible results?

As we look upon an Annual Conference we are at once faced with the fact that in the beginning it was distinctly a conference for the preachers and that in its actual working it has remained so in the main, although laymen have been admitted into its membership. This is true both so far as organization is concerned and the work done.

We find the bishop presiding. The secretary and his assistants are preachers.

The presiding elders nominate the quadrennial boards and the various committees. In nearly every instance the presidents and secretaries of various boards are preachers.

The representatives of the various connectional interests and other organizations that are religious or semi-religious in their complexion are in the main preachers.

The routine of the work of the Conference for the most part relates to that which immediately affects the preacher. The presiding elders make a report of the work of their districts, preachers of their several charges, and boards of their work, and the committees on matters placed in their hands. Inquiry is made into the character and achievements of the undergraduate preachers. They are examined by committees, reports made, and they are passed from one class into another. Deacons and elders are elected and ordained in due order. Reports are made relative to application for admission on trial; these are heard and applicants voted upon.

Practically the only time the work of the Annual Conference does not take its complexion from the viewpoint and administration of the ministry is when a representative of the Board of Lay Activities or the report of the Board of Lay Activities is heard.

In making the foregoing statement we are not indulging in criticism or complaint. We are simply calling attention to the facts; it may be that none of the conditions referred to above should be changed, but they do point to the reason for lack of greater interest on the part of the laymen in the Annual Conference.

What we are seeking to do is to raise in all good conscience this question: What use is the increase in lay membership when it seems practically impossible to secure more than fifty per cent attendance of lay members already provided for?

And, further, to ask this question: Is it possible for us in connection with the work of the laymen of the church to provide during the Annual Conference session a day for the consideration of the work of the church from the standpoint of the laity?

Or could a lay conference be held at the same time and same place with the Annual Conference but in a separate building, a special effort being made to promote attendance of laymen on that day?

We are sure that we sound no uncertain note or make no statement that any one vitally interested in the extension of Christ's kingdom will contradict, when we say that there is a primary and fundamental need of a more thorough understanding and appreciation of the church's program on the part of the laymen. It is a fact patent to every one that the laity as a whole need larger information and greater inspiration that they may give themselves more fully to the task of converting the world to Christ.

Every one knows also the need for the individual occasionally to leave his own community and come in contact with groups from other communities and seek the inspiration coming from great messages delivered by men whose contacts have been as broad as the world.

Increased representation, if the delegates attend, will present at once a new problem in the matter of Conference entertainment. Many of our Conferences are already facing a problem in securing voluntary entertainment. Some have provided for entertainment by Conference assessment. Are practically all the Conferences moving in this direction?

But this is not the most vital question. The fundamental need as we see it is to provide some sort of program that will inform and inspire our laymen for greater consecration and larger service in the kingdom of God.

We are writing this editorial with the hope that it will provoke discussion.

What can we do more vitally to interest the laymen?

Is there anything to be gained from the increase in lay membership?

Is it possible for us to provide in the Annual Conference session a day that can be devoted to the work of laymen in the church?

Our brethren of our sister church are giving a great deal of consideration to this question. Many of her bishops are giving much thought to it. Bishop Nicholson is reported as having said: "If there is any way to work out an efficient lay organization, I propose to find it."

We throw out this challenge to the readers of the Methodist Layman. Surely there is need that we give our best thinking to this question.—The Methodist Layman.

The American people, according to recent government figures, while constituting but six per cent of the population of the globe, are consuming thirty per cent of its products and manufactured goods. That is ground for some sober reflection in the American churches.—Carl E. Milliken.

THE THREE HOUSES.

By Rev. Robert E. Goodrich, D. D.

There's a highway that winds from the gates of the dawn
O'er the hills towards the high-poised noon,
That leads on adown the long slopes to the west,
To the land of the crescent moon.
By this mystical trail of the Highway of Life,
Dim Destiny writes her grim scrolls
As, in the vast pageant of laughter and tears,
We stage the great drama of souls.

Three Houses there stand by this far-winding way,
By this road that runs on through the years.
And they're builded of memories, labors and dreams,
Of sorrows and songs and of fears.
Three Houses—and each is a treasury fair,
And each is a tomb with its loss,
For they shelter the joys that are pulsing with life,
And the hopes that are nailed to the cross.

The House of the Past, with its sobs and its songs,
Lies wrapped in the haze of the dawn,
But an oft trodden trail wanders back through the years
To that House of the things that are gone.
For Memory, swifter than magical steed,
And stranger than Wizardry's hand,
Takes us back to the sunshine and shadows that fell
On that House of the far away land.

The House of the Present is lifting its dome
As daily we falter or climb,
And its strength or its weakness, its beauty or shame,
We forge in the furnace of Time.
We fashion its uplifting towers and walls
As, like shuttles, we ply here and there,
For our thoughts and our deeds become timber and stones
To make that House faulty or fair.

The House of the Future stands golden with hope,
Or—perchance it lies darkling with gloom.
And its portals lead on to the Conqueror's crown,
Or—perhaps to our self-made doom.
Its substance and form? Ah, well, we shall see,
In the soft light of Life's fading day,
That the Present and Past, slipping on through the years,
Make that House at the end of the way.

LOVE HIM NOW.

By James Hickman

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing,
If you like him or you love him, tell him now.
Don't withhold your approbation
Till the rector makes ovation,
And he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow.
For no matter how you shout it,
He won't really care about it;
He won't know how many tear drops you have shed.
If you think some praise is due him,
Now's the time to slip it to him,
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

More than fame and more than money
Is the comment kind and sunny,
And the hearty, warm approval of a friend.
For it gives to life a savor,
And it makes you stronger, braver,
And it gives you heart and spirit to the end.
If he earns your praise—bestow it;
If you like him, let him know it,
Let the words of true encouragement be said;
Do not wait till life is over
And he's underneath the clover,
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

In 1838, there came to Mississippi and settled in the northern part of Kemper County, from North Carolina, the Rev. J. H. Morse, who built a Methodist church at Spring Hill; after many years he furnished the material to build the second church house. He and his wife—a Miss Adcock—contributed to this community five boys and eight girls. This was the beginning of Methodism in this community. Brother Morse is known as the father of Methodism here. Six preachers were licensed from this church and became members of the Mississippi Conference, two of them his sons, W. W. and J. M. Morse. All of his children made good. SARAH KATHARINE MORSE, who married H. G. Bethany in 1882, was born in 1857. Three splendid boys were born to them, who, with their father, remain to bless her memory and reflect credit upon her. Aunt Kate, as we called her, was one of the most unique characters in this county—a very strong character, splendid personality, original, witty, practical. Had she had the advantages in early life or the opportunities of to-day, no doubt she would have been one of the great women of to-day. In my estimation she was great in many respects. She lived a quiet life, seldom going from home. She did her own work at home. She was big-souled, large-hearted, with a big brain, well informed, frank, deliberate. No one would suspect her greatness, meeting her a few times; but she grew on one. One of the greatest pleasures to me was to visit her home. Her pastor was always welcome. She was liberal with her small earnings. She joined the Methodist church early in life at Spring Hill. "She has done what she could." Out of the thirteen children, she is the twelfth to go to her reward, leaving only the Rev. J. M. Morse, of the Mississippi Conference, to follow—the only one left. She went to her reward Dec. 19, 1926; her body was laid to rest in the Spring Hill cemetery, services being conducted by her pastor, Brother Railey, assisted by Brother Nicholson and myself. I am sure that Brother Morse and wife and the children gone before will give Aunt Kate a beautiful welcome into an everlasting habitation. I am expecting Brother Bethany and the boys to be true to the mother's God and to Spring Hill church.

M. L. WHITE, Ex-Pastor.

BROTHER J. S. POWELL was born in Missouri, Sept. 30, 1862. He went to Texas when quite a young man and engaged in the cattle business, in which he had large success. On Jan. 20, 1907, he was happily married to Mrs. Ruth Hamer, after which time he made his home in Stewart, Miss., where he made a host of friends. He entered business here and became one of the most progressive and influential men of that section. He was a man of fine information and knew what was going on in the world about him. Young men were the special object of his interest. He lent aid to a number of worthy, struggling young men who, no doubt, will rise up in the day of judgment to call him blessed. Brother Powell never joined the church till 1923, but he had always had a high regard for the church. He was a member of the board of stewards at the time of his death. Because of his clean life, his interest in the public welfare, his devotion to his loved ones, and his interest in the progress of the church, he was very highly esteemed. He was a man of tender feeling for his friends. He loved the church. At the time he was overtaken by his fatal illness, he and his wife were planning to attend the Conference at Columbus, being invited by a good friend to spend the time in his home. He was stricken with apoplexy Oct. 25, and died Nov. 12. His remains were carried, in compliance with his expressed wish, to Winona for interment, where in beautiful Oakwood cemetery his ashes will sleep till awakened by the resurrection trumpet. Peace to his ashes and benedictions on his loved ones.

E. S. LEWIS.

MR. G. T. DUTTON was born March 25, 1862, and died Aug. 5, 1926. It has been, and always will be, a mystery to us concerning the death and passing of some of our most worthy men and women, but in the sudden death of Brother Dutton we are again called upon to think of the mysterious, yet wonderful workings of our God. Brother Dutton was a character that we all appreciate because of his honest, fair, and impartial dealings with his fellow-men. He was a true and tried friend to his country, and no man could speak aught against him. He was a true and tried friend of the church—at the time of his death he was a trustee of church property and faithful in the discharge of his duty. He was a true and faithful friend to his pastor—he often made inquiry as to the welfare of his preacher. Brother Dutton loved his family. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Mattie Morgan. She was taken from him some years ago, but to this union were born three children, Mrs. Loy Baker, of Haynesville, La.; W. C. Dutton, of Cotton Valley, La., and Miss Ila Dutton, of Athens, La. He was married the second time to Mrs. Belle Pickles, Jan. 13, 1912, and to this union was born one child, Thomas, Jr., who died in infancy. To the children we extend our tender sympathy, and pray that the God of peace will bless and comfort. To his faithful wife we offer our love and earnest prayer, for our Lord doeth all things well.

RESOLUTIONS.

On Oct. 28, 1926, the gentle spirit of MRS. LILLA WARREN SALE took its flight from this world. With humble and broken hearts we bow to the will of our great Master; but how sad it is to part with those that we love and with those whom we have labored with! Yet when we look into their faces for the last time, we remember that our Lord has promised that we shall meet again. He has also said, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." Our friend and fellow-worker is gone, and Oh! how we do miss her! Yet we well remember her willingness to work, toil and suffer, and because of her faithfulness we know that some day we shall see her in the land of eternal bliss, where no sorrow, sickness and death can come, and where separation will be no more. Sister Sale was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Athens, La. She was also a worthy and honored member of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Whereas, our sister has passed from this life; therefore, be it resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the supreme will of God. And in this trying sorrow that comes to the children of this faithful and good mother we extend our tenderest sympathies, and pray that the God of love will bless and sanctify this sorrow to the good of each of her children and friends.

Also, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. Fannie Brownfield, Mrs. Bettie Pace, Mrs. J. F. Dring, Committee.

FROM ROCHELLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: As you see, I'm starting the new year off right by writing you, wishing you a most successful year, and by sending you my subscription to the Advocate.

Since Rochelle is the newest station charge in the Conference, being made a station at the last Conference, and since I am the youngest preacher in the Conference in point of years, and a member of the First Year Class, you and the other brethren of the State might like to know something of the start we have made here.

As you know, Rochelle is a sawmill town. There are no wealthy people here—all are salaried workers for the Tremont Lumber Company. The membership of our church is comparatively small, only 117 on roll, but that 117 believe in supporting the church. That is shown by the fact that they made this a station and that they have placed all the expenses on a monthly budget plan. The pastor does not have to worry about the finances of the church in any way—all that is done by the stewards. The board met a few days ago and set the preacher's salary to their satisfaction and to the pastor's entire satisfaction, and more.

On our arrival, the women of the Missionary Society equipped the parsonage with gas heaters and range. Then they gave mother and me a big reception and "pounding," filling our pantry to overflowing, and filling our hearts with joy at the royal reception. Then at Christmas, the ladies played Santa to mother and me, and again our pantry was filled.

The Sunday school and the League are both a joy to my heart, being well attended and under very efficient management.

At our board meeting, Mr. S. M. Abel was elected chairman for another year. He has been the chairman of the board practically ever since there has been a Methodist church in Rochelle. So with him at the head, we are assured of a successful year as far as the board's work is concerned. My hope and prayer is that the work of the pastor may keep in step with that of his faithful laymen and lay women. I solicit the prayers of all the brethren that the kingdom of God may be much advanced here at Rochelle during this year.

Yours in his service,

JAMES T. HARRIS.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

SPLENDID REPORT OF ARCADIA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Methodist Woman's Missionary Society met on Monday afternoon at the church in a business session, and many things of interest were discussed. Mrs. F. T. Taylor, president, was in the chair. She also conducted the devotional exercises, using as her Scripture lesson portions of the first and fifth chapters of Galatians. After a hymn, "Near the Cross," and prayer by Mrs. V. C. Pipes, reports of officers and the committee chairmen were given. Mrs. V. C. Pipes, chairman of the social service work, gave an interesting report as follows: She taught a Negro Bible Sunday school class; has made five talks at the Negro churches; drew plans for the colored girls' dormitory. Mrs. J. E. Currie, superintendent of supplies, reported that $40 had been sent to Houma and St. Mark's settlement homes; $30 was expended on the orphans' box of clothing; a box of clothing valued at $50 was sent to the Houma storm sufferers. Mrs. Ed. Conger, chairman of publicity, reported 132 inches of publicity clippings; the treasurer, Miss Martha Cole, reported that $114 were collected in dues; $52 in pledges, and $125 had been collected on the pledge for the Belle Bennett Memorial; Mrs. V. C. Pipes and Mrs. F. T. Taylor each made a memorial or "love offering" of $100 in memory of their mother and husband; $10 has been spent on the Brevard Institute and Belle Horizonte school in Brazil; $16 has been spent for miscellaneous causes. The Woman's Missionary Society this year has reached the "Standard of Excellence." The local treasurer, Mrs. George Pettigrew, reported $85 in the local treasury.

ZONE MEETING AT HAMMOND.

The women of the Methodist church held their fourth zone meeting of zone No. 6, Baton Rouge District, Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 30, at the Methodist church in Hammond. The meeting was called to order by the zone leader, Mrs. L. A. Sims, with Mrs. C. B. Johnson, acting secretary.

The Bible lesson was given by Mrs. S. W. Bigger. It was taken from the ninth chapter of St. Luke, with the twenty-fourth verse as the text: "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it, but whosoever will lose his life for my sake the same shall find it." God teaches in his word that the missionary spirit is his plan of salvation. We see in the Old Testament how Israel fell because she monopolized for her own personal and national use that which God had committed to her as a sacred trust. Saving her life—for herself and her own—she lost it. Greece was marvelously equipped to teach other nations of the earth culture and art, but looking with scorn upon other nations not possessing such gifts, gave herself up to unworthy pleasures, and the opportunity to serve was taken away from her.

What is true of nations is true of individuals. The twelve Apostles left an impress upon history that will survive to the end of time because they gave their lives in service to Christ and their fellow-men. St. Paul, the great missionary, found life on the road to Damascus and became a servant of Christ Jesus.

Prayer, Miss Bradford.

The welcome was given by Mrs. Jordan, and Mrs. Kemp, of Ponchatoula graciously responded. The roll call showed sixty-three in attendance: Ponchatoula 16, Natalbany 7, Wesley Chapel 1, Hammond 26 members and 13 guests.

After the singing of the song, "Can the World See Jesus in You?" Mrs. J. Coburn, of Ponchatoula, gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on one of our home mission books, "Our Templed Hills." The rural church in the past has been near to our nation's heart. The writer of our patriotic hymn, "America," pictured a temple on every hill, and we sing, "I love thy rocks and rills, thy woods and templed hills." About fifteen years ago we began to hear much about the decline of our rural church. The rural church must win out. We believe the day is coming when every hill and valley will re-echo the music of the church bell. In order to bring the rural church to its rightful place of leadership in the nation, we must study prayerfully its problems and prepare ourselves for its program.

1. Times in the country have changed. Improved machinery means fewer people are needed in the country. Automobiles and good roads have enlarged the rural neighborhood. Scientific agriculture is generally accepted. Consolidation of rural schools is paving the way for the consolidation of the rural churches. The radio, the telephone, the rural free delivery, are tending to make the people dissatisfied with a small, uninteresting church. Religion in the countryside must be adapted to meet the needs of this new rural life.

2. The Christian program for the rural life means the church has a great opportunity in maintaining a happy and efficient home life. It means co-operation on the part of village and country.

3. Missionary work is the great need in many parts of the country. Church people must carry the Light to the homes yet unreached.

4. There is the need for leadership, good leadership, friendly leadership, in the rural church.

5. A great nation-wide policy of rural evangelism is needed.

6. The program for the rural church must be a program of activities worth while. The list reads: home talent plays, classes in music, dairymen's meetings, children's parties, Boy Scout meetings, girls' clubs, daily vacation Bible schools, etc.

Mrs. Coburn is a forceful speaker, and she brought home to us our opportunities and responsibilities in our own towns and communities.

Music was given by Annie Lotille and T. A. Barksdale, after which Mrs. Crook, of Hammond, gave a talk on "What Mission Study Has Meant to Me." She told of the greater vision she had caught by learning of the missionary fields all over the world, of the people and their needs, and of the lives of the great missionaries; how they have saved their lives by losing them in the service of the Master.

"Give of the Best to the Master," was sung by Julia Webb McGehee.

The Belle Bennett Memorial was presented by Mrs. Booth, of Ponchatoula. She urged each auxiliary to meet its quota by paying $5 per capita. After the talk a collection for this cause was taken.

After a short talk by Mrs. Merry upon the work of her Junior Missionary Society, a duet, "In the Garden," was sung by Rosa Wolf and Heulet Addison.

Mrs. Sims spoke of the success of our zone meetings during the year. Co-operation is the key unlocking the door. Do you give the same wholehearted co-operation in the activities of your church? She closed with an appeal to each and every one to go forward in the service of the Master.

The program for the afternoon was closed with prayer by Mrs. Vinyard, of Ponchatoula. All present were then served refreshments by the Hammond Auxiliary.

(Baton Rouge District is becoming noted for her wonderful zone meetings. Keep up the good work. Some of us other districts will try to keep step with you.—Page Editor.)

Help Kidneys By Drinking More Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

OFFICERS INSTALLED AT GOODMAN, MISS.

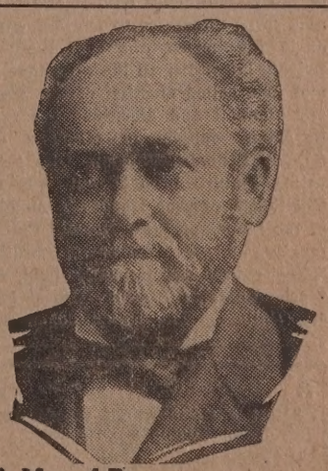
The Methodist Woman's Missionary Society of Goodman met Monday, Jan. 3, for the installation of officers for the year. Our pastor, Rev. C. W. Avery, conducted this service very effectively.

Officers installed were: Miss Stella Doty, President; Mrs. I. U. Donald, Vice President; Miss Mary Carter, Secretary; Mrs. W. R. Ellis, Treasurer; Mrs. W. L. Harmon, Superintendent of Juniors; Mrs. J. W. Henderson, Superintendent of Bible Study; Mrs. J. B. Browning, Superintendent of Social Service; Mrs. I. U. Donald, Superintendent of Mission Study; Mrs. J. C. Donald, Superintendent of Publicity; Mrs. Carrie Carter, Superintendent of Supplies.

Brother Avery gave us a splendid talk on "Stewardship," stressing the advantage and necessity of sysmatic and especially sacrificial giving.

We were pleased to have as our guest Mrs. Avery, our pastor's mother.

SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLICITY



A Man of Rare Professional Attainment

The originator of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was the late Ray V. Pierce, M.D. At first he practised medicine in Western Pennsylvania and his unusual ability and success were soon recognized there, then he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., and established the World's Dispensary where his famous home remedies have ever since been made.

Each succeeding year the sale of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been greatly increased. Evidently people appreciate the fact that it increases the appetite, stimulates the digestion, helps to enrich the blood, clears the skin of eruptions and blemishes, and makes both men and women feel as they did when they were young. It contains no harmful ingredient.

Ask your nearest druggist for Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, in tablet or liquid form, or send 10 cents for a trial package of tablets to Dr. Pierce's Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JAN. 16.

Subject: "The Christian's Use of the Bible."

Lesson Text: Deut. 6:4-9; II Tim. 3:14-17.

Golden Text: "Thy Word Is a Lamp Unto My Feet, and a Light Unto My Path." Ps. 119:105.

Teaching points:

1. Emphasis upon the unity of God is an indispensable safeguard against polytheism. Polytheism was a great evil in Old Testament times, and is one of the greatest hindrances to Christianity in the heathen world today.

2. Every faculty of our being must be enlisted in loving God.

3. The Word of God must be written upon the tablets of our own hearts and taught diligently to our children.

4. Timothy was a shining example of the benefits of early instruction in the Holy Scriptures.

5. All religious teachers, at home, in the Sunday school, in the pulpit and elsewhere, should consider the whole Bible as a storehouse of truth from which to draw instruction.

LOUISIANA EXTENSION SECRETARY AT WORK.

On Sunday, Jan. 2, we preached for Brother H. L. Johns both morning and night to large and unusually appreciative congregaions. It was a great pleasure to be with these good people of the Natchitoches church and to be able to be of service to Brother Johns during his absence in one of the New Orleans hospitals. In the afternoon we met in a called meeting of the Workers' Council and discussed the most important subject of Missions and Sunday School Extension. One interesting feature brought out was the fact that Professor Maddox, a member of the Louisiana State Normal College faculty and a member of Brother Johns' church and Sunday school, was a schoolmate of Brother Kim at Hendrix College. The Natchitoches Sunday school is supporting our Louisiana Sunday School Special.

In the afternoon, after the missionary meeting at the Leesville church, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, gave opportunity for presentation of important district matters. He very kindly allowed the Extension Secretary to present his work and conduct a brief round table discussion. At this meeting we received applications to place personally and explain 4 "C" Type Programs of Work, and a Sunday school institute was planned, at which time a Cokesbury School would be set up.

On Tuesday we were at Crowley church, where the same program was followed. Brother Doss again gave opportunity for the Sunday School Extension Secretary to present his work. Here we received one application for "C" Type Program of Work. A Cokesbury class was planned, to begin Jan. 23, with Brother L. C. Wilson, Lake Arthur.

Last night (Wednesday) was spent with Brother Knight and his Sunday school workers at Melville. A "C" Type Program of Work was placed and explained. A Cokesbury class was set up, to begin on Sunday, Jan. 16.

A letter from Brother L. R. Sparks, of Zwolle, asks for a Cokesbury class at Zwolle. We hope this class can be started soon.

We are glad to acknowledge a note from Brother F. C. Cady, of Melder, extending an invitation to come to his charge.

These letters and requests from the brethren are greatly appreciated, and we hope that each pastor and superintendent will get busy and plan a class on their charge, or an Approved Cokesbury School. We would like to plan in conjunction with the pastor some one-day Sunday school institutes.

Invite us—we will come.

A. K. McLELLAN.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

A Sunday school institute, or council meeting, has been held in connection with many of the Missionary Institutes in our Conference. Most of these council meetings have been in the afternoons.

At the Hammond meeting, Jan. 5, the Sunday school groups decided on the place and date for their next meeting—Natalbany, Feb. 6, at 2 p. m. The group also decided to give one whole day to the annual Sunday school conference; this was the action of two other district councils, the Alexandria and the Ruston.

We are having more requests for Sunday school literature on "Evangelism" than ever before. Among the recent ones were Mr. A. M. Mayo, Rev. William Schuhle, and Dr. Brooks. Mr. Mayo writes: "Please send me about twenty-five each of the two or three leaflets on Evangelism in the Sunday schools, etc, for my teachers. We commenced to-night on the work in Workers' Council."

The little town of Choudrant, near Ruston, had a historic meeting to-day in its joint missionary and Sunday school institute. The following leaders were present and took part: Rev. Elmer T. Clark, of Nashville; Dr. Drake, of Ruston; Rev. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans; Rev. A. K. McLellan, of Alexandria, and the presiding elder of the Ruston District.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, writes: "I wonder if you could be with us next Monday, at 10 a. m., for our missionary institute? Will have all the preachers present at that time. We will talk Sunday school at 2 p. m. Come if you can."

* * *

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, writes a most interesting letter to our office about the prospects of Standard Training Schools in his district for this year. He says: "I hope you can be with us at Leesville on the 16th inst., to help organize the board of managers there."

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The following are the goals set by the Workers' Council of the Hattiesburg, Meridian and Newton Districts:

The Hattiesburg District set as their goal 50 Programs of Work to be placed, with 10 ranking C Type Sunday schools and 3 ranking B Type Sunday schools; 4 Standard Elementary Departments and 15 ranking Elementary Departments; 12 schools to observe Children's Week; 150 Standard Training awards and 20 Cokesbury awards; 100 per cent Sunday School Day and Missionary Day observances; 10 per cent enrollment increase; 5 Circuit Institutes; 6 Standard Cokesbury Schools and 12 weeks of teaching by college students.

The Meridian District set as their goal 25 Programs of Work to be placed, with 10 ranking C Type Sunday Schools and 3 ranking B Type Sunday Schools; 6 Standard Elementary Departments and 24 ranking Elementary Departments; 12 schools to observe Children's Week; 150 Standard Training awards and 100 Cokesbury awards; 100 per cent Sunday school Day and Missionary Day observances; 25 per cent enrollment increase; 5 Circuit Institutes; 10 Standard Cokesbury Schools and 10 weeks teaching by college students.

The Newton District set as their goal 46 Programs of Work to be placed, with 10 ranking C Type Sunday schools and 2 ranking B Type schools; 30 ranking Elementary Departments; 10 schools to observe Children's Week; 100 Standard Training awards and 100 Cokesbury awards; 25 Decision Day observances; 75 observing Sunday School Day; 50 observing Missionary Day; 5 per cent enrollment increase; 9 Circuit Institutes; 8 county Institutes; 4 Standard Cokesbury Schools and 6 weeks of teaching by college students.

The Vicksburg District Meeting was called and because of bad roads and high water and other reasons, it was thought advisable to postpone part of the work until the meeting of the District Conference, which was done, and the wrokers will hold their meeting at the District Conference and plans will be made there for this work. The Vicksburg District is asking for a Standard Training School and we are planning to hold a school for the Vicksburg District in the month of June.

The Sunday school at Union, Miss., was checked the first Sunday in January. I do not believe it has ever been my privilege to be in a friendlier, more interested group than this group at Union. If they carry out the work planned by them at this time, it will only be a short while before their school will be a Standard school. Brother Clegg is hard at work and his people are responding in a fine way.

Brother Hull spent last week at Pearl River Avenue teaching a class on Organization and Administration. He goes from Pearl River Avenue to Osyka. The field is opening up in a most pleasing way and we are trusting for health to remain with us that we may be able to meet the demands placed upon us.

Pray for the work and us.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Tuesday last I was in Corinth laying plans for the Corinth District Standard Training School, and Rev. E. H. Cunningham took me to his quarterly conference at Carolina, on the Booneville circuit, Rev. R. C. Nanny, pastor. On our way we picked up Brother W. C. McCay of Wheeler, Brother E. C. Sullivan of Silver Springs, Brother J. T. Gullett, District Evangelist. All the churches on the Booneville circuit were in attendance upon the conference with good reports for the first quarter. We presented missionary instruction in the Sunday school and secured chairmen of missionary committees from eight schools from Booneville circuit and Wheeler circuit.

Thursday we went to Tishomingo, and Brother E. P. Craddock, Brother G. C. Schwartz, both of Iuka, Brother W. T. Phillips of Chalybeate, happened to be on a visit at Tishomingo, and we secured the names of ten chairmen of missionary committees, made arrangements for a training school to be held at Tishomingo and one at Iuka. Brother Humphreys of Tishomingo has a great field and he is working with zeal and intelligence in building the kingdom of God. Brother Schwartz and Brother O. T. Gaines are preparing to make a survey of Iuka and the suburbs preparatory to a great forward movement in that charge. Rev. E. H. Cunningham is giving the Corinth District a vigorous leadership. He knows what to do and is laying hold of the task with a strong hand. Brother A. T. McIlwain

FROM THE WINNFIELD CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few words about the Winnfield circuit. When we returned from Conference, we were very cordially welcomed back on this work again for this year. We are planning and hoping to make this the best year in the history of the charge.

On New Year's Day, the good people of Joyce surprised the pastor and his wife with a shower, so that there is enough in the larder to do quite awhile. In every way the co-operation and spirit of the people are fine.

We are planning to put on some local training classes for the Sunday school officers and teachers.

Hearty enthusiasm in every branch of church work gives us a very hopeful outlook for the year.

G. H. CORRY, P. C.

Note: I wish to inform all readers of the Advocate that I receive my mail this year at Joyce, La., instead of Winnfield, La., as published in the Annual of the Louisiana Conference.

MEETING OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE CABINET.

To the Officers: A meeting of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League Cabinet will be held at Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., Sunday, Jan. 16, 1927. A large number of our officers can attend this meeting only on Sunday, hence the necessity for holding it on that day.

Matters of very great importance will be discussed, and it is hoped as many as possible will arrange to attend.

The meeting will adjourn in time for all who desire to catch the evening trains for home, but Epworth Leaguers of Hattiesburg will be glad to have all who can to remain over until Monday.

You will please advise us as early as possible whether you can attend, when you will arrive, and when you wish to leave; this in order that we might provide entertainment for you while here.

Sincerely,

J. H. WEEMS, President.

W. C. T. U. LEADS MOVEMENT AGAINST SALE OF HIP FLASKS.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has inaugurated a campaign to enlist public sympathy against the advertising and display of hip flasks. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national president of the W. C. T. U., has issued a statement in opposition to the sale of flasks, and has communicated personally with several of the largest merchants. The entire membership of the W. C. T. U. has been enlisted in the campaign, so that by next Christmas there will undoubtedly be a noticeable difference.

The W. C. T. U. has found many merchants who have voluntarily discontinued the advertising and sale of hip flasks because of the great public opinion against them, this feeling of resentment being specially noticeable among women.

Mrs. Boole's statement to the press follows:

"The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union asks all merchants not to advertise or sell hip flasks for the following reasons:

"1. The beverage traffic in intoxicating liquors is prohibited under the Constitution. Hip flasks are used in transporting liquors for beverage purposes, hence they are contributing to the violation of the law.

"2. They are suggestive of ways in which the law may be violated, their very attractiveness increases their sale, and accordingly the violation of the law.

"3. The ease with which they can be purchased is especially to be deplored, because of the temptation to young people, for their possession means their use. These young people may be following the example of their fathers and of society leaders, but the practice is in defiance of the law.

"4. We appeal to all women, and especially to all mothers, to join in this movement by a personal protest wherever they see hip flasks displayed, advertised or offered for sale by the stores of which they are patrons.

"5. There is a patriotism of peace as well as war, and that consists in obedience to the laws of our country, and sustaining the government in its efforts to enforce our laws."

It must not be assumed that all merchants sell hip flasks. There are a great many who refuse to participate in profits from that sort of business. One of these high minded men is the partner in one of the greatest stores in the United States. He noticed hip flasks being advertised in the mail order section of his business, and he ordered the catalogue discontinued and a new one minus hip flasks. Another instance was that of a young woman who worked in a store in Illinois where hip flasks were displayed. She told her boss that the women of the town were opposed to that sort of thing; and so well did she make her protest that the boss took the flasks from the shelves and stopped their sale.—W. C. T. U. Bulletin.

REGRETS.

We were much interested in the article on "Overcrowded Conferences" in the Advocate of Dec. 16, and our heart responded to a very hearty Amen to the suggestion, "Salary-seekers and place hunters have no business in the Methodist ministry." This would seem hard from a natural standpoint, but God says in his Word, 'I have chosen you and ordained you that ye should go and bring forth fruit" (John 15:16), and, "Faithful is he that calleth you who also will do it" (I Thes. 5:24).

It is an imposition upon the public to send men out to teach faith in God who have no faith in him themselves. If we look after his interests in this world he will verify the promise, "My God shall supply all your need" (Phil. 4:19). This may not mean a life of luxury, but "all our need." If we follow him, we must take the "Way of the Cross," which stands for sacrifice and self-denial.

Why go out to teach a complete salvation when we do not know it ourselves? Pardon me when I say that I am not a "modern" Methodist. I do not believe God ever called a "flapper" to teach his Word. "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed." "If any man loves the world (worldly pleasures and customs), the love of the Father is not in him" (I John 2:15). There must first be separation and then consecration—without it we are as "tinkling brass nd a sounding cymbal."

Again, a minister should understand the doctrines of his own denomination founded upon the Word of God as he sees it. Nowhere does the Bible or Mr. Wesley teach that we are saved by our own works—by anything we can do.

We heard a minister say from the pulpit that necessity was laid upon him to preach the gospel in order to save his own soul. "If I do this thing willingly, I have a reward" (I Cor. 9:16-17), if not, the reward is lost and they are saved by fire (I Cor. 3:9 to 15). Another minister once declared that in Matt. 25:41 we have a picture of the lost because they refused to feed the hungry. The "rich man" was lost not because he refused to feed Lazarus, but because he rejected Jesus Christ, "there being no other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Had the "rich man" been saved, it would have been his "joy and crown of rejoicing" to have ministered to needy ones for Christ's sake. The rich man had a form of godliness without its power (II Tim. 3:5).

Believe me, this is not written in any spirit of criticism, but with profound regret that so many are sent out into the ministry, I fear, before they are called, thus leaving the people in darkness and ignorance wherever they touch.

F. BURDINE.

Amory, Miss.

SICK HEADACHE

No Pleasure, Says Ohio Lady, to Go Places, Till She Took Black-Draught Which Brought Relief.

Langsville, Ohio.—"For years and years I suffered with severe headache," says Mrs. Jane Campbell, of this place. "It wasn't any pleasure for me to go places, for I came home with sick headache. If I went to church or to any social gathering or to town to shop, when I got back I would have these headaches and have to go to bed for a day or more, till I would just get out of heart and would not try to go.

"About 15 years ago I discovered that Black-Draught was good for these headaches. I began using it. I would take it two or three nights in succession if I felt the least bad, and it sure did wonders for me. It is about 14 years since I had sick headaches, and I can go places and really enjoy life. It surely is splendid."

is making a great beginning at Corinth. He is preparing his people for the evangelistic campaign, leadership training and everything else for the ongoing of Gods' Kingdom.

The chairmen of missionary committees who are looking for material to be used in the primary and junior departments should write Miss Virginia Thomas, Tupelo, Miss., for helps and suggestions. The first fact that all should place clearly before our people is, the Sunday schools of the Conference are supporting two missionaries, one in the North Mississippi Conference and one in Europe through the offerings given on Missionary Day. Using this fact as a basis, branch out and tell what these misionaries are doing in telling the "good news."

A careless, lazy man will never undertake a survey of his field, nor will he train his teachers in the divine art of winning souls to our Savior. A man must have a passion for the lost if he undertakes this task with determination of giving every soul a fair opportunity of accepting Jesus as Lord and Savior. Simply distributing the literature on Evangelism will not accomplish anything. It will require much prayer, more prayer than usual and hard study to do this work so as to secure real and lasting results. Oh, for a baptism of the Spirit that will lead all of us to prayer and study and work to the end that we may make Christ known to the last unsaved soul under our care!

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

What Are You Doing For Your Puny Child?

One Boy Gained 11 Pounds in 7 Weeks and is Now Strong and Healthly.

For weak, frail, under-developed children—and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in sever weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust.

Sixty tablets for 60 cents at all druggists—but be sure and insist on McCoy's—the original and genuine.

Give them to the sickly, frail child for 30 days, and if they don't help—wonderfully, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

Woman Tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A neighbor advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which she said had helped her so much. So I bought a few bottles and tried it out. It sure helped me wonderfully. I felt much better. My work was no longer a dread to me. If I hear of any one who is troubled the way I was, I will gladly recommend the Vegetable Compound to them and I will answer any letters in regard to the same."—Mrs. Bertha Meachan, 910 Center St., Lansing, Mich.

"I had been sickly ever since I was fifteen years old. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I got so I could do all my housework and I am in good health."—Mrs. Marie K. Williams, Ketchikan, Alaska.

From Michigan to Alaska, from Maine to Oregon and from Connecticut to California letters are continually being written by grateful women recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Compound is made from roots and herbs and for more than fifty years has been helping to restore run-down, over-worked women to health.

Constipation Bars You from social success

Abundant health is vital if you are to lead in social activities. And you cannot be healthy unless your bowels are healthy too.

Don't dread constipation. For permanent relief is to be had quickly and easily. A new and delightful corrective performs the three essential functions of relieving, cleansing and rebuilding. Without these there can be no cure.

Normal bowel movements are restored with overnight promptness. Natural methods are used, not harshly irritating ones. Then colon walls are cleansed. All the foul "crust" is melted away. Absolute freedom from irritation and strain gives abused muscles a chance to rebuild, to regain their strength.

This new-day corrective, Jam-O-Lax, performs these three vital functions definitely and surely. Nature is given a chance. Normal conditions are soon restored.

In Jam-O-Lax the corrective elements are blended with the finest of fruits and oils. It comes to you as a tasty jam—equally good by the spoonful or as a spread on crackers.

Delightful to take, positive in action, this triple function corrective is the answer of science to your demand for a corrective that will combat constipation.

Learn what this perfected corrective means to you and yours. Avail yourself of this offer. Clip the coupon now.

WAS JESUS AN ANARCHIST?

We have among us some people who in their zeal for peace have gone so far as to say that they will not respond to any call of their Government for military or semi-military service in time of war, and have endeavored to justify their attitude by implications drawn from the teachings of Jesus.

They not only assert that they will not heed the call of their country, but they condemn the Government for training men for military service, and criticize the churches for permitting their ministers to serve as chaplains in the army and navy.

Now, I am as much opposed to war as any of them. An examination of records in Washington will show that I have had an opportunity to know something of its horrors. It was a soldier who said, "War is hell." He knew. Take all the epithets that have been applied to war and mutilply them by infinity, and the half has not been told. No man who has never experienced a Verdun, Chateau Thierry, Soissons, Argonne, or other such hell, can form any idea as to what modern war is. Future wars are to be even more terrible than those of the past.

While all this is true, I feel that for a man to say he will not serve his country in time of war, savors of anarchy, and for him to try to justify his attitude by claiming loyalty to the teaching of Jesus is to imply that Jesus himself was an anrchist. Was he? Do the teachings of Jesus justify such an attitude?

I know of no one who claims that Jesus made any positive declaration in regard to war. His attitude is only implied in his teaching. It is asserted, and to this we all agree, that when his teaching is universally received, war will inevitably end. That is true, but he made no declaration against war.

He did, however, make specific declaration as to our obligation to the civil government. When asked, "Is it lawful to pay tribute to Caesar?" (civil government), he laid down the broad principle that obligation to the government is on a parity with our obligation to God. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." He places no other obligation upon so high a plane, not even obligation to parents, wife, children, brother, sister, or even one's self (See Luke 14:26). The Roman Government as represented by Pilate was far from ideal, yet Jesus plainly taught that the Roman Government was a divine institution in John 19:11 when he said to Pilate, "Thou wouldst have no power against me, except it were given thee from above." Paul, the greatest interpreter of Jesus' teaching, enlarges upon this statement in Romans 13:1-7: "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers: for there is no power but of God. Therefore, he that resisteth the power, withstandeth the ordinance of God: and they that withstand shall receive to themselves judgment," etc.

Jesus was not an anarchist, and no man should try to justify an anarchistic attitude by pleading loyalty to the teaching of Jesus.

I know that it will be said in an effort to minimize the force of this argument, that I am a retired army chaplain and that I am in the pay of the United States Government. On the other hand, it can be said that I have been face to face with this question for nearly thirty years, and, as much as I was able, I have tried to think it through, but it is not to be weighed by self-interest. The only question is, Is this argument sound?

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup

Better than ready-made cough syrups and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this home-made cough syrup, easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NOTES.

Hermanville League Gives "Special Program."

Hermanville League presented a special program at the church service on Sunday night, Dec. 26. The subject of this program was, "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow"—a study in hymns and hymn writers, League emblems, symbols, etc.

The church was appropriately decorated in gold and white, with a large white cross back of the pulpit. This cross was used in the pantomime of "The Old Rugged Cross." The B. Y. P. U. members were invited to this program, the seats reserved for them were ribboned off in their colors and the ushers pinned violets on every person who came in.

The Sunday before this program, this wide-awake League gave a program for Near East, and received $6 to send in for this work.

Watch Night Service.

The Picayune Senior Leaguers were host at a Watch Night social held Dec. 31 at the League rooms.

The recreational program was in form of a "Review of the Seasons," introducing each month in appropriate games and stunts.

About 11:30 o'clock, "hungry time" came, and after the guests were refreshed with cake and coffee, they assembled in the church and welcomed the New Year with songs and prayer. As the old year was rung out, they all voiced their sentiments for the New Year by singing, "Abide With Me."

Lumberton Intermediate Leaguers Active.

The Intermediate League of the Lumberton Methodist church is an active League. Their superintendent, Mrs. L. D. Fulmer, writes of some of their activities. We can't mention all of them, but one especially seems noteworthy. This was a food shower given to a poor family on Thanksgiving. We are glad to tell our readers about this loyal band of Leaguers, and hope to report more of the activities of this League.

A Poem.

The editor is glad to be able to give our readers a poem written by our own beloved Louise Preston, former editor. Miss Preston is in Tucson, and at Christmas time some of the Tucson Leaguers sang carols near her home. Miss Preston based this poem on the songs they sang—"Joy to the World," "The Song of the Beautiful," "Jesus is King," and "Silent Night":

Dear Carolers gay, with your voices bright,
You'll never know the joy you gave Christmas night,
Nor the burdened hearts whose burdens grew light,
As you sang for the sick—those far from home,
And bade them "Rejoice for the Lord is come."

It's hard to be sick—we long for the touch
Of loving hands—home, friends, and such—
That's why your friendly act helped so much,
And long in our hearts will your sweet voices ring,
Echoing the angel's song, "Jesus is King."

What rest to the weary! What strength to the weak!
In this tenderest message e'en angels could speak,
And I doubt if their voices sounded more sweet
Than yours, bringing calm joy and blessed hearts-ease,
Whispering low, "Rest in heavenly peace."

LOUISIANA LEAGUE NOTES.

The Leagues in New Orleans, Lake Charles and Shreveport have long been organized into City Unions. The tremendous benefit of such organization has never been questioned, but it was not until the engagement of a Field Secretary that like organization was made possible for the remainder of the State. Since August, twelve Unions have been organized, three in each of the following districts: Alexandria, Baton Rouge, Lake Charles, and Monroe. These Unions or sub-districts will do away with the present gap between the individual Chapter and the district. Both Leaguers and their pastors are enthusiastic over the possibilities of this work. Miss Cora Varnado, the Field Secretary, has put as her goal for January, 1928, "A Union League for Every Louisiana Leaguer."

Miss Varnado will begin work in the New Orleans District on Jan. 11.

MAUDE VALLIANT, Reporter.

FROM HAZLEHURST, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: This is just to say that Hazlehurst Methodism is on a boom. The people are responding royally to the larger program of the pastor for extending our work for the year. Attendance upon the services is good at both morning and evening hours on Sunday. Last night we had, possibly, the largest attendance upon the Wednesday night prayer meeting in the history of the church. There were over one hundred present, representing one-fourth of the church membership.

A new, modern church house and parsonage will be built during the year. Brother J. S. Wise has already given a very commodious and well situated lot for the parsonage. The new church building will cover our present property—church and parsonage—on Extension Street. There are evidences of both spiritual and material advance in the work for the year. The pastor's salary has been substantially increased.

The outlook was never more promising for a forward movement along all lines than we find here. The people are enthusiastically and solidly behind the work of extending the Lord's kingdom. Our "lines have indeed fallen in pleasant places."

With kindest regards and best wishes for the new year, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
CHAS. W. CRISLER.

ABOUT THE NEW YEAR.

By George Manotte.

In a few hours (1926) the old year, with its incalculable blessings, its providential cares, its burdens, sorrows and joys, will be things of the past.

What will the New Year bring us?

Have we looked carefully upon our mistakes and carelessness of the year drawing to a close and have we already resolved to do better during the year dawning upon us?

Let our motto be for all of us who have passed from "darkness unto light," "To have a greater vision of the kingdom of God, its needs, its possibilities and its rewards"—rewards, not in the future, but even now in this present life.

"Lo, I am with you always," is not figurative, but it is "always" momentous. His voice, his touch, his personal contact are real; blessed be his promise.

Then how proud ought we to be to be known not only as Christians, but rather as the "Sons of God!"

There is a vast difference between the two conditions, and the gulf is as wide and deep as it was between Lazarus and the Rich Man.

A warning for the New Year to all who as of old at Antioch are called Christians. They followed the Master, Christ, and were logically called Christians. Some in time became "Sons of God," while others went back to their primitive allegiance.

The very same thing happens today.

We stand at the church chancel, take a most sacred vow before God and the congregation to allow us to become members of the church of our choice—it is a free decision of our will, no one is coerced into any church—and what are the results? Some follow a little while, while other "stick."

Thank God for the noble men and women who are "stickers."

The great drawback, especially in the times that now are, is the rush for ambition, riches, and power.

There are too many of us who complacently invest to their own designs the ever truthful scriptural promise found in Luke xii:31.

Yes, material things first and let the "Kingdom of God" be added as a reward, for the delusion that has all along pervaded our entire lives.

My experience has been that it is impossible for any man or woman, even if they are of keen intellect and fair reasoning judgment, to serve two masters, the world and the kingdom of God.

Both the world and the church are justly strict masters. Both expect your whole time, and both pay well. But neither will accept a compromise at serving. Neither the church nor the prince of this world is satisfied with half-hearted service, but both of them require a full time, a keen intellect, an earnestness, faithfulness and a sound judgment.

The rewards of the world, although most magnificent with its social activities, sensualities and pleasures of all kinds, cannot be compared to the Kingdom of God's rewards, which are satisfying and everlasting, while the world's fade away.

Men and women who are dividing time between the card table and the communion table will neither be successful in this world's business nor will they be efficient in church life.

In both instances they may prosper for awhile, but their "Waterloo" will surely come to pass.

Then let us not invert Luke 12:31, but "Seek the Kingdom of God, first."

And what we all need most is: A Greater Vision of the Personal God,

ABERDEEN DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

There was keen interest in the institute held in Okolona, Miss., Jan. 12. Rev. L. P. Wasson, presiding elder, opened the meeting with a heart-searching talk on missions. W. R. Lott was elected secretary and reporter. Twenty-two of the pastors were present, and many men and women from all over the district. Pontotoc and Aberdeen had the largest visiting delegations. Rev. J. H. Berchman, missionary from China, gave two inspirational addresses, which were a treat to all. Miss Virginia Thomas, Rev. R. G. Moore, Mrs. J. A. Price and others made missionary talks. Rev. E. N. Broyles, pastor at West Point and Missionary Secretary for the Conference, gave the details of the work to be done during January and February, to carry this cultivation on in the congregations. Brother Broyles is a master hand in presentation of the plans. The people present seemed to be very much interested. Okolona ladies gave us lunch in the church dining hall, so we had good fellowship together. Aberdeen District will do well in this mission cause.

W. R. LOTT.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

Brookhaven District Missionary Institute was held at Brookhaven, Jan. 11, upon the call of the presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis.

The opening devotional service was led by Rev. C. C. Evains, president of the Board of Missions, Mississippi Conference. Music was rendered by Mrs. Wood on the splendid pipe organ just installed.

The presiding elder gave lucid statement of the plan of the General Conference for this special missionary program and the reason for it, reviewing the needs in our foreign missionary fields and the opportunities the church now has.

Rev. J. L. Neil, pastor from Yazoo City, recently returned from our European mission field, made a masterful address, following the same lines, full of facts and information from personal observation, that stirred our hearts until every one present felt deeply moved to make sacrifices, and to urge our membership to fall into line with the great missionary program of the church, which is endeavoring to fulfill the Master's commission.

Dr. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, Conference Lay Leader, addressed the body, and held a special conference with the church lay leaders, with splendid results.

The entire program looked to the enlisting of each church and every member in a period of cultivation and finally a free-will offering for this cause.

Brother W. D. Hawkins, Conference Missionary Secretary, led the afternoon conference, emphasizing the church's duty and privilege, explaining the working plan, giving out the literature, and with such pertinent and forceful facts and information that the time virtually ran away from us. Spiritual enthusiasm ran high; there were tears and amens, and high spots; and when the books needed were distributed (at a low price) there were not enough to go round.

The institute was closed with a consecration service that thrilled all hearts.

The facts were brought out that our missionary debt of $1,500,000 had been reduced to $140,000. The great missionary building of Nashville, the Lambuth Building, will in fifteen years pay for itself, and be worth a million dollars to the church.

There were over 164 delegates present. The ladies of the church served dinner for all, and all went home to pray and work for this greatly needed Missionary Special.

W. T. GRIFFIN.

JACKSON DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The presiding elder, pastors, and two hundred zealous laymen and elect ladies met in Galloway Memorial Church, Jan. 11, 1927, according to Paragraph 482 of the Discipline. Rev. H. S. Spragins, the meek and good-natured pastor, was host, and beamed a welcome by words and actions.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, by verbal language over the district, and by first, second, and third epistles to preachers and laymen, advertised the meeting, and folk came as pedestians, on trains, and in automobiles, until the occasion looked like an Annual Conference. He started the meeting off with Scriptural reading, devotions, and befitting remarks, and there was burning interest from the start.

The people called "Methodist" are a loyal bunch in answering calls, in missionary propaganda, and in financing our mission fields. They have answered call after call, and will continue to do so as expediency demands, where loyalty is involved, and as long as money is needed to make our mission fields blossom and bloom. A Methodist is glad to be part and parcel of a church that does big things, and that has regard for human beings, even on the outskirts of creation. Methodism does wholesale business, and is not simply a small shop on an obscure street.

Rev. A. J. Moore, of Birmingham, addressed the gathering. He said that Americans need to think straight and live right, that we need to go out and work with people, and not for people, as though we were superior; also, that Southern Methodists talk hard times, and live good times. Four things necessary: More like Jesus, preach the whole message of Christ, make love dominant, and be unafraid of the truth.

Our own enthusiastic and erudite J. L. Neil, who for ten years made things boom in Czechoslovakia, made the inspirational address, and it was a "plumb good 'un." He called attention to the situation the world is facing to-day, and the need of the church preaching the truth in every part. He stressed the need of family altars to meet the tide of godlessness in America.

Brother W. D. Hawkins, our Conference Missionary Secretary, addressed the gathering, and went into many details of our mission work. He knows the how of "set up work," which cannot be overlooked in giving information and accomplishing tasks. Not only does he help in making things go, but he looks like, and talks like he enjoys the work.

Prof. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader, brought a message of encouragement and hope, and exhorted the church to a prayerful consideration of missions. He exhorted that we recognize personal responsibility, that we tithe, and that we read the literature of the church. Not only can Brother Sullivan "talk fast, but he can walk fast." It is pleasing to know that we have consecrated laymen who can not only teach our youth the arts and sciences, but who are not ashamed to be numbered with the friends of Jesus Christ. Laymen like Hawkins and Sullivan, and others in attendance upon the institute, are invaluable to the church, and in the absence of the pastor, could even fill the pulpit with considerable "overflowing."

Our laymen generally "dance" properly when preachers "fiddle" correctly! Certainly we are entering upon the time when we need to be careful about the fiddling. Missionary Boards should fiddle correctly, and pastors who lead the people should fiddle correctly. Laymen then will dance properly. (There are dancers and dancers.) My church requires of me that I "seek in every way to educate and inspire . . . people concerning the evangelization of the world."

Our laymen will respond to the call of the church for "the evangelization of the world."

Our Missionary Board will use our money for "the evangelization of the world."

The word "evangelization" is from the Greek word "euaggelion," and means "to announce good news," "a good message," "a preacher of the gospel."

We would sin against God, sin against the home church, and add to the perils of the heathen were we to use our missionary money in any way except "the evangelization of the world."

Three-minute speeches were made by several laymen and preachers, and one of the best was made by Rev. N. S. Loftus, of Fannin, in which there were scintillations of intellect.

A small contribution from each Methodist will give the church a million dollars as a free-will offering. During the next few months the Southern Methodists will spend a million dollars at soda-fountains, ball games, ice cream parlors, cigar stands, and picture shows: We can smoke, chew gum, drink soda-water, eat ice cream, and paint our lips red, etc., and also give a million dollars, and hardly miss the money.

IT MUST BE WORTH KEEPING.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Speaking of the annual output of ephemeral books by ambitious writers, Ralph Waldo Emerson said:

"They produce their performance to the wise ear of Time, who sits and weighs, and ten years hence out of a million pages prints one. Again it is judged, it is winnowed by all the winds of opinion, and what terrific selection has not passed on it before it can be reprinted after twenty years—and reprinted after a century!—it is as if Minos and Rhadamanthus had endorsed the writing. It is, therefore, an economy of time to read old and famed books."

These words commend themselves as wise to all intelligent and informed people. They accord with the somewhat exaggerated statement of De Quincy that every year buries its own literature. Most books die in their infancy, and largely from a sort of infantile paralysis which reveals their unfitness to live. They are made to sell. In Ireland's "Book Lovers' Euchiridion" it is said truly that "nine-tenths of our current literature has no other end but to inveigle a thaler or two out of the public pocket."

This statement is especially true with reference to current fiction. Great sluices of fiction are pouring out of the presses of to-day too foul for a beast to risk his life by drinking of it. Yet multitudes of people, both young and old, swallow heavy draughts of this passing purulence, and vainly imagine that the pernicious element satisfies intellectual thirst and stimulates culture.

Nor does the reading public suffer from polluted and polluting fiction alone. Many books of a more serious and pretentious nature are quite as worthless, although not so vicious.

Most of the more recent works in the field of theology and philosophy possess little power and will have less permanence. They die speedily because they do not deserve to live.

Yet there are those—and not a few are they—who have a senseless admiration for the new, and a superstitious fear of the old. They talk long and loudly of "great books just from the press and up-to-date"—which books they will discard in a few months or in a few years at the longest, and then take up ardently with other stuff of like character to which they will give equal laudation. They shudder at the imaginary terror of falling under the dominion of "the dead hand."

But the wise know that we cannot repudiate the debt that is due the mighty men of the past or escape from the authority of the truth proclaimed by them.

The Ten Commandments are old, but who will rebel against them through dread of falling under "the dead hand" of Moses, the man of God and the world's greatest law-giver?

The Sermon on the Mount is an ancient discourse, but it is not on that account less worthy of respect and obedience.

"Magna Charta" is not a very recent charter, but where among the English-speaking nations is there a free man who lightly esteems the rights and liberties it guarantees, wrenched from the tyrant King John by the brave barons at Runnymede?

The Constitution of the United States is more than a hundred and thirty years old, but shall it be despised as a thing which lays upon the nation "the dead hand" of Madison and his great colleagues who framed it?

Grote warns men against the peril of what he calls "constitutional immorality," into which nations may easily fall, by which he means the political fickleness which is too ready to revolt against fixed principles. His warning is most wise. A people cannot safely flirt with settled truth in order that they may appear modish in their methods of thought and manner of life.

Such flippant flirtations with the truths of revealed religion are even more discreditable and dangerous.

The God who is revealed in the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures is not a parvenu deity who has just arrived, nor has he revealed himself so ambiguously that he has been erroneously conceived by all the men of faith who ever lived before the men of "the modern mind" came to rightly interpret him to the world.

When he appeared to Moses in Midian, he revealed himself in words that declared, "I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Jacob" (Exodus iii:6); and the message that he put in the mouth of Moses to deliver to the oppressed Hebrews in Egypt was, "Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name forever, and this is my memorial unto all generations" (Exodus iii:15).

When Saint Stephen stood with angelic face before the Jewish Council at Jerusalem and made his powerful defense, he did not repudiate, but did rather recall, that ancient revelation to Moses, and showed how the Christ was the center of it all (Acts vii:1-60). For that truth he died.

St. Paul, the great Apostle to the Gentiles, did not depart from the religion of his fathers when he became a Christian. On the contrary, he affirmed that he worshiped the God of his fathers, "believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets" (Acts xxiv:14). To Timothy, his beloved son in the Gospel, he wrote, "I thank God, whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience."

None of the great leaders of the church who have lived since St. Paul, has ever been a novelty monger. They all clung to the Holy Scriptures and contended earnestly for the ancient faith. John Wesley in his preface to his published sermons declared for himself that which was indeed the position taken by them all. He said:

"I have thought, I am a creature of a day, passing through life as an arrow through the air. I am a spirit come from God, and returning to God: just hovering over the great gulf; till a few moments hence. I am no more seen; I drop into an unchangeable eternity! I want to know one thing—the way to heaven; how to land safe on that happy shore. God himself hath condescended to teach me the way; for this very end he came from heaven, he hath written it down in a book. O give me that book! At any price give me the book of God! I have it: here is knowledge enough for me."

All the great saints of all the ages have believed the Bible, and all the great preachers have found in the Old Book the truth that they preached whereby souls were saved and nations reformed.

When William Wilberforce was dying his last words were: "Read the Bible! Read the Bible! Through all my perplexities and distresses I never read any other book, and I never knew the want of any other. It has been my hourly study; and all my knowledge of the doctrines, and all my acquaintance with the experience and realities of religion have been derived from the Bible only. I think religious people do not read the Bible enough."

It is of the last importance that this ancient book, or rather venerable collection of books, be read with frequency and care and confidence. Other books have perished and will continue to perish; but it is in the earth to stay. Mankind has found in it something of such priceless value that it has been kept while most of all other books and literatures have been allowed to wither and die. There must be something in it that is worth keeping, or it would not have been so carefully kept so long.

A LITTLE READING, AND ELSE.

By Rev. James H. Felts.

Yes, I read many things that are neither good nor wise, things I neither believe nor appreciate. Also, I read some things that have grain and chaff so hopelessly mixed that the proverbial Philadelphia lawyer would balk. Occasionally I read a book or magazine article so full of the finest wheat that it shocks to wonderment when conclusions are reached and ideas allowed to creep in wholly unproven and generously gratuitous. But the most amazing line of presentation that reaches my desk these days is bootleg assumption grounded on legitimate and logical thinking.

If a man reads only what he believes, studies only what he already knows, what profit has he? From friction comes light. I fought the recent "Plan" honorably and whole-heartedly. Some of the things written by advocates of the "Plan" made surer my own attitude. As the weeks have passed, and comparative peace rests again in our Zion, I am more fully convinced than ever, if possible, that the "Plan" was untimely and dangerous. It leaves a glow of satisfaction in my heart to know that my friendships were not broken, that I emerged from the fight with love for my brethren on both sides.

I read Bruce Barton's "The Man Nobody Knows." Some things in that much overrated book are helpful. The human side of our Lord need not be neglected. If he was either wholly human or wholly divine, he loses some of his hold on humanity. He must have been human to grip the heart-strings of men of all races and creeds with a fellowship fine enough to command acceptance of his call to "take my yoke upon you and learn of me." A yoke is built for two. When he proposes to wear the yoke with me, carry part of the burden, I must feel that he is my friend, that he has a sympathetic heart. But when he proposes to save me from my sins, give me the "peace that passeth all understanding"—"the hope that hath no shame," leading me even unto eternal life, I discover the divine. More and more he becomes "very God and very man."

Mr. Barton's book, to me, is just a breezy bit of modern writing, serious enough to provoke thinking, light enough to float with the chaff, helpful enough to justify one reading, but not important enough to provoke a row.

"The Christ of the Indian Road" is as fascinating as a summer dream. Mr. Jones has made him more truly a world figure, the answer to the age-old cry of humanity, the "Son of man, the Son of God," by this bewitching story. Easily can suspicion discover things said that shock. More easily can the reader have his heart stirred to the depths, his emotions kindled into flame. By all means read it.

"Five Present-day Controversies," Jefferson, is clearly and forcibly written. Not for a moment do I accept all his deductions, but one is stronger, better "balanced," by a careful reading of "Two Views of the Bible," "Evolution and the Book of Genesis," "The Virgin Birth," and "The Use of Creeds." His discussion of "Roman Catholicism and the Ku Klux Klan" is most interesting.

External authority is constantly challenged. The Bible is no exception to the rule. Internal experience is subject only to individual analysis. Psychologists may dissect experience as though it were an insect, but when they have done their best or worst, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." The primary value of personal experience remains. The blind man, seeing, could with absolute assurance say, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." So, "Jesus Christ and the Human Quest," Lewis, makes an appeal to the commonplace man, the man unversed in technicalities, but whose information, after all, is just about as satisfactory and dependable as many of the would-be higher-ups.

"The Call of the Carpenter," White, a comparatively recent publication, stirs bad blood. It is full of unsupported assertions. It assumes that "ignorance is the mother of devotion," and portrays the church as the enemy of labor, the friend of wealth. One is reminded of Ingersoll's man of straw, fired to the delight of cheering multitudes. Just why a man should be delighted to hear that he is an accidental jackass, or cheer the "fool" who says, "There is no God," or applaud a theory that makes him the great-grandchild of a chimpanzee, is not easy to understand. The haunting ghastliness of a little tree fertilized by a rotting corpse, discovered by Mr. White, is interesting, absorbingly so. But his premises are set in bitter prejudice, and his conclusions are so unsound that he dares assert that "the divine nature begrudges man good things." The pity of it! Yet, why not know something of the thinking of the man whose heart bubbles like a boiling caldron, whose diatribes are shot through with spleen? The gospel of love, peace, joy, good will, brotherly kindness is preached with greater fervor after browsing near a human crater.

"I Believe Sermons on the Apostles Creed," Kennedy, grip and interest amazingly. It is easy to become a stranger to sleep while following him. True, we dissent again and again. What of it? We are not particularly impressed when he proposes to reach the "scientific conclusion" that "the evidence is not sufficiently strong to convince a reasonable person." The reaction is, what about approaching it in the spirit of faith? However, if one's faith is not strong enough to withstand a few "scientific" jolts—well, better renew that faith.

Darwin may have "wrecked the universe" for Gamaliel Bradford, "and millions of others," but there be left those, not a few, who will never surrender Jesus Christ for a monkey. Recently the Descent of Man was re-read with profit. The utter futility of the "theory" was more fully demonstrated.

The Ex-Kaiser and Rabbi Krass give each other the once over as they discuss "Christianity and Judaism." The Rabbi calls the Kaiser a "royal theologian," and assures him that "Judaism and Christanity are being reconciled, not by each faith trying to convert the other, but by co-operation for the common spiritual welfare of humanity." The Unitarians and modernists might take notice. While readjustments from time to time are inevitable, I seriously doubt if a mongrel religion will ever prove a blessing or bring a measure of satisfaction to any generation.

With conscious need of a bath during and after reading, I have dipped into some of the crass materialism of one Rupert Hughes, and a few of his satellites. They are not in a class with the late Mr. Brann, the Iconoclast man of Waco, Tex. Nor are any of them so delightfully heterodox as Elbert Hubbard, the late Philistine man. Even William Reedy, the man who was so mercilessly castigated by the Iconoclast after Mr. Bryan's first defeat for the presidency, was more attractive every way. There is an unrelieved coarseness about modern materialism that is fatal. There is but one foundation on which humanity can build—God.

I attended the movies for a time. Fed up. When I want a mud-bath I take it privately. So doing, I can smile, "cuss," or cry at my own good pleasure. I may go again. They are not all bad. Most of them need a bath, to say nothing of clothes and manners. If a man is a part of all he sees, all he hears, all he reads, all he thinks, and all he does, what manner of men are we?

WANTED—AN INTERNATIONAL MIND.

By Rev. O. E. Goddard, D.D.

Article No. 2.

Jesus Christ was an internationalist—perhaps the world's first and only true internationalist. He was cosmopolitan. He frequently called himself "The Son of Man." The implication here is that he belongs to all mankind. In the range of his sympathies were all the races. He was in all respects a universal character.

Jesus gave to his followers an international job. "Go ye into all the world," "Go, disciple all nations." No race, no tribe, no individual is excluded. All races, all nations, every individual are included. "God is no respecter of persons." Our commission extends to all.

Since an international Christ gave us an international job, we must needs be internationally minded. A provincial church can never be in sympathy with an international program.

Provincialism, nationalism and racial antagonisms make one of the saddest chapters in human history. Human beings, instead of maintaining a constructive attitude, have maintained a destructive attitude. This makes history red with human gore. Prehistoric tribes were probably always at war among themselves. The great classic nations of antiquity were far from being internationalists. To the Greeks (and they were a people of great culture), all who were not Greeks were "Barbarians." There was much odium in that word. To the Romans, all who were not Romans were "Enemies." To the Jews, all who were not Jews were Gentiles. To the Chinese, all who were not Chinese were "Foreign Devils." None of the great ancient peoples had any words in their language which they applied to foreign peoples that expressed friendship or respect. If this were the best that the best of the ancients thought of non-nationals, what must the less civilized have done for one another?

The history of modern Europe shows the utter absence of the international mind. The wars, the rotten diplomacy, the secret intrigues, the conflicts, contests and contentions galore, indicate that modern Europe has no international mind.

But we are not so much disturbed about the absence of the international mind in the ancients and in modern Europeans; but we are concerned about whether our Protestant churches of to-day have the international mind.

We cannot carry on an international program with a provincial or a national constituency. We have some people who worship an American god; some who worship a white man's god. Pharaoh who said, "Who is the Lord God of Israel that I should obey his voice?" was not an atheist, but a worshiper of the national god of Egypt. Of course, the god of Israel would have no dominion over him. He was as broad-minded as the man who thinks God is concerned only or chiefly about Americans. He was broader than the man who seemes to think that God resides south of the Mason and Dixon line. We have some who worship the god of the Southern white man. These are tribal worshipers. This attitude of mind comes from our heathen ancestors who worshiped their tribal god.

But there are hopeful signs on our horizon. We are becoming broader, bigger, more cosmopolitan every day. There are many factors helping in this. The "International News Agency" is making all the world acquainted. Travel is doing its share. More than a half million Americans go abroad annually. Our economic independence is such now that no nation lives to itself. Democracy, with its slogan (which none of us live up to), "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none," is making us respect the rights of other races. But, above all, a fuller, better realization of who Christ is, and a higher appreciation of the universal elements in the Christian religion, are doing most of all to make us internationally minded—"Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

His was surely an international mind. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." The Christ spirit was concerned about all races, all colors, all conditions. Rigid nationalism is incompatible with Christianity. Provincialism and Christianity are utterly irreconcilable. National prejudices, racial hatreds, provincial narrowness must be abolished before we can have a church with an international mind—a church really Christian. We must be Christian in our attitude toward the red man and the black man, the native and the foreigner. An n-Christian attitude toward any race anywhere is perilous to the Christian's soul.

A church with an international mind, with a Christian attitude toward all races, can maintain a sustained missionary program. An international Christ having assigned us an international job, needs an international constituency to carry out this job. Are we broad enough, big enough to be concerned about all the nations, at home and abroad? We must if we would have the mind of Christ.

CONCERNING THE GENERAL EVANGELISTS.

The general evangelists of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were in session in the Lambuth Building on the 28th and 29th of December, 1926. At the same time the Committee on Evangelism was in session. It was a very gracious season.

The evangelists decided to accept Bishop Cannon's invitation to hold a summer conference on Evangelism at Lake Junaluska some time in August, to which it is hoped that many of the pastors will go. The Committee on Evangelism and the general evangelists are very desirous to cooperate in all the programs of the church and help to push them forward.

Our general evangelists are selected with the most painstaking care. No man can be appointed general evangelist who is not recommended by the General Committee on Evangelism of the Board of Missions. The committee requires that every one recommended for appointment as geneal evangelist must first secure the indorsement of his bishop and of his Conference Committee on Evangelism. He must then receive the unanimous vote of the Committee on Evangelism after the Home Mission Secretary shall have secured the indorsement of all the presiding elders in his Conference, confidentially given, and all such others as may be desired. These men go out to assist our pastors in meetings, taking for their compensation a free-will offering made at some time during the meeting.

The committee and the evangelists are anxious to give to the church the very best possible service. These evangelists reported last year many thousands as having been received into the church in their meetings. Some individuals of them had many more than one thousand accessions in meetings which they held. It is the desire of the Department of Evangelism to be serviceable to the evangelists and to our churches. We keep on hand a list of evangelists who are available at any time, and pastors who write us desiring the services of an evangelist. We are always glad to bring pastors and evangelists together.

Much of the criticism of the vocational evangelist is not a criticism of our general evangelist, but of unauthorized evangelists who are not responsible to anybody. Our Discipline exhorts that as far as practicable pastors who require the assistance of evangelists shall use the evangelists indorsed by the General Canference Committee on Evangelism. When complaints come to us concerning any of our evangelists, the Department always takes the matter up with the evangelist, and if he be at fault and cannot correct his fault, he is no longer a general evangelist of the church.

Those who need the services of evangelists, and the general evangelists who have open dates, are requested to correspond with the Home Mission Secy., J. W. Perry, box 510, Nashville, Tenn.

NEWS FROM THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

My Dear Dr. Carley: Considering all the handicaps, financial depression, and overproduction of the staple crop and the impossibility of selling and moving the great surplus, this section is moving along with a wonderful spirit of hopefulness and promise. This great Delta is the cotton empire of the South. Its warm sunshine, its climate, as soft and salubrious to the cotton plant as velvet, its long growing season, its deep alluvial soil seem to have been made by the Great Creator specially for the production of the fabric to clothe the nakedness of the world. Everywhere you go or look, there, around the gins, warehouses, compresses, out over the vast level stretches of the fields, you see cotton. Every place prepared to house or care for the product is full to the last bale that can be packed into it. And still you see thousands of acres lying under this January sun with around a bale per acre still untouched by human hand since it was laid by. You can't sell it; you can't store it because there is no more room. The embargo put on by the railroads makes it impossible to ship it. So there you are! You can't borrow money on it; nobody wants it; it's worth nothing. Two pairs of shoes or a suit of clothes or a little sugar or a plow or a pair of tracechains will take the price of a bale of the stuff. The price is far under the cost of production. It cost at least 25 or 30 cents to make this crop, and it is bringing only from 7 to 10 or 11 cents per pound. When you look at this marvelous country, millions of acres of the richest land in the world, the Nile valley is not in the comparison any more. You are made to wonder and rub your eyes in amazement at the lack of wealth and prosperity that should, by all means, characterize such a rich section.

The cotton farmer is in the same predicament now that the Western wheat farmer was in a few years ago when they were moving upon Washington and asking for governmental aid after one of the most powerful crops of wheat they had ever made. The price left them with millions of bushels of wheat stored in warehouses that could not be sold. There was no market for the only thing they had produced.

Trials and industrial want follow in the wake of a one-crop policy. But our Delta people are brave, self-reliant, too proud to bend the knee or beg the government for help, although they are in severe financial straits. You may take the map of the world and follow its zones of prosperity and you will find always that it is diversification and not a one-crop policy that has made its people prosperous and happy and contented. If the farmers in these cotton States would cut the cotton acreage 30 to 50 per cent this good year 1927 and take up the extra time in making hay, potatoes, corn and hogs, pay attention to cows and chickens and eggs, and just simply try to live good and easy and be happy with plenty, my, how they would change the color of the skies!

Yet, they are planning a big cotton crop for this year. They pretend to be deeply interested and organizing to reduce the acreage, but the planters will tell you, many of them: "We can't do it. We can't get money to make a crop except on cotton and the farm labor we have don't know how to do anything else but make cotton." Well, it's to break this age-long habit and gradually work out from its slavery and poverty or go into bankruptcy head over first. But these people are a great people. If they fall down, they will bawl and raise sand awhile, but get up and go at it again with a smile and hope in their hearts. Bless their hearts, you are bound to love them. They love the Lord, too, and let nothing daunt their obligations to the church—vast numbers of them do not, while some do.

Still, the church is going on and all the preachers are faithfully and and devoutly at their posts. The gospel is the one absolutely necessary element in human affairs. It gives hope and light and courage to the most forlorn. It springs the purpose and initiative and faith of a soul in God and, after all, everything grows from within us under the impulse of personal and Divine relationship to the source of all life and power and goodness. So no man fails utterly as long as he thinks of himself as only a part of a full and determined plan of success and happiness. As long as one supports the gospel and strives after a better and a larger life in God, one is never whipped and never down and out. That's as sure as the law of gravitation. It acts as certainly.

Dr. Brooks has made a great hit at Clarksdale. They raised his salary to $5,000 and things are going big. They have also asked for the next session of the North Mississippi Conference. This request is quite unanimous and enthusiastic. Fine for Clarksdale! I know the Conference will shout to get the invitation.

Suydam and Lord and Bennett and Ward and Baker are all happy and going it in their respective fields, and the strange thing about it all is that each congregation thinks it has the best preacher. If all the congregations could hear all these preachers, I don't know what they would think. I am inclined to think they would think as they do now, so well pleased are they with what they have.

Brother Baker has just completed two of the handsomest little churches in the district, one at Lula and the other at Dundee. He had no church building at Dundee and as good as none at Lula. But, bless your heart, they have them now, beautiful, up-to-date, handsome and commodious church houses. Last Sunday was the first service in the Dundee church. The elder was there at night service. A large crowd greeted him, and it was a terribly rough, cold night. But the house was practically filled and we had a real, sure-enough quarterly conference. The pastor and his little band of noble, loyal and faithful people at each of these little towns are to be congratulated on such splendid work in building.

The churches are both substantial brick structures, the one at Lula costing about $12,000 or $15,000 or more, with full furnishing, the one at Dundee about $10,000 or $12,000, fully furnished. But so beautiful and commodious are they you would not think of them in terms of less than $16,000 or $18,000.

Congratulate Brother Baker and his fine, self-sacrificing and loyal people. Now, Mr. Editor, I want to write again, and if I do not ring off with this, I fear your columns will be henceforth closed to me. We are trying to circulate our church papers, especially our General and Conference organs. Inspiration is, first, information.

Yours cordially,

L. M. LIPSCOMB, P. E.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The district missionary institute for the Columbus District was held in the First Methodist Church in West Point on Jan. 11, with the presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding. Rev. C. A. Northington was elected secretary. Upon roll call, the chair announced that about seventy-five delegates were present. The presiding elder, in a few well chosen words, introduced the Rev. J. H. H. Berkman, one of our own returned missionaries from China, who in a very forcible way spoke of the conditions in China, our responsibility and opportunity in carrying the Gospel to the Chinese people.

Rev. V. C. Curtis, who was president of the Conference Board of Missions during the last quadrennium, spoke very briefly on the conditions at home in our missionary program of evangelism. Rev. R. A. Tucker, the present president of the Conference Board of Missions, who attended the meeting of the General Board in Louisville, Ky., addressed the institute.

Miss Virginia Thomas spoke in the interest of the Sunday school and its relation to this phase of the program of the church, Rev. R. P. Neblett inspired his heares with a message in behalf of the Epworth League.

On motion of Rev. E. Nash Broyles, the chair was asked to name a Committee on Findings. W. N. Duncan, R. P. Neblett, H. H. Ellis, J. H. McKinon, C. A. Northington were appointed by the chair. The institute adjourned for lunch, to reassemble at 1:30 p. m.

Afternoon Session.

Rev. R. P. Neblett conducted the devotional service. Mr. J. H. McKinon, district lay leader, spoke in behalf of the laymen in carrying out the program of the church. His hearers were very much helped by his inspiring message.

Mrs. Howieth spoke of the woman's work. We were greatly encouraged with the spirit in which she delivered her message. Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Secretary of the Board of Missions, who has just returned from a meeting with the General Board, presented the plan for the free-will offering. In his explanation of the cultivation period, his hearers were able to grasp the spirit of our church.

The Rev. J. H. H. Berkman addressed the institute at this time, giving us the Chinaman's point of view.

Rev. W. N. Duncan read the report of the Committee on Findings, which was adopted. The following is the report:

Committee on Findings.

We, your Committee on Findings, beg leave to report as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that we recommend that our church lay greater stress upon, and give more emphasis to Missions, both Foreign and Home: By insisting that our preachers preach on it more frequently; that our lay leaders carry it to their churches more often; that our Woman's Missionary Societies emphasize it in their meetings; that our Sunday schools be requested to lay more stress upon the subject, and to train the youth in the necessity for Missions; that the Epworth League give more careful attention to the study of this question; that our denominational colleges and schools give emphasis to this need in their course of study, and that our present conditions in the foreign fields necessitate a special "Free-will offering" at this time.

A resolution of thanks was offered by Brother Curtis.

We were dismissed by Rev. Guy Ray.

C. A. NORTHONGTON, Secretary.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PLACE COMMITTEE MEETING.

The committee appointed at the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference to select the place for holding the 1927 session of the Conference will meet in the Methodist church, Tupelo, Miss., at 11 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, Jan. 25, to consider invitations from churches for the entertainment of the next session of the Conference.

V. C. CURTIS,
J. B. RANDOLPH,
R. A. TUCKER,
Committee.

GIFTS FOR THE DAY NURSERY.

Gifts received for the Day Nursery in the past few days include the Philathea Class of the First Methodist Church of Gulfport, $10; Mary Cain, of Vaiden, Miss., $5; the Try Again Sunday school class of the Methodist church at Lumberton, $10, and the Epworth League of Wesson, $2.

The mission work here in Biloxi is starting off fine this year.

I ask the prayers of all the Christian people in this great work.

Announcement to the Church

THIS IS THE MOST IMPORTANT STATEMENT THAT HAS BEEN MADE TO METHODISTS IN TWO QUADRENNIUMS.

* * * *

For some years the General Board of Missions has been handicapped by a debt which reached nearly $1,200,000. This debt precipitated a crisis, forced drastic retrenchment, caused curtailment of missionary activity, and brought our work to a practical standstill in every field. Our evangelistic activity, especially, suffered almost to the point of total extinction.

* * * *

THE BOARD OF MISSIONS NOW REPORTS TO THE CHURCH THAT THIS DEBT HAS BEEN SO ADJUSTED THAT IT NEED NO LONGER SERIOUSLY EMBARRASS US IN OUR WORK OF PROCLAIMING THE GOSPEL TO ALL MEN.

* * * *

The manner in which this adjustment has been brought about is as follows:

1. THE LAMBUTH BUILDING IS NOW CARRYING $520,000 OF THIS DEBT, AND THE INCOME FROM THE BUILDING WILL AUTOMATICALLY PAY BOTH THE INTEREST AND PRINCIPAL AND OPERATING EXPENSE IN FIFTEEN YEARS. THIS PART OF THE DEBT THUS STILL REMAINS BUT WILL TAKE CARE OF ITSELF AND NO LONGER BOTHER US IN OUR MISSIONARY ADMINISTRATION.

The Lambuth Building has increased in value nearly 50 per cent since it was purchased. It now pays to the Church 9 per cent on the amount invested. It has literally proved the salvation of our work in our greatest missionary crisis.

* * * *

2. THE TOTAL BALANCE OF OUR INDEBTEDNESS REMAINING IN THE BANKS ON DECEMBER 31st WAS ONLY $140,000. THIS MEANS THAT SINCE JUNE 30th WE HAVE PAID $567,016.34 IN CASH ON THE DEBT.

The present administration of the Board of Missions is pledged to remove our indebtedness and to operate our missions efficiently and economically. That pledge is being and will be kept. We consider the result already accomplished as a great victory, achieved under Providential guidance.

The remaining bank indebtedness is now no larger than the Board has carried in the past, but with the support of the Church even this will be removed during 1927.

* * * *

HOW HAS THIS MONEY BEEN PAID? THE CHURCH SHOULD READ THIS WITH DEEP SERIOUSNESS.

INTO THIS HAS GONE EVERY DOLLAR OF OUR CENTENARY INCOME. INTO THIS WE HAVE PAID ONE-THIRD OF EVERY DOLLAR RECEIVED ON ASSESSMENT, NOTWITHSTANDING THE FACT THAT THE CHURCH PAID ONLY TWO-THIRDS OF THE MEAGER SUM ASSESSED.

BUT THAT IS NOT THE WHOLE STORY.

ON THIS DEBT WE HAVE PAID EVERY DOLLAR OF EVERY EMERGENCY FUND CALLED HOME FROM EVERY FIELD. AND THE EMERGENCY FUND IN A FOREIGN MISSION FIELD IS THE MARGIN BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH FOR THE MISSIONARY.

WE HAVE CUT TO THE BONE. OUR WORK IS LITERALLY "BLED WHITE."

* * * *

We can go no further. We can effect no more economies. We can divert no more funds.

We have gone as far as we can go without destroying the morale on the field. And to destroy morale on the field means that our work has collapsed, and that we are already out of the missionary business.

Only one other step could possibly be taken, namely, to sell our property on the field. And that would be fatal even if it could be done.

THE BOARD OF MISSIONS CAN MAINTAIN OUR WORK, OPERATE EFFICIENTLY, AND PAY THE REMAINING INDEBTEDNESS IF THE JANUARY-FEBRUARY MISSIONARY CULTIVATION CAMPAIGN IS A SUCCESS—IF THE "FREEWILL OFFERING FOR MISSIONS IN EVERY CONGREGATION" IS TAKEN FAITHFULLY, AS OUR DISCIPLINE PROVIDES—IF THE MILLION DOLLARS SET AS A GOAL BY THE GENERAL CONFERENCE IS REACHED. OTHERWISE IT CANNOT POSSIBLY BE DONE.

* * * *

There are three courses before us: We can go back into debt. We can sell out and quit. We can raise the million dollars asked.

The Board chooses the last course. In obedience to the Discipline we are out for the million dollars, and we beg and expect the cooperation of every preacher and member.

WE HAVE DONE OUR PART—ALL THAT WE HUMANLY CAN DO. WE HAVE PAID NEARLY SIX HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN SIX MONTHS. BUT WILL NOT THE CHURCH NOW DO ITS PART? IT HAS NOT EVEN SCRATCHED THE SURFACE OF ITS VAST RESOURCES. WILL IT NOT DO SO NOW? WILL YOU NOT DO SO?

Fraternally,

W. G. CRAM,

General Secretary.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

Dear Dr. Carley: The Missionary Institute of the Hattiesburg District met in Court Street Church, Wednesday, Jan. 5. Practically every charge in the district was represented, every pastor present except two, a number of charge and church lay leaders, the district lay leader, one associate district lay leader, the district secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, a number of presidents of the local auxiliaries, Sunday school superintendents, Epworth League superintendents and presidents, and other laymen and laywomen. Pastors who have been in the district for more than a quadrennium said that it was the most largely attended missionary institute held in the district within their memory. It was worthy of note that the outlying charges farthest from the Hub City were all represented, one of them having the largest number present.

The presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, presided and in a very forceful and effective manner gave the purpose of the meeting. W. A. Holloway, of Mount Olive, district lay leader, was chosen as secretary. Rev. H. M. Ellis, Conference evangelist, led the devotions and gave a very effective exposition on the relation of our needs to God's source of supply. Rev. J. L. Neill, of Yazoo City, spoke on world conditions and local conditions, giving the principal inspirational address. After luncheon, Rev. W. N. Ware spoke on the needs of Africa, and Mr. Hawkins explained the plan of the Missionary Cultivation Period. Rev. John C. Chambers was present, and during the noon hour held a conference with the Sunday school workers of the district, making plans and setting goals for the year. Dr. J. M. Sullivan was present and held a conference with the lay leaders, also during the noon hour. Rev. Claude P. Jones, Conference evangelist, was also present and had a part in the devotions.

Altogether it was a great day. The Lord favored us with ideal weather conditions, and all the delegates were in fine spirits, and all the speakers were at their very best. What a forceful speaker Lambert Neill is and how he grows, as we all ought to grow, in understanding the deeper things of God! I could close my eyes and almost imagine that we were back at Pine Grove church, where twenty years ago he held one of the first meetings of his ministry. Warren Ware is able to present conditions in the Congo in fewer words and simpler manner than almost any speaker I have heard. Pretense and affectation are altogether unknown to him. W. D. Hawkins is not only a leader of young people, but is also a leader of men. The missionary cause and the Mississippi Conference owe much to him. Mrs. J. A. Smith delighted those present with two special offerings in song. The ladies of Court Street, assisted by other ladies from their neighbor churches, served luncheon at the noon hour in the cordial and whole-hearted fashion so well known to those who have enjoyed their hospitality.

THE MESSAGE OF THE CHRIST CHILD.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Dr. Henry Vandyke, in his book, "The Christ-Child in Art," thus writes: "A year ago I stood in the chapel of the Hospital of the Innocents at Florence. There in the dim light hung Ghirlandaho's painting of The Adoration of the Magi. The Sages of the Orient with their splendid cortege knelt before the young child Jesus. In the foreground were two lovely figures of children, clad in diaphanous and fleecy robes of white, with folded hands and happy faces. As I looked at them more closely I saw by the little drops of crimson, like necklaces of ruby around their necks, that the old painter had meant them to represent two of the martyred innocents of Bethlehem; and that he had put them into his picture in order that they might silently utter the thought of his heart concerning the comfort and help and salvation which were brought to the suffering children of earth by the infant Savior." False to fact as this dream of the old artist was, it has its fine lesson. The picture that Dr. Vandyke describes hung in a hospital reared and endowed by followers of Christ specifically for suffering little children.

"The Christ-Child unto the stable came
Twixt the midnight and the morn;
His mother laid him softly down
By the beasts of hoof and horn.
The friendly oxen near him stood
In the frost of the early day,
And, Little Brother of all the poor,
He slept in the fragrant hay.

"The Christ-Child slept in the stable dim,
And over him flamed the Star
That was golden bright with the light of heaven
Where God and the angels are.
Then journeying far came sage and priest,
With a wealth of spices sweet,
And, Little Brother of all the rich—
They knelt to kiss his feet.

"O Litttle Brother of every child,
Obscure, or high and great,
Thine is the alchemy of heaven
Wrought on our low estate."

The message of the Christ-Child means a better childhood for the world. The Christ-Child was an ideal child, physically, mentally, morally perfect—an ideal babe, an ideal little boy, an ideal big boy. The Evangelists do not go into details about this; but we readily read between the lines of their records of all of this. Luke tells us that "he grew and waxed strong, filled with wisdom," and that "the grace of God was upon him;" and that as the years sped him on from childhood to youthhood, "Jesus advanced in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and men;" and when we read in Luke's Gospel that story of his episode in the Temple when twelve years of age, we understand all of Luke's sayings about him.

The old painters, of the Renaissance especially, pictured the Christ-Child as altogether lovely. They painted his mother sometimes as homely—strong in character, good and domestic and motherly, but sometimes homely; and yet not one of them failed to represent the Christ-Child as perfectly beautiful. The boy Jesus in the Temple painted by Hoffman is beyond all question the finest face of a youth ever seen or dreamed of. When we read in Luke's Gospel the rhapsodies of old Simon and the aged Anna over him when a babe, we readily understand that the old masters were not in error when they pictured the Christ-Child as perfectly beautiful.

What does all of this more than suggest? In the Bethlehem manger nineteen centuries ago God's ideal of human babyhoood lay; and in the streets of Nazareth God's ideal of a boy walked, and ran over the adjacent fields with his playfellows.

Irenaeus, one of the Christian Fathers of the second century, wrote thus of the Christ: "He passed through every age, becoming an infant for infants, thus sanctifying infants; a child for children, sanctifying those who are of this age, being at the same time made to them an example of piety, righteousness and submission." Somehow, without being able to reason about it, we feel that this is true. Every thoughtful mother is deeply gratified that our Christ, the world's Redeemer, was once a babe like hers; and she feels that her babe is safer and better because of it.

This divine ideal of childhood is a mighty plea—a strong, imperious demand that our children be given their rights. The first is the right to be well born. The law of heredity is a great force in a child's life—not invincible as some suppose; for the greatest moral force in the world is the religion of Christ, and no heredity ever met in human childhood is stronger than this: yet every child coming into this world, where temptations are rife, should be freed from the down-pull of sinful heredities. "When should we begin to train a child?" was asked of a man famous for h's learning in such matters; and his reply was: "Twenty-five years before he is born." The Baby Christ pleads down the ages that all of earth's babies be well born—that they do not come into the world hampered with hellward heredities. Mutely, yet surely and strongly, that Babe, by his own superior babyhood, asks that all our babies have a fair start in life.

The Christ-Child living the simple life of an ideal child in his humble Nazareth home pleads earnestly by his life that all our children have a chance to grow up unwarped and untainted. This means that every child has a God-ordained right to a Christian home, where family prayers are had daily, and the Bible is the law of life. It means also that every child should have the privilege of spending all his childhood days in a clean community with all environments holy and uplifting.

Wordsworth once sang:

"Trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy."

That flowers were lovelier far, and bird songs more melodious, and the sunshine more golden, and the wild-woods more gorgeous, and all life more poetic, and all hopes more buoyant, and faith intenser when we were children, every man and woman who has not forgotten the past knows too well. Men sometimes say that ignorant childhood sees life in a false light; and we men and women see it as it is. No—the child is nearest to God, and with undimmed sight sees things as they are; and we older people have lost the baby light of heaven, and see things in a fading light. A modern painter has made us a picture of the Christ-Child out in the fields looking up with the unworded story of splendid visions manifest in all his baby features. The picture tells a true story. Thank God for the Message of the Christ-Child!

"In the beauty of the lilies
Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom
That transfigures you and me."

GREENVILLE DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Greenville District Missionary Institute will be held at Shelby on Jan. 21—only one day. We are planning and looking forward to a large attendance, a great day, and the creation and dissemination of a mighty fine enthusiasm and missionary information.

As most will come in automobiles (train schedules not favorable for early arrivals), we will begin at 10 o'clock and adjourn in the afternoon when we are through.

All pastors, lay leaders, chairmen or women of Missionary committees, district secretary of Woman's Missionary Society, Sunday school and Epworth League officials, Conference Missionary Secretary, and lay member of Board of Missions are members of this institute and expected to be present. The pastors will render a great service by urging them, every one of them, to be present, along with any other leaders and outstanding and influential men and women in their congregations.

WORK—DON'T WORRY.

The hardest work you ever do
Is worrying about it;
What makes an hour resemble two
Is worrying about it!
The time goes mighty slowly when
You sit and sigh and sigh again,
And think of work ahead, and then
Keep worrying about it.

Just buckle up and buckle in—
Quit worrying about it.
By work, not worry, you will win—
Quit worrying about it.
A task is easy, once begun;
It has its labor and its fun;
So grab a hold and do it, son—
Quit worrying about it.

THE LITTLE HOUSE IN THE HOLLOW.

One day a large gray cat followed three little girls out of the woods. He stayed on and made his home with first one of them and then another. They owned him in common and were devoted to him.

The three little girls had names that just suited them. Goldie's hair was the color of red gold, Coral's cheeks were always pink, and Violet had big dark blue eyes. When the cat came they named him Silver Coat because of his smooth gray fur.

One autumn day the girls packed a basket with luncheon and went off for a picnic. Silver Coat followed, as he always did.

After they had read awhile they spread their dinner on a flat rock. But when they had finished eating and called Silver Coat to his dinner he did not come.

"He must have gone off hunting," Coral said.

"Perhaps he's asleep somewhere," Goldie suggested. "It's time for his morning nap."

But Violet said: "He is lost; we must go and look for him."

After they had been searching for a while they came out of the woods suddenly into a hollow between two hills. There was a weather-beaten little house at the end of the hollow.

"I have heard," Coral said wisely, "that a cross little old woman named Miss Prissy Partlow lives there all alone."

"Well, if she's cross let's keep away," said Goldie.

Violet hesitated. "I wonder why there's no smoke coming from her kitchen chimney. Perhaps something is wrong."

They walked over to the house. The front door was ajar, but they could not hear a sound.

"Is any one at home?" Violet called.

Then a voice answered, "Please come in."

The girls found poor little Miss Prissy Partlow wrapped up on the bed; she looked very forlorn.

Several days before she had hurt her ankle, she explained, and now she could hardly crawl round the room.

The girls asked if she had not been cold and hungry.

"Yes, I have, and that's a fact," Miss Prissy replied.

"O dear!" said Violet. "This is dreadful! But we'll soon have things easier for you."

Then the three girls set to work with a will.

"There's plenty of wood out in the shed," Miss Prissy remarked, "but none in the house. Oh, how good a little blaze would feel to my chilly bones!" Coral brought in wood and kindled a ruddy fire, Violet bound up the invalid's ankle, and Goldie made some crisp brown toast and amber tea.

"Well, well," said Miss Prissy, "this seems too good to be true!"

Coral felt ashamed. How could any one have called Miss Prissy cross?

"How did you happen to come here?" Miss Prissy asked.

"We were looking for our beautiful cat," Goldie said.

The little old lady looked interested. "What kind of a cat?"

"Oh, a silver cat!" Coral said.

"Such a beauty," Violet said wistfully, "with a soft gray coat."

"And so fat and purry," Goldie added.

Miss Prissy looked thoughtful; she leaned back on the pillows that Violet had beaten up for her, and drank Goldie's good tea and looked at the crackling fire that Coral had made. Presently she began to strike her spoon thoughtfully against her saucer; it made a tinkling sound.

After a moment she said, "Listen; don't I hear something out in the entry?" The three girls turned and looked toward the entry door, which was slightly ajar. Something came slowly around the edge of the door. The girls gasped—it was Silver Coat! He walked slowly into the room, took his seat on the rug, and began to wash his face.

"He belongs here," Miss Prissy explained. "His name is Sam. I don't know whatever made him run away. But," she added, for the three friends looked very sorrowful, "I'm not going to take him away from you."

"O, Miss Prissy," Violet said, "Silver Coat—I mean Sam—is your cat, and so he ought to stay with you."

"Well," the little old woman answered, "we'll leave the matter with Sam—I mean, to Silver Coat."

The girls looked eagerly at the cat, but he went on calmly washing his face.

"Now," said Miss Prissy, after a while, "since you have been so kind, I am going to ask one more favor of you. It is that you carry a note to a good woman I know who will come and take care of me."

As the girls nodded willingly, she added, "But first hand me that little black tin box that sits on the bureau."

When the box was in her hands she drew a key from under her pillow. "Come closer," she told the girls. "Then shut your eyes and don't open them until I tell you to."

They obeyed wonderingly. There was a slight rustling and rattling. Then Goldie felt something slip over her wrist with a click. An instant later something else slid down over Coral's black curls, and something else over one of Violet's fingers.

"There!" they heard Miss Prissy say, "I'm glad I found such a good use for them! Now you can look."

Three pairs of eyes flew open, and three voices said, "O my!"

For on Goldie's wrist a gold chain bracelet was shining; on Violet's finger was a little ring set with a dark amethyst; and there was a gleam of red under Coral's chin.

"Won't somebody tell me what this is round my neck?" Coral cried.

"It's a string of lovely red-pink beads," said Goldie.

"Coral beads," Miss Prissy said. "I've had all these things ever since I was a little girl. I was wondering what I should do with them, when along came you three—and they suited you to a T. Well, I declare, if I didn't make a rhyme!"

The little girls clapped their hands with delight over Miss Prissy's rhyme and three gifts that "suited to a T."

"You must go now," Miss Prissy said, "for it's getting late. And if my good Sam wants to go with you, he may."

Every one looked at Silver Coat, who had stopped washing his face and was sitting bolt upright, gazing at his friends.

"Ask him, one of you," Miss Prissy said. "He sees you're leaving."

"Silver Coat," Violet said, "don't you think you ought to stay here with Miss Prissy?"

Silver Coat yawned in a dignified way.

Then Miss Prissy leaned on her elbow and looked solemnly into the big green eyes.

"Sam," she said, "don't you really want to go home with Coral and Violet and Goldie?"

Silver Coat yawned again; but that was all he did. So the little girls went away without him.

But the next evening, when they were studying their lessons together in Violet's home, they heard a strange tinkle-tinkle out on the porch.

They raised their heads and listened: fine and clear as a fairy tune the sound came again.

Tiptoeing across the room, they opened the door. There on the threshold stood Silver Coat. With a loud purr of greeting he marched past them toward the fire; as he moved, tinkle-tinkle he went louder than ever.

"Oh, bless his heart!" cried the little girls. "Where did he come from, and how can he ring like that?"

Silver Coat was settling himself on the rug with his paws folded under his chest and his tail curled cosily. The girls picked him up and found a tiny silver bell on a ribbon round his neck.

"Dear Miss Prissy found something for him, too," Coral said. "Something that just suits him to a T!"

But, for all their joy at seeing Silver Coat again, they were a little stern with him.

"Sam! Sam!" said tender-hearted Violet. "How could you run away and leave your poor, lonely Miss Prissy?"

Silver Coat stayed two days, and then he disappeared again. Two nights later he came under Goldie's window and waked her with his chiming bell. She ran down to let him in and found a note from Miss Prissy tied to his collar; it was a welcome invitation to tea at the cottage.

From that time on, Silver Coat had four homes, one with each of the girls and one with Miss Prissy. It was a queer way for a cat to behave, but it was Silver Coat's way.

Whenever one of the little girls heard his bell she would go to the door and welcome him as her guest. And when the silver chime would be missing for days at a time, Coral and Goldie and Violet would smile and say to one another: "He's all right; it's time for his visit at the little house in the hollow."—Lucy Dana Hill, in the Youth's Companion.

"TIME OUT."

A very High Church missionary—a good and devoted soul—was sent out to the Adirondacks, where most of the people had grown up Baptists. An old man of that persuasion died and his family wanted him buried from the church. The missionary, uncertain whether he might use the church for an unconfirmed sectarian, telegraphed to the bishop, asking what he should do. Back came the cordial answer: "Bury all Baptists possible."—Exchange.

Dr. George A. Gordon recalls a sermon of his in which he said he "was inclined to think that Christians were sometimes among the most foolish people that the Almighty ever made." The mother of the family who heard it, in repeating at the dinner table "this wild utterance of the minister," was greeted with the outcry from her son, a boy of tender years, "Mother, dear, that was most untactful of Dr. Gordon; there might have been a Christian in the congregation!"—Exchange.

The story goes that several college presidents were discussing what they would do after they retired. What would they be fit for, was the question. "Well," said one of them, "I don't know that I'd be fit for anything, but I know what I'd like to do. I'd like to be superintendent of an orphan asylum so that I would never get any letters from parents." "I've a much better ambition," exclaimed another. "I want to be warden of a penitentiary. The alumni never come back to visit."—Harper's.

THE DEATH OF MRS. CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, widow of the sainted Bishop Charles B. Galloway, died at her home in Jackson, Miss., at 8 o'clock on Friday morning of last week. Her remains were laid to rest Saturday afternoon by the side of those of her distinguished husband.

The funeral services were held at the Galloway Memorial Methodist Church at 3 o'clock. Dr. H. S. Spragins, pastor of the church, was in charge of the services. The brief address of Dr. Spragins was appropriate and beautiful. The memorial address was delivered by Dr. Charles W. Crisler, a former pastor of Galloway Memorial, who, out of an intimate acquaintance with and deep affection for the deceased, spoke feelingly and appropriately of her beautiful life and character. Other ministers taking part in the service were Rev. J. Loyd Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District; Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, a lifelong friend of the family, and the editor of the Advocate.

A great throng of the citizens of Jackson were present at the service, to pay loving tribute to one of their most distinguished citizens and to express their own sorrow and their sympathy with the family in their great bereavement. The whole chancel of the church was banked high with flowers as beautiful and appropriate tokens of the love of friends.

Did Mrs. Galloway die last Friday morning? No—she just fell asleep on earth and awoke in heaven. We knew her long, and we loved her as much as any one not of her immediate family could love her. Her face as she lay in the casket was as beautiful as it was in life. A sweet peace rested upon the calm countenance, and the suggestion of a gentle smile was there—the smile of a tender heart and a pure soul and a triumphant spirit. Maybe it was in response to the smile of "Bonnie Prince Charley" as he welcomed her to the home in the skies where he has patiently and lovingly waited for her these years! And now they both wait for the others.

What a place heaven must be!

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

On "Musicians' Day," the Big Brothers Bible class, Greenville, Miss., had an attendance of 139.

Mrs. H. P. Lewis, wife of our pastor at Ruleville, Miss., recently underwent a slight operation on her throat at the King's Daughters' Hospital, Greenville, Miss.

"The Advocate has visited my home for about forty years, and I feel that I cannot do without it," writes Mrs. J. H. Murphy, of Looxahoma, Miss., in renewing her subscription.

Mrs. Anna P. Ball, of Jackson, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, writes: "For more than thirty-five years the Advocate has been a welcome visitor in my home."

The Louisiana Child Finding and Home Society held its annual public meeting at the Roosevelt Hotel on Tuesday evening of this week. Rev. John L. Williams is superintendent of the Society.

Our new pastor at Bay St. Louis, Rev. S. F. Harkey, has won the hearts of his people. He is giving full proof of his ministry in the rapidly growing coast section, and his congregations are excellent.

A note from Rev. O. S. Lewis, Natchez, Miss., brings the good news that Mrs. Lewis is steadily improving in health after an extended illness, and is now able to be at home after a long stay in the hospital.

The week of May 1-7 is known as National Music Week. During that time special musical programs will be given by churches and other organizations interested in developing a greater love for music.

Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, attended the meeting of the Board of Church Extension in Louisville, Ky., last week, representing the needs of his district before the Board.

Work has been begun on the new Sunday school annex of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., and several forward steps are being planned for the work of the church and the Sunday school.

Rev. John L. Sutton, of the Mississippi Conference, manager of the Mississippi Home Finding Society, spent a day or two in New Orleans last week. While here, he paid the Advocate office an appreciated call.

The official board of the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss., has made a substantial increase this year in the assessment for the pastor's salary. Rev. W. J. Ferguson is in his fourth year as pastor at Gulfport.

Mr. Charles A. Selden has been commissioned by the Ladies' Home Journal to make a personal survey of the Asiatic missionary field during the present year. Mr. Selden's articles will appear in the Journal throughout the year.

Rev. T. A. Ferguson, at Forest, Miss., has received a number of members into the church since Conference. The Epworth Leagues and the Sunday school are in a flourishing condition. "They say" Brother Ferguson is a fine preacher.

Captain Duncan Matheson, of the San Francisco police, recently said to the Commonwealth Club there: "In all my police experience I have seen but one boy who had graduated from both high school and Sunday school combined, come into the hands of the police."

Dr. T. D. Ellis, General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, will preach at the First Methodist Church, this city, at 11 o'clock a. m., each day from April 3 to April 17, in a series of pre-Easter services. During that period, services will be held at different Methodist churches at the evening hour.

Rev. J. L. Sells, the new presiding elder of the Seashore District, has won the pastors' hearts. The new harness fits him well—he is pulling the work forward. The attendance at the recent missionary institute was large, and every pastor seemed confident of securing in full the special missionary offering.

The work of the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss., goes forward in a very fine way. The congregations are large and growing, and the Sunday school is a great organization. The salary of the pastor has been substantially increased this year. Rev. Carroll Varner serves this loyal and appreciative people.

We learn with sorrow of the recent death of Mrs. Dr. Wilhoft, sister of Rev. W. T. Griffin, of the Mississippi Conference, in New York. For many years she was a resident of New Orleans, where her husband practiced his profession. Many friends will recall her and sympathize with her loved ones in their sorrow.

Rev. W. O. Sadler and his wife, of Kentucky, and Dr. and Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, of Columbus, Miss., are spending a brief vacation at Biloxi, Miss. Dr. McIntosh, who is one of our most efficient general evangelists, is getting ready for a great revival campaign this year. Both Brother Sadler and Dr. McIntosh attended the recent Seashore District Missionary Institute at Biloxi.

We have received the announcement of the marriage of Mr. R. T. Pickett, Jr., and Miss Mary Eleanor Chisholm, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Chisholm, 320 Green Street, Jackson, Miss., on Dec. 25, 1926, the ceremony being performed by the groom's father, Rev. R. T. Pickett, of the Louisiana Conference. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

Mrs. J. P. Drake, widow of the sainted Rev. J. P. Drake, of the Mississippi Conference, passed to her reward on Wednesday morning, Jan. 12, and was buried in the family cemetery at Church Hill, Miss., on Friday morning following. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. O. S. Lewis, assisted by Rev. C. C. Evans, Rev. S. F. Harkey, and Rev. L. P. Anders. Thus passes another of the saints of earth. A multitude of friends will sympathize with the family in their sorrow.

The Woodrow Wilson Foundation is offering two awards of $25,000 each for the best two articles of 2500 words on the subject, "What Woodrow Wilson Means to Me," written by the young man and young woman who have passed their 20th birthday and have not passed their thirty-fifth birthday. All articles must be submitted on or before Oct. 1, 1927. Full information concerning the contest can be obtained upon application to The Woodrow Wilson Foundation, 17 East Forty-second Street, New York City.

Rev. Lyman Carley, the editor's father, has suffered a relapse from the attack of "flu" he had immediately following the session of the Mississippi Conference, and has been confined to his bed at his son's home in New Orleans since Monday of last week. His condition is not considered serious, but recuperation is slow. He was greatly cheered during the week by visits from his son, George, of Gulfport, and his daughters, Grace, of Laurel, Miss., and Laura (Mrs. Stephen S. Thomas), of Lebanon, Ohio, Mrs. Thomas being accompanied by Mr. Thomas.

Rev. S. W. Miller, of Frisco, Tex., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, writes: "I and J. J. Brooks are the only living charter members of the North Mississippi Conference, and if I live till the first Sunday in February, I am expected to preach my eightieth birthday sermon. I have been superannuated for some time, but my health is fine, and I don't know how long I shall remain in the flesh to serve my Lord. I have finished over sixty years in the church and fifty-seven years in the ministry, but I am not tired of the way yet." Blessings upon him!

Rev. A. T. Clanton, our pastor at Batesville, Miss., writes: "Everything goes well at Batesville church. The official board raised the pastor's salary $200 this year. Our presiding elder, Rev. T. M. Bradley, is in high favor over the whole district. Our Sunday school presented the superintendent, Mr. M. E. Jarrett, a beautiful silver loving cup for a Christmas present. Brother Jarrett has served this church for twenty years as a faithful and efficient superintendent. The school is making good progress—and we hope to have Brother Jarrett's leadership for many more years."

The "White Christmas" service of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss., was a very beautiful one. It consisted of a series of living pictures depicting the Annunciation, Birth, Manger, visits of the Shepherds and the Wise Men, etc. The pulpit platform and choir space were covered with white, making a most beautiful background, and the decorations, along with the music by the choir in white robes, made a most impressive scene. The church was crowded with people to witness the program, and the offering amounted to about $500, all of which was devoted to charity.

Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Morrison, of Wilmore, Ky., have spent the past week or ten days in New Orleans, fleeing from the severe weather further north. Dr. Morrison preached two great sermons last Sunday—at Parker Memorial in the morning and at the First Methodist Church in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Morgan, long-time friends, entertained Dr. and Mrs. Morrison, Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and the editor of the Advocate at dinner at the St. Charles Hotel on Monday of this week. Dr. Morrison will begin a meeting with Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, at Clarksdale, Miss., next Sunday.

The Commission on Evangelism and Life Service of the Federal Council of Churches has prepared a booklet, "The Fellowship of Prayer for the Lenten Season, March 2 to April 17," which it will be glad to send to any pastor, free, upon application to the office of the Commission, 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York City. Similar booklets have been used in other years by thousands of pastors in connection with their pre-Easter services, and they have found it very helpful. The manuscript of the booklet has been approved by the representatives of many denominations. Dr. C. L. Goodell is executive secretary of the Commission.

The present Senior Class of Whitworth College recently adopted the following pledge of loyalty to their beloved institution: "In consideration of our deep love for Whitworth College and our sincere desire for the success and prosperity of the present administration, we, the members of the Senior Class of the session 1926-1927, do hereby reaffirm our unshaken faith and sincere devotion and true loyalty to her, and pledge our unqualified support to her future welfare." The pledge was signed by Vonceil Cox, Irene Griffin, Christine Ferguson, Fannie Foster, Florence Russ, Ruth McKay, Mamie Penn, Wei Lien Wu, Dorothy Middleton, Velma Thompson, Gladys Breland, Ida Mae Corley, Billie Griffin, Wincie Carruth, Juanita Fox. Whitworth has done in the past and is doing now work of the highest quality. Under the able administration of President Hawkins, there is an increasingly bright future for the "Greater Whitworth." The loyalty of its alumnae is one of its greatest assets.

JANUARY MEETING OF SUNFLOWER MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Sunflower Methodist Ministers' Association held its January meeting at Sunflower, Miss., Jan. 11, 1927, with Rev. W. L. Storment as host for the day. In the absence of Rev. W. W. Mitchell, the preacher for the day, who was detained on account of sickness, Rev. A. Y. Brown, of Minter City, brought a well prepared and well delivered message based on Isaiah, sixth chapter.

Followinig the sermon, those present discussed freely the subject: "Is the observance of all special days worth while? What is the best way to observe them, especially Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas?"

At the noon hour those in attendance were delegated out to several homes, where the good people of Sunflower served them bountiful dinners.

The Association reassembled at 1:30 p. m., and discussed freely the subject: "What should be the attitude of pastors towards specials? Are they of equal importance to the Conference collections?"

Our next place of meeting will be at Moorhead, with Rev. C. T. Floyd pastor-host. The program for the day will be:

1. A sermon by Rev. J. J. Brooks, followed by a critical discussion of same.
2. How best to promote church attendance?
3. The distinctive doctrines of Methodism.

Those present at the January meeting were: A. Y. Brown, of Minter City; C. T. Floyd and wife, of Moorhead; J. D. Wroten, of Indianola; J. J. Brooks, of Schlater; J. C. Wasson and E. E. McKeithen, of Drew; W. L. Storment, of Sunflower, and H. P. Lewis and wife, of Ruleville.

Members of the Association are planning the organization of a male quartet, to begin functioning at the next meeting.

IMPORTANT MEETING CALLED BY BISHOP CANDLER—LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I am authorized by Bishop Candler to call a meeting for him of the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions, Conference Missionary Secretary, Conference Lay Leader, Conference Educational Secretary, Conference Sunday School Secretary, and Presiding Elders of the Conference.

In looking over the minutes of the Conference I am persuaded that it will be very important to have the members of the Commission on Conference Benevolences present at this meeting, since this is one of the important questions that is to be discussed at this particular meeting. I am not chairman of that Commission, but I think it would be well if they could be present, for the idea of this meeting is to prevent the overlapping of plans in the Conference and give special emphasis to the important causes early in the year.

The meeting will be held Monday, Jan. 24, at the First Methodist Church in Shreveport, beginning at 9:30 a. m.

J. G. SNELLING,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

STRONG CHAPTER OF THE WESLEY BROTHERHOOD ORGANIZED AT IUKA, MISS.

The Wesley Brotherhood has been organized in the Methodist church at Iuka, Miss., with thirty members, which makes this the largest organization of this character in the North Mississippi Conference.

The following officers have been elected: R. A. McRee, president; E. R. Harvey, vice president; S. H. Allen, secretary; W. O. Jackson, Sr., treasurer.

This organization was brought about by our pastor, Rev. Grover C. Schwartz, who has worked night and day to bring this about.

We will hold our first public meeting on Friday, Feb. 11, and strong speakers have been invited from Corinth to address the meeting.

We appeal for assistance, as to speakers and programs, to all of the lay leaders and laymen in both Mississippi Conferences, and hope that we may have the privilege of hearing many of our brethren at Iuka later in the year.

All who are able to address us and assist us inspirationally are urged to communicate at once with the undersigned.

R. A. McREE, President.

ALL GOOD WISHES FOR THE NEW YEAR TO ALL THE BRETHREN.

My Dear Brother Pastors: I am writing this note to you through the courtesy of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. To those willing for me to help them do the work of our Lord in their charges, brethren, I do like to be with you and do the work for our Lord and church in your community. If you have any foreign people in your city, like Syrians or any others, I should like for you to let me know and I will come and help you. As you know, my work is generally with all kinds and classes of people. Our Lord calls me to do this work. After you finish reading this note, pray over it and call on me, and the Lord our God will help us to do the work.

The Lord helped me in his work, and last year he gave me a great many souls. I am now making my calendar for 1927. If you want me, call on me and I will give you a date. A great many have spoken to me about evangelistic meetings for this year. I am ready for your call.

Pray for me and my work, and I will pray for you and your work. Let us pray that the Lord may give a great revival this year to our church and people, and let us love one another and do God's work faithfully. I do like to work.

May the blessing of the Lord our God be upon all of you.

Your brother in Christ,

CHARLES ASSAF,
428 Lynch Street, Jackson, Miss.,
Your Home Missionary.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: When you arrange for your revival campaign, remember I am at your command. If you can use me, I would be glad to correspond with you in regard to dates. The good Lord has wonderfully blessed my labors in the past in revival work, and I feel sure he can still use me in this work.

If you desire my service, address me at Pelahatchie, Miss.

Yours in love for the cause of Christ,

J. H. FOREMAN.

On Nov. 25, 1926, MRS. RANSOM HAMER went away from us. She had been a long time member of the Methodist church. She had been faithful and loyal, and, until declining health overcame her, she was an active worker for her church and Lord. Surviving her are the husband, two daughters, Misses Arte and Dollie; three brothers, Frank, Cell, and John R. Allen. She was interred at Salem cemetery, with services conducted by Rev. Carroll Varner and the writer.

H. N. McKIBBEN, P. C.

On Nov. 12, 1926, MR. J. S. POWELL, of Stewart, Miss., was called to his reward. Brother Powell, rather late in life, joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was a man of high ideals, humane, standing for the right. He is greatly missed in his community. He has only a wife to survive him here, and some relatives in Texas, of whom we know little. The funeral services were held in the Methodist church of Stewart by the writer, on Saturday, Nov. 13, and he was interred in the Winona cemetery.

H. N. McKIBBEN, P. C.

BROTHER J. W. LOCK, a lifelong resident of Kilmichael and vicinity, died in a hospital in Birmingham, Ala., on Dec. 24, 1926. His body was brought back to Kilmichael on the 28th, and interred in the Kilmichael cemetery on the 29th, funeral services by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. W. Eidson, pastor of the Baptist church. Though age and ill health had overcome him ere the writer knew him, earlier in life he was active in the work of his church—his family have a history for loyalty to the Methodist church.

H. N. McKIBBEN, P. C.

MRS. DOLLIE SISTRUNK was born April 26, 1865, and died Jan. 1, 1927. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when a girl, and lived a consistent Christian life until death. She was married to John W. Sistrunk, Dec. 6, 1888, who preceded her to heaven seven years ago. Her life was fully consecrated to the Lord, and she will be greatly missed by the church and every one who knew her. She leaves eight children, two brothers, and two sisters, and a number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. The names of the children are: Sammie, Eddie, Rose, Oscar, Alma, Arthur, Juell, and Martin; the brothers are C. S. and W. P. More; the sisters are Mrs. L. S. McElroy and Mrs. W. J. Etheridge. She, like her Lord and Master, went about doing good.

Her pastor,

J. L. CADY.

The subject of this sketch, A. J. (Uncle Jack) WILSON, a native of Alabama, was born in Clark County, July 10, 1845. At his death he was 81 years, 5 months and 21 days old. In early life he came to Mississippi, and also during those years he was converted and united with the Southern Methodist Church, and was a faithful and loyal worker in his church as long as he was able to do service there, and was greatly grieved when age and failure in health barred his serving longer; for almost sixty years he was steward in the church, and for a great number of those years was superintendent of the Sunday school, and served with fidelity in those places. The most beautiful oral offering attested the making in friendship. All who knew him esteemed him, especially those with whom he wrought. He will be remembered by his comrades as a faithful soldier in the war between the States; he was a loyal citizen, true to family, to State, to church and friends. About the years of maturity he was married to Miss Mary Nations, and to this union were born five daughters and two sons; the sons preceded him to the long home, but the wife and five daughters survive; the daughters are: Mrs. W. J. Dorris, of Arizona; Mrs. Harry Laird, of Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. A. N. Boyd, of Indianola, Miss.; Mrs. Dr. Frezell, of Vaughn, Miss., and Miss Kate Wilson, of Greenwood, Miss. He was tremendously devoted to his family, and they to him. Many preachers with whom he wrought, as well as his many friends, will observe his going with the profoundest sorrow. He was called from this life Dec. 31, 1926, and was buried in the Kilmichael cemetery Jan. 1, 1927. Funeral services were held in the Kilmichael Methodist church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. W. Eidson, pastor of the Baptist church. After so beautiful a life of service, it may well be said of him, "He served his day and generation and fell on sleep."

His pastor,

H. N. McKIBBEN.

IN MEMORY OF FATHER AND HUSBAND.

WILLIAM H. HULSEY, born Aug. 23, 1866, passed away at his home near Aberdeen, Miss., on Nov. 30, 1926, leaving a wife and seven children to mourn their loss. He was a member of the Methodist church for forty years, living and serving his Master as best he could. He was taken ill early Wednesday morning, Nov. 24, and lived only a few days in his suffering. He realized that death was near, and requested that his children be called to him. They reached home just in time to be at his bedside when he passed away. We miss him in and around the home, for he was always kind and gentle to his wife and children; but still there's a Father greater and more comforting if we will only believe and trust in him.

Mrs. Malinda Hulsey, Mrs. Frank Pilgreen, Miss Mamie Hulsey, Mrs. Lela Mae Allen, Mr. B. S. Hulsey, Mr. W. B. Hulsey, Mr. I. E. Spencer, Mr. D. L. Spencer.

FROM THE ALGOMA CHARGE.

Just a word from the Algoma charge.

We are in the third year here at Algoma. Our people are loyal. We have a fine spirit of brotherly cooperation and helpfulness. This is true of the charge as a whole, but our good people of Algoma, Presbyterians, Baptists, and Methodists, have been especially good, giving us a real old-time pounding of canned fruits, groceries—yes! store-bought groceries—sacks of flour, coffee, sugar, rice, and five-dollar bills. My, such a lot of good things, even fresh meat, was given us. Doctor, it really made us preach better. God bless these good people, and help us to show how much we appreciate their good deeds, yes, their loving deeds!

We are certainly enjoying our work. Pray for us.

W. M. HESTER.

CAN ANYBODY BEAT LONG BEACH?

My Dear Brother Carley: Just an item of news from Long Beach station. The Missionary Special interest was presented to my congregation two weeks since. The apportionment to this church was $96. Yesterday I remitted to our treasurer a check for $100. Thus, you see, we not only "went over the top," but over the top of the top! I rather suspect this is the first church to so report.

Everything moves auspiciouly here. We were very graciously welcomed by these fine people, and the outlook for the year is encouraging.

Best wishes for you, both as editor of the Advocate and as my personal friend. May the Lord abundantly bless both you and your loved ones.

Your friend and brother,

W. GIBSON FORSYTH.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre At Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off—Adv.

WOMEN OF THE WORLD PRAY.

Do you believe in prayer? And if so, are you planning to observe the World Day of Prayer for Missions set for Friday, March 4, 1927? Cable messages from all over the world have brought urgent requests for united intercession to the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions and the Council of Women for Home Missions—the two organizations sending out this call. Here are a few:

"Pray that America's heart may be dominated by Christ's passion for justice, good will and equal opportunity for all races and nations."

"Pray for tragic Russia; needs intense, possibilities tremendous."

"China chooses her destiny; pray that she may choose Christ."

"Africa needs light and love; you can give them; pray."

"South America on the threshold of great awakening; Christian forces alarmingly inadequate; pray."

"Unprecedented evangelistic and educational opportunities throughout the Moslem world."

Women who shall unite their individual prayers with the prayers of women the world over will do well; auxiliaries that observe the call to intercession will do better, but missionary societies that pray with other societies of their own home town of whatever denomination will do best of all.

Send in your order for literature now, that you may pray intelligently.

The Call to Prayer includes a Cycle of Prayer for daily use, 2 1-4 cents each.

The Retreat, "Toward Power in Service." Intended primarily for leaders, but valuable for any group, 10 cents each.

The Program, "Pray Ye, Therefore." This includes "The Suggestions" on separate sheet, 2 cents each.

This material may be had by ordering from Literature Headquarters, Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn. Cash must accompany all orders.

INTERESTING PROGRAM AT GIBSON MEMORIAL.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of Gibson Memorial Methodist Church at Vicksburg, Miss., has just completed a successful year under the leadership of Mrs. M. S. King, the efficient president. There has been advancement along all lines, and much has been accomplished for the Master. That the members of the church might know what the auxiliary was doing, the following inspiring and interesting program was given on Sunday, Dec. 5, at the evening hour of worship at 7:30 o'clock.

After hymns, Scripture reading and prayer, the welcome was given by Dorothy Holt; talk, Mrs. M. S. King; recitation and song, Primaries; reading, Miss Ruth Peck; song, Miss Doris Elaine Bolware; the lives of four great Bible women: Ruth, Mrs. James Brent; Hannah, Mrs. J. V. Nelson; Esther, Mrs. Hardy Wilkinson; the one woman called Great, Mrs. W. C. Potts; solo, Miss Lemira McGee; "Our Missionary World at Home and Abroad," Mrs. Steve Hester; music and offering; candle lighting service, by the auxiliary; song, "Onward, Christian Soldiers;" benediction.

PLANS FOR NEW YEAR AT OLIVE BRANCH, MISS.

At the January meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, which met at the home of the chairman, plans were perfected for the year's work. With the following officers, Mmes. J. E. Birmingham, chairman; Fred Schwamm, corresponding and recording secretary; M. Clyde Kerr, treasurer, the society is on good footing for a splendid year's work.

The business meeting was held with nearly a 100 per cent attendance, which shows the interest and enthusiasm of the members. Some writer has said that enthusiasm is the greatest thing in the world. It beats money, power and influence. It tramples over opposition, spurns inaction, and, like an avalanche, it overwhelms and engulfs all obstacles. It means joy, pleasure, and satisfaction to the workers; it means life, real and virile; it means spontaneous bed-rock results—the vital thing that pays dividends.

The following committees were appointed: Program, Mrs. Philips and Mrs. W. O. Cochran; Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. Watt Birmingham, Mrs. D. D. Funderburk; Superintendent of Local Work, Mrs. Clyde Kerr; Social Service, Mmes. Woods, Boyle, Henry Winders, Will Sowell; Finance Committee for the first quarter, Mmes. Boyle, Bailey, Munn, Funderburk; Superintendent of Bible Study, Mrs. E. E. Eason, Sr.; Junior Work, Mrs. Boyle; Press Chairman, Mrs. W. W. Winders.

Reports on the last year's work show that eleven Mission Study books were used, more than $450 spent on local work, more than 200 points made on the standard and mission study, which is the best record that the Society has made. As we move on to another year's work, we realize that it is only through effort, labor, and grim energy and resolute courage that we move on to better things.

Press Chairman.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JAN. 23.

Subject: "Prayer in the Christian Life."

Lesson Text: Mark 1:35; 14:32-36; Matt. 6:9-13.

Golden Text: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." Matt. 7:7.

Teaching points:

1. Christ realized the need of prayer at all times and resorted to it even under unfavorable conditions.

2. Prayer is an invlauable privilege and duty, especially when we come to the difficult and dangerous experiences of life. Christ's example in Gethsemane is of untold value to the Christian.

3. The companionship of kindred souls is a great comfort and help in the hard places of life.

4. We should never make unconditional demands of God.

5. Every petition in the Lord's prayer is full of suggestions for our benefit. This prayer covers the entire field of our material and spiritual needs.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Miss Talbot, of the Training Section of Nashville, writes as follows: "You have 2,455 record cards in our files. Total credits for 1926, 1,424."

Rev.. H. M. Johnson, pastor at Haynesville, in a letter to the office says: "We are expecting you with us here at Haynesville next Sunday, both at the Sunday school session and at the 11 o'clock service. Come with plenty of suggestions for our workers. On Monday at noon we are to have luncheon at the church, followed by the quarterly conference, and we would be glad to have you with us and meet the workers from the country churches."

Mr. R. W. Cronin, Superintendent of Missions for the Lake Charles District, and Sunday school superintendent at Barham, says: "We are glad to report that the Barham Sunday school is moving along nicely. We closed last year's work out with a splendid showing. We observed the fourth Sunday as Missionary Day throughout the year with a program, and remitted promptly the proceeds from this program to Brother A. M. Mayo, Conference Treasurer. I would like so much to see our Lake Charles District 100 per cent for Fourth Sunday Missionary Day during 1927."

The writer visited the Shreveport District Monday, Jan. 10. We attended the Missionary and Sunday School Institutes at First Church during the day, and at night went to the Vivian charge with Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder. There is a splendid interest shown in this district in Sunday school evangelism and teacher training. The "set up" meeting in the interest of a Standard Training School at Vivian has been called for Feb. 13, at 2:30 in the afternoon.

I understand there will be a Preachers' Institute in the Minden District, at Winnfield, on Jan. 19 and 20. Dr. Goodrich, of First Church, Shreveport, will be one of the inspirational speakers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Last year we had eighty schools that observed Missionary Sunday, a few of them regularly and worthily. All the offering went to support our missions in Europe. This year thirty schools have been added to the list; we need one hundred additional; for we are supporting a worker in our own Conference and one in Europe from the offering taken on Missionary Day. Honestly, there is no good reason why every school in the Conference should not use the missionary program printed in the Sunday School Magazine. This program is the worship service, containing missionary material. If this program is carried out with care and prayer it will deepen the spiritual life of those who take part and will widen the vision of all who hear. Why are we so slow to understand and so indifferent about the whole matter when people all around us are perishing for a lack of knowledge? Awake, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.

It is said that only thirty-eight per cent of the people in our State are members of the church; ten per cent of this number are really interested in the kingdom; twenty-five per cent give money for the kingdom, and forty per cent attend the services of the church with some kind of regularity. If we have more than ten per cent of the church members who are willing to help establish the kingdom some one must bring them to their knees and must lead them to study and work at the business of winning souls to Christ. People do just about what they are taught to do; they never do any better than they are taught. The responsibility for winning the entire community to our Lord is upon the local church; but the local church has

PALE & PEAKED

Texas Lady Was Advised by Her Mother To Take Cardui, Which She Did With Good Results.

Hamilton, Texas.—Mrs. Gladys Poitevint, of this city, says: "At times I suffered awfully with pains across my back and through my sides. I would have to go to bed and stay two or three days at a time. It was very worrisome. I managed to keep going, but . . . did not enjoy myself at all.

"One day my mother remarked on how bad I looked. She said: 'You look so pale and peaked, why don't you take a bottle of Cardui?' She had taken it herself a number of times, and it had always improved her health, so she thought I had better try it.

"I got the Cardui and began taking it, and from the first dose or two I could see a change for the better. The first thing I noticed was that my appetite was improved. I began to be hungry and I enjoyed my meals. I slept better at night. My rest was so much quieter that I got the benefit from it. I kept on with the Cardui and took it for several months. The pains in my back and sides grew less until they finally quit bothering me."

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

been taught otherwise. Why do our leaders urge us to make a survey of our field of labor? It is to find out who are unsaved and others who are members of the church, but who are not interested in the work of making the entire community thoroughly Christian. After this information is gathered in the teachers are expected to go after them and bring them in, and keep going until the last one has been enlisted. This is not "child's play," but it is following Jesus, bearing his cross daily. The surest way to become immortalized is to lay hold upon God and the task of making one community on earth thoroughly Christian. Let us study how to make the church we serve evangelistic, missionary. Let us make the church a force to work with and not a field to work in. The man who undertakes this will accomplish more than the one who lets the church drift from bad to worse.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY NOTES.

(Received too late for last week's Advocate.—Editor.)

The Mississippi Conference report on Children's Week Observance showed thirty-two churches observing the week, with twenty-seven Parents' Meetings. Nineteen hundred adults were reported present at these meetings; and nineteen schools, reporting on parents attending Parents' Meeting, reported eight hundred and thirty-four. Various programs were given at these meetings—some gave original programs, some the devotional program supplied by the Sunday School Board, some the pageants, "The Voice of the Future," or "The Holiest Task." All reported interest and enthusiasm on the part of parents and teachers, and a greater realization of the responsibility of child training.

Nine hundred and twelve elementary homes were visited in this Conference during Children's Week in the interest of the religious education of our children, through the home and the Sunday school.

In addition to the interest and inspiration found in these meetings and visits to the homes by the teachers, many more tangible good things were done through the forward steps taken. Reports from a number of the schools show that already some of the things have been accomplished, and in others work is being done toward accomplishing them. Some of the outstanding Forward Steps taken in the Mississippi Conference during Children's Week were:

All officers and teachers taking at least one unit of the Standard Training course this year, and in future as nearly as possible to invite only those to teach who have finished the course in our Training Class; fifty per cent, or some other increase, in attendance of school; heat for basement and Elementary rooms; chairs and other equipment for Beginners, Primaries, and Juniors; beautifying building, painting, etc.; Daily Vacation Bible Schoool for the coming summer; organization or reorganization of the Cradle Roll department; more teachers, and a prepared substitute teacher for every class; remodeling, rearranging of Sunday school rooms, or the building of new rooms for Sunday school purposes; book case and twelve new books for workers' library; every family in church one hundred per cent Sunday school members; Cokesbury Training School, with every officer and teacher taking credit; bring school to hundred per cent "C" type; new pianos —this was the forward step for three schools, three of which have already bought them.

Twenty-five of these schools have sent in written reports to the Conference Sunday School Board. Of these, eight are from the Hattiesburg District, seven from the Jackson District, four from the Newton District, three from the Meridian District, two from the Seashore, and one from the Brookhaven. Seven other schools have reported the observance, but have not sent in written reports yet. If there are yet others who have not reported, they are urged to do so at once.

There follows a list of schools making written reports to the Conference Sunday School Board on Children's Week observance: Morton; Shubuta; Brookhaven; Bethel on the Mount Olive charge; Mount Olive; Union; Grace (Jackson); Fannin; Bay Springs; Forest; Main Street, Biloxi; Collins; Court Street, Broad Street (Hattiesburg); Richton; Edwards; Brandon; Central (Meridian); Eucutta; Purvis; Wiggins; Galloway Memorial, Capitol Street (Jackson); Learned; and Lauderdale.

Not all of these gave a full observance; some of them presented the program twice by request, and some gave much more elaborate programs than others. All report that the week was a blessing. Thirty-two observances is eight short of the goal set for our Conference, but with this many for this year and with new zeal and determination, we believe that we can reach our goal of fifty schools observing the Week next year.

MAGGIE MAY JONES,
Elementary Superintendent.

GOOD WORDS FROM PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On Nov. 15, 1926, Bishop Warren A. Candler decreed that I should return to Purvis, Miss., for another year. I came back with a glad and happy heart and found a glad and happy people to greet me. I am serving some of the best people on earth. You can't help but love them. I find myself falling in love with them more and more as the days come and go. They express their love and appreciation of their pastor and his wife not only by word of mouth, but in a substantial way as well. On Christmas Eve, Dec. 24, when the writer and his wife returned to the parsonage from visiting his flock, we found a large basket on the floor in front of the fireplace filled with everything good to eat, and socks, handkerchiefs, hose, dress goods, towels, soap and everything nice to wear and to use in the parsonage. And they have been bringing in good things ever since Christmas, pork and potatoes, butter and molasses, and pork sausage and cake. This preacher is having a good time in the midst of a good people.

My folks have just finished putting a fresh coat of paint on the parsonage, and it surely does look good. They have also put water in the kitchen. Think of it, running water in the kitchen, and Mrs. Wesley lets it run, too. You should have seen that woman the day it was put in, I thought she would make herself sick playing in it. It looks as if these folk are trying to do everything possible for our comfort and happiness, and we surely appreciate all that they have done. May the good Lord bless each and every one of them and make the year 1927 the happiest year of their lives.

On Monday night, Jan. 3, 1927, we had a very disastrous fire in Purvis. The Hand-Jourdan Mercantile Company store, and the Pylant Brothers store, both large brick buildings, the largest in town, burned. The loss was something over $100,000. They had some insurance, but not enough to cover the loss. This is going to hurt our town and surrounding country, for these stores supplied the farmers around Purvis for miles away. But these are heroic folk. They are going to rebuild, and we are expecting a great year in every way in Purvis this year.

You are giving us a good paper, and I am trying to put it in every Methodist home in my charge. I am going to come very near doing it, too. Come to see me this year some time if you can.

Fraternally yours,
C. W. WESLEY, Pastor.

Satisfying Results

Mrs. R. L. Mundy

Jackson, Miss. — "Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my father's family ever since I was a little girl and they have always given entire satisfaction. I can recommend the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' the 'Favorite Prescription' and the 'Pleasant Pellets.' They are the ones we used. My father always said the 'Golden Medical Discovery' could not be equaled as a blood enricher and to build up one's general health; my mother thought the 'Favorite Prescription' superior to any other tonic a woman could take; I found the 'Pleasant Pellets' a perfect remedy for constipation and biliousness."—Mrs. R. How She Gained 10 Pounds in 22 Days

Skinny Men Can Do the Same

That's going some—but skinny men, women and children just can't help putting on good, healthy flesh when they take McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

As chock full of vitamines as the nasty, fishy-tasting cod liver oil itself, but these sugar-coated tablets are as easy to take as candy, and won't upset the stomach.

One woman gained ten pounds in twenty-two days. 60 tablets, 60 cents. Ask any druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets and if you don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

Insist on McCoy's, the original and genuine.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

year, and hope all goes well with us this year. Our report is ready to be rendered at our annual missionary meeting. We have all funds in hand, and will be glad to get gold star pennants and anything else we are entitled to.

Lord, help us in this great work. Give us more faith, more zeal and love for thee!

We are much pleased that our pastor, Brother Murff, was returned to us; also that Brother and Sister Neblett are domiciled in Kosciusko. We hope to have her in our missionary meeting some time soon. She is an inspiration to any one.

May we all accomplish more and more each succeeding year.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS AT GUNNISON, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, of Gunnison, Miss., after a very interesting program, Jan. 6, 1927, installed the following officers, with Rev. M. E. Scott installing officer: Mrs. A. R. Blanchard, president; Mrs. Sara B. Martin, vice president; Mrs. M. E. Scott, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. W. Potts, recording secretary; Mrs. L. S. Blanchard, treasurer; Mrs. C. P. Smith, associate treasurer; Mrs. J. E. Walters, superintendent of junior work; Mrs. G. C. George, superintendent of social service; Mrs. G. F. Warfield, superintendent of local work; Mrs. Ezra Wilburn, associate local work; Mrs. W. T. Wilkinson, superintendent of supplies; Mrs. M. E. Scott, superintendent of mission and Bible study; Mrs. J. W. Potts, superintendent of publicity.

Papers read and discussed were: "Every Woman in the Missionary Society;" "Which Woman Are You?" and "The Parable of the Postage Stamp."

MRS. J. W. POTTS,
Superintendent of Publicity.

INSTALLATION AT WEBB, MISS.

At the January business meeting of the Webb Woman's Missionary Society, Rev. C. L. Rogers installed the following officers to conduct the affairs of the auxiliary for 1927:

President, Mrs. L. N. Townsend; vice president, Mrs. M. J. Houston; local vice president, Mrs. T. C. Bradford; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. J. Stephens; recording secretary, Mrs. W. L. Show; treasuer, Mrs. D. R. Crow; local treasurer, Mrs. S. R. Bradford; agent for Voice, Mrs. K. D. Henry; superintendent of Missions and Bible study, Mrs. J. B. Hardy; superintendent of social service, Mrs. E. V. Catoe; superintendent of supplies, Mrs. B. L. Neals; superintendent of publicity, Mrs. M. H. Stephens.

MRS. W. J. STEPHENS,
Corresponding Secretary.

GOOD REPORT FROM OKOLONA, MISS.

Good, better, best, represents a three years' record of the Woman's Missionary Society which convened Jan. 3, 1927, Okolona, Miss., at the Methodist church. Of the work of 1926 we especially speak. The meeting was opened with a song, Scripture reading by Mrs. R. E. Buchanan, and prayer by Mrs. Dotley, Sr.

Mrs. Buchanan, in a measure, deviated from the usual custom of taking her comments from the Missionary Voice, but read some very touching little articles, "I Wonder What the Future Holds for Me?" "What the New Year Brings," which were very appropriate.

Mrs. Buchanan expressed her appreciation of the hearty co-operation of each member, without which the phonetic of each year would have "spelled" failure. We in turn felt the assurance of God's presence with us and the efficiency of her good leadership. With sincere remarks our beloved president of 1926 withdrew and invited Mrs. Carter Davis to come forward and take the presidency for 1927, to which she had been elected; Mrs. Davis came forward, only to resign, inasmuch as some other obligations were such that she could not serve in this capacity. In consequence, Mrs. A. S. Miller was elected to that office by a good majority. Mrs. Miller was put on the list of officers who had previously been nominated and accepted.

At the suggestion of Mrs. Davis, leaders were asked to volunteer. Of these, Mrs. Harry McEvilly volunteered for Circle 1, and Mrs. L. C. West for Circle 2. It remains for Circle 3 to select its leader. Circle 4 retains its efficient leader, Mrs. Joe Herndon.

Other items of interest are of last year: Collections and expenditures, "all told," were $1,012.41; increase over last year, about $250; seventy good working members.

"This is a truth the angels use
High on their starry promontory,
Whenever you fail, yourself accuse,
Whenever you win, give God the glory."

shall be our slogan for 1927.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NOTES.

Epworth League Organization at Cedar Lake.

Seashore is rejoicing over the organization at Cedar Lake, in the Coalville charge, of a new Epworth League. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Murray, reported in last week's Advocate that this organization was perfected before he took charge, but we prophesy that it will thrive under his excellent leadership. We want to know more about this League.

Tylertown League Contributes to Back Bay Nursery.

In a letter from Rev. H. L. Daniels to the Christian Advocate we note that the Tylertown Epworth League gave $6 to this worthy cause. We commend the splendid spirit of this League.

"As Much for Others as for Ourselves."

The title of this paragraph is the motto of the 50-50 Club. Since the Epworth League has assumed the responsibility for several missionary specials, it has become necessary for each League to increase its missionary contribution. For quite a while Mr. Mumpower has been agitating a Fifty-Fifty Club, in which the members pledge themselves to duplicate every dollar spent in local work, for mission specials. This seems a very worthy cause, and we see no reason why more Leagues have not joined this club.We note that a number of Leagues in our Conference have joined, one of which is Poplar Street League, in Meridian. We know there are others, but right at this time cannot recall. Each League which has joined this club should let us know, and we will announce it through this column.

Intermediate League of the Crawford Street, Church, Vicksburg.

Miss Chesley Hogan is the superintendent of a splendid Intermediate League at Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg. This League has twenty-five members, with a regular attendance during the winter months of fifteen. Ernest Turcotte is president, and Eustace Hardin is secretary of this League. They have their Council meetings regularly. At Christmas time this splendid band gave a post card shower, and the recipient of this good deed was our own Louise Preston. Wasn't this splendid?

IN DAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS

Women Prepared Their Own Medicines

The wise pioneer women learned to gather, in woods and fields, the remedies the Indians used. From the rafters of colonial houses, hung great bunches of dried roots and herbs. From these, in times of sickness, the busy mother brewed simple and powerful remedies.

From roots and herbs, Lydia E. Pinkham, a descendant of these sturdy pioneers, made her Vegetable Compound. The beneficial effects of this dependable medicine are vouched for by hundreds of women.

Mrs. Wm. Kraft of 2838 Vinewood Ave., Detroit, Mich., saw a Pinkham advertisement in the "News" one day and made up her mind that she would give the Compound a trial. At that time she was very weak. "After the first bottle," she writes, "I began to feel better and like a new woman after taking six bottles. I recommend it to others and always keep a bottle in the house."

Mrs. Gust Green of 401 Lincoln Park Boulevard, Rockford, Illinois, found herself in a condition similar to that of Mrs. Kraft. "I was weak and rundown," she writes, "but the Vegetable Compound has helped me and I feel better now. I recommend it to all women who need more strength."

MRS. CLARA BELLE WAILES DRAKE.

Following a long life of Christian love and service, death came to Mrs. Clara Belle Wailes Drake yesterday morning as a quiet, peaceful sleep. The end came following an illness of several days.

Mrs. Drake was born in Woodville, Miss., Feb. 5, 1850. She was the daughter of the late Edmund H. Wailes and Mrs. Jane Newell Wailes. Her husband, the late Rev. James P. Drake, passed into eternal rest a number of years ago. He was a devout Christian gentleman, a beloved minister of the Methodist church.

Mrs. Drake is survived by the following children: W. M. Drake, of New York City; Mrs. I. W. Cooper, E. S. Drake, J. P. Drake, and Mrs. Clara Belle Drake.

The funeral services were held at the family home, Mount Ararat, in Jefferson County, this afternoon at 2 o'clock, and the interment was made in the family cemetery.

Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church; Rev. L. P. Anders, pastor of the Washington Methodist Church, and Rev. C. C. Evans, pastor of the Central Methodist Church at McComb, officiated.

Many friends deeply sympathize with the loved ones in their sorrow, for Mrs. Drake numbered her friends by the legion, and her passing has saddened many hearts. — Natchez Democrat.

SERMON SERIES BEGINNING SUNDAY AT FIRST METHODIST.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor of the First Methodist Church, announces that on next Sunday, Jan. 16, he will begin a special series of sermons both at the morning and evening hour.

At the morning hour the initial sermon of the series will be under the title of "The Church—Its Value to the Individual, Social and Economic Life of the Community."

At the evening hour the subject will be "The Marks of a Christian."

Various phases of these subjects will be discussed by the pastor during the next few Sundays, and he is anxious for all members of the congregation, and all others who will, to attend.

At the morning hour he will endeavor to show to his hearers the many ways in which the church, its organization and its multifarious departmental workings are of material as well as social and spiritual benefit to the community; while at the evening hour his efforts will be turned in a large measure toward assisting the individual to place an estimate upon himself and know how to answer the question, "Am I a Christian."

The presence of the members and the interest in these discussions will mean much for the work for the coming year. There will be special music at each of these services.—The Daily Corinthian, Corinth, Miss.

REVIVAL AT GILBERT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We are now in the midst of a great revival in Gilbert, La. Miss Daisy Davies, from Atlanta, Ga., is the evangelist, and to say that we are delighted with her great service is only a very mild way to express it. We knew she was great before she came to us, but she even goes far beyond our expectations.

Brother A. M. Hutton, from Van Buren, Ark., is doing the singing, and to say it is well done would not be giving him justice, for he not only knows how, but he puts the Spirit in his songs which gives them power over lives.

We are just at the close of the first week, and our town has already been stirred up; men and women have prayed in public who never tried to pray in public before. I will give the results at the close of the meeting, which will close on the 23rd of January.

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"A DIVISION OF LABOR."

In our opinion, the next great development in the work of the church will take place in the field of lay activities. The laymen are abundantly able, both in business ability and financial resources, to take over and manage efficiently the material interests of the church in a way they have not hitherto done. The time seems ripe for them to assume their share of the work of the church. Added to their business ability and financial strength, they have a growing sense of responsibility. We believe their consecration is equal to their opportunities.

The laymen themselves are thinking vigorously along the line suggested above, as is shown by the leading editorial in a recent number of The Methodist Layman, the official organ of the Board of Lay Activities, which we take the liberty of quoting herewith in full. We believe it points the way to an unprecedented era of prosperity, both spiritual and material, in the work of the church. The editorial is as follows:

"And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.

"Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

"Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

"But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the Word.

"And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch:

"Whom they set before the apostles; and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.

"And the Word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith." (Acts 6:1-7.)

In this brief account we have the history of the organization of the first Board of Lay Activities.

This organization grew out of the necessity for a division of labor. At that particular period, just as in other periods, those who had been peculiarly chosen as ministers of the Word were attempting to administer everything in connection with the church and naturally there developed a sharp criticism of the administration.

The apostles were wise men in their generation. They called the congregation together and made a clear statement of the situation and laid down a principle which is incomparable in its clear insight into the situation presented and one that is applicable to any similar situation, past, present, or future, in the history of the Christian church.

These apostles said: "It is not reason that we should leave the Word of God and serve tables. We will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word."

This plan was pleasing to the congregation and certain men full of wisdom, faith, and the Holy Ghost were chosen to minister to the people.

Then note this significant statement: "The Word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith."

The narrative goes on to call attention also to the marvelous evangelistic work done by two members of this lay group—namely, Stephen and Philip.

There is another statement contained in the eighth chapter of Acts to the effect that following the persecution instigated by Saul, "they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judaea and Samaria, except the apostles; therefore, they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the Word."

This statement indicates clearly that while there was a distinction of function as between the apostles and the laity, it was clearly the practice of each individual Christian to be a witness for Jesus Christ.

Indeed we may conclude from the narrative that one reason for the rapid spread of Christianity at that period lay in the fact that the lay members of the church as well as the apostles were exceedingly active in testifying for Jesus Christ.

But we come back to the statement quoted above in which the apostles said that it was not reason for them to leave the Word of God and serve tables, but that they would give themselves to prayer and the ministry of the Word.

It was absolutely necessary that they make this decision.

The world at every period of its history has needed its prophets. It was so in the day of the Prophets. It was so before the coming of Christ. It was so following his ascension. Likewise at every other period in the history of the Christian church, and particularly so at this time.

The thing which we wish to emphasize, however, above everything else is the fact that a man can scarcely be a real minister of the Word, or a prophet, and at the same time give a great deal of attention to details of administration, or "serve tables."

The apostles wisely called for a division of labor, reserving their strength of mind and soul for prayer, communion with God, and preaching of the Word, while certain laymen, who by their gifts were peculiarly qualified for the labor of administration, were selected for the other task that was consuming their time and strength.

Any one who will take the trouble to read all through the Acts of the Apostles will note how the church grew and many thousands of souls were saved as the apostles and people alike went forward to proclaim the truth, each one serving in his own particular sphere.

Surely we have come upon a day when there is need of prophets as never before, men who know the truth by virtue of prayer or communion with God, by reason of study, out of their own experiences as they have come into contact with mankind in their spiritual ministry to the sick and to the poor, the downcast, and in their efforts to rescue those in sin from the death into which they have sunk; men who out of this sort of experience can come into our pulpits with a burning message that will find its way to the hearts of its hearers, who will proclaim fearlessly the whole Word of God; the truth as to all our relationships—personal, social, economic, racial, or international; men who in the spirit of love will tell the whole truth and spare not.

Then, on the other hand, how do we need today in our congregations more men like Stephen and Philip, full of wisdom, faith, power, and the Holy Ghost, who will realize their powers of mind and soul and consecrate their time and wealth to the work of the church!

There should be in every church a group of laymen, spiritually minded, who will lift from the shoulders of the pastor any undue burden of detail work that may relate to finances or ordinary administration of church affairs; laymen who will not only attend to the so-called temporal matters of the church, but who will go forth as flaming witnesses for Christ, testifying of his power to save, and going out into the highways and byways and persuading men everywhere to seek the Christ who alone can redeem mankind from sin and save the nations of the world.

Do we ever pause to consider the fact that without the proper division of labor we are not likely to have many prophets on the one hand or many Stephens and Philips on the other?

Let us review for instance some of the things that we expect of our preachers to-day.

We expect them to visit the sick, comfort the broken-hearted, minister to the down-and-outs, marry the youth, bury the dead; win those in sin from darkness to light; be the inspiration and directing force for the different organizations in the church—Sunday school, Woman's Missionary Society, Epworth League, Lay Activities, etc.—settle differences between quarrelsome members, nurse "sore toes," mollify recalcitrant members, take care of choir difficulties, provide for the circulation of the various periodicals of the church; administer the holy sacrament; speak at the Rotary Club, and various other clubs; give some of their time to prepare an infinite number of reports to this board and that board, this organization and that organization; fill out a large number of questionnaires that are presented by groups on every hand; give some of their time to the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., the W. C. T. U., the Anti-Saloon League, the Near East Relief, the Far East Relief, the Lord's Day Alliance; respond to the various calls to preach on every subject from "Justification by Faith," to the "Value of Life Insurance;" relate themselves actively to various organizations for uplift and moral reform, pseudo-political objectives, and other things too numerous to mention, and—we expect them to be interesting and entertaining when they come into the pulpit, and be jolly good fellows, well-met on the street, good mixers in other words, and we want them to visit us in our homes, and, occasionally, we find individuals or congregations who expect the preacher in addition to all of this to preach like Paul.

This is not to say, or even imply, that our preachers should not be related to all of these interests as leader and in the spirit of helpfulness, but simply to assert that he cannot "serve tables" and be the spiritual leader and prophet that we believe God has called him to be.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE FALL MEETING OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

By Bishop Collins Denny, Secretary.

After spending nearly two days in the sessions of the Missionary Council in Louisville, Ky., the College of Bishops held its meeting on the afternoon of Dec. 16, and continued till dark on the following day.

Bishops Present.

All the active bishops were present, except Bishop Ainsworth, who has not returned from Asia, and Bishop Dobbs, who because of a heavy cold was called away during the meeting of the Council.

Reports from the Field.

As is customary, each bishop reported his work since the adjournment of the General Conference last May. These reports showed that the condition of the church grows more encouraging in many parts of our church.

Federal Council of the Churches of Christ.

The following resolution was adopted: "In view of the fact that the General Conference appoints a member of our church to the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and makes an assessment on our church for the work of said Council, and in view of the further fact that our denomination actively engages in the general and local work of the Council, we believe that it is in accord with the spirit of the Discipline for the bishops of our church to make appointments of traveling preachers to official positions in the Federal Council and its auxiliary organizations."

Communications.

A number of communications were received from different organizations and persons, all of which were referred to a special committee of three to consider and report to the full meeting.

Interpretation of Law by the Committee of Appeals.

Some difference of opinion having occurred in the Committee of Appeals touching decisions by that committee on points of law, after discussion the following resolution was adopted confirming action taken on the same point years ago: "The College of Bishops agrees that any interpretation of law by the Committee of Appeals has the force of law only in respect to the case then under consideration."

Careful attention and much time was given to the courses of study. Finally the following courses were approved for the English-speaking Conferences:

SOME PRACTICAL EXHORTATIONS.

By Rev. Guy Dean Burt.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am pleased to see that you are encouraging our preachers to report about their work through the Advocate. The strong man, if he is a Christian, helps the weak man. The Advocate is a good medium through which to help some of us. I appreciate it. Thank you.

I think now is an opportune time for me to say something about the kind of person I admire most, think is the most useful, and find the easiest to love. You know we must love everybody, even our enemies, if we do as Jesus Christ did. And I had rather be like my Lord than be president of our great nation. It is the easiest thing in this world for me to love Jesus, because he has such a big heart.

God in the person of his Son still goes before us. What is Heaven? To be like Jesus. What is Heaven? To be with Jesus. Every man has Heaven here and now in proportion as he is like and with Jesus.

I was impressed with what you said in the Advocate about taking an inventory of our spiritual lives. It reminded me of what Jesus said, "Take heed unto thyself." We all need to watch ourselves. It is so easy to criticize others and at the same time be unmindful of our own faults. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Gal. 6:1.

Just think how often we are thoughtless. Because we have had a certain attitude or done a certain way for so long, we have come to regard it as proper.

Are we ever unkind? Do we show a disposition to be uncharitable? Let us see to it that we do not disregard the rights of others in seeking to attain our own selfish ends.

The Master's message is to "Take heed"—take an inventory of ourselves. What is our attitude toward others? Jesus would have us put ourselves into the position of others. In many quarters consideration is a lost virtue.

The teacher forgets the pupil and the pupil the teacher. The parent disregards the child and the child the parent. The employer misunderstands the employee and the employee the employer. And all because they are inconsiderate. What would happen if we placed ourselves where the other fellow is? Preacher, place yourself in the pew; you who sit on the seats and criticize, place yourselves in the pulpit.

Would not the light shine from a different angle? And I am certain that the light would portray elements and conditions which had not been realized before. The value of appreciating the circumstances of others can be seen in the following words of St. Paul's Philippian letter: "Doing nothing through faction or through vainglory, but in lowliness of mind, each counting other better than himself; not looking each of you to his own things, but each of you also to the things of others."

Observe the attitude of the Master. He suffered with them as well as for them. Lazarus died and the sisters came weeping. The burden of their hearts was his also. And throughout his ministry his great loving heart went out in sympathy to others as he realized their problems and difficulties in life. What a blessing is sympathy! How attractive is the magnanimous heart of love!

I pray to be delivered from the intellectual snobs who sharpen the intellect and cut out the heart—that type of person with whom the analytical spirit has become a frenzy, and the love of dissection a morbid passion.

Love, joy, peace, gentleness, goodness and kindness and such spiritual gifts cannot be analyzed. The scientific attitude of mind is inclined to look askance at these things because you can't weigh them and measure them.

The big heart can live above all the petty spites of life, and maintain his life for months under most trying circumstances. Do you think it would hurt you if people dragged you through the streets and spit in your face and threw an old dirty, red robe on your shoulders and planted a crown on year head and mocked you? Do you think it would hurt your feelings? Would you want to get even with them? Would you not want to punish such despicable men with every tortue you could devise?

If such treatment hurts you, remember it hurt Jesus. It hurt him even more than it could hurt you, for purity of life and motive had been absolute.

The big heart has another supreme task, and that is to forget self in the midst of the most intense suffering; to think of others while your own heart is writhing in agony; to help lift the burdens of others while your own heart is about overborne with your own.

Jesus has power over the hearts of people. He give us something to live on, power to forget yourself and your troubles, power to forgive and to conquer yourself and grow into a bigger, kinder, broader, lovelier self.

It is not what petty luxury we give up or what amusements we miss. But it may mean the giving up of these petty luxuries and very much amusement to have time to discover the ecstasy of living with the big heart in you.

The secret of Jesus' all conquering spiritual achievements was his big heart of love; and by the same token it can be ours.

DEATH OF REV. JOHN H. SCRUGGS.

My Dear Brother Carley: We laid to rest today the body of Rev. John Hartwell Scruggs beside the grave of his wife, Ludie Paine Scruggs, who was a daughter of Bishop Paine. Brother Scruggs died at his home in Corinth, where funeral services were conducted, prior to sending the body to Aberdeen for interment, by the following ministers: Revs. A. T. McIlwain, J. W. Raper, D. W. Babb, B. P. Fullilove, G. C. Schwartz. Brother Scruggs, who was at one time pastor of our church at Aberdeen and greatly beloved by his people, was an honored superannuate member of the South Georgia Conference, the Vineville church, Macon, Valdosta, and Quitman having been among the last churches which he served prior to his taking the superannuate relation.

R. G. MOORE, Pastor.

Aberdeen, Miss., Jan. 17.

If you do not know how much to give to the church, let God have an interview with your conscience.—Exchange.

MRS. CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

By Rev. E. K. Means, D.D.

Over half a century ago two young people hardly more than children united their hearts and hands and chose one path in life together.

From that hour that young man climbed steadily upward amid all the besetments of poverty in a war-stricken State until he became the idol of Mississippi, a bishop of the Methodist Church, a constructive statesman in the mission fields on the far-off frontiers of the advancing Kingdom of God, the greatest orator of the nation, the counsellor of Presidents, the admiration and sensation of the evangelical churches of England —a man who stood before kings, a plumed knight leading a host of people into the promised land of happiness and peace.

When he died a nation mourned and little children cried in the streets.

Fifteen years after his death, the manager of the cemetery where his sacred dust awaits the resurrection morn told me that never a day passed that somebody did not go and stand with bared and reverent head beside the grave of Charles Betts Galloway.

There walked beside this great man through the years of his pilgrimage a gentle, modest, refined, cultured woman, and while he became a leader of the people, she became, in a peculiar sense, a mother, whose wonderful influence gave birth to all the fine impulses of character and life to many young men whom she chose for her own. Fortunate, indeed, those young men to whom she opened the golden circle of her friendship and love and called them, "my boys!"

Thank God, they are her boys still!

The ancients knew when the goddess had visited Thebes from the tracks which she left behind her. Walking through the forest, she gazed upon the dead tree, ghastly with its leafless limbs, and lo, the clinging ivy sprang up to cover it. Sitting down to rest upon a fallen and decayed log, the moss sprang up to cushion and beautify it. Walking upon the shore of the lake, the tracks she made were not downward in the mud, but upward in the fragrant and blooming violet. Not otherwise walked this little mother among her boys, and when they suffered she comforted them, and when they were discouraged she cheered them, and those who went out from her presence bore with them the fragrance of her spirit, as garments carry sweet odors when men have walked among the flowers. Her fingers wove white cords in the apparel of her boys, her sons were clothed upon with her friendship and her affection, and to-day, "her children"—everywhere—"rise up and call her blessed."

The years were many for her, and old age brought its special privileges. She stood upon an eminence and her past life spread out before her like a map. The events of the past took unity into themselves and she saw that all things had worked together for good. God had sandalled her feet and smoothed her path and up by frowning mountain crag and down by lonely grave, she heard the voice of victory and good cheer. All her years had marched upward because God had made them march, and she had marched with them until she stood upon the spiritual heights and breathed the air of joy and peace. The next step upward was through the gate of that city whose builder and maker is God. Being a Methodist preacher's wife, she had many homes on the earth; and now she has one more—and the last—she has crossed the threshold of her Father's house and is at home with the Lord.

NEWTON DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The District Missionary Institute of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held with the Lake church. The presiding elder, Rev. L. E. Alford, presided over the meeting. Practically every charge in the Newton District was represented by pastor and laymen, and a most interesting and instructive program was carried out.

The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. by Rev. L. E. Alford, who, after conducting devotional exercises, stated the purpose of the meeting and outlined in detail the missionary program which was provided for at the last sitting of the General Conference, which met in Memphis last May. He is familiar with the details as worked out at a recent meeting of the Board of Missions which met in Louisville, Ky., having attended that meeting in person. P. L. Blackwell was elected secretary.

Next, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, and Conference Lay Leader, was called, and he spoke to the point of the laymen's duty in the carrying out of the program of the church. He believes that the laymen will co-operate in any great cause, and appealed to them to do their duty. The inspirational address of the day was delivered at the 11 o'clock hour by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Yazoo City.

His address was a timely one, and when he speaks on the subject of missions, he speaks authoritatively, having spent four years in Europe as a missionary himself. He pleads that now is no time for the Christian church to retrench in its missionary activities. The Mission Board is short of funds because the church has fallen off in its payments to missions. Mr. Neill brought out very forcibly the thought and fact that the missionary program of the Christian church in America must needs be a changing one. Time was when prayers were offered that the doors of the heathen might be opened to missionaries, but to-day the doors are swung wide on their hinges, and the great task is to enthrone Jesus Christ in the hearts of the peoples of the earth. The touch of our western civilization is beginning to dethrone pagan religions in all nations, but the trouble abroad (and to some extent in America) is atheism; it is better that men worship as the pagan than to have no religion at all and become atheists. He says there are many who are saying, "There is no God," which will ultimately mean the downfall of any nation, it matters not how civilized or learned its citizens may become.

After a short talk from Rev. B. L. Sutherland, of Laurel, the noon hour was announced by Rev. M. L. White, the pastor-host, who invited all visitors into the adjoining Sunday school annex, where the ladies of Lake had prepared a most sumptuous luncheon, carrying out the Christmas decorations.. One hour was spent joyously in banquet style while all partook of the appetizing viands.

The main purpose of the meeting, as stated by the presiding elder in the forenoon, was to formulate plans for a cultivation and education period through the months of January and February relative to immediate needs in the mission fields. This part of the program was presided over by W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian, Missionary Secretary, who explained in detail the distribution of the necessary literature and how to conduct this cultivation and education period in order that every member may learn all about the great program and act simultaneously with all Southern Methodism in this great undertaking. Every member of the denomination should count it a privilege to have a part in it in proportion to his ability.

After some discussions by preachers and laymen, the meeting adjourned with every one in attendance feeling that it was profitable to have been there and to have the privilege of receiving the information and inspiration of the occasion.

THOUSAND PLATE LUNCHEON FOR WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

Plans are being perfected for entertaining a thousand women at a luncheon at the Washington Hotel, in Shreveport, on the opening day of the Woman's Missionary Council, Wednesday, March 9. This gathering will give the Methodist women of Louisiana and visitors from other States an opportunity to meet the Council officers, missionaries and deaconesses, and to enjoy a splendid program, including a brief inspirational address by some speaker selected by the Council. Plates will be one dollar each. Mrs. George S. Sexton, 3004 Centenary Boulevard, Shreveport, La., is chairman of arrangements for this luncheon, and asks that reservations be sent in immediately, a dollar accompanying each name. Tickets will be mailed to those making reservations as long as the thousand last. Members of the Council, missionaries, deaconesses, and one accredited delegate from each Louisiana auxiliary will be entertained without charge by the Shreveport Societies.

Plan now to attend the Council in Shreveport March 9 to 16, and write ahead to Mrs. Sexton for a luncheon ticket so that you won't be turned away for lack of room. Tickets may be transferred.

REPORT OF MISSIONARY INSTITUTES IN MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, FROM JAN. 4 TO JAN. 14, INCLUSIVE.

There was held in each presiding elder's district a Missionary Institute, all of which were well attended, and the interest was intense. Every one heartily entered into the plans to be used following the institutes. The presiding elders, in their addresses and direction of the institutes, were at their best. We had as the inspirational speaker for all the institutes Rev. J. L. Neill, whose address was both inspiring and uplifting. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader, represented the laymen and their interest in the January-February campaign. Rev. W. N. Ware, missionary in Africa, was present at three of the institutes.

The interest on the part of the pastors and laymen was all that could be expected; there was neither a discordant nor a despondent note sounded, but every one seemed determined that the plans should be carried out, and the results would be up to or more than the allotment for their charge. Of the one hundred and sixty-two pastors in the Conference, one hundred and forty-seven attended the institutes. There were fifteen absent, nearly all of whom were absent on account of illness. There were sold, "Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions," two hundred and seventy. Number of books ordered at institutes, five thousand, three hundred and five. The total attendance of pastors and representatives was one thousand, three hundred and sixteen. As far as we were able to discern, it looks as though the Mississippi Conference will easily reach her goal.

HOW I BECAME A CHAPLAIN IN THE ARMY.

By Chaplain John A. Randolph.

(We are this week presenting the first of a series of articles being prepared by Chaplain John A. Randolph, giving the high points in his experience of twenty-four years with the army. These will cover his services in the Philippines, Mexico, France and in the home land. We are sure the series will be read with great interest by Colonel Randolph's friends in Mississippi and throughout the church. Colonel Randolph is a member of the North Mississippi Conference.—Editor.)

A little thing often plays an important part in our lives. In 1898, when the United States and Spain went to war and a call was made for troops, the members of the militia organization at Macon, Miss., where I was stationed, for reasons they deemed sufficient, did not respond to the call to the colors. On Decoration Day, I was asked to speak, and took advantage of the occasion to twit the boys for their seeming lack of patriotism. They naturally came back by asking whether I had offered my services. I did that night.

I wrote Governor McLaurin the nicest letter I could, telling him that my great-grandfather,

Joseph Randoph, had served in the war of the Revolution; my grandfather, Peyton Skipwith Randolph, had served in the war of 1812, and my father was a soldier in Company "C," Twenty-sixth Regiment, C. S. A., and volunteered my services to go as a chaplain of one of the regiments being organized in the State.

Govenor McLaurin replied by saying chaplains had been selected for two regiments then in process of organization, but should another call be made for troops, he would give my application due consideration.

A second call was made soon after, but Mississippi's quota was only six companies and no chaplain was authorized for the organization.

Matters rested. In August I took my vacation, not expecting anything to come of my application. I returned to Macon about Sept. 1, and a day or two later as I passed the telegraph office, the operator called to me saying, "I had a telegram for you while you were away, but did not know where to send it." He showed me his copy, and it was a wire from Governor McLaurin saying a chaplain had been authorized for the new regiment and I could have the place if I wanted it.

A Presbyterian lawyer, J. R. Dinsmore, a member of the Legislature and friend and supporter of Governor McLaurin, had taken quite an interest in my application, so I took this telgram to him. The telegram was then two weeks old, so Dinsmore wired the Governor asking whether the place was still open. The answer came saying it was, and I could have it if I reported at once.

I consulted my family and three friends—my presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Burroughs, Brother N. G. Augustus, who happened to be in Macon at the time, and Captain W. H. Scales, an ex-Confederate officer and one of my stewards. They all approved, probably believing travel would be good for me, and it was thought this organization would be sent to do garrison duty in Cuba. I went to Jackson the next day and consulted Bishop Galloway. He also approved and authorized me to wire that fact to Bishop Key, who had charge of our Conference.

I then reported to the Governor, who issued my commission; Bishop Key appointed me the next day, and a few days later I was mustered into service by Major Herbert J. Slocum, of General Sanger's staff, as chaplain Third Mississippi Volunteer Infantry.

A NEW YEAR MESSAGE.

By Rev. W. B. Hollingsworth.

"This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee." Joshua 3:7.

To my brethren in Christ Jesus, greetings: For the last several days I have been moved to put upon paper and upon your hearts the attitude of mind which I possess.

It would seem indeed that God has moved me to do this thing, and to the end that I may help some brother soldier in the great army of Jesus Christ, to get a new grip, a new mind and a new heart, I lend myself to this labor of love, being ever mindful of the fact that God is my guide. I am mindful of the fact that I am but a young preacher in the midst of mature men, and it might seem that I am over bold; but because God has led me to do this thing I can do naught else.

As we enter into this new year, conscious as we are of the need in the lives of men of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and being mindful at the same time of the great calling that is ours in this same Jesus Christ, let us humble ourselves in much prayer and watching that you and I may give a good account of ourselves in the problems which confront us all. Let our eyes be here and there as we search out the needy ones, and then, hand in hand with Jesus, let us fight the good fight.

The above text has been on my mind and on my heart for several days. In the daytime I have thought of it; in the night hours I have dreamed of it, and because of the pressure brought to bear on me, which is not of my own doing, I have studied a bit the events that precede and lead up to this statement by our Lord.

A I studied the history of the children of Israel, I came to know that theirs was the same problem that confronts many of us in this day and time.

Not only did they have problems to solve, but likewise they had God; and our text gives us to know that God will be with us in the future as he has been in the past.

We are like the children of Israel in that we are ever trying to find freedom and release from the thing that keeps us in bondage, and it is sweet to know that God is with us in the fight.

These people had been through many hard problems, and each time God had come to them. Now they stand at the swollen river Jordan and seek a way to cross, for just beyond that river is the promised land. And while they ponder and think of ways and means, God comes.

Many of the darkest places in our own lives come just before the sun, and if we but have the faith, God will come.

These people had complained from time to time. Their faith had ebbed and flowed. It had grown strong, then weak, but ever did they push forward because of the guidance of God. What a fine thing it is to have God with us all along the way, and then when we catch sight of the promised land to hear again his promise that he will guide us and sustain us and keep us!

We are like these people for the reason that we stumble around a good deal. We need to renew our faith; and I have found it a fine thing to seek an upper room conference with my Lord from time to time.

We have before us a mighty task, the relief of our brother soldiers in foreign fields. We are the supply trains—they are in the front line trenches. We must supply the ammunition with which to fight. An army without a good supply train must ever look defeat in the face, for the movement of the supply train will determine the progress of the fighters.

When the children of Israel started to cross the swollen river, they did a fine thing—they put the ark first. The ark represented God, and because God led them they went over safe.

While the call from the front means hard work, I am sure it will be heeded, and the cry will be forward rather than retreat. It is hard work to take a position after it is once lost. A front that never retreats is something to reckon with, and I pray God that the flag of our grand old church shall never go down to defeat. Like the Stars and Stripes, let our flag be one of victory always.

As we enter the new year of 1927, we have the future before us, but we have the promise of God that he is with us.

We will meet with many new experiences. Some of these experiences may lead us into dark places, but I am ever mindful of the fact that "all things work together for good for them that love God."

It may be that we will know sickness and sorrow and even death, but down through the ages rings that wonderful voice, "Lo, I am with you always."

It is a splendid time to take stock of things. Last year we raised money for the mission field. Can we improve on last year's method? O, my brethren, as we plow this new furrow, let's keep our eyes to the front. Don't look back. Let us look on, up and into the bigger things. Let us recall the faith that was Stephens's. Let us remember Paul.

We are really artists, all of us. We are to put into each day's work some picture that will register on our heart and mind, to the end that we may be lifted a bit nearer to our great Friend and Brother. By our past failures we should learn. We all have a weak place somewhere, and we are in constant need of that guiding hand. "A chain is no stronger than its weakest link," and we look ahead into 1927 and think of what it can mean for us and what it may mean to many men and women on the mission fields of our church. Let us pray and work that the line, though thin, may not break, but that they shall carry on and the day win for Jesus Christ. Let us present our bodies, a living, holy, well-pleasing sacrifice to God.

Let us see to it that our sacrifice and service this year will be such that we will reflect the personality of the Nazarene. Like Jesus, let each of us go about doing good.

Let us relieve the anxiety and concern of our brethren in the mission field. Let us put ourselves in their position. How would we feel here at home if we were fearful that perhaps each day would be our last in the work? Perhaps the uncertainty that ever hangs over the heads of those brethren keeps many of them from doing their best.

The story is told of Napoleon, who as he reviewed the "Old Guard" on one occasion, told them of a very doubtful battle that was to be fought. He asked for volunteers to go with him into this dangerous battle. As one man the Old Guard moved forward. He failed to comprehend just what it meant. He had faith in the "Old Guard," but he had called for volunteers. He exclaimed about it, but a man advanced and saluted and said, "Sir, we have all volunteered."

My dear brethren, do you belong to the Old Guard of the army of Jesus Christ?

The new year holds some difficult places for some of us, but let us, each one of us, renew our covenant with our great Leader and let him know that we are all ready.

And then some day, when the light goes out and darkness comes upon us, may we awake to see him face to face and hear from those precious lips that wonderful greeting, "Well done."

SOLVING THE BIG PROBLEM.

The pastor has many problems to solve. The wise pastor seeks all practical suggestions and aids which may help him in handling the problems as they arise. He will therefore be glad to read, "Solving the Big Problem," a leaflet recently prepared and sent out at the request of the General Sunday School Council in session last December.

The pastor or superintendent who reads this leaflet will find an answer to two big current questions and invaluable aid in solving a big problem. It will take ten minutes to read it. Reading it will save hours of inquiry and correspondence. Try it.

EVANGELIST.

I refer you to Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. James Thomas, D.D., Fiscal Agent Hendrix College, Little Rock, Ark., and Rev. Forney Hutchinson, D.D., pastor St. Luke's Methodist Church, Oklahoma City, Okla. Great meetings held the past year in Oklohoma, Arkansas, Colorado, and Illinois. Ready now for immediate (or future) meetings in the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, or elsewhere. Regularly appointed evangelist and member of West Oklahoma Conference. Either local church revivals, or co-operative and union meetings. Terms, fare one way only, entertainment, and a free will offering. Till Feb. 6 wire or write me at Moccasin, Illinois. Home address, 417 N. Stewart, Norman, Oklahoma..

FRANK HOPKINS.

In the world at large, the day of the clan is passing. We begin to envisage a world-wide co-operative humanity. In such a day any denomination defeats the real purpose of its existence if it stands apart, itself a little clan, pursuing a life separate from that of the others.—Bishop John M. Moore.

WANTED—A BIBLICAL SYSTEM OF FINANCES.

By Rev. O. E. Goddard, D.D.

ARTICLE NO. 3.

Jesus was an incomparable teacher. He was a pedagogue par excellent. He not only spoke as a man never spoke, but he also taught what a man never taught. He used what we now call the most approved pedagogical methods. During the last fifty years, a science of education has been evolved. Many former methods have been junked. Many new psychological and pedagogical principles have been discovered and applied. But no method used by Jesus has been junked and no discovery in method has been made that Jesus did not use in his teaching while in the flesh. The Gospels are good, up-to-date books for demonstrating the best pedagogical methods known to the world to-day.

When Jesus wanted to teach a lesson on Stewardship, he showed vastly more tact and skill than the preacher of to-day shows. We are apt to become severe, harsh and vindictive in telling "Brother Tight Wad" how mean and stingy he is. The provocation is great to "skin him alive." By this method the preacher vents his spleen, but makes no converts to the right use of money. It takes no unusual amount of courage to abuse people for their stinginess. But what good comes of it?

Jesus simply told an innocent-looking story. He who can tell a story can always have an interested audience. Whether they be children or adults, educated or illiterate—all listen attentively to a story. Story-telling is a fine art. Jesus was a past master in story-telling. Here is a sample. "For the Kingdom of Heaven is as a man traveling into a far country who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And unto one he gave five talents, to another two and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey. Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents. And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two. But he that had received one, went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money. After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them. And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents; behold, I have gained beside them five talents more. His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou has been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord. He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents; behold, I have gained two other talents beside them. His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord. Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed; and I was afraid and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed; thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchanges, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury. Take therefore, the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth" (Matthew xxv:14-30.)

This is an innocent-looking story, but one of the most revolutionary utterances that ever fell from the lips of Jesus. It has some very radical teachings. It teaches that we own nothing, that all we have is given to us in trust, that we are God's trustees. Yea, we, ourselves, belong to God. Hence all time, all properties, all powers are his, and we are only trustees. This is the last word on stewardship or trusteeship. When we bring the church up to that standard, nothing else need be said. Alas, how few have apprehended, comprehended and applied this teachiing? I have been pastor of six churches and know something of the religious ideas and practices of many thousands of people. I know seven—only seven—who I believe have apprehended, comprehended and applied this parable. Alas, that there are so few who relate themselves to their property, as we are taught in this story!

How did the few elect and select souls come into a realization of the meaning of this parable? All of these seven reached it by the tithing route. They were first conscientious tithers. Finally they began to ask how much God was related to the other nine-tenths. This led to a study of the New Testament, where tithing blooms into trusteeship.

Stewardship of money has its genesis in the Old Testament tithing. Stewardship of time has its genesis in the law of the Sabbath. Stewardship of life has its genesis in God's right to set apart certain men for priests and Levites. All these Old Testament embryonic truths are expanded into trusteeship of life, time, and property in this simple story that we call "the parable of the talents."

Now, therefore, the matter of supremest moment is to get our people to apprehend, comprehend and apply the teaching of this story. Our only hope is through the tithing route. If all the on-coming generation were taught to tithe, there would be hope of getting them in adult life to pick up their tents and move from the Old Testament legalism up to the New Testament of trusteeship of life, time and property.

This is a matter of supreme importance. Our people are not dealing right with God. They are hampering the church and endangering their own souls. More people are being lost through the love of money than by all the other sins in the black catalogue of sins. The scant revenue our church is providing is a shame to our great church. The methods we use to get revenue are enough to make angels weep and Heaven to put on mourning. There are four ugly indictments which I lay at the door of my church—my Spiritual Mother. The methods—the slipshod, haphazard, hit-or-miss (mostly miss) methods ordinarily in vogue in our churches are an unspeakable disgrace to us. The four ugly indictments are: (1) Our methods are not equitable. If the support of the church is a burden, it should be borne equally by all in proportion to their financial ability. If it is a privilege, it should be shared equally by all in proportion to their ability.

(2) They are inadequate. They do not produce sufficient revenue. The church in all its departments is handicapped for want of funds.

(3) These methods do not commend themselves to business brains. Why should the church's business methods be in disrepute among high-class business men?

(4) They are not of divine origin. No one has been irreverent enough to accuse God of being the author of this haphazard throw-in method so common among us.

If these four indictments can be sustained, the church should change its methods of getting money. By adopting tithing, all these four ugly indictments disappear. Tithing would be equitable, it would produce adequate revenue, it would commend itself to the best business brains, and it is of divine origin. Above all, it would put us on the road to New Testament trusteeship. When we shall have gotten our churches to the conception of trusteeship as taught in the New Testament, we shall have reached our goal. Then we shall have a church with a Biblical system of church finances.

SOME OBSERVATIONS—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. S. S. Bogan.

Dear Dr. Carley: Permit a word of evaluation and sincere communication from a member of the Advocate family.

Our learned and venerable brother, Dr. H. W. Featherstun, one of the veterans of the Misssissippi Conference, writes in the Advocate of Jan. 13, under the caption, "An Interpretation," a very inspiring and timely article that should be read with appreciation and avidity by the whole Advocate family. It is strong meat, well prepared and served in a most admirable manner. It will no doubt strengthen the faith and holy confidence of many an humble follower of the Christ, and help them to grasp and understand some of the mysteries of God in Christ Jesus, in whom he is revealed and made known to man—God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself.

The Doctor's interpretation of John's prologue to his gospel, and estimate of the personality of Jesus—"In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God"—indicates both clarity of thought and comprehensiveness of grasp of the great fact that underlies the salvation of the world. In him was life, and the life was the light of men. He is the "true Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." The Doctor's observations upon these wonderful words are, in my opinion, true to fact, and are calculated to enlighten and settle in the mind of many the true status of the Christ, which was heretofore obscure and hid from them. Not that its mystery is removed, but that its strength of hope and power of might is revealed, by which they see Jesus, the Son of God, the Son of man; not less than God, but God—equal with the Father in power, majesty and glory; that he, the Word, was made flesh and dwelt among us ("and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father") full of God's grace and truth. Such was God's grace in the manifestation of himself to man. He came himself—God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself.

We have not been able to agree with all the utterances of Dr. Featherstun in the past, for instance, his position and opinions on unification and his interpretation of John seventeen, verses 20-23, as related to that unhappy issue, which was, in our opinion, then as now, a misunderstanding of a great issue backed by a most commendable zeal that clouded the issue and perverted right judgment, that caused to be read out of Scripture some things not written in Scripture. However, be that as it may, this single article from the Doctor's pen is worth more to the reader of the Advocate than a whole year's subscription, and should be read and reread by all subscribers to the Advocate, and especially those who love to delve into the deep and profound things of God. It will fully repay their trouble and add to their faith and hope and blessed assurance.

There are other fine things in this issue, including the editorial page. Brother Holloman's "A Legal Matter of Interest," is illuminating, informing and timely, and settles a question that has of late raised a good deal of apprehension and trouble in certain quarters in the Louisiana Conference. It seems to me that this timely article of Brother Holloman's ought to relieve the brethren of any further apprehension because of the "trust clause" in the purchase and sale of any church property in the future.

And there is also Dr. Goddard's, "Wanted—A Spiritual Church." Under this caption, his observations and survey, identifying the marks and works of the spiritual by relating their life and work to the operations and fruits of the Spirit, which is the "causa sine qua non" of all spiritual life—and the only complete measure and true standard of real spirituality.

The Home Circle

IN CHILDHOOD LAND.

By Thomas Curtis Clark.

In Childhood Land what gardens grow
Of happy thoughts and dreams aglow!
No cloud can mar its azure skies
And every dawn brings sweet surprise.
They weary not who frolic there;
They bear no burdens, feel no care;
And when the early shadows fall
Old Mother Sleep calls one and all
And tucks them in her downy bed
To slumber till the night be sped.

In Childhood Land who would not stay
To dream for ever and a day!
What profits it to strive for gold
Since joy cannot be bought and sold?
What good can come of foolish care
Save weary hearts and dark despair?
So would I turn me back again,
From driving tasks of stubborn men,
To play for ever hand in hand
With those who dwell in Childhood Land.

WAG'S CHOICE.

"Get your young bantams in before that storm reaches us," father called to Horace. "It is getting very dark."

A rumble of thunder sent Horace flying to house his pets before the rain came. The first big drops fell as he reached the kitchen porch.

"Not a minute too soon," he said to his mother.

"No, and here comes some one else who doesn't want to be out in a storm," she said, pointing her finger down the long lane.

A half-grown collie was scampering toward them. The next moment he ran in at the open door and crouched in a corner.

"Poor fellow! He's afraid of the thunder," said father, coming in close behind the dog. "Let him stay until the storm is over. Then he probably will go home." He stooped to pat the dog's silky head. "He's a beauty. He must be a newcomer in the neighborhood. I never saw him before."

"I guess he knows where he belongs," laughed Horace.

When the storm was over the dog made no move toward going home. If he knew the way, he didn't seem in any hurry to go.

"He must be lost," said Horace.

"He may have gotten out of a passing car," mother suggested.

"Or strayed from a new home somewhere around here and doesn't know the way back," said father. "We'll mention him to people and see whether we can find his owner."

The days passed and no one knew anything about "Wag," as Horace called him. The collie seemed left on their hands for good. He was a friendly dog, as collies are. He trusted father and mother instantly, but he was shy of Horace.

"He acts as if he were afraid of you," said father, when Wag shrunk away from the boy's friedly hand.

"I know why! Some boy has teased him," Horace declared. "A boy who would tease a dog is a mean kind of boy."

Several days later a stranger called.

"I'm a newcomer here," he explained. "We moved to a place near the village this spring. When we came my brother gave my boy a young collie. He has disappeared and I hear—there he is."

Wag and Horace came around the house. Horace had an arm about Wag, who looked perfectly happy. The stranger noticed that.

"I see the dog has chosen an owner who treats him right," said the stranger. "My boy didn't, and I told him that I would give the dog away if he didn't stop teasing and hurting him. Would you like to keep the dog, sonny?"

Horace's shining eyes answered for him. The stranger laughed.

"Take him, with my best wishes," he said. "I think he has made a wise choice," and with laughing refusal of thanks or pay, he was gone.—Sunbeam.

ELEANOR AND THE CLOCKS.

By Margaret Brown Elms.

"Eleanor, it is half-past seven," said mother.

"I know it," the little girl admitted, "and I wish the kitchen clock and the big clock in the living-room would stop and never go again!"

"But why do you feel that way about the faithful clocks, dearie?" mother inquired.

"Because if they stopped I wouldn't know when it is bedtime."

"Neither would you know when to go to school, or when to eat, or when to get up in the morning," mother reasoned.

"I wish they'd stop just the same," said Eleanor, pouting just a little. "I don't like clocks, anyway. After supper, all they keep saying is: 'Tick-tock, bedtime—tick-tock, bedtime.' And when the big hand gets between 5 and 6, they talk louder than ever—especially when I'm having a delightful time with my dolls or something."

The following morning, Eleanor awoke as usual and lay in bed listening to the singing of the birds outside her bedroom window. How happy they seemed to be! She stretched herself and listened attentively. She heard other familiar sounds, too. Yes, she heard children's voices—lots of them. "Why! I wonder why those boys and girls are up so early," she thought. Then, a bit disturbed, she jumped out of bed and exclaimed: "Mother, mother dear! what time is it?"

"I don't know, darling," mother replied in her sweetest tones. "The clocks have stopped."

"What? Oh, mother, the children must have been on their way to school and I'll be dreadfully late" Eleanor cried, hastily begininng to dress. "Isn't your watch going, mother?"

"No, dear."

"Was daddy late for work?"

"I guess not. His watch didn't stop, but he took it to work, of course."

"Button my dress, please," the little girl said, as she stood in front of mother to have her dress fastened and hurriedly brushed her hair. "Guess I'll have to run to school without eating any breakfast," she added, as she started to put on her coat and hat.

"No, you don't do that," mother insisted. "You must eat your breakfast, Eleanor."

But try as hard as she could, the little girl could eat only a small part of her oatmeal and drink about half a glass of milk. She had never been late for school, and she wondered what her teacher would think about it. So, in a minute or two, she was running down the street as fast as her small feet would carry her.

That noon, Eleanor said: "Oh, mother, I was dreadfully late this morning and I have a tardy mark against my name. I told Miss Ford that our clocks had stopped and she was sorry, but she said I must bring a note this afternoon telling about it. You write the note, mother dear, and I'll call up daddy and get the correct time."

Eleanor took down the receiver and gave Central daddy's number. "Hello, daddy, dear," she began, "the clocks have stopped and mother's watch isn't going and—I was dreadfully late for school and I've got to take a note this afternoon. And, daddy dear, please tell me what time it is."

The voice at the other end said something that only Eleanor could hear.

"Oh!" she smilingly exclaimed. "I thought I did want them to stop, but—I've changed my mind now. It's dreadfully hard not to know when it is time to get up and time to go to school and —everything."

Daddy replied, and his little girl nodded her head. "Yes," she slowly answered, "I—guess—they won't stop again—because—I'm never going to make another wish like that. Children have to go to bed on time, of course. If they didn't they wouldn't be well and strong, would they, daddy?"

After daddy had given Eleanor the correct time, she sad good-by and hung up the receiver. "It is half-past twelve, mother," she said. "Please set the clocks and—I hope they'll never stop again, not even at bedtime."—Exchange.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

EDITORIAL.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. M. Shaw, our pastor at Mooringsport, La., writes: "Our work begins beautifully. The spirit is as fine as I ever saw, and we minister to some of the noblest people we have ever met."

Rev. T. C. Cooper, our pastor at Homewood, Miss., writes: "We have started out for a great year's work. The prospects are good for the best year in the history of the charge."

Rev. W. N. Ware spoke at Pascagoula, Miss., on Monday, Jan. 17, on the needs of the African mission, where he himself has rendered such efficient service.

Rev. A. J. Leggett, our pastor at Satartia, Miss., was suddenly taken very ill on Thursday morning of last week; but efficient medical attention soon relieved his distress.

The Goodwill Industry at Shreveport, La., sold more than $7,000 worth of clothing last year and paid out nearly $6,000 in wages to those employed by it.

His many friends will be glad to know that Rev. H. L. Johns, who recently underwent a very severe operation at Touro Infirmary, this city, is regaining his strength, being able to be up and about a little.

The annual report of Rev. A. F. Vaughan, chaplain at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, a copy of which he kindly sent us, shows that he is a busy and useful man. Brother Vaughan is a member of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. Norman Guice, general evangelist, is in the closing days of a great meeting at Odessa, Mo. From Odessa, he goes to Marvell, Ark., for a two weeks' meeting. He has an open date beginning Feb. 13, which he would be glad to have taken. He can be reached by wire at Marvell.

The editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, is still confined to bed as the result of a relapse from an attack of influenza. Considerable apprehension is felt by his loved ones over his condition. The prayers of his friends in his behalf will be greatly appreciated.

Rev. Otto Porter, pastor at Port Gibson, Miss., with the co-operation of faithful laymen, has begun the publication of a weekly church bulletin. The work progresses at historic Port Gibson. The salary of the pastor has been increased, and an aggressive program is planned for the year.

We learn from the Shreveport Times that Dean R. E. Smith is writing a book on his recent travels in the Holy Land, the title of the book to be, "The Land of Lands, and Beyond." Those who know Dr. Smith know that the book will be worth reading.

Rev. J. H. Morrow, admitted on trial in the Mississippi Conference at its recent session and appointed pastor at Roxie, Miss., is happily at work. He was received kindly by the people and is expecting this to be a great year.

Mr. Richard C. Morse, general secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association from 1869 to 1915, and since then consulting general secretary, died on Dec. 25 of last year.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist, recently held a very successful meeting in the Wesley Methodist Church, San Francisco, Calif., where Rev. H. W. Jamieson is pastor. He is now engaged in a good meeting at Abbeville, La. Brother Thomas is a fruitful evangelist.

We take the liberty of suggestiing, entirely on our own initiative, that Dr. S. A. Steel is available for addresses, lectures, and special services wherever he may be called. Dr. Steel has the strength of profound conviction on great religious questions, and oratorical gifts of a kind that is rare in these days. His address is Mansfield, La.

The Jan. 15 issue of the Ferriday Enterprise, Ferriday, La., was a "King Hotel" number, celebrating the opening of a new hotel. It was a fine number, giving a write-up of the city generally. Appreciative mention was made of the Methodist church and the work of the pastor, Rev. George Fox.

The women of Shreveport are making great preparations for the approaching meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council in that city. One of the features will be a "Thousand Plate Luncheon," announcement of which appears in another place in the Advocate. Mrs. George S. Sexton, Jr., is in charge of the publicity work of the Council.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman, Louisiana Conference evangelist, has secured the services of Mr. B. G. Grenfell as soloist and song leader for this year. Mr. Grenfell plays several musical instruments and is highly recommended by those with whom he has worked. Those desiring the services of these brethren can get in touch with them by writing Rev. R. A. Bozeman, Pleasant Hill, La.

Bishop Warren A. Candler was announced to preach at the formal reopening of the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., at 11 o'clock last Sunday morning, and at the First Methodist Church at the evening hour. On Monday he was to meet with the executive committee of the Board of Missions, the presiding elders, and others charged with the responsibility of carrying forward the special interests of the church.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney writes from Franklinton, La., of the sad death of a fine young man of that community, Robert Babington Brock. He was a law student in the Louisiana State University. He was a fine character, greatly loved by those who knew him. Brother Sweeney conducted the funeral service at the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Carroll, pastor of the Baptist church. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, transferred from the Louisiana Conference to the Western Virginia Conference last year and appointed pastor of the First Methodist Church at Charleston, W. Va., is hard at work, as is his custom, in his great pastorate. Brother Gearheard left Louisiana before the meeting of the Louisiana Conference, and arrived in West Virginia after the meeting of the Conference there, thus missing the annual gathering altogether—a loss which any Methodist preacher feels keenly.

Elsewhere will be found an announcement of the death of Rev. J. H. Scruggs, at his home in Corinth, Miss., on Saturday, Jan. 15. He was a superannuate member of the South Georgia Conference. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. A. T. McIlwain, assisted by Revs. J. W. Raper, D. W. Babb, B. P. Fullilove, and G. C. Schwartz, with interment at Aberdeen. Dr. Scruggs was a son-in-law of Bishop Robert Paine, his wife having died several years ago. Those who knew him honored him for his work in the kingdom and loved him for his saintly character.

During a few hours he spent in Jackson, Miss., on Friday of last week, the editor of the Advocate had the pleasure of meeting Dr. H. S. Spragins, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church; Dr. Arthur J. Moore, who is assisting him in one of the best revival meetings ever held in Galloway Memorial; Rev. T. M. Brownlee, pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, with whom he had the pleasure of a drive over the city; Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millasps College; Rev. and Mrs. Claude P. Jones, and Revs. B. F. Lewis and W. T. Griffin. All these were busy about their work and were in a happy frame of mind.

The Newton Record of Jan. 20 contains an account of the death and burial of Mrs. J. W. Summers, at an advanced age, on Tuesday, Jan. 18. She was a devout and lifelong Methodist. She was the grandmother of Rev. F. L. Applewhite, our pastor at Newton. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Newton District, assisted by Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. T. W. Green, of the Baptist church, and Rev. J. J. McInnis, of the Presbyterian church. Interment was in Hattiesburg, Miss. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

The Shreveport District, according to report of Dr. W. W. Holmes, the presiding elder, raised 94 per cent of the Conference assessments for 1926. Thirteen out of the eighteen charges paid in full. Through some error in reporting, the Minutes would indicate that the Elm Grove-Harmon charge paid nothing. The assessment was $160, of which $124 was paid. The amount paid by the Texas Avenue Church was a full payment of the entire assessment. If the district makes another such advance in 1927, the assessments will be paid in full, with some to spare.

Dr. Charles L. Goodell, secretary of the Commission on Evangelism and Life Service of the Federal Council of Churches, spent several days this week and last in New Orleans, upon invitation of the Ministerial Union. Dr. Goodell was the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Bienville Hotel on Monday, the luncheon being attended by preachers and laymen. A unanimous invitation was extended Dr. Goodell by the Ministerial Union to conduct a series of services in New Orleans immediately preceding Easter in 1928, and he indicated that he would accept the invitation. Dr. Goodell was the principal speaker at several meetings during his stay in the city.

A Conference on International Relations and American Diplomacy will be held at the Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 3-5. The Conference will consist of addresses and round table discussions, in which some of the most distinguished citizens of America will be heard. The Conference is under the auspices of the Departments of Government and History and Economics and Sociology of the university, with the Law School and the Department of Journalism co-operating. A cordial invitation is extended by the university to all interested to attend all the meetings of the Conference. Reduced rates for the gathering are offered by the railroads, on the convention plan. Those desiring further information should write Dr. Charles W. Pipkin, Department of Government, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La.

The Times-Picayune, of this city, celebrated its ninetieth birthday on Tuesday of this week. It was founded on Jan. 25, 1837. Its circulation at the end of the first year was approximately 1500; its daily average for 1926 was approximately 86,000, and its Sunday average, 124,000. It will be of interest to many of our readers to know that Mr. Henry H. Ahrens, now religious editor of the Times-Picayune, has been identified with the paper for many years in various capacities and has had a part in its growth. It will also be interesting to our readers to know that Mr. Charles O. Chalmers, Business Manager of the Advocate, was connected with the Times-Picayune—then the Picayune—for eighteen years, and that Mr. A. M. Schmidt, of the composition department of the Advocate, was for perhaps thirty years on the force of the old Picayune. The New Orleans Christian Advocate—no infant itself, having been founded in 1850—extends heartiest congratulations and best wishes to its neighbor across the street.

ADDING MACHINE MAKES QUEER MISTAKES.

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. R. W. Vaughan is one of the most careful and painstaking Statistical Secretaries the writer has ever known. Having worked with him at two annual Conferences, we are in position to testify that he disregards all trouble that may be caused to the statistical force in accommodating any brother who may be late in handing in his report, thereby throwing the work that has already been done out of balance and with nothing more severe than a mutter, given in an undertone, he sets his staff at work to do the hampered work all over again.

But at the recent session of the Conference at Homer, some one perpetrated a joke on this faithful servant of the Conference and made his report to be a discouraging one indeed, and all of it must be due to an unreliable adding machine. On page 88 of the Journal, under question 25 in the condensed minutes, he is made to say that the gain in membership for the past year was 63. We recall that Bishop Candler called attention to the meager ingathering for the year. But a study of the same Journal by districts reveals a more interesting and inspiring statement. Alexandria District reports a gain of 166 over the previous year; Baton Rouge a gain of 194; Lake Charles, 10; Minden, 458; Monroe, 59; New Orleans, 74; Ruston, 191; making a total gain for the year of 1,152. Shreveport District reported a decrease of 168, which still leaves a Conference gain of 1,084 for the year.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Greenwood District Missionary Institute was held Thursday, Jan. 20, in First Church, Greenwood, with Rev. J. E. Cunningham, presiding elder, presiding. Because of the high water and some impassable roads, the attendance was not large, but more than half the preachers of the district, and a representative number of laymen and laywomen were present. Even in face of depressing conditions throughout the district, a marked spirit of optimism was noted.

Dr.. J. C.. Hawk, missionary from Manchuria, brought two soul-stirring and instructive messages to the assembly. Most helpful addresses were also made by Rev. W. W. Woollard, of Holly Springs; Mrs. T. A. Bailey, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society; Rev. W.. L. Storment, of Sunflower; Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, and Judge J. M. Foreman, Conference Lay Leader.

A feature of the afternoon session was the very able presentation of the plan of taking the free-will offering, by Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of West Point. Brother Broyles is a most efficient missionary secretary, carrying his portfolio with grace and distinction, and with complete knowledge of the missionary situation.

Rev. J. H. Felts, pastor-host, had made all necessary arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors, and was extravagant with his hospitality. Luncheon was served in the church dining hall by the hospitable women of First Church. This delightful meal was gracefully served by these good women themselves, and this happy hour contributed to make the whole day a most enjoyable one.

The institute was in every way a success. The need was placed before those present. The way to meet the need was shown. The hearts of all present were stirred by the prayers and addresses to give motives for a most earnest endeavor to meet the present great need, and Greenwood District girded herself anew to go forth with renewed energy to win the victory for the Master. Greenwood District does not fail!

A. Y. BROWN, Secretary.

A GOOD REPORT FROM FULTON, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am to-day sending you a list of fifty-one subscribers from the Fulton circuit, on the plan adopted by the Annual Conference. I hope to send you another list soon. I attribute the good work of the past on this circuit to the fact that so many of our people were reading the Advocate, and keeping in touch with the work of our great church.

This year has started off well, with a good attendance and financial report at the first quarterly conference. The pastor's salary was increased $50, and $100 has been sent to the Conference treasurer on the benevolences.

We were presented with many nice gifts Christmas week, also a "pounding" for the New Year, for which we desire to express our appreciation. We have fallen into the hands of good people, that have looked after our comfort, and kept the interest of the church at heart.

We will begin our revival meeting at Fulton church, Sunday, Jan. 23, with Rev. George G. Yeager, of the Mississippi Conference, doing the preaching. The Aberdeen district conference will meet with us May 24-26, and you are invited to be present. With best wishes to the Advocate family,

I am yours truly,

E. C. DRISKELL, P. C.

Wise is the preacher in this day and generation who will have the courage to call for a division of labor, as did the apostles in the beginning of the Christian church!

We repeat, as we see it, there are two outstanding needs in Christendom to-day: first, that we may have more real prophets in our pulpits, wonderfully inspired of God, courageous for speaking the whole truth, loving in spirit, possessed of ability to lead the people, and consumed with a passion for souls; second, congregations of regenerated members, filled with the Holy Ghost, willing to be taught and led, inspired for sacrificial service, loyally supporting the preacher in all his endeavors, loyal to the church and its program, feeling a deep sense of obligation to be in their places at all the regular services of the church, stewards of life and property, paying at least the tenth of their income for the support of the kingdom, witnesses for Jesus Christ, making the necessary sacrifice of time and home comforts to seek out the lost and win them back to God—men and women filled with the consciousness of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, having a vision of the world's needs, the millions who sit in darkness and the shadow of death, millions who will never be lifted until the light of the gospel of Christ shall shine into their darkness, bringing them life and lifting their hearts in courage and hope and faith to the Father of us all through Jesus Christ his Son.

But let us face the facts as they are. We know we are far from such an ideal condition as this.

Our preachers must lead the way as did the apostles. They must call for a proper division of labor, as did the apostles, laying upon the shoulders of the laymen certain responsibilities that naturally belong there, and giving themselves more and more to "the ministry of the Word."

We are challenging our laymen everywhere to give themselves to a more whole-hearted service to Christ through his church, to consecrate themselves and their means more wholly to God.

Will our ministers, with understanding of the limitations of laymen in the church and with loving spirit, dare to summon them to a better, a finer service in order that they may give themselves more completely to spiritual leadership and to the preaching of the gospel?

Many laymen are waiting to be drafted into this higher service, waiting to be taught and led into a new experience of sacrificial service for Christ through his church.

The Church Board of Lay Activities and the Wesley Brotherhood, in the opinion of the laymen, offer a peculiar opportunity to our pastors for doing just what the apostles did in that early day of the church—place unusual responbility on the laymen and in addition expect them always and everywhere to be witnesses of the truth.—The Methodist Layman.

Breathes there the man with soul so dead,
That never to himself hath said:
"I will my own church paper take Both for myself and family's sake?"
If such there be, let him repent,
And have the paper to him sent;
And if he'd spend a happy winter,
He in advance should pay the printer.
"Nuff sed!"
—The Reformed Church Messenger.

TO OUR PASTORS.

The Business Manager of the Advocate has sent to all the preachers the necessary envelopes, blanks, etc., for putting on the Advocate campaign. If any one of them has failed to receive this literature, a card to the office to that effect will bring a supply immediately. Now is the time to put the Advocate into the homes of all our people.

A FRIENDLY NOTICE TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The subscriptions that were received last year in connection with the special "Every Family" proposition will have to be discontinued as soon as they expire. This is in keeping with the terms of the special proposition and is necessary because the special price does not allow any margin for carrying the subscriptions beyond the date of expiration. The special proposition has been renewed this year by authority of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate; but former lists will have to be discontinued unless renewed. We make this statement that subscribers at the special rate may understand the situation if they do not receive the paper after the expiration of their subscriptions. We hope we shall not lose a single subscriber.

Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in tender mercy, has seen fit to call our beloved sister, MISS HANNAH E. TOWN, to the home where sickness and sorrow are known no more, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society resolve:

1. That this Society has lost a noble worker who has given a long life of service to her Lord and Master, by earnest supplication at a throne of grace, ministering to the sick, the needy, and the distressed, in all her ways ever following her Savior's precepts.

2. That we thank the Giver of all good for our association with this modest Christian woman; that we earnestly strive to emulate her example, realizing that though our hearts are saddened, our loss is her eternal gain.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes, a copy sent to the True Democrat, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

Signed: Mrs. N. B. Riddle, Mrs. W. R. Daniel, Mrs. R. C. Watson, Committee.

St. Francisville, La.

MRS. LOU ANNIE SHAFFER, nee Moncrief, was born Dec. 30, 1875, near Simsboro, La., from which place she moved to the neighborhood of Longstreet at the age of 20 years. She was married to J. H. Shaffer, of Gibsland, on Dec. 4, 1896, to which union eight children were born, four of whom—Henry Shaffer, Pennington Shaffer, Lizzie May Shaffer and Ruth Shaffer, all of Gibsland—survive her. Sister Shaffer joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Payne's Chapel, near Simsboro, at 11 years of age, and developed into a womanhood rich in goodness and usefulness. She was devoted to her church and to her home, and left nothing undone or unsaid, within the range of her powers, that she felt necessary to the well-being of either. Her devotion to her children was especially beautiful, and her concern for their development in health and in godliness was first in her heart. In addition to her husband and children, Sister Shaffer is survived by her mother, Mrs. S. J. Moncrief, of Longstreet, and by six brothers and two sisters, as well as by numbers of other relatives and friends. "Faithful unto death," she has inherited a "crown of righteousness which the Righteous Judge has laid up for all who love his appearing."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR
Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre At Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

READY FOR ANOTHER YEAR AT YAZOO CITY, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Yazoo City, Miss., would like to make the following report of work done during the year just closed:

Members enrolled during the year, 109; on roll now 98. Collected and forwarded to Conference treasurer for dues, pledge, Belle Bennett fund, Scarritt, etc., $1,161.25; expended on parsonage, $284.25; on church, $202. The Auxiliary clothes one girl in the orphanage, and one of the Circles clothes a boy.. Balance in treasury, $499.69.

During the year several books were studied—"Healing Ourselves," "New Days in Latin America," and the Book of Acts.

More than half the membership subscribe for the Voice.

On Jan. 3, a meeting was held for the purpose of electing officers, and shifting the membership of the Circles. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. E. Nobles; Vice President, Mrs. Charles Bennett; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Hugh McCalip; Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. W. Woolwine; Connectional Treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Anderson, Jr.; Local Treasurer, Mrs. Milton Smith; Superintendent of Study, Mrs. Harry Shattuck; Superintendent of Publicity, Mrs. Mary N. Wilson; Superintendent of Social Service, Mrs. Wm. Hoover; Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. Tom Smith; Superintendent of Young People, Mrs. J. W. Parker; Voice agent, Mrs. Lewis Bennett.

We have organized and are hoping for a great year's work.

MRS. MARY N. WILSON,
Publicity Superintendent.

AN INTERESTING MEETING AT BERNICE, LA.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church met at the parsonage at the usual hour, with eleven present.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Ellen Mabry, and was opened with devotional exercises.

Dues were paid, free-will offering taken, and pledges signed for the year.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. John Caldwell and Mrs. Antre.

Then a nice gift from the Society was impressively presented to Mrs. Walker by Mrs. Dave Caldwell in appreciation of her faithful work in the Society and church during her long residence in Bernice.

In response, Mrs. Walker expressed her thanks for the gift, and regrets at parting with old-time friends and coworkers.

Every one was visibly touched, as we regret to give up one of such fine character and personality.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by the president.

Then a beautiful storm struck the parsonage. The preacher and his family became helpless, but willing victims of a wonderful pounding that will never be forgotten.

MRS. J. L. LAY,
Corresponding Secretary.

LORD—IS IT I?

"'Crucify him!' came from the relentless rabble, and the vociferations of the infuriated mob shook the old town from her foundation stones to her turret tops.

"Often in civil commotion has been witnessed some such animosity of the multitudes, but nothing that compared with the fury of the mob that day. All the phantoms of hell seemed to have assembled in Jerusalem and out through the funeral gate Jerusalem vomited her howling, clamoring bloodthirsty mob. Yonder comes the crowd led by Judas, one of the twelve, and he said to them: "The one that I kiss, that is this man Jesus,' and Judas rushed up, threw his arms around him and said, 'Hail, Master.'"

"And Jesus whirled around and said: 'Judas, betrayest thou the son of man wnth a kiss,' and they that followed, staggered up to their feet and seized him and they put the cross on his shoulders, and the disciples forsook him and fled, and he staggered with the cross. Three times he fell under the burden and then they took the cross and put it on the shoulders of a colored man, Simon of Cyrenia. Oh, the colored race has borne many burdens in the advancement of civilization, but there never was laid upon the shoulders of black or white a nobler burden than the honor of helping Jesus Christ bear his cross.

"And they forsook him and they fled, my friends. If we could have been there we'd have seen the heavens filled with angels, houstops covered with angels, treetops filled; and they nailed Christ to the cross and lifted him between the two thieves and then Jesus Christ cried, 'I thirst.'

"And a Jew ran and dipped a sponge in wormwood and gall and put it on the end of a reed and shoved it to his lips and he turned away and cried: 'My God, hast thou forsaken me?'

"Michael has been pictured leaning over the battlements of heaven and crying: 'Oh, Master, if you want me to come and sweep that howling, bloodthirsty mob into hell, lift up your head and look up, and I will take that as a signal, and I will come.'

"But Jesus Christ was paying the penalty for your sins and mine, and he struggled on and on until I can imagine Michael leaning over the battlements of glory and shouting down: 'O Master, if you want me to come, tear your right hand loose from the cross and wave it and I will be there with twelve legions of angels to fight for you.'

But Jesus Christ gritted his teeth and clenched his fingers over the nails and struggled on. What for? To open up a plan of salvation for this old sin-cursed world. Be on your feet shouting forth with thanksgiving to God that he ever gave a chance to man to go to heaven instead of hell.

"And then he cried: 'It is finished!' And the Holy Spirit plucked the olive branch of peace from the cross, winged his flight back through the heavens, burst through the gates and cried: 'Peace! Peace has been made through the death on the cross between sinful men, the offender and God, the offended.'

"And Jesus Christ seized the hands of God the Father. He seized the hands of the sinful world and beneath the cross of Christ, the world can meet and God will give you the kiss of reconciliation, there is no other way whereby we can be saved from our transgressions other than that."—(Billy Sunday.)

O church member, you who have felt this touch of the Master's nail-printed hand on yours, how can you, how can you deny, your Saviour's pleadings to tell others this wonderful story of salvation?

Scarcely half the world has ever heard the story of the cross—and Jesus died that they might live! Such a price! Such a salvation! Such a Saviour! Two thousand years ago—and so few have cared enough to take the message! Will you send it? His pierced hands are extended to us, his look of pleading is bent upon us. Some will deny him. "Lord is it I?"

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JAN. 30.

Subject: "The Christian Overcoming Temptation.."

Lesson: Luke 4:1-3; I Cor. 10:12-13.

Golden Text: "In that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted" (Heb. 2:18).

Teaching Points:

1. Temptation in the sense of trial enters as an essential experience into all phases of probation.

2. The existence and personality of the devil as the one who is permitted to tempt us is taught here and elsewhere in the Bible.

3. The three temptations of Christ reveal the methods of the devil in all other temptations of men.

4. Christ's familiarity with the Scriptures was his greatest safeguard against the devices of the devil.

5. Probation does not end with a sinner's conversion. The possibility of falling still exists and makes it necessary for all Christians to be on their guard.

6. No temptation is irresistible. Therefore, if we yield, the fault is ours and not God's.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The preachers' meeting in the Minden District, held at Winneld, took up the question of Sunday school work. The District Secretary, Dr. F. C. Wren, was present. This group decided to hold their District Sunday School Council at Rochelle, on Sunday, Feb. 27, at 3:30 in the afternoon.

At the Winnfield meeting of the preachers, much interest was shown in the Teacher Training work, especially the Cokesbury courses.

Rev. Marion S. Monk writes as follows: "The chairmen for local committees for the approaching Sunday School Convention have been appointed as follows: Auto, M. D. Swayze; Reception, Mrs. J. B. Pollard; Entertainment, Mrs. J. C. Sadler; Fellowship, A. W. Riggs; Service, A. W. Trotter."

* * *

Rev. B. C. Taylor, Conference Superintendent of the Adolescent Department, writes with reference to the Monroe conference: "Raulins assures me he will be present, and I have written Mrs. Henry relative to the matter. If you have any suggestions, I shall be very glad to have them. It may be that we will have to use Dr. Parker a little more than had been originally planned."

A Possible Exchange of Credits With State Council.

Our Annual Conference in 1924 passed the following resolution: "Be it resolved, (1), That after a careful study of the merger problem and of the relationship of our Conference Sunday School program to the work of the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, it is the mind of this Conference that we should not enter into official relationship with that organization."

At the Board meeting at the Homer Conference, the following communication was addressed to Dr. John L. Scales, chairman of the Council of Religious Education, by the chairman of the Board, Dr. W. W. Drake: "The Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board has given careful consideration to your communication, presented by Mr. Van Carter, in its bearing upon co-operation in Training Schools. After carefully studying the policies of our General Board who have control of all Standard Training Schools, we feel that, though our Conference has not gone into the merger, such co-operation in Training Schools is possible under certain conditions, according to the Birmingham resolution. I am enclosing copy of a statement prepared by our General Secretary, Rev. John W. Shackford, embodying the policy of the General Board, and call your special attention to the summary contained in the marked paragraph at the close of his statement.

"You will see by this statement that the only process necessary to set up such co-operation, leading to the acceptance of credits from such schools, is your invitation to our Conference Superintendent and his acceptance of such invitation, to serve from the beginning as a member of the Board of Administration, and his report to our Training Department, giving assurance that the Standards of the Board are protected.

"I trust that this situation will open the way for mutually helpful co-operative relations."

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

THE EXTENSION SECRETARY AT WORK.

Sunday, Jan. 23, was Missionary Day. In every Sunday school a missionary program should have been observed and an offering taken. The offering should be sent immediately to Brother A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles.

On Sunday, Jan. 16, the Extension Secretary visited our Sunday school at Palmetto, on the Melville charge, Rev. James A. Knight, pastor. In spite of the very cold weather, more than fifty per cent of the total enrollment was present. The Palmetto school is a real live school, and as we left them a "C"Type Program of Work Wall Chart we are hoping they will be able to do a still greater work this year. Brother B. C. Taylor is superintendent of this school.

In the afternoon, we went on to Melville, where we started a training class in the eveniing at 7 o'clock with Brother Knight and his Sunday school workers. Mrs. A. B. Overton is superintendent of the Melville schoool and is showing her interest in the training program of our church by taking this course. Our first session started with an enrollment of thirteen. Quite a few are taking the course along with the others, but will not receive credit. We are using as a textbook, "The Small Sunday School," Sensabaugh, one of our Cokesbury Courses on Administration. The people of the Melville church received us cordially and were quick to show their appreciation of the training program of the church.

The class closed out on Thursday evening with a fine spirit of enthusiasm. Only four were lost to the class because of other obligations that forced dropping class work. Nine finished the class work and took examination—a good record.

One of the real valuable results to come from this season of training is two new teachers for the Melville school.

During the days of the class, Brother Knight and I visited every church on the charge. We considered the Sunday school situation at each. Brother Knight is in fine favor with the people on his charge, and is doing a splendid work. We are quite sure he and his people will have a most successful year.

Brother Knight is expecting to start a training class for the Palmetto school in the very near future.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The names of fifty chairmen of the missionary committee of the Sunday school have been received since Conference, the Corinth District leading by a large majority. Literature giving material for the program of worship has been mailed to one hundred and twenty-five chairmen. God cannot use it until it is given to the people. How many of us have any conscience on the matter of teaching? It will do good to report to the Advocate from time to time the effect this program has on the people. That reminds me to say that those who are responsible for this program need to pray much.

The Executive Committee of the Sunday School Board met at Grenada on the 19th. The following were appointed as District Secretaries: Rev. W. R. Lott, for the Aberdeen District; Rev. C. A. Northington, for the Columbus District; Rev. A. T. McIlwain, for the Corinth District; Rev. H. P. Lewis, for the Greenwood District, Rev. S. H. Caffey, for the Grenada District; Rev. R. G. Lord, for the Greenville District; Rev. A. T. Clanton, for the Sardis District. These secretaries are to see that every Sunday school in the Conference observes Sunday School Day. Half the offering in each district is to be used strictly for work in the district where it is raised. Most of it for this year will possibly be used in training schools and training classes, Standard and Cokesbury.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Missions met at Grenada the evening of the 19th and considered the proposition of putting on a Pastors' School in co-operation with the Sunday School Board when we hold our Leadership Training School, June 6-11. If this is done, forty preachers will receive training that will help them to do some great work in building the kingdom. This is about the biggest event of the year. No one can imagine the far-reaching effect it will have on the religious life of the Conference. The course proposed is "Rural Sunday School Management." In addition to the course of study, a series of practical lectures will be given by three men especially qualified for this task. Fuller details will be given when they are worked out and finally settled upon.

RURAL EXTENSION NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: My first communication had to do with the duties of the Rural Extension Secretary. In this letter I wish to report some of the work I have done. Necessarily, I have done a great deal of reading and studying in order to acquaint myself with the work consigned to me. I have finished by correspondence, "The Sunday School at Work in Town and Country," by Dr. Brabham. This was necessary to be listed an accredited teacher in the Cokesbury Standard Training School. I have visited the following charges: Tie Plant, Holcomb, Eupora, Ackerman and Weir, Kosciusko, Winona, Oxford, Holly Springs, and Sallis. Brother Sledge is one of the most devout and untiring workers we have. His school at Tie Plant has adopted the Program of Work "C" and is working toward a Standard school. He is taking a religious census of his school. The school at Eupora is like a busy beehive, attaining already the distinction of "An Advance School," under the wise leadership of the pastor and Brother Lindsey.

I was a whole day with Brother Hammond, spoke at two of his schools and preached for him at night. Brother Hammond has been physically indisposed since Conference, but glad to report he is improving. Prof. Jack Frost is teaching in the school at Hammond "The Small Sunday School," by Mr. L. F. Sensabough. "Jack" is going to make a worthwhile contribution to his church in Leadership Training. He is specially gifted and fitted for this work.

The Sallis Sunday school, under the leadership of one of our wisest circuit men, is at work on the Program "C." Brother Murff is taking a religious census of his work and has arranged for an institute for the second Sunday in February.

Brother C. A. Northington has his work well in hand. Has taken a survey, tabulated results and is working toward definite objectives. He first finds out what is to be done and "gets busy." He says he will report two Standard "C" type schools by the first of April. His teachers are organized into a training class, taught by Prof. Brinson. They are studying the "Teacher," by Dr. Barclay.

Kosciusko checked up "An Advance School" of the B type. It was good to be with these people. A finer or more earnest body of workers I have never met. Of course "Bob" and his good wife gave us a hearty welcome.

Brother Caffey at Oxford, in his inimitable way, had prepared a great reception for the writer. We had a splendid day with him. Spoke at the 11 o'clock hour, and in spite of the extreme cold weather a large congregation gathered. In the afternoon we met with his workers and studied with them some vital Sunday school problems. Brother Caffey is a busy man.

I was with Brother Woollard the night of the 16th. Brother Woollard is as true to the programs of his church as he is to his religious convictions. Every department of his school is properly cared for. In his school are some of the best trained leaders of our Conference. All of these schools are giving missionary instruction and sending offerings to Rev. H. P. Lewis for the support of the Missionary Program of our Conference Sunday School Board.

Brother Gladney reports that 30 schools since Conference have lined up in missionary instruction and offering. We feel sure that all of our schools will do this when the Dual Extension Plan is thoroughly understood.

Is your School observing Missionary Sunday? The Discipline of our church, paragraph 392, says: "Let every Sunday school be regarded as a Missionary and Social Service organization and promote education in Missions and Social Service. Let one Sunday in each month, preferably the fourth, be observed as Missionary and Social Service Day, and let the offering be a special for Missions."

We have arranged definitely for institutes on the following charges: Sallis, Ebenezer and Chester. We are planning for Cokesbury schools and religious surveys in various parts of the Conference. Have traveled hundreds of miles, written hundreds of letters and sent out several thousand pieces of literature. We have a supply of the little bulletin, "Europe," on hand. This bulletin will give you fresh news from our European mission fields. Will gladly send you one upon request. Brother Gladney is a great leader and we rejoice to work with him. Let us all work together and pray for a great Sunday school year. Command me when I can be of the least service.

Your brother,
E. G. MOHLER,
Rural Extension Secty.

New Orleans, La.—"I had been suffering with feminine trouble for one year. I could not stand on my feet five minutes nor do any kind of work. I suffered with sick stomach, headache, backache and pains in both of my sides. I went to several doctors and the only thing they could see was an operation. I could not make up my mind to have it so my sister told me of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I tried it and felt better with the first bottle, so I kept on taking it. I only weighed 89 pounds when I started and a year after I weighed 138 pounds. I don't know what it is to have a pain any more." —Mrs. Pauline Daniel, 3136 Constance St.

NO WOMAN CAN KEEP HOUSE EFFICIENTLY

MRS. FRANK DINDORE

Four Walls Can Make a House, but it takes a Woman to Make a Home

To be a successful homemaker, a woman must guard her health. When mother is not well, the home is upset. Women everywhere are learning through their own personal experiences, as these women did, the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lancaster, Ohio.—"For ten years after my marriage, I had poor health. I was on a visit to my sister in Utica, Michigan, and she had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Her husband got me a bottle and I took it and felt so much better that I got a second one. Now, whenever I feel run-down I take the Vegetable Compound and soon feel all right again. I have had three little girls in the last six years and do all my housework, sewing, washing, and ironing. My time is pretty well taken up, but I will answer any letters I receive."—Mrs. Frank Dindore, 823 Pierve Avenue, Lancaster, Ohio.

Sturgis, Michigan.—"I am very thankful for what your medicine has done for me and have recommended it to others. I took it to give me strength before my baby was born. I would have to stop work and lie down sometimes all the afternoon. I felt as if I did not care whether anything was done or not. I got tired out so easily. One day I found a little book on my porch and that night I showed it to my husband and he went down town and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has helped me so much that I was soon able to do my work, and when my baby was born, my nurse, Mrs. Forbes, said it was the easiest birth she had ever attended. I will be more than pleased if I am helping someone else by giving my testimonial."—Mrs. Edward Persing, 208 Surprise Ave., Sturgis, Michigan.

A NOTE FROM MISTER SHIPMAN.

My Dear Dr. Carley: Well, we think the harness is pretty well adjusted for a long, steady, and hard pull.

Of course the most of us pastors think we have peculiar difficulties. I am told that the Rev. Sam P. Jones often spoke of the dear sisters coming to him: "Brother Jones, my husband is a good man, but he is not a spiritual man, and I hope that you will be able to reach him; but, Brother Jones, my dear husband is a peculiar man;" whereupon the Rev. Mr. Jones would say: "The only thing that is the matter with your peculiar man is that he is just full of the devil, just so full that it has broken out all over him."

Is it not a fact if the devil were eliminated from our dear people, we would not have many "peculiar" ones left? Such has been the observation of Mister Shipman, and he has been on the observation line for going close to a hundred years.

When we came here some fourteen months ago, we found no weekly prayer meeting, no Leagues; we now have both, and quite a number of children who will offer prayers at our Wednesday evening prayer meeting.

Our Leagues are just getting organized, but we have fine prospects for three or four.

But we can't expect that intelligent development that makes a strong, loyal congregation where our people do not take our church papers, and I find that I am the only subscriber to the New Orleans Christian Advocate on the pastoral charge; and, by the way, I think my subscription is past due, but I enclose check for the renewal, so pass me on for another year at least, and also send it to my newly married daughter, Mrs. Gordon P. Cooper, Lambert, Miss. I will start them off right, and will trust to the power and influence of your good paper to keep 'em in the good way.

Doctor, what else can you see on the low horizon of Mission work that the Board of Missions can, or will be likely to suggest to the next General Conference that will be likely to interest the pastors? Same may be said of the Sunday School Board. The presiding elders also might be reminded now and then that there is something that they should be looking after; can't you encourage the Boards to give the elders a little attention? I am quite sure they do not like to be snubbed, or overlooked in the distribution of responsibilities. I am quite sure that some of 'em are doing some wide strutting in that noble office; may be if they had something to do, it would take some of the strut out.

Doctor, if you will come up here and preach a week for me I will see that you get back home, and then some. I don't know what to do to make this thing better; come up and show me, for surely editors ought to know everything, and a little the rise. In the meantime Mister Shipman will trust in the Lord, and "keep his powder dry."

We are truly greatly depressed in this section—no concert of action upon the part of planters makes a hazy outlook, if any outlook at all. We prayed for a great crop and got it, but we forgot to pray for a great price also. If half our cottton could be turned into corn, hay and potatoes, we would be a wealthy and independent people, but we persist in having all cotton. It is wonderful how people can be so poverty-stricken on such a soil.

It looks as if the great Creator has done his best for this country, but also, his people have done so little for themselves! Ah, foolish people, will you never learn wisdom, and of two kinds at that?

Very cordially,

MISTER SHIPMAN.

Tutwiler, Miss.

Mississippi Lady Says She Took Black-Draught for These Symptoms and Was "Greatly Relieved."

Starkville, Miss.—"I have been a user of Black-Draught for about twenty years," says Mrs. C. E. Buntin, of R. F. D. 5, this city.

"I used Black-Draught first for constipation," continues Mrs. Buntin. "I would feel dull, stupid, and have severe headaches, even feverish. I had an uneasy, tight feeling in my stomach.

"I read quite a bit about Black-Draught. I began using it and soon my bowels acted regularly and I was greatly relieved. I used it every once in a while for about eighteen years.

"About two years ago I found I was having indigestion, a tight smothering in my chest, then severe pain, especially after eating sweets. I commenced taking just a pinch of Black-Draught after meals and by doing this I could eat about anything.

"I gave Black-Draught to my children for colds and headaches. I can certainly recommend it."

Thedford's Black-Draught is recommended by thousands of others for the relief of indigestion, biliousness and simple ailments due to constipation. Safe, easy to take. Costs only 1 cent a dose. NC-171

THE WORK OF TRINITY METHODIST CHURCH, LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Knowing the general interest throughout our great connection in Trinity Church, Los Angeles, I am writing to give our people some idea of the progress made during the past six years. The membership has grown from practically 900 to more than 3,600. This city is a city of migrating people. We receive large numbers and lose large numbers. During the past six years we have received an average of about 800 members per year. We have lost, by death and removal from the membership of the church, practically 2,000 members within the six years. We are averaging a net increase in membership, however, of about 500 per year. We confidently expect to report the largest membership in our denomination at the next session of the Annual Conference.

During the six years there has been raised in cash for all purposes an amount approximating $365,000. Of this amount, more than $100,000 has been spent on improvement of our building and in the payment of our indebtedness. Trinity Church pays $24,000 per year as salaries to her workers.

Our average preachinig congregation will run around 2,000 people at each service, the evening crowd being the largest. We average more than 300 at our prayer meetings, and more than 1,100 per Sunday at our Sunday schools, which include two mission schools.

The church is organized as completely as any commercial institution could possibly be, and keeps a set of books that would do credit to a banking institution.

A 1,000 watt high power broadcasting station has been installed and is now being successfully operated, at a cost of practically $40,000, which, under favorable conditions, should be heard over that entire part of the United States west of the Mississippi. Our call letters are KGEF, and our wave length is 516.9.

We are sure our people generally will rejoice in the unprecedented prosperity that has come to us out on the Western Coast, and sincerely thank God for his blessings upon our work in this fast growing city.

N. L. ELDER,

Chairman Publicity Committee.

BEGINNING EARLY—AND WELL—AT COFFEEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Advocate Readers: When I go to Annual Conference this fall I hope to be able to say, "I have had a good year, Bishop," and for that reason I have tried to begin the work of this year on time.

We have had our first quarterly conference, and we believe that some worthwhile things were accomplished during the first quarter. It is our purpose to tell you about some of those things in this article.

Two Epworth Leagues have been organized here since Annual Conference. The young people are beginning this work with determination and enthusiasm. We have as our goal in this League work, "The Standard of Excellence," and we hope to reach it this year. The League is a great training school for the young people of our church. It trains them for service.

We have adopted Program "C" in our Sunday school work here at Coffeeville. We hope to reach this standard of efficiency this year. Five certificates in Sunday school work have been issued to the workers in our Sunday school during the first quarter.

The Special Offer made by the Advocate has been accepted and put across here at Coffeeville. We find that about the easiest work that we have to do. If we are to put across the educational program of our church, our people must read our church papers.

I had thought that I would tell you about the "showers" that the good people gave us when we first came to Coffeeville, but it is still "raining," and I hope it won't get dry this year.

Cordially yours,

W. L. ROBINSON.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.).

NOTES BY REV. A. K. McLELLAN.

On Friday, Jan. 7, Rev. C. D. Atkinson and I were present at the missionary meeting held in the Choudrant church. In the afternoon a short meeting was held, in which district matters were discussed. Brother Kleinschmidt, presiding elder, very kindly permitted the Sunday school representatives to present certain vital Sunday school matters. After an introduction by Dr. Atkinson the Extension Secretary presented the very vital subject of Missions and Sunday School Extension in the local Sunday school. A brief round table discussion followed. The preachers and other workers in attendance were very cordial and brotherly and gave great encouragement to the Sunday School Extension work. We could not fail to mention with pleasure the splendid lunch served at the noon hour.

Sunday, Jan. 9, was spent with Brother D. B. Boddie and his loyal workers at Opelousas. Brother Atkinson preached at the morning service, and in the afternoon plans were discussed for a Standard Training School in which would be included a Cokesbury Course. The meeting was well attended. A number of workers from other schools were present.

Monday afternoon we attended a meeting of Sunday school workers of the Shreveport District assembled at the First Methodist Church, Shreveport. The cause of the small Sunday school was sponsored by both the presiding elder and the District Secretary. They especially emphasized the value of training in the small Sunday school, and advocated the constant use of the Cokesbury training course as a means of realizing this value. One Cokesbury school was planned for April 18, with Brother Walton at Logansport. Brother Walton is an approved instructor in the Cokesbury Course to teach "What Every Methodist Should Know." Another school was planned, place and date to be announced later.

On our way to Hornbeck we had a pleasant visit with Brother Dan Anders at Pleasant Hill. He is ready to do what he can for the cause of Religious Education in the Sunday schools on his charge and in that section of his district.

At Hornbeck, Brother J. M. Mashburn, superintendent, we had a very interesting Sunday school institute. A large number were present and much interest was manifested. A "C" Type Program of Work was placed and explained. The work of the Extension Secretary was explained. Teacher training and Missionary Education was stressed with great emphasis. At the close a round table discussion was held. Quite a number from the Barham Sunday school were present, including Brother J. D. Fomby, pastor, and Brother R. W. Cronin, superintendent. These people are doing some real constructive Sunday school work in their churches.

The following night, Jan. 12, we were with Brother R. F. Harrell and his good people at Many. A large number of his Sunday school workers were present. A "C" Type Program of Work was explained and placed. Opportunity was given for questions and presentation of local problems. Missionary Education in the Sunday school was emphasized, especially the use of the Missionary Program. Training in the local school was advocated by introducing the Training class. Brother R. A. Fraser is superintendent, and we are expecting great things from him and his corps of officers and teachers this year in building for the kingdom through Religious Education in the local church.

In promoting the work of Missions and Sunday School Extension 476 letters have been mailed out this week to pastors and superintendents and other workers.

We are anxious to do all we can to reach every school that is desirous of enlisting the aid of the Extension Secretary. Make your plans for a Sunday School Institute or a Cokesbury School or Class and let us know. We shall be glad to assist in any way we can. Any information we can furnish in the way of literature we shall be glad to send you from our office on request.

Pray for us in the work.

Help us to serve.

Drink Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders.

By all means, drink lots of good water every day.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NOTES.

Fine Meeting of Petal League.

Leaguers, wasn't the theme for the Epworth League program, Sunday evening, Jan. 16, 1927, especially fine? We Petal Leaguers feel that we had a very special treat on this Sunday. The Leaguers from Broad Street, Hattiesburg, came out and gave us a beautiful and inspiring program on "Partnership With God." They made us realize what a privilege it is to be a partner with God. I wonder how many of us fail to enjoy this wonderful privilege; if we do, let's make God our partner.

Due to the cabinet meeting of the Conference officers of the Epworth League which was held in Hattiesburg, Jan. 16, we Petal Leaguers were especially fortunate, for we had nine Conference officers with us at the League hour. They were:

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Dean, Meridian, Miss.; Mr. J. H. Weems, President, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Mrs. J. L. Neill, Junior Superintendent, Yazoo City, Miss.; Miss Lucy Mae McMullen, Era Agent, Jackson, Miss.; Miss Lilybec Phillips, District Secretary, Meridian, Miss.; Miss Florida Williams, District Secretary, Fernwood, Miss.; Mrs. Stuart Dunning, District Secretary, Canton, Miss.; Mr. B. F. Harrell, District Secretary, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Miss Berta Nall, Intermediate Superintendent, Petal, Miss.

Miss Berta Nall, of Petal, sends us the above interesting bit of news of the Petal League. We're mighty glad to hear from Hattiesburg District. We feel that we should welcome them with one of our Assembly yells, "Hello, Hattiesburg, and how do you do?" We're proud of this district, for it contains most of our Conference officers, and we are also proud of the Petal League, for it has produced two of our dearly loved Leaguers, Berta and Ralph Nall—or perhaps we should say that these two Leaguers have produced the Petal League.

Post Office Address of League Treasurer.

Rev. L. F. Alford, treasurer of the Mississippi Epworth League Conference, has asked that the Leaguers be notified of a change in his address. He is now living at Raleigh, Miss. He is ready and willing to accept any payment on your African Special pledge. He asks that all District Secretaries who have chapters in their district who have not pledged, to send him the names and address of the president or secretary.

FROM PHILADELPHIA, MISS.

Beginning with Watch Night, we put a preaching program at the evening hour for the first week in the new year, Dr. W. H. Shannon, of the Presbyterian Church, doing most of the preaching. Dr. Shannon is a great preacher, and gave us some of the very best gospel preaching. The meeting was held in our church, as it was the largest auditorium and well furnished for the music. Many of our people reconsecrated their lives to the Master's service, and several were converted and one united with our church on profession of faith.

We have organized for the work of the year, made some advance in the allowance for the support of the ministry, accepted our part of the special, taking some special missionary studies in the Woman's Missionary Society, and will put on some special studies in the League and Sunday school.

We are moving to make our Sunday school come up to the very best, and in May, Dr. Shannon and myself will conduct our own revival meeting. In July, we are looking forward to the Howard S. Williams meeting at the Neshoba Fair Grounds, and we invite any and all to come and be with us in this great meeting.

The new paving is about completed in the city, and now Philadelphia looks like a real little city.

Our League is worthy of special mention, as we had nearly one hundred present at last Sunday evening's service, and we had a banquet at the Mecca Cafe last week with over half a hundred present. As I see it, our young people here need only the leadership, by example of those who are the places of leadership, to make this church go forward by leaps and bounds.

While the low prices for cotton last fall cut pretty deep into the conditions here and many suffered disappointment, things are shaping up in a business way for a great, good year.

The church shall not lag behind in this year of our Lord, and we must have a great prosperous year of it.

Yours most cordially,
W. H. SAUNDERS.

A NOTE FROM DR. W. M. McINTOSH.

Dear Dr. Carley: Please allow me sufficient space to let my friends know where I am and what I am doing. Mrs. McIntosh and I are located for the present at Handsboro, Miss. I had a bad case of influenza just after Conference, and it left me in bad shape. However, I am feeling like my old self again—have entirely recovered.

We are now in a revival, with Brother Vickers as pastor, and the prospects for a great meeting are very flattering. We began last Sunday. Ed. G. Phillips is assisting us in the work. He will be with me for some time. He is not only a splendid choir leader, but a great personal worker among the men.

If any of our pastors are contemplating the holding of a revival in the near future and need our services, we will be glad to assist them.

We are praying and working for two things: A deep spiritual awakening in our church and putting the special collection for the missionary cause over the top. The great needs of our people are a great revival and the quickening of the conscience for the cause of missions. These needs should drive us to our knees. "Revive us again."

Sincerely your brother,
W. M. McINTOSH.
Handsboro, Miss.

INFLUENZA WARNING.

Current reports indicate that the European countries have been visited by another severe epidemic of influenza. * * *

There is no evidence to indicate a high mortality, but it is reasonable to suppose that a large number of the victims suffered from the complications which are frequently so fatal. Almost every one can recall the last great pandemic of influenza that spread over the world, presumably from the Orient, reaching this country in the fall of 1918. This was of a peculiarly virulent nature, as shown by the relatively high mortality which accompanied the disease in every land. Statistics compiled at the time indicate that in the neighborhood of ten millions of people died in India alone. In the more advanced civilizations of Europe and the United States the toll was very great. It has been estimated that in the neighborhood of six hundred thousand people died in the United States as the result of bronchopneumonia, or on account of the intense toxemia of the primary disease.

The greatest mortality was encountered in the more crowded centers of the big cities as well as in the training camps of the army. Contact was mainly responsible for the transmission, and crowded barracks, theatres, moving picture shows and schools were the principal means by which the disease was spread on a large scale. It should, however, not be forgotten that intercourse in the usual and necessary procedures of everyday occupation was also a prolific source of contamination. * * *

An enormous amount of research and investigation was carried on during the latter part of 1918 and 1919, but so far as we are aware no conclusive proof that influenza was due to any specific organism was forthcoming.

The greatest mortality, however, was due to pneumonia, and this pneumonia was caused in the overwhelming majority of cases by secondary infection with a virulent species of streptococcus.

The experiences of 1918 and 1919 have taught us the danger of neglecting an influenzal attack and the necessity for taking extreme care of the body during the period of convalescence. While we may be able to do but little toward preventing the disease, the general knowledge that it is translated by contact is sufficient to warn us at least to avoid too close association with large groups of people. It is also advisable to maintain regular and efficient activity of the bowels. In fact, one of the best ways to combat influenza after it has begun is to keep elimination from all sources at a maximum, the principle being that rapid elimination of toxic substances will prevent the secondary and oftentimes fatal invasion.

We believe that this warning is timely and suggest that those desiring more explicit information address their requests to the State Board of Health.

BATON ROUGE BUSINESS COLLEGE NOTES.

The end of 1926 closes the most prosperous year in the history of the Baton Rouge Business College. More students have been placed in positions, we have had a larger attendance, and a fine college spirit has prevailed throughout the entire year in the earnest band of working business-like students.

This attitude of the students to their work is due partly to their teachers, who are college-trained or specially trained teachers for business colleges. They are enthusiastic and leave nothing undone to fit the young men and women for a business career. This attitude is also due partly to the very complimentary things said about our well-trained students by the business men who employ our graduates. The students in school try to keep up the good name of the Business College when they go to work.

The prospects for 1927 are most flattering, with a large enrollment in January, and inquiries coming for office help for the new year. The Baton Rouge Business College is looking forward to an even better year than the one just ended.—(Adv.)

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 73—No. 5. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3634.

HENRY T. CARLEY, D.D., Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1927. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE CIRCULATION OF THE ADVOCATE.

We are not simply pleading a special cause when we say that we believe that the adequate circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is the most important task confronting the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences.

What the Advocate Exists For.

The Advocate does not exist for its own sake, but for the sake of all the work of the church. When it was established more than seventy-five years ago, it was established as a means to an end, that end being the promotion of all the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in its patronizing territory primarily, but also throughout the borders of the church as far as it might be able to reach. Its function has not been changed through all these years.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a great ecclesiastical organization, connectional in nature, made up of those who have voluntarily assumed its obligations of membership. It is engaged in the great work of establishing, extending, and maintaining the Kingdom of God upon earth. In the fulfillment of its mission, it has developed a comprehensive system of administration and enterprised a program of many activities. Its fullest success in doing its work is dependent upon the intelligent interest and hearty co-operation of all its members.

An Official Organ Necessary.

It is so well and so generally recognized that an organ of communication is needed for every worth while enterprise, that it is not necessary to argue the need of an official church paper. Organizations that are much more limited in their scope of operations than the church maintain their official publications. They do so because of their manifest necessity.

What the Discipline Says.

The General Conference has spoken recently and specifically concerning the need of Conference organs and the duty of circulating them. Pargaraph 73 of the Discipline of 1926 reads as follows:

"For the better instruction of our members and for the promotion of all Annual Conference enterprises, as well as the general work of the church, let Conference organs be maintained by groups of Annual Conferences, or by a single Annual Conference where conditions require it, and, when necessary, let assessments be made for the support of these organs. By means of the budget plan, or in some other practical way, let each church put the Conference organ into every Methodist home. Let the circulation of church periodicals and the distribution of Christian literature be diligently and faithfully promoted by pastors and official members. Let each pastor report, for insertion in the Conference statistics, the number of Methodist families in his charge and the number of Conference organs and general organs taken, and the amount raised for the circulation of these organs."

Circulation of the Advocate Not Adequate.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate is, and has been for many years, the official organ of the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences. Its circulation is not now, nor has it ever been, large enough to enable it to serve the church as it ought to serve it, as it was intended to serve it, and as it could serve it if it went into the homes of even a reasonable number of the membership of the church.

The mere statement that the Advocate is "popular" or "unpopular" in its editorial management ought not materially to affect its circulation—and, as a matter of fact, it has not done so. During its more than seventy-five years of history, it has had many editors and various types of editorial management—but its circulation has never been, even under the most "popular" administration, what it ought to have been. As much as it may hurt our editorial pride to say it, we dare affirm that in this day the editorial page of any paper, religious or secular, is the least important part of it. In the past a few great papers were built around the personality of the editor; but it is not so to-day.

Circulation Dependent Upon Definite Effort.

The adequate circulation of an official organ of the church is dependent upon the active efforts of the pastors and official members of the church. There is no getting around that fact. Where pastors and officials have determined to put the paper into a reasonable number of the homes of their people, they have done so; where they have paid little or no attention to the matter, the work has not been done. There are members of the church—some of them official members of the church, too—who do not even so much as know that there is an official church organ.

The Budget Plan.

The Discipline of 1926 says: "By means of the budget plan, or in some other practical way, let each church put the Conference organ into every Methodist home."

What the Baptists Have Done.

The budget plan—the plan by which the expense of sending the paper into every home represented in the membership of the church is borne by the church as a whole—is probably the best plan that has been devised for the circulation of a church periodical. Rev. Finley W. Tinnin, editor of the Baptist Message, official organ of the Baptists in Louisiana, stated recently to the editor of the Advocate that the Message has a circulation of about 20,000 in Louisiana, practically all of them on the budget plan. There are more than 450 Baptist churches in Louisiana that have put the Baptist Message into their budgets. We'll say that's fine for the Baptists!

A Special Proposition.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate has made a special proposition, looking toward putting the Advocate into every Methodist home, that can be worked by the budget plan or by any other plan that seemes advisable. The plan, in essence, is this: Where at least one-half the families represented in the membership of the church take the paper, the subscription price is $1.25 a year each, the names of subcribers to be sent in lists—not singly—cash to accompany order; or, if cash does not accompany order, the pastor or some other reliable person to become personally responsible for payment when due, specific arrangements being made with the Business Manager of the Advocate in such cases.

The regular price of the Advocate is $2 a year, and all subscriptions other than those taken in compliance with the terms of the special proposition must be accompanied by that amount.

The special proposition price is actually less than the cost of the paper for a year, and it is made possible only by the assessments carried by the Conferences and by the income from advertising; and if the circulation is not maintained, the income from advertising will not offset the loss. It is as clear as anything can be that the special proposition must be accepted pretty generally, or it will have to be discontinued.

What the Methodists Have Done.

The special proposition terminates on April 1, 1927. Up to the time this was written, Saturday, Jan. 29, the following churches had indicated their definite acceptance of the special proposition and their purpose to send in the necessary number of subscriptions in compliance with its terms:

North Mississippi Conference.

Hollandale, L. A. McKeown, pastor.
Batesville, A. T. Clanton, pastor.
Rienzi, M. A. Burns, pastor.
Fulton, E. C. Driskell, pastor.
Algoma, W. M. Hester, pastor.
Abbeville, E. L. Jernigan, pastor.

Crystal Springs, J. G. Galloway, pastor.
Lauderdale, Rolfe Hunt, pastor.
Tylertown, J. M. Lewis, pastor.
Burnside, H. J. Oakley, pastor.
Lake, M. L. White, pastor.
Purvis, C. W. Wesley, pastor.
Coles (Rosetta charge), J. O. Williams, pastor.
Porterville, D. P. Yeager, pastor.
Montrose, S. N. Young, pastor.

Louisiana Conference.

Opelousas, D. B. Boddie, pastor.
Bienville, E. W. Day, pastor.
Campti, P. O. Lowrey, pastor.
West Monroe, A. S. Lutz, pastor.
Gilbert, F. M. Miller, pastor.
Morgan City, Martin Hebert, pastor. (By Geo. Manotte.)
Franklinton, C. C. Miller, pastor. (By Rev. F. N. Sweeney.)
Clinton, B. D. Watson, pastor.

Other churches have indicated that they will take up the special proposition in due time. Only two months remain—the offer expires on April 1. If the Advocate is worth having at all, it is worth circulating. The circulation ought to be increased to at least 20,000 within the next two months.

MY COVENANT WITH THEE.

By Edna Abels Salassi.

As at thy holy table, Lord, I bow,
And, strengthened, go about Life's daily task;
As loving service unto thee I vow,
One blessing, mainly, of thee I would ask—
Not wealth of gold, or fickle earthly fame,
But, Heavenly Father, I would faithful be—
O, fill my soul with thine own sacred flame,
And help me keep my covenant with thee.

Frail human strength, unaided, cannot hope
Great heights or high ideals to attain;
For as with Life's perplexities we cope,
Our weakness renders each attempt more vain;
Yet this I know—that thou wilt never break
The promises that thou hast made to me—
And so, on bended knee, this pray'r I make—
"Lord, help me keep my covenant with thee."

My covenant with thee—each day to feel
That for thy fond approval I have striv'n,
And lived the gospel of an honest deal,
Forgiving others as I'd be forgiv'n;
Kept lips and thoughts from envy, hate, and greed;
Increased in tolerance and sympathy;
For as I meet my neighbor's ev'ry need,
'Tis thus I keep my covenant with thee.

ELI: WHAT ABOUT HIM?

By George N. Stewart.

We learn grand and valuable lessons from the study of characters in the Old Testament. "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and consolation of the Scriptures might have hope. Now the God of patience and comfort grant you to be like-minded one toward another according to Christ Jesus" (Rom. 15:4, 5). Admitting that the moral standard in some things was not just what it ought to have been, they did possess a very high sense of godly piety for what light they had, and God greatly honored them for it.

The subject we have for consideration in this article is one we have studied in our Sunday schools. I believe that there are yet some things to be learned which space and time did not admit of in the study of this great character. The lesson dealt primarily with young Samuel—his training, consecration and early life. Eli and his household were just casually mentioned in their connection with the lesson. It is the desire of the writer to bring to light some things connected with the life of Eli, God's high priest, and the cause of the priesthood passing over to another branch of Aaron's posterity. The historical narrative does not bring out fully everything connected with the moral environment under which Eli brought up his sons, who were heir to his priestly office. But it did leave the inference that he was a very godly man, and that the conduct of his sons grieved his heart, and he faithfully reproved and warned them as any sainted father would do. "Now, Eli was very old, and heard all that his sons did unto all Israel; * * * And he said unto them, Why do ye such things? for I hear of your evil dealings by all the people. Nay, my sons; for it is no good report that I hear: ye make the Lord's people to transgress. * * * Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto the voice of their father" (I Sam. 2:22-25).

There is one expression given in the account which give us some trouble in harmonizing the facts in the case as whether or not he was in any way responsible for their conduct. But when we consider that he did faithfully warn his sons, and the grief it caused him, and that God put the curse wholly upon Eli's sons, it is easily seen that he was immune from any guilt before God. The just and righteous law of God reads thus: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him." Ezek. 18:20. "The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin" (Deut. 24:16).

And again in the way God put Samuel under Eli's influence and guidance, and the manner in which he directed and encouraged the young child, proved that he was morally capable of such confidence.

I would ask the reader to consider the background of Samuel's life compared with that of Eli's sons in their tender years. There is no account of their early training and the influence wielded over them like that of Samuel. Eli's time was taken up wholly in the temple services. There is no mention of his domestic conditions where the little boys were influenced day by day, or whether they were allowed to run at random. There is nothing said about how things went at home while Eli officiated at the altar of God. The unavoidable inference is, that their mother was quite different from that of Samuel, because her name is not once mentioned. No one now can know who she was. Inspiration has left her name a mystery for all time, and I fear it is not recorded in "The Book of Life." The curse fell upon Eli's house."

Eli was God's ordained minister, set apart to the work unto which he was dedicated. There is ot one failure laid to his official charge, unless it was for his leniency and mercy toward his wicked sons, whom he endeavored to reform by his fatherly admonition. It is very evident that the news of their untimely death at the hands of the Philistines was so shocking to him that he was overwhelmed with grief, his strength gave way, and he fell backward and broke his neck. The enemy had defeated the army, captured the ark of God, slain his two sons, his home gone, and his ministry ended. It was more than he could bear. He was brought to shame.

This incident proves the necessity and responsibility of parental influence and training. "A child left to itself bringeth its mother to shame" (Prov. 29:15). "A foolish son is the calamity of his father" (Prov. 19:13). The Scriptures are replete with accounts where mothers of godly men taught them very early in life God's Word and how to live. Take for instance what Paul said to Timothy with reference to how faith was imparted to young Timothy through his grandmother Lois and his mother Eunice (II Tim. 1:3-5). And in chapter 3:14, 15 he further says: "Continue in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them: and that from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith in Christ Jesus." Those godly mothers handed down to their posterity gracious gifts of knowledge of the precious things of God. O what a power either for good or evil lies in the hands of mother! "Her children shall rise up to call her blessed," or they will bring everlasting shame upon her name before the world. There is not a truer maxim than this—"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

Does it seem reasonable that Eli could have attended to his Temple duties and restrained his sons in their earlier life without help at home by a devoted mother? Will some one offer a suggestion why her name was never mentioned in this narrative?

KEEPING UP WITH THE CHRIST OF TO-DAY.

By Rev. Arthur Madison Shaw.

(A sermon delivered at Mooringsport, La., Sunday evening, Jan. 16.)

"The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and to teach." Acts 1:1.

This opening sentence of the "Acts of the Apostles" may seem, at a glance, to be a very commonplace statement of an unimportant fact, a mere prelude to the "treatise" which follows. As a matter of fact, it is a most significant statement, big with meaning, and very pertinent to our theme—"Christian Literature." For one thing, it proves Luke to have been the author of the "Acts," since he refers to a former writing addressed to the same person, Theophilus, which writing was evidently the Gospel of Luke. But it means much more.

I. It declares that Luke had written a treatise: had committed to writing, to be scattered abroad, and to be preserved in permanent form, the Gospel Story. And, in proclaiming this fact, he is in the act of writing another work, realizing the value of the written word.

II. He had written concerning what Jesus did and taught. Christianity is life, an activity, a service. Its deeds are worthy to be published to all the world and to all ages! It is also a doctrine, a message. It is not enough that we know what Jesus did; we need also to know what he taught. It was a Gospel—Good News, Glad Tidings—which the church is commissioned to teach to all men. This, too, Luke found it worth while to write. And how ignorant we should be to-day of the doings and sayings of Christ had not men written and published them!

III. Luke's treatise dealt with "all that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day in which he was taken up." All the wonderful works of "the days of his flesh" were only a beginning. Luke had written of this beginning. All his marvelous words were only a beginning of his teachings. Luke had also written of this beginniing.

IV. On the Day of Pentecost, Jesus came in the person of the Holy Spirit. He was still Immanuel, still with his church, as he had promised; the blessed Paraclete, walking at their sides, dwelling in their hearts. As such, he continued to do, even more wonderfully than before! As such, he continued to teach with greater force, unction, and convincing power than before! Again the pen of Luke is busy; and we have a second treatise: the doings and teachings of the ascended and victorious Christ, through his appointed laborers.

Others also made treatises: Matthew, Mark, John, Paul, Peter, James, and Jude. They all make treatises of what Jesus began to do; of what he began to teach; of what he continued to do; of what he continued to teach. All these must be told in all places, to all peoples, in all ages! And we should know nothing of Jesus now but for these writings.

V. But Christ's work and teaching did not cease with the apostles. The fathers took it up; the Mediaeval church and ministry carried it on; Luther and the Reformers gave it a fresh impulse, under the leadership of the Holy Spirit; it became a mighty revival in Wesley's day; and still it goes on. To-day it swells in a tide of unprecedented missionary activity and zeal. It will conquer the world! What is it? It is just the things that Jesus began—and continues—to do and to teach!

VI. In every age the movement has had its literature. Every phase of development has had its men to make "treatises." The apostles wrote "Gospels," "Acts," and letters full of admonition, encouragement and teaching. The early Christian Fathers wrote tomes of literature. Even the cloistered monks of the middle ages wrote thousands of pages. Luther, Calvin, and Melanchthon put the Reformation into printed volumes. John Wesley was a voluminous writer. And to-day, Bibles, printed in hundreds of languages; innumerable books, large and small; magazines by hundreds and Christian newspapers by thousands, go on—telling what Jesus began and continues to do and to teach.

VII. The importance of this cannot be estimated. Every industry, every business, every profession, has its journals of current thought and news. Every department of learning relies on its publications. Political parties have their papers, and fraternities have their official organs. The devil knows the power of the press, and the world is flooded with the literature of evil. The man with the printed page rules the world, and will continue to rule. The church cannot afford to fail at this point!

VIII. We are not going to rise much above what we read. Tell me what you read, and I'll know what you are.

Here is a man who is a merchant. He reads the mercantile journals and market reports—whatever else he may read. He is a "baseball fan," and as such, reads the "sport page" and the athletic news. He is a Democrat, and as such, reads the party papers. He is a Woodman, and reads the Sovereign Visitor; a Mason, and reads the Trowel. Now this same man is a Methodist, and as such, reads—Nothing! Of all the great literature of his church, he reads nothing! No wonder he knows more about everything else than about the church! No wonder he amounts to more in everything else than in religion!

IX. If you would be a Christian worth while, you must read what Jesus is doing and teaching, now! You must keep up with the Christ of to-day. If you would be an intelligent Methodist, you must read what he is doing and teaching through your own church. Do you know that your own church has great publishing houses, doing a tremendous volume of business—Nashville, Richmond, Dallas, and San Francisco? Do you know that the net profits, amountiing to a hundred thousand dollars annually, go to our needy Conference claimants? Do you know that you can buy any book that ought to be in your home, from your own house?

And do you know that we publish Christian newspapers that are not surpassed by any? Four of these, at least, ought to be in every Methodist home in Louisiana. (1) The Christian Advocate, the General Organ of our church. It keeps one in touch with world-wide Methodism and with world-wide Christian movements. I read many great religious journals, but none superior to our own Advocate. (2) The Missionary Voice. For years I have read the Literary Digest, the Outlook, and other great publications; but from this compact little missionary journal, I have learned more about actual world-conditions, and the customs, needs, aspirations and problems of the peoples of the earth, than from all the others combined. It is a current "Acts of the Apostles!" (3) Then the "Methodist Layman" ought to be read by every man of our church. Organ of the Lay Activities of the church, edited by a layman, for the laymen, it is just what the man in the pew needs and will enjoy. (4) And, finally, the New Orleans Christian Advocate certainly ought to be in every Methodist home in the State. It is the organ of our own Conference. It brings us the news, and keeps us in touch with the thought of the immediate home field. Through it you learn what former pastors are doing; how old associates in the kingdom are faring; and what our neighboring churches are enterprising and accomplishing. Besides all this, some of the brightest, most consecrated and most entertaining writers of the whole church contribute to its pages. Dr. Carley's editorials are worth many times the price of the paper. If it contained nothing but the articles of Bishop Candler and Dr. Sam Steel, it would be one of the best bargains you could buy.

May every church in Louisiana avail itself of the Special Proposition to put this paper in all its homes, at the cost of a dollar and a quarter per year when at least one-half the membership of the church are secured as subscribers. No single thing we can do will help our work and put forward the Master's kingdom more than this!

GREENVILLE DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Missionary Institute for the Greenville District was held at Shelby on Jan. 21. Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, the presiding elder, presided over the meeting. Rev. R. G. Lord was elected secretary. There were over fifty people in attendance, there being only five charges without representation. Greenville, Coahoma and Jonestown, and Duncan and Alligator charges had the largest representation. The attendaince was especially pleasing to those in charge in view of the inclement weather and unfavorable roads.

The spirit of the meeting was fine. In the forenoon Dr. Hawk, a missionary in China for the last 21 years, brought an inspirational message, which was followed by talks from Rev. J. W. Ward and Rev. E. R. Smoot. In the afternoon, Rev. E. N. Broyles, our Conference Missionary Secretray, set before the institute in a very interesting way the plans for the putting on of the missionary cultivation period. This was followed by a masterly address by Dr. Hawk, dealing with the missionary work in China. The institute adopted by a rising vote resolutions endorsing the missioary program now before the church and pledging hearty support in making this program a success.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle, the pastor-host, and the good poople of Shelby spared no effort to make the day a pleasant one for all. It was indeed a profitable day for the Greenville District.

R. G. LORD, Secretary.

SARDIS DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Sardis District Missionary Institute met in the Methodist church at Senatobia, Miss., Jan. 18, at 9 a. m., and continued throughout the day.

The Rev. T. M. Bradley, presiding elder, had prepared an interesting program, which was carried out with much enthusiasm.

The great address of Dr. J. C. Hawk, veteran missionary from Manchuria, made a profound impression on all who heard him.

The Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Conference Missionary Secretary, outlined the cultural program for January and February.

The Findings Committee submitted a report pledging unqualified support to the program, and its purpose "to stifle pessimism" wherever found.

Inspiration addresses were made by Mrs. East, of Senatobia; Mrs. O'Bryant, of Batesville; Judge Holmes, of Senatobia, and others.

The institute was a unit in its purpose to make the period of cultivation a great success, and help to the utmost to secure the million dollars needed to save the missionary enterprises of the church.

The ladies of the church at Senatobia served a bountiful lunch to all in attendance. This wide-awake church knows how to make real the principle of Christian fellowship.

J. M. BRADLEY, Secretary.

REPORT OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE COMMITTEE ON THE STATE OF THE CHURCH.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

This article is written with the purpose of calling the attention of the various Conference Boards to the action of the Mississippi Conference at its last session at McComb City in its unanimous adoption of the report of the Conference Committee on the State of the Church. This report may be found on pages seventy-four and seventy-five of the Conference Journal, which has just come from the press. It will be noticed that in this report no less than four resolutions were offered by the committee to the Conference for its adoption, all of which were adopted by the vote of the Conference without a dissenting voice. The particular attention of the Conference Boards is called to the fourth resolution as follows:

"Fourth—Believing that it would be a source of inspiration and spiritual impetus to the Conference and the local community entertaining our Annual Conference if the evening hours were devoted to preaching, your committee recommends that hereafter the Conference adopt this plan and devote the afternoons to the anniversaries of the various boards."

The adoption of the report as a whole was, of course, the adoption of the quoted resolution or recommendation; and the adoption of the recommendation means, of course, that at the next session of the Conference if any one of the boards holds it anniversary it must be held in the afternoon instead of the evening hour, for which, personally, I devoutly thank the Lord.

I remember that a few years ago the Conference voted to require the boards to hold their anniversaries in the afternoons, so that the gospel might have the right of way at the evening hours, for which many hearts were glad. This program was put into effect at the following session of the Conference with most excellent results; but at the next Conference session thereafter, through the influence of the boards, the Conference, apparently regarding the preaching of the gospel as a matter of minor importance (in action at least), reversed itself, and for the past several years the boards have monopolized the evening hours with their anniversaries, to the exclusion of the gospel, to the regret of many whose hearts were hungry for the preaching of the Word of God.

Now, so far as the preachers are concerned, they have been listening to the same old things at these board anniversaries year after year until they are fed up, and more, and I feel sure that these anniversaries are both uninteresting and unprofitable to the people entertaining the Conference. In fact, at every session of the Conference I have heard from the people of the local community scores of expressions of regret and surprise that the Conference permitted these board anniversaries to be held at the only hours the people of the community had the opportunity to hear the preaching of the gospel; and, according to my way of thinking, the people who entertain the Conference have a right to declare themselves in a matter of this sort.

So, for the reasons named herein, I am rejoicing that at the next session of our Conference both preachers and people will be afforded the pleasure of hearing the preaching of the gospel of the Son of God, unless the Conference again reverses itself, which I sincerely trust it will not do, remembering that the preaching of the gospel is far more important than all the anniversaries ever held. Let everybody say, Amen!

A SALOON BAR.

A bar to heaven, a door to hell,
Whoever named it named it well.
A bar to manliness and wealth,
A door to want and broken health;
A bar to honor, pride and fame,
A door to sin and grief and shame;
A bar to hope, a bar to prayer,
A door to darkness and despair;
A bar to honored, useful life,
A door to brawling, senseless strife;
A bar to all that's true and brave,
A door to every drunkard's grave;
A bar to joys that home imparts,
A door to tears and aching hearts;
A bar to heaven, a door to hell,
Whoever named it named it well.

GRENADA DISTRICT MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

On Jan. 19, the pastors and laymen of the Grenada District met in Grenada to consider the great missionary program now being considered by the church. A fair attendance of the pastors and a number of the representative laymen and good women were present. A number of pastors from other disrticts were present also. Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Conference Missionary Secretray, did his part in a most excellent way, and proved himself well adapted for the work in hand. Dr. J. C. Hawk, of the Manchuria Mission, made two splendid addresses. His grasp of the situation in China is that of a statesman. The institute was helpful to those present, and will be productive of good.

The chairman appointed Revs. W. W. Woollard and S. A. Brown, and Dr. A. W. Milden a Findings Committee, and they submitted the following report, which was unanimously adopted: "We have heard the statements of Rev. E. S. Lewis, the presiding elder; Rev. J. C. Hawk, representing the General Board of Missions from the foreign field, and of the Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Conference Secretary of Missions. From their various statements we have learned of the imperative and immediate needs of the mission fields. We, as members of our church in the Grenada District, believe that our people and churches are moved by the spirit of Christ, and, where properly informed, will respond adequately to this emergency. We therefore urge upon our pastors, but especially our Lay Leaders, that a full campaign of prayer, development and missionary instruction be put on throughout the churches of our district; and, that the campaign of prayer and cultivation be followed by an every-member campaign of solicitation for contributions from all our churches, to be continued until every member of our church within this district has had a pressing opportunity to make his contribution to this great cause."

THE "NEW" NOEL MEMORIAL CHURCH.

(The following account of the reopening of the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., is taken from the Shreveport Journal. The church was opened to the public on Friday night, Jan. 21, for inspection, at which time a short program was given. The formal opening took place on Sunday, Jan. 23, Bishop Warren A. Candler preaching the sermon at 11 o'clock. At the evening hour, Rev. J. O. Hanes, one of the general evangelists of the church, occupied the pulpit, preaching the first of a series of evangelistic sermons. Noel Memorial is one of the leading churches of the Louisiana Conference.—Editor.)

After many months of waiting and confusion, the congregation of Noel Memorial Methodist Church is again worshiping in a completed building. On Sept. 12, 1925, the interior of the church was destroyed by fire. It was very fortunate that, in their time of need, Centenary College with its buildings and equipment was available for use. The pastor and people are very grateful to President Sexton for the generous help so cheerfully extended. Of course, with the Sunday school scattered over the whole Centenary campus, there was much confusion and handicap, but the people have been loyal and patient. Little of the membership of the church was lost on account of the fire. All have looked forward anxiously to the time when the new and more beautiful church should be completed and ready for use.

While the Noel Memorial Church is one of the strongest in the Louisiana Conference, yet the history of the organization covers only about twenty years. According to the records, Rev. R. J. Harp was appointed by the Louisiana Conference in the autumn of 1906 to the "Shreveport City Mission," which had a meeting place on Creswell Street. In his report to the Conference of 1907, Mr. Harp reported thirteen members. Among these were the Noel family, the Binford family and Mrs. Elizabeth Gamble. In the Conference year of 1908-1909 a church building was erected at the corner of Creswell and Wyandotte Streets. For some time this appointment had the official name of "The Creswell Street Methodist Church."

On Feb. 2, 1913, "The J. S. Noel, Jr., Memorial Church" was opened on the present site at Herndon Avenue and Stephens Street. This whole plant was the generous gift of the late J. S. Noel, Sr., in memory of a dearly beloved son, who had passed away. To build such a costly structure in a district so sparsely settled was an act of great faith on the part of Mr. Noel, but it has taken only a few years to prove the wisdom of his procedure. On the date of the opening, the membership was very small, but it has rapidly grown to an organization of more than a thousand. Out of gratitude to Mr. Noel the name of the church will now be "The Noel Memorial Church," in memory of both father and son.

Since the outer walls suffered practically no damage from the fire, the present building is the same size as before. Yet by skillful changes in the plans the architect has given the Sunday school more available space, and at the same time a greater seating capacity to the main auditorium. Much credit is due the building committee and to Garson Brothers, the contractors, for their persistent efforts to make Noel Memorial Church one of the most usable and most beautiful church plants in Louisiana. The beautiful memorial windows, representing different scenes in the life of Christ, have been generously replaced by Mrs. J. S. Noel. The great Pilcher organ is not only very attractive to the eye, but its tonal quality as well is of the finest. The splendid system of indirect lighting and the beautiful chandelier beneath the dome add to the beauty of the auditorium.

Such are a few of the features of the plant that will be thrown open to the public on Friday night, Jan. 21. After a short program of music on the great organ by Professor LeRoy Carison and a few brief remarks by the pastor and officials, the whole edifice will be lighted and opened for inspection. Refreshments will be served by the ladies, and an hour of fellowship will be enjoyed.

The Noel Memorial Church is looking forward to a great year under the leadership of her pastor, Rev. Walter C. Scott. Rev. Harry Brown is the assistant pastor. The Sunday school is well organized and equipped for efficiency under the leadership of Superintendents Victor Matthews and H. E. Gump. Paul M. Brown is the newly elected chairman of the board of stewards. Mr. Brown, one of the prominent younger business men of Shreveport, comes from a parsonage home, and is well informed in matters of church business. Judge William C. Barnette, the retiring chairman of the board, has earned the lasting gratitude of the Noel membership for ten years of efficient service. He has led in the conduct of the affairs of the church with rare and brotherly tact, and fine business acumen.

A CORRECTION CORRECTED.

Dear Dr. Carley: Unless you checked it over, you will have published my statement concerning the error in the statistical membership gain of the Conference last year. Upon a re-check, the error is all mine. In some way as I checked over the gain and losses for the year, the most serious loss sustained, which was by the Minden District, 458, was inadvertently placed in the "increase" column. As usual, Rev. R. W. Vaughan was in the right and I was in error. I have no explanation other than eyes that are not as reliable as they once were, and perhaps too great a zeal that the results of the church for the year show a greater gain. In justice to Brother Vaughan, I would like for you to publish this notice, at least if my former errant article shall appear in this week's issue of the Advocate.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE GOES TO CLARKSDALE IN 1927.

The committee appointed by Bishop Candler at the last session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, consisting of V. C. Curtis, R. A. Tucker and J. B. Randolph, to arrange for a place of meeting for the Conference in 1927, met in Tupelo, Jan. 25, to receive invitations. Three churches, Pontotoc, Clarksdale, and New Albany, invited the Conference to be their guests during its next meeting. These invitations were so urgent, some of them being emphasized by the presence of a large number of representative citizens, the committee was embarrassed and had some difficulty in making its decision. After hearing a number of earnest speeches from the several representatives, the committee took the matter under advisement and made its decision later.

All three places offered the most generous hospitality and assured us that not only would the delegates be made comfortable in the homes, but every facility for the business of the Conference would be provided; but as there has been a custom of long standing for the Conference to alternate from year to year from one side of the territory to the other, Clarksdale had the advantage over the other contestants. The committee, therefore, passed the following resolutions:

Be it resolved:

1. That we acknowledge with due appreciation the urgent invitations and generous hospitality offered us by Pontotoc, Clarksdale, and New Albany.

2. That the invitation from Clarksdale for 1927 be accepted.

3. That it is the sense of the committee that the invitation from Pontotoc for 1928, if it is extended, should receive a most favorable consideration by the Conference.

4. That we inform the presiding elders and pastors that the special assessment levied by the last Annual Conference for entertainment will not be necessary.

CHINA MISSIONARIES SAFE.

Southern Methodist missionaries in China are safe, according to cable advices received Tuesday, Jan. 25, at Mission Board headquarters at Nashville, Tenn. The cable, which was signed by E. C. Peters, secretary of the China Mission, was dated Shanghai, 4:40 p. m., Jan. 25.

The message was in response to an inquiry sent out by Dr. W. G. Cram, General Secretary of the Board of Missions, Dr. O. E. Goddard, and Miss Esther Case, Foreign Secretaries, asking for full information as to the safety of the missionaries and directing that they go to places of safety if necessary. The message states simply: "All are safe; will inform you."

Personal letters, as far as possible, are being sent by the Foreign Secretaries to friends and relatives of China missionaries, reassuring them as to their safety and promising to keep them informed as to the Chinese situation.

There are in all approximately 120 Southern Methodist missionaries in China, representing practically every section of the church's territory.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension, of the Mississippi Annual Conference, will meet at the Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., Tuesday, the 8th of March, at 1:30 p. m.

Let all applications to the General Board be sent to the Secretary, Rev. W. A. Hays, Waynesboro, Miss., before that date.

W. M. WILLIAMS, President.

"Come Up to the Help of the Lord"

A few days ago the daily papers announced that three Senators from the province of Little White Russia in the Polish Parliament had been arrested for high treason. It developed that these men had become the agents of Bolshevism and had accepted and spent large sums of money for the propagation of Bolshevism and Atheism in their province.

Hereby hangs a tale.

Two years ago the Senators from Little White Russia came to Bishop Beauchamp in Poland and begged him to send Methodist missionaries into their province. They promised to accompany the preachers we would send, to secure a hearing for them, to open every town and village for them, even to put our Gospel in the schools of the province.

But we could not accept this invitation. We had no money. Not one evangelist entered Little White Russia.

Two years later we find the White Russian Senators arrested for promoting the propaganda of Atheism among the people whom we could have won had even a small amount of money been at our disposal.

* * * *

That, in a nut shell, is the missionary situation in every non-Christian land on earth. While the Christian forces are retrenching, blatant Atheism pours in in mighty volume and, backed by powerful and influential agencies, it bids for the support of the multitudes.

The issue everywhere is clear cut and well defined. It is Christianity or Atheism. It is the one God or a denial of God's very existence. And if the teeming millions of the non-Christian world build their new structure of society upon Atheism, what of the future?

* * * *

What a shame it is that Christ's Church should hesitate in such an hour!

Yet that is exactly what Methodism is doing. Our aggressive evangelism has been practically stopped on every field—the very work which should never be stopped—and at the present rate our Church will soon be mainly an agency operating only social service institutions in mission fields.

Why?

Because our missionary expenses—even at the present low ebb—are $1,500,000 a year and our regular income from the missionary assessments is only $600,000 a year. And even this is decreasing annually, in spite of our growing wealth.

* * * *

But our Church has made up its mind to have done with hesitation. We are in a fair way to emerge from the indebtedness which has handicapped us. Everywhere preachers and people seem to be rallying with the old-time loyalty to the cause of world evangelization, and are determined to lay upon the altar a freewill offering for missions which will enable our Church to take up anew the crusade for a redeemed world.

* * * *

Our new policy—written in the Discipline, and also evident in the determination of the people—calls us to undertake an intensive missionary cultivation campaign in every congregation during the first two months of each year, and late in February, so it is written, "each member of the Church shall be given an opportunity to make a freewill offering for maintaining the general work of the Board."

There is no Church anywhere—no matter how remote, how small, how poor, how burdened with other enterprises—that cannot "give every member an opportunity to make a freewill offering for missions."

* * * *

But there is a higher urge upon the Churches than that of the legislative enactment.

It is the duty laid upon them by Christ—the duty of duties, before which all other interests must be subordinate—that of preaching the Gospel unto the uttermost parts. This obligation we may ignore or spurn, but we cannot eliminate or alter it.

* * * *

"Come up to the help of the Lord." Obey the law of our Church. Fulfill the superlative command of Jesus Christ. Lead your people in a mighty movement for the world's redemption.

"Let every member of every congregation be given an opportunity to make a freewill offering for missions."

AT CHURCH FORTY-ODD YEARS AGO.

By Frances Minor Crymes.

The Eleven O'Clock Service.

Before the Sunday school period was over, but after the lessons were said and the school was reassembled, the sexton rang the first bell for the morning church service, which was held in the uptairs auditorium; this great noise in no sense disturbed the downstairs service—in fact, the sonorous sound of the big bell filling the building lent a charm to the occasion. The school dismissed, there were a few minutes of confusion during the dispersing of the children thought too young to remain, then a general exodus of their elders to the floor above took place.

In those days the dignified old practice of sitting in families yet persisted, so much better in every respect than the later manner of grouping—a row of boys here, one of girls yonder, parents near the front, and young men on the back seats.

The organ and choir occupied one "amen corner" in those days. There was a little round marble-topped table standing between the organ and pulpit, proudly bearing an alleged triple-plated water pitcher, set in a frame so as to tilt upon gentle persuasion. We regarded this as a sumptuous feature of church fittings; the Home Mission Society never made more highly valued contribution to the church it served. Children cherished their thirst all morniing so as to have a chance to quench it at this shining source; Uncle Aleck had to fill it more than once, an awkward addition to his duties at this hour, for, immediately after the ringing of the second bell, he had to hold himself in readiness to pump the imitation pipe-organ that was the glory of the sacred edifice, with glittering pipes and double banks of keys. The water had to be drawn from a cistern in the parsonage back yard, and conveyed by hand to its honorable position.

Uncle Aleck sat in plain sight; his labor was performed upon the lever, with the eyes of the entire congregation upon his perspiring back, so that he felt himself of quite as much importance as the organist. To see him hurry up the narrow side aisle was worth something—he had to walk the full length of the auditorium to reach his chair. During the summer months he used to remove his coat. During the sermon he always slept. To this day I can recall the preliminary clashing of that lever before the organ got its wind, so to speak. Uncle Aleck expended so much muscular force on the first half-dozen movements that it would not have been surprising had the organ been hoisted from its place.

While the congregation was assembling, the children began slipping out of their seats to go up for a drink from the fascinating pitcher—some went twice, unless stopped by one of their elders and turned back before leaving the pew in which they were seated. This was kept up until the voluntary was played, even though the pitcher had long been dry; it looked as if there were expectation of a miracle to be performed like that of the exhaustless cruse of oil and barrel of meal, for the sacred vessel, not having been provided for the regalement of the congregation, but for the use of the preacher during the ardors of the services, held not more than two quarts.

The choir was seated on three hard benches set at right angles to those set for the congregation; on the other side of the chancel were three like benches, never occupied except during protracted meetings, save by one or two old deaf gentlemen. Directly in front of the chancel two of our great-aunts sat, holding their freshly shined tin trumpets. I used to slip out and find the hymns for them after I grew to be a big girl and was not afraid to ask the organist for her list of hymns to be used. The one great-aunt who was not deaf sat in her own pew with her children beside her. Sometimes she was asked to offer the prayer after the sermon; she had the gift—her hearers were always thrilled, for they felt that her fervid pleading, her worshipful praise, could not fail to reach the ear and touch the heart of him who promises to answer the prayers of his children.

Sometimes the preacher would come down from his pulpit and stand close to the chancel rail, for the benefit of the two sweet deaf women seated near, and the sight of their faces, eyes and trumpets turned hopefully up, was something to be remembered. It was like flowers turning toward the sun, or parched vegetation reviving after rain. Most Sundays they went home after the service without greater uplift than that gained by their observance of God's command that we forsake not the assembling of ourselves together in his house, by their preparation for it, and the worshipful feelings inspired. That was God's day, and they were in his house—they entered his courts with thanksgiving. They lifted their hearts, their voices; their eyes looked to the giver of every good and perfect gift.

At that time no tinted panels of translucent glass were set in those old brick walls, dimming the light that passed through leaded panes; there were big, high windows of many panes, backed by strong Venetian blinds that were never opened; English sparrows colonized between shutters and sash. During many a sermon we've watched the parents of a brood feed them with worms and grasshoppers, seeing the wide-stretched bills opened to receive these doles. Once a year the windows were cleaned, a hazardous and arduous piece of work. Spider webs grew hoary with dust; sparrows reared several broods between these annual house-cleanings. They furnished entertainment for the youthful members of the congregation, which may have been reason enough for their existence.

It was always amusing to see the preacher pull his coat-tails apart when he sat down; and when, as he preached, he reached gropingly for his handkerchief, drawing it from the queerly placed pocket in the rear, mirthful glances were exchanged between various young peoople seated here and there amidst the congregation, and there were various small snickers heard.

On one hot August Sunday, when a missionary sermon was to be reached and the collection devoted to the spread of the gospel, the glorious old hymn was sung, beginning:

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand"—

the last stanza:

"Waft, waft, ye winds, the story
And you, ye waters, roll" thrilling our devout young hearts.

We sang with gusto, this being one of the hymns we had learned at home; on Sunday afternooons we older children studied the words of the one agreed upon, selected for us by mother or father, recited to mother to make sure we were letter perfect, then followed her to the piano where she played the accompaniment and sang with us until we had learned it perfectly. After fifty years, we can still sing them. We acquired a splendid repertoire; one of memory's choicest pictures is of that group, with father delightedly listening. We always took part in the hearty congregational singing, so fine a feature of public worship. On this day, as I joined with fervor in the singing, I observed a coral necklace of three lovely strands, confined by a gold clasp about the neck of a little girl who sat before me. The association of hymn and trinket was so strong that, as I sang, I pictured the sandy beach where sported throngs of naked brown children, a background of palm trees with monkeys hanging by their tails from the foliage high against the sky, where white clouds floated upon a wonderful blue sea; every child would be wearing three or more strands of coral bits about its neck, while the burning sand beneath their feet was thickly strewn with pieces of glowing red coral, all ready to be strung.

Again, when the lesson read from the pulpit was the story of the adoring convert who broke the alabaster vase of precious ointment, pouring the odorous contents upon the Savior's feet, my thoughts flew to the what-not in our parlor, where stood a pair of so-called alabaster vases, whose design was a lovely hand, ringed, clasped about a sort of goblet; a snowy wrist, braceleted, the spread lace of an imaginary sleeve forming the base. I saw myself, kneeling at the feet of Jesus, devoutly pouring attar of roses upon them from one of these vases, and wiping them with my hair, which was unusually long and abundant for a child of my age.

There were other homes in that town and country-side where such standards were upheld—have they perished from the earth? Where now is a home where children cluster about their mother to sing their Maker's praise? Can boy or girl be found who can sing without book, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Rock of Ages;" "A Charge to Keep I Have;" "Am I a Soldier of the Cross;" "Soldiers of Christ, Arise;" "Lead, Kindly Light;" "How Firm a Foundation;" "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name;" with others of their ilk?

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A., Retired.

Number 2.

I make no claim to superiority in any direction. Probably there have been men commissioned in the army who knew as little as I did of what was expected of them, but certainly none who knew less. I had never been thrown with army people or troops. My only experience was when a very small boy, and the recollection was like that of a nightmare. Some Yankees came to our house one day and began helping themselves to what corn was in the crib. Grandmother began blowing the dinner horn. One of them asked her why. She replied, "Hamm's men are back of the field and I am calling them." "There was mounting in hot haste," and "They stood not on the order of their going." Hamm's men were a terror to evil-doers of that kind, but they were possibly 100 miles away. It seems paradoxical that one of the companies of this organization of Hamm's daredevils was commanded by the gentle and saintly D. W. Babb, now a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference. Bayard Taylor was right:

"The bravest are the tenderest,
The loving are the daring."

On receiving my commission from Governor McLaurin, I went out to camp to report to Colonel R. W. Banks, the commanding officer. The guard-house was at the entrance to the camp, and as I rode in the sentry called, "Turn out the guard!" Ah, thought I, they have heard of my coming, and intend to show me some honor. At his call the guard came hurrying and skurrying to take their places. I said to myself, I guess it is up to me to show my appreciation by a neat little speech. I began trying to gather my wits so that I would be able to say something to keep them from knowing how big a fool I really was. Just then another carriage dashed by me, and I saw the commanding officer waving a salute. Then it dawned on me that possibly this hurrying and skurrying was not in my honor after all.

A detailed account of my reporting to the Colonel and of my efforts to adjust myself to this new environment needs an Irvin Cobb or other gifted humorist—I cannot do the subject justice, nor shall I try. All a man needs do to find how little he knows is to step out of the beaten path with which he is familiar. The Colonel was very kind. I made my little speech when I reported to him, and he said, "All right, chaplain, we need you and we are glad to have you. If you will excuse my occasional profanity, I am sure we shall get along nicely. If we do not, I shall try to see that it is not my fault." And we did. Bob Banks had his faults, as all human beings do, but he was a gentleman, generous and lovable, and I am proud that I could claim him as my friend.

Three days after I reported, yellow fever was reported in the city of Jackson, and a strict quarantine was established. Just as soon as transportation could be secured we were sent to Camp Hamilton, Lexington, Ky.

The Home Circle

A MOTHER'S GIFT—THE BIBLE.

Remember, love, who gave thee this,
When other days shall come,
When she who had thy earliest kiss
Sleeps in her narrow home.
Remember, 'twas a mother gave
The gift to one she'd die to save.

That mother sought a pledge of love,
The holiest, for her son,
And from the gifts of God above
She chose a goodly one.
She chose for her beloved boy
The source of light and life and joy.

She bade him keep the gift, that when
The parting hour should come,
They might have hope to meet again
In an eternal home.
She said his faith in this would be
Sweet incense to her memory.

And should the scoffer, in his pride,
Laugh that fond faith to scorn,
And bid him cast the pledge aside,
That he from youth had borne,
She bade him pause, and ask his breast,
If she or he had loved him best.

A parent's blessing on her son
Goes with this holy thing,
The love that would retain the one,
Must to the other cling.
Remember, 'tis no idle toy,
A mother's gift! Remember, boy!

ANNE HASKINS' DOLLAR.

Mrs. Gerald Whitney rustled into her pew as the minister was speaking.

She wore her new gown to-day—Madame Johnson's latest creation. Her hat came from Paris. It was nice to come to church in such beautiful clothes. It gave one such a superior feeling.

She seated herself leisurely.

What was it the minister was talking about?

"I've just received a letter from Anne Haskins," he was saying, "and she has enclosed a dollar for missions. She knew that we were taking our collection to-day, and she wanted to have a part in it. You remember Anne has gone to Finley to stay with her sister for a few weeks. Her sister was left a widow recently, and Anne has gone on to see what she could do."

Mrs. Gerald Whitney lifted her head.

Anne Haskins!

That little faded, stoop-shouldered woman who always washed the dishes at the chicken pie suppers—who took care of the communion glasses—who never missed a missionary meeting—who always swept and dusted the church when the janitor was sick and who went down to the parsonage when the children had the measles and stayed until the epidemic was over.

Why was she giving a dollar to missions? She looked as if she needed every dollar herself.

And then, while the minister was still talking, something happened. Mrs. Gerald Whitney's heart was touched.

A flush of shame mounted to her forehead.

She thought of her Paris hat and the sum she had paid Madame Johnson for her gown.

She drove home slowly, but she couldn't get the troublesome question out of her head. Why had Anne Haskins, who had so little, given that dollar to missions?

A forgotten passage of Scripture flashed into her mind. Where had she heard it?

"Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion."

She, Mrs. Gerald Whitney, was that—secure in her wealth and social position and the possession of diamonds and fine gowns and everything that money could buy.

"Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion."

That was she, Mrs. Gerald Whitney.

She pondered those words all that day, and that night she could not sleep. In her troubled dreams she saw Anne Haskins and she was holding out her dollar, and saying:

"I gave, I gave my life for thee,
What hast thou given for Me?"

She went down to the parsonage Monday morning.

The minister glanced at her inquiringly as she sat opposite him in the little study.

"I've come to make you a contribution to missions," she began.

Then she told him of what Anne Haskins' dollar had done for her.

"She's such a poor, pale little thing," she went on. "She washes such huge piles of dishes at our suppers—her old-fashioned hat is so funny and her worn old jacket so pitiable. When you told of her gift yesterday morning it seemed as if I couldn't get away from it. On one side was Anne Haskins' dollar, and on the other, me, with my new clothes and Paris hat. I put in a quarter yesterday at the offering and, oh, I am so ashamed of it."

As she spoke she emptied her mesh bag into her lap.

Out of it fell dollars, half dollars, quarters, dimes and a gold piece or two.

She arose and pressed the money into the minister's hands.

"Take it," she said tremulously, "and use it in the cause of missions. It comes from a soul awakened—a heart regenerated."

Her voice trembled.

"It is the gift of one who once sat at ease in Zion. May the Lord forgive me."—Susan Hubbard Martin, in Kind Words.

THE VALUE OF KINDNESS.

By L. M. Weston.

One windy afternoon, a woman, with her two children, sat in a light buggy in front of the village store, waiting for her husband to make some purchases. The horse, usually, stood without hitching, and although the woman held the reins, she did not know how to drive, and had no idea the horse would move until her husband told him to go.

Suddenly the wind blew a newspaper along the road and frightened the animal, and he started to run. One or two men grasped the situation, rushed up and snatched at the bridle, but the big, powerful beast shook them off in a twinkling and increased his speed.

Although terrified, the woman still held the reins and pulled as hard as she could, but her puny stregnth had no effect upon the hard mouth of the horse. Finally it occurred to her to speak to him. Although she did not drive, she was very fond of horses and had often fed and watered this one. "Who-a John," she called in a trembling voice. The effect was magical. The animal slowed down immediately. He associated that voice with kindness, knew its owner could be trusted, and, when she spoke again, he stopped.

"Just the art of being kind is all this sad world needs," sang Ella Wheeler Wilcox, but alas! sometimes it appears to be a lost art, although there is no limit to its power. Abraham Lincoln probably owed his elevation to the presidency of the United States to the fact that he was a past master in the art of being kind, and so won the allegiance of his fellow-men. Kindness, when unalloyed by fear or self-seeking, is a god-like attribute, and, consciously or unconsciously, is recognized as such throughout the universe.—Our Dumb Animals.

THE TWO-DAY PLAN—A NEW YEAR'S SUGGESTION.

By S. R. Cate.

A girl who had made her life useful and successful told a younger cousin how she did it. "I wasn't a bit worth while in life," she explained, "until I took up the two-day plan. I found it in a magazine."

"The two-day plan?" asked the cousin. "What is that?"

"Why, there are two rules in this magazine article. One was, 'Forget the day that is done,' and the other was, 'Prepare to make the coming day the best day you ever knew.' So when I started out to try it, I called it the two-day plan. I always had worried a lot over things after they had happpened. I used to go over them in my mind, and fret about them. But now I have stopped that. The two-day plan leaves it all behind. What I must think about is how to make to-morrow better, for to make it the best day ever you have to put into it prayer, Bible reading, kindness, truth, and hard work. You never can be satisfied, but must always aim for a still better day. Try the two-day plan awhile. You will find it a good plan and you will be happier."—Queen's Gardens.

"TIME OUT."

"Who was Shylock, Aunt Ethel?"

"My dear! And you go to Sunday school and don't know that!"

"Can you imagine any one going to bed with his shoes on?"

"Who does that?"

DIRECTIONS.
All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.
Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

EDITORIAL.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

On account of unusual demands upon our space for this issue of the Advocate, some material has unavoidably been left over, greatly to our regret. We are doing the best we can do with the space at our disposal.

The fire loss in America in 1925 was $559,428,858—$1,064 a minute!

We learn from the Southern Reporter, Sardis, Miss., that the Howard S. Williams evangelistic party will hold a meeting in Sardis, Aug. 7-28. The revival campaign will be a union effort.

A class of forty-six was received into the membership of the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., on a recent Sunday evening. Rev. W. C. Scott is the pastor of this great church.

"There is fine interest in church matters here in Newton among all the churches, and the Methodist church is second to none of them," writes Rev. F. L. Applewhite, our pastor at Newton, Miss.

The Alumni Association of Centenary College is issuing, through its Publicity Committee, a monthly news letter. Governor O. H. Simpson, of Louisiana, is a member of the class of 1890 of Centenary.

The official board of Felicity Methodist Church, this city, has increased the assessment for the pastor's salary by $300. The work of the church moves forward under the leadership of Rev. R. L. Armstrong.

"We have one new Woman's Missionary Society and one Junior Missionary Society since Conference, and our work is starting off hopefully," writes Rev. W. W. Perry, our pastor at Sulphur, La.

Rev. Mr. Gordon, serving the Lyman charge, Seashore District, as a supply, is, according to reports coming to the Advocate office, proving highly acceptable and is meeting with great success in his work.

Rev. R. E. Woodfin, of the Sardis circuit, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "I wish to correct the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference as to its showing of the Sardis circuit. We paid our Grenada special ($25) in full, and $15 on the Orphanage, neither of which is shown in the Minutes."

Rev. J. S. Maxey is having a good year on the Corinth circuit. He serves a fine people, who have shown their appreciation of the pastor by adding $250 to the amount assessed for pastoral support this year.

Of the 1,285 names canvassed among the undergraduate student body of Duke University recently, only sixty-five were found to have no church affiliation. The Methodists lead, with 865; the Baptists are second, with 140.

The Journal of the Mississippi Conference is from the press, and a copy reached the Advocate office on Jan. 21. It is well arranged and well printed, reflecting great credit upon the editors, Dr. A. F. Watkins and Rev. W. B. Jones.

The three churches composing the Mount Olive charge, Mississippi Conference, have bought the missionary study book in a fine way, and a school of missions will be conducted in the three churches by the pastor, Rev. J. L. Carter.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, our pastor at Chunky, Miss., requests us to state that if any good doctor is looking for a good location, he will learn something to his advantage by communicating with him at once. A Methodist doctor is preferred.

The Big Brothers Class, Greenville, Miss., recently lost four of its members by death within ten days—Richard Lancaster, W. B. Smith, Hugh C. Watson, and B. Camp Wheeler. How blessed are the consolations of the Gospel in such a sorrow!

The many friends of Dr. U. G. Foote will learn with sorrow of the death of Mrs. Foote, which occurred in Crestwood, Ky., on Dec. 29. Dr. Foote was pastor at Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, several years ago, and he has many friends in the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. Leon I. McCain, pastor at Minden, La., writes: "Our congregation here, by a unanimous vote in regular church conference session, renewed our pledge to give full-time support to our pastor, Rev. Pierre von Suningen, at Aerschat, Belgium." Fine for Minden!

Mrs. Gayle C. Beanland, with her husband, a missionary of the Presbyterian Church in Africa, is expected home in the spring, as is also Mr. F. S. Williams, engaged in business in Tientsen, China. These are son and daughter of Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Mississippi Conference.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, has shown a change for the better within the past few days, and his loved ones are now hopeful that he will be restored to health. The many messages of interest and sympathy that have been received by him are deeply appreciated.

Dr. Wilburt Cornell Davison, assistant dean of the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, has recently been elected dean of the new School of Medicine at Duke University. Dr. Davison is the son of a Methodist preacher, Rev. W. L. Davison, a superannuated member of the New York East Conference.

This from the Methodist Messenger, official organ of the great First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., sounds mighty good: "Please let every home in our congregation not already subscribing to the Advocate be ready at an early date, when we shall hope to enlist one thousand homes as subscribers to our paper."

Yes, we ran across Rev. John L. Sutton, manager of the Mississippi Home Finding Society, in our recent little visit to Jackson, Miss. Brother Sutton is a former member of the Louisiana Conference, now of the Mississippi Conference, who has gained a national reputation in the fields of child welfare and prison reform work.

The meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, March 9-16, at Shreveport, La., draws near. This is one of the great gatherings of the church, and Shreveport is making elaborate preparations for its entertainment. Hundreds of Methodists in this section will doubtless take advantage of the opportunity to visit the Council in session.

The Parker Memorial congregation, this city, has purchased the property immediately behind the church, facing on Perrier Street, and will remodel the two-story building to accommodate its growing Sunday school, pending the erection of a modern religious education building. Rev. L. W. Cain is the forward-looking pastor of Parker Memorial.

Dr. F. M. Freeman, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Texarkana, Ark., formerly of the Louisiana Conference, in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, takes occasion to speak appreciatively of the paper. Dr. Freeman sends love and greetings to his Louisiana brethren. He is having a most successful pastorate in his present charge.

According to newspaper announcements, Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, Rev. Bob Shuler, of Los Angeles, and Professor G. P. Wycoff, of Tulane University, this city, will discuss the question, "Should Our Marriage Code be Changed?" at a meeting to be arranged in New Orleans on April 16 and 17. "Bob" Shuler, as he is nationally known, is the pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, South, in Los Angeles.

Sixteen men of the Baraca class composed the choir at the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss., on last Sunday night. The congregation was unusually large and seemed to enjoy the music. The Baraca class has an average attendance of about seventy-five. It is taught by Ex-Governor Lee Russell. The sermon of the pastor, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, on "The Three Mountain Peaks of Paul's Life," was highly spoken of.

The Fondren Lectures for 1926 at Southern Methodist University were delivered by Dr. Henry N. Snyder, president of Wofford College, on the subject, "The Persistence of Spiritual Ideals in English Letters." The volume containing the lectures is just from the Cokesbury Press; price, $1.50. Dr. Snyder is one of the great present-day teachers of English literature, and a bare dip into the volume shows that much pleasure and profit are in store for its readers.

Rev. John G. Snelling, Louisiana Conference Missionary Secretary, is diligently at work in carrying forward the missionary program of the church. He has preaching engagements for every Sunday of February for both morning and evening hours, as follows: McDonoghville, Algiers, Bogalusa, Franklinton, Homer, Franklin, Hammond, Amite. He preached last Sunday at Jackson, La., in the morning, and at Carrollton Avenue, New Orleans, in the evening.

Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor of the Kurthwood and Alco charge, and Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor at Natchitoches, both of the Louisiana Conference, were appreciated callers at the Advocate office this week. Brother Fontaine reported that the missionary free-will offering has already been taken on his charge, more than amount assigned secured, and the check sent to the treasurer, and that all the benevolences have been provided for. Brother Johns is steadily gaining in strength after a severe operation, and expects soon to be restored fully to health.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, pastor at Lauderdale, Miss., under date of Jan. 25, writes: "Yesterday afternoon the ladies of the Missionary Society and a few other friends brought in a 'parsonage shower,' mostly attractive dishes and table ware. Somebody said the knives, forks and spoons were guaranteed for twenty-five years; if so, some other pastor's family may get to use them awhile. Really, most of the material is a permanent contribution to the parsonage home. We are getting ready for our Missionary Special here and at Electric Mills."

Felicity Methodist Church especially, and New Orleans Methodism generally, suffered a great loss in the death of Mrs. Ellen Sullivan on Jan. 16. She was one of the saints of earth. She united with Felicity on Dec. 10, 1876, during the pastorate of Dr. J. B. Walker. She had passed her eighty-fourth birthday when the end came. The funeral service was conducted on Jan. 17 by her pastor, Rev. R. L. Armstrong. She is survived by four sons and one daughter and many other relatives and friends who revere her memory. The editor of the Advocate feels a keen personal sorrow in the passing of this good woman.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, writes: "The Statistical Secretary, Rev. R. W. Vaughan, is not responsible for error in statistical tables of the Shreveport District referred to in your columns last week. Rev. A. L. Harper failed to report Conference assessments on the Elm Grove-Harmon charge, and the presiding elder gave wrong figures to the Statistical Secretary for Texas Avenue Church. The fault is ours—not Brother Vaughan's. What I was trying to say was, the Shreveport District paid 94 per cent of the Conference assessments in 1926, and we want to make it 100 per cent for 1927." We prophesy that they will do it, too.

MRS. CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

I did not know of the decease of that saint of Mississippi Methodism, Sister Galloway, until I read the notice in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of Jan. 20.

In my day I have had two saints, outside of my own precious mother, who showed a deep motherly interest in me and whom I have always loved with a devotion akin to the love I have for my precious mother. Sister Galloway was one of those saintly women.

I went to Millsaps College in September, 1894, a very timid, shrinking, unsophisticated youth. I have never known how it happened, but I had not been at Millsaps very long before I got a most cordial invitation to have Sunday dinner at the home of Bishop Galloway. I went to that home with many fears and tremblings, but I had not been in the presence of dear Sister Galloway five minutes before I was feeling as much at home and as much at ease as I felt in the presence of my own precious mother. From that hour until I graduated in 1899, I walked in and out of that Christian home with an ease, confidence and love akin to that felt as I walked in and out of my father's home.

Henry Thompson, you and I were greatly privileged and blessed in the freedom shown to us in the home of Bishop Galloway while we were but students and more or less green and unsophisticated. To us Sister Galloway and her thought for us was a green spot in our college life. I shall never cease to thank God for the privilege accorded us in that home and for the sweet, gentle, Christian influence of Sister Galloway over our lives.

It is no wonder that Dr. E. H. Galloway has become one of the great and efficient physicians of our capital city. Had he developed into aught else than a great and useful man, that would have been the wonder. When I think back upon the days of 1894-'99, memory paints many pictures upon the screen of recollection, but while the faces thereupon change, come and go with the fleeting thoughts, there are a few faces that never pale or grow dim. Among those that never dim are the faces of Sisters Galloway and Ethelbert.

Heaven is being populated rather rapidly these days with saints whose lives have greatly blessed mine. I thank God for every holy influence that has touched my life, and I especially thank God for the sweet, hallowed and uplifting influence of dear Sister Galloway upon my life.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE-WIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING.

A Conference-wide meeting of presiding elders, pastors, Sunday school officers and teachers, and all others who are interested in the Sunday school work of our Conference, will be held in Jackson, Miss., on April 5 and 6, in Capitol Street Church.

Dr. J. W. Shackford, Secretray of the General Sunday School Board, with the heads of several of the departments of the Board, together with outstanding workers from other Conferences, will be on the program. There will be group meetings for the benefit of all, and workers will have the opportunity of getting help for their needs in these group meetings. Several great inspirational addresses will be given at different times.

This promises to be the greatest Conference-wide Sunday school meeting our Conference has ever held. It is earnestly hoped the attendance will be great. Let us pray to this end. If we pray for it, and work for it, it cannot help but be a great success.

J. L. CARTER,
Secretary, Conference Sunday School Board.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING LOUISIANA CONFERENCE COLLECTIONS.

Resolved by the presiding elders and representatives of the Conference Boards, certain laymen, and other members of the Louisiana Conference, assembled in conference on call of Bishop Candler at Shreveport, Jan. 24:

1. That we deeply appreciate the interest of the laymen of the Conference as expressed in the action of the Conference Board of Lay Activities, urging that provision for full Conference collections be made by an Every-Member Canvass in each church in the early part of the year.

2. That we urge, in keeping with the spirit and purpose of this action, that such canvass be made as early in the year as possible, in due consideration of the necessity of completing the Missionary Cultivation Campaign, and the Superannuate Endowment Movement; and that in any case such Every-Member Canvass be completed before May 31.

3. That, in providing for all the Benevolences of the church, we would call the attention of our pastors, Sunday schools and congregations to the enlarging work and needs of our Orphanage, and urge that increasing contributions be made at Easter and Harvest Day to meet these needs.

CAN AMERICA AFFORD TO GIVE MORE TO BENEVOLENCES?

By Rev. W. E. Hogan.

The United States is worth $350,000,000,000, figures which we cannot comprehend.

Our wealth is greater than the combined wealth of Great Britain, Ireland, France, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Spain, Holland, Italy, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, and is increasing at the rate of $10,000,000,000 annually.

The American Educational Digest is authority for the following table of how the American dollar was spent in 1924:

Crime	.0825
Waste	.1400
Luxury	.2200
Church	.0075
Government	.1500
Education	.0150
Living	.2450
Saving	.1100
Miscellaneous	.0300
	10,000

Nearly fifty per cent of our expenditures go for crime, waste and luxury! There is abundance of money available for endowment of colleges and all other benevolences if it were only used properly.

MY CHOICE.

The world is such a lovely place
When I've been good
And done through all the livelong day
The things I should.
The sun is bright as bright can be,
The birds sing, too,
And I can't help but just be glad.
Now shouldn't you?
And when I go to bed at night,
The stars above
Seem kindly eyes that shine on me
With smiles of love.

The world is such a dreary place
When I've been bad.
The sun won't shine! The birds won't sing
To make me glad.
My kite will not fly at all,
My horse won't go,
My tower of blocks all tumbles down.
How do they know?
And when I go to bed at night,
The stars just seem
To be glittering eyes of beasts
That glow and gleam.

I like the sunny days the best
When I've been good,
And all through the day I've done
The things I should.

TO OUR PASTORS.

The Business Manager of the Advocate has sent to all the preachers the necessary envelopes, blanks, etc., for putting on the Advocate campaign. If any one of them has failed to receive this literature, a card to the office to that effect will bring a supply. The time to put the Advocate in the homes of all our people at the Special Rate is slipping by, and our pastors are urged to act quickly, if the campaign is to be a success.

RESOLUTIONS

By the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church of Logansport, La.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord—that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in his tender mercy, has taken to her eternal rest our much beloved and honored member, MRS. ELIZA HALL PRICE, who died at her home in Logansport, La., on Jan. 2, 1927, whose years had ripened so beautifully into and beyond threescore and ten, and who, through all these years, from young womanhood, had been a constant and loyal member of the Methodist church; and,

Whereas, she was, from the organization of the Woman's Missionary Society of her church, a diligent and earnest member, serving the Society in every position, many years as its president, and many times teacher and instructor of the Bible lesson; and,

Whereas, her passing marks a distinct loss to the Christian forces of our community, a dominant force for righteousness, ever patient and cheerful during her long illness, bearing her sufferings as a true Christian. Her death on earth was her birthday in heaven; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of this Society endeavor to follow the example set by her in loyalty, diligence and faithfulness.

Resolved, further, That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family, commending them to the merciful care of our Heavenly Father, who has promised that those who mourn shall be comforted.

Resolved, further, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Society, a copy be sent the family, and copies furnished the Inter-State Progress and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. M. E. Garrett, Mrs. P. G. R. Bell, Mrs. J. M. Hood, Committee.

Mrs. Eliza Hall Price passed to her reward Jan. 2, 1927. She was the mother of eight children. Seven of them, five sons and two daughters, survive her. Sister Price was a lifelong, devoted member of the Methodist church, and was a charter member of the church at Logansport, La. Before the congregation had a church building, she and Sister M. E. Garrett served as stewards, and it was largely through their efforts and prayers that the first Methodist church was erected. Sister Price was also a charter member of the Missionary Society and served as president for several years. It was the joy of her life that she lived to see her children members and officers of the church she had helped to establish. In her life was a verifying of many of God's promises, especially that promise, "At evening time there shall be light." For on Sunday, the day typical of our eternal rest, with all her children present, at the noon hour, without a cloud in the sky, the evening of her life closed, with the radiance of the mid-day sun, typical of that light she had walked in, and that guided her to the end.

Her pastor,

R. S. WALTON.

The subject of this sketch, PHILIP HINDS PETTY, was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., Nov. 7, 1859, and departed this life on Dec. 1, 1926, in the city of Baton Rouge, where he had resided for the last twelve years. Hinds Petty, as his neighbors knew and called him, was the possessor of those sterling qualities of character which make up the best of our citizenship, and his community and church alike have sustained in his death a loss which will be keenly felt. He early in life became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which his father, Rev. P. S. Petty, was a minister. He served as steward and Sunday school superintendent for twenty years in the Macedonia church, in Wilkinson County. His uprightness in every relation of life serves, with those who knew him best, as his most fitting eulogy. After removal to Baton Rouge, he united with the Keener Memorial Church and served for eight years as a steward, and from it was buried. Three brothers, Isaac W., of St. Francisville, La.; Marvin, of Shreveport, La., and Winans, of Stutgart, Ark, and three sisters, Mrs. E. J. Graham, of Tunica, La.; Mrs. Sellars Smith, and Mrs. Ada Neyland, of Jackson, Miss., survive him. Also his widow, Mary Emma Neyland, whom he married on Dec. 8, 1881.

A FRIEND.

MISS FRANKIE WOODARD was born Sept. 28, 1848, in the town of Philadelphia, Miss., and died in the home of her niece, Mrs. Joe Welsh, in the same community, where she lived all the days of her long and useful life. She was a daughter of George Pegram Woodard and Mrs. Rosaline Backstrom Woodard, both families of the most distinguished of the early settlers of central Mississippi. She was one of eight children, four boys and four girls. Bruce, the oldest son, was killed in the second battle of Manassas; John, Arthur, and James. The latter one lives in the town of Philadelphia. Sue, Mary, Alice and Elvira were the girls. Elvira is now Mrs. A. E. E. Williams and the mother of Mrs. Joe Welsh, with whom she lived. She united with the Methodist church in her girlhood, of which she was a member when the final call came. She lived to serve those she loved, and was loved by those who so often received ministries of her love and devotion. Surrounded by a large number of loved ones and friends, she was laid to rest in Greenmont cemetery, Dec. 23, 1926.

W. H. SAUNDERS, P. C.

BROTHER DANIEL THOMAS BELL was born Aug. 2, 1851, in Simpson County, Miss., and there spent his life except the last eight years, which he spent with his sons at Oak Grove, La. He was released from this life July 17, 1926, having lived almost five years beyond the allotted span. Brother Bell was a lifelong member of the Methodist church, which he loved and served as a faithful official for many years. Many people have mentioned especially the remarkable power Brother Bell exercised in prayer: his prayers seemed to ascend immediately to the throne of grace and to be heard by the Heavenly Father. A great throng assembled at Old Gum Springs church at his funeral to express their sorrow at his passing. The eloquence of tears proclaimed that many not related to him felt a personal loss, and even hardened sinners used such eloquence to speak their sorrow and their appreciation of him. Two daughters and his first wife, the mother of his children, responded to the last call some years before it came to him. Besides many friends and relatives who miss this good man, he is survived by his widow, Mrs. D. S. Bell, and three sons, G. D. Bell and Will Bell, of Oak Grove, La., and T. T. Bell, of D'Lo, Miss. That the consoling grace of the Holy Spirit may continue to comfort those who love him is the prayer of

HIS PASTOR.

IS YOUR CHURCH MISSIONARY?

If Jesus came to the church, our church, would he find it missionary? If one were forced to answer in a single word, one would hesitate to say "yes" or "no." Certainly Methodism was missionary in her beginnings. In the heart and vision of her great founder it was the missionary impulse that, catching from his warm heart in the hearts of his preachers, not only sent them hurrying with their message through the British Isles, but thrust them out across the Atlantic and, moving with the tides of empire ever westward, across the great continent of America.

Coke, Asbury, Shadford, Jesse Lee, Jason Lee, Stateler—in these men of the early days there was always the movement outward, over frontiers and into regions beyond. Then through John Stewart to the Wyandotte Indians, through Melville Cox in Africa, Taylor and Jenkins in China, Hernandez and Juarez in Mexico, Ransom in Brazil, the Lambuths in Japan, Hendrix, Reid, Collyer in Korea, Candler in Cuba, Lambuth and John Gilbert in Africa, Atkins and Beauchamp in Europe—these all following loyally the gleam. . . .

If we take what the local congregation is doing for itself and set over against it what it is doing for the home mission margins about it and for the unsaved millions in all the world, we will be compelled to say—well, what would Jesus, our Lord, say?

The first missionary business of the church would seem, therefore, to be a definite and persistent effort to develop in the local congregation a missionary spirit that is the spirit of our Lord.

The General Conference has fixed January and February as the period of Missionary Cutivation. Many things are to be done during this period of a missionary character, but the great objective of our whole system of cultivation will be a definite effort to go into the local congregation and stimulate or start a real missionary vision and interest.

The General Conference, by resolution, directed the Board of Missions to ask, at the end of the period of cultivation, for a free-will offering of one million dollars. If we get nothing in the nature of a free-will offering, we shall be compelled to cut out practically half of our work.

This is the situation that the Board of Missions has faced for three years. —The Voice.

What will your church do about it?

What will you do about it?

"Lovest Thou Me?—Feed My Sheep."

A CHRISTMAS TREE FOR THE OLD FOLKS,

Given by the Woman's Missionary Society of Collins, Miss., at the Methodist Church.

"On Dec. 20, at half past two,
A Christmas tree will be given for you.
A car will honk at your front gate,
So be ready, let's not be late.
At the Methodist church there'll be a welcome for you,
By the W. M. S. and the preachers, too."

This invitation was received by every aged person in Collins, and surrounding community, and at the appointed time the committee with their cars brought the guests, fifty-seven in number, to the Methodist church, where a cordial welcome was given them.

A most beautiful holly tree, loaded with Christmas decorations, stood just inside the altar, and as the sun's rays came in through the windows, giving charm and beauty to the occasion, the sunshine of joy and happiness was portrayed in the countenances of these dear old people.

Just underneath the tree on the altar railing were lovely Christmas boxes, one for each guest, filled to overflowing with fruits, nuts and candy.

Old familiar hymns were sung, and as the old folks mingled their voices with such harmony one would almost imagine it an angelic choir.

The pastors of each of the different churches made interesting talks, after which Rev. J. T. Dale, a most noted orator, representing Santa Claus, delighted the guests with his wit and humor as he gave out each present, making them forget their cares and sorrows on this joyful Christmastide, and turn back again to their yesterdays, when they were visited by the real Santa Claus.

A special program was offered for the shut-ins, who could not be present, and a committe appointed to deliver their Christmas boxes to them.

Cake and coffee were served by members of the Missionary Society.

On departing, the guests expressed their joy and appreciation for having been remembered in such a happy way.

This is the second tree that has been given by the Missionary Society for their aged people, and it was through the suggestion of our most loved president, Mrs. C. N. Hart, that we gave the first one. It was at the

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEB. 6.

Subject: "The Practice of Christian Stewardship."

Lesson Text: Matt. 25:14-30.

Golden Text: "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will set thee over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord" (Matt. 25:21).

Teaching Points:

1. Jesus had a good deal to say about the use of money—he knew how prone men are to use it selfishly.

2. God knows how many talents, how many gifts, how much money we have, and he holds us responsible for the right use of all.

3. We are not owners—we are trustees for God.

4. The proper use of money brings blessing and reward.

5. The failure to use money properly brings condemnation and punishment.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Virginia Thomas, Elementary Superintendent.

Brother Gladney, with the Elementary Superintendent assisting, has just held institutes at Moorhead and Sunflower. Both of these schools agree to take the Program of Work and begin working by it. The first thing both will undertake is the organization of the Workers' Council. This is the first progressive step that any school can undertake, for all else must come through the Council. These schools plan to take a census of their communities very soon in order to have the facts before them, and to see if they are reaching the people. Have you taken a census of your community this year? Yes, you doubtless think that you know who is in Sunday school and who is not, but you will find that this will reveal facts of which you did not dream. We have had a splendid report from one pastor who has recently done this work. The following facts were discovered: In a town with the Methodist membership of ninety there were found to be eighty of Methodist belief not attending Sunday school; forty-one of Methodist belief who did not belong to the church; forty-six children and young people in the town who did not attend any Sunday school. Do you think this pastor has stopped with this? No, indeed, he immediately grouped those not in Sunday school and turned them over to the proper teachers. Is this information of any value? Certainly, the people of this church know what must be done, and that they must needs get busy. This was a splendid piece of work, and we may well prophesy that much good will come from it. Why not get ready to take your survey now?

We have just gotten a report from one of our C type Sunday schools, saying that on last Sunday (fourth Sunday) $10.49 was given to missions, and that $3.34 came from the Beginners' class. This is a great report from that school, and shows to us what will be done when we give our people the information in regard to our missionary work. Are you having your fourth Sunday missionary observance? Do you have the missionary program? Our children are eager to do their part, and if we give them the proper instruction and information, they will gladly give now, and we will be training a missionary church. Your Elementary Superintendent will be glad to furnish information and helps for the Primary and Junior missionary programs.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The month of Jnauary has been an unusually busy month.

The Brookhaven, the Jackson, and the Meridian Standard Training Schools have been arranged for, and we are hoping to have the best faculty for these schools that we have ever had. The Brookhaven School will be six teachers; Jackson and Meridian seven each. Practically all of the work will be specialization work.

Mr. Hull reports a great time in the Brookhaven District. He has placed five Programs of Work, held one Circuit Institute, planned for two Training Classes and other Institutes. All of this has been accomplished in spite of the bad weather and the missionary institutes and other matters that would be apt to interfere with the carrying on of the work. He feels greatly encouraged by the prospects for the year.

The Training Work for the month has been exceptionally profitable. Mr. Hull taught a class at Pearl River Avenue. He had a large attendance, possibly ten credits or more being taken. Miss Jones taught a Standard Cokesbury School at Walnut Grove, with an enrollment of twelve, and with ten credits, which is a fine record. A Standard Cokesbury School was held at Bethel, with an enrollment of seven, and five credits; a non-Standard Class at Mount Olive, with an enrollment of twenty, and eighteen credits. This makes a full month of training, for which we are all very thankful.

The Collins, Magee and Mount Olive charges are planning for a Standard Training School, which we trust may materialize. This is an ambitious undertaking for these charges, but I think with hard work and praying it can be accomplished.

Rev. John R. Jones, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, is backing the campaign of evangelism in a most helpful way. We trust that the Sunday school workers of the Hattiesburg District will back him in his efforts to lead them in this great campaign, and that at the close of the campaign there will be a great ingathering of those who have been won to Christ through the efforts of the regular Sunday school workers.

We have received mission offerings from three new schools this week. If we could get an offering from 200 schools each month, it would mean an income to missions that would support every effort that we are seeking to put forth for our Conference work and pay our pro rata part for the European Special.

Our books are now open for dating up work for this summer by the college students. Will those of you who are desiring this work please write us suggesting the time you would prefer the work done?

Do not forget your district institute; come praying.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The writer had the pleasure of spending last Sunday in Natchitoches. The latest news from Rev. H. L. Johns, who has recently passed through a very serious operation in New Orleans, is encouraging. The loyalty of his members is beautiful, and the work of his charge is progressing in a most splendid manner during his absence.

The recent conference at Shreveport with the Bishop was considered a great one. Every interest of the church was brought out at this open conference. The cause of the Sunday school, especially with reference to the missionary feature, was presented by the Conference Superintendent of Missionary Education, Dr. Drake, in a most able way. Your writer had several individual conferences with leaders in the interest of district and local, as well as Conference-wide training schools. We had a satisfactory talk with Rev. Marion S. Monk, Conference host of the State-wide Sunday School Conference, to be held at Monroe in March. Dean R. E. Smith, Superintendent of Adult Work, is planning some good things for his department. Mrs. Smith has promised to give some special attention to the Home and Parent-Teacher work, the work which has been neglected in our Conference.

We have received a nice, complimentary letter from Brother A. M. Mayo in regard to the Outlook, which is encouraging. Brother Mayo also requested copies of the recent leaflet, "Solving the Big Problem," but unfortunately this leaflet has not reached the office yet.

* * *

Rev. G. M. Hicks, who has had such fine success with week-day religious education, has promised to give us the benefit of his experience, and to lead a discussion on this important matter at the Monroe State-wide Conference. Last year this feature of the work was in the hands of Rev. A. K. McLellan.

* * *

The devotional program in the Junior Department of the First Church Sunday school at Alexandria, last Sunday, dealt with the idea of "Growth Through Service," and this was brought to the minds of the children through the medium of illustrated missionary songs, with a story that led to the work being accomplished by the Dual-Extension Program, which was carefully explained to the children that they might realize that through their fourth Sunday contribution to this plan, their contribution to the European work, their pledge to the new Sunday school building here at Alexandria, and the special work being done by them at Houma, they are playing a large part in the missionary program of the church.

Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Superintendent of Elementary Work in our Conference, tells us that she is receiving splendid response from her district superintendents, and that the work is going beautifully.

FROM MAGNOLIA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few lines from the Magnolia charge. I do not trouble the Advocate office very often with my writings, but every charge likes to see an occasional mention of its activities.

We are serving a most excellent and cultured people, and Magolia is one of the pleasant places in which to live—a quiet and restful place, a nice church, a well furnished parsonage, with ample room inside and out.

Our people gave us a most hearty welcome back for the second year, expressed not only in words but in a promise to be more loyal in co-operation. This has been shown by better church attendance and in that very substantial way known to preachers as a "big pounding."

We have just closed what is said to be the most successful two weeks' revival campaign that Magnolia has ever witnessed. While it was held in the Methodist church, it was a community-wide campaign.

Mr. Howard S. Williams, of Hattiesburg, did the preaching, Mr. Henry Litchfield directing the choir and working with the young people and children; Mr. Johnson, known as "Jack," had charge of the prayer meetings and else. Too much cannot be said for these faithful, consecrated workers. Mr. Litchfield is the best choir director I have ever known. "Jack" Johnson is efficient in his line of work. Howard Williams ranks with the very best as an evangelist. He uncompromisingly, yet in a spirit of love for the sinner, condemns every form of sin.

Every service was one of power.

Magnolia is a different place spiritually because of this meeting. On the afternoon of the last day of the meeting, in the presence of a large concourse of people, a bonfire was made of cards, dice, impure literature, jazz records, tobacco, etc.

Eight young ladies offered themselves for life service, and three young men felt the call to preach. Quite a number of young people organized themselves into a "Howard Williams Young People's Flying Squadron."

To any pastor or community who may want an old-time gospel revival, I heartily recommend the Howard S. Williams evangelistic party.

We are looking forward with much pleasure and profit to the Brookhaven District Sunday School Institute, which meets with us Feb. 4.

We are soon to begin our "Every Methodist Family Campaign" for the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The cultivation period for our Missionary Special is upon us, and our whole energy shall be bent to a successful consummation for this most worthy cause.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

first meeting of the year after she went into office that she brought along a "peanut butter bucket" and asked that the Society use it as a "love gift bucket" in which to put our love offering for the old folks at each meeting on Monday afternoon. So when Christmas came, so many dimes and quarters were given that it was a real pleasure to the Society to purchase the boxes of fruit.

We feel fortunate in having Mrs. Hart as our president for the coming year, this being her third year, and we feel that this is going to be the best year in the history of our Society, and we pray that as another Christmas draws near, the Christmas of 1927, we may be able to bring even more joy and happiness to the hearts of our old people than any Christmas before.

ZONE MEETING AT FOREST, MISS.

The regular quarterly meeting of the northwestern zone of the Newton District Woman's Missionary Society was held at the Methodist church in Forest, Miss., Jan. 8, 1927.

The meeting was well attended, being composed of delegates from Carthage, Harperville, and Forest.

We were called to order at 10:30 by the zone leader, Mrs. J. B. Collins. The opening hymn was No. 258. The devotional service was led by Rev. T. B. Winstead, of Harperville. Prayer was offered by Rev. M. L. McCormick, of Carthage.

A beautiful duet by Mrs. Sam Howell and Miss Martha Stanley, "Tell the Sweet Story," was then given.

Greetings from the Forest Societies were given by Mrs. W. C. Eastland, and responded to by Mrs. L. E. Alford, of Newton, District Secretary of the Newton District.

Mrs. J. H. Beeman, of Carthage, was elected recording secretary.

Carthage was selected as the place of next meeting in April.

Introduction of visitors followed.

The question of a special was left open until next meeting.

The feature of the morning meeting was a most wonderful, instructive and inspiring address by Mrs. L. W. Alford, Conference president, after which Rev. Mr. Ferguson dismissed us for the noon recess. The Forest Societies served a delicious plate luncheon in the church annex.

The afternoon session opened with the singing of hymn No. 206, and prayer by Mrs. George Beeman.

Resolutions for the new year from the Book of Books were read by Mrs. M. L. McCormick, of Carthage.

Mrs. Collins made appropriate remarks on how to begin the new year, the keynote being, "Put God first."

Next a paper was read by Mrs. Autley, of Forest.

The ten "Don'ts" that kill an organization were impressively given by a group of Harperville ladies.

The ten "Do's" to make a Society go had been assigned to Morton, but were given by volunteers.

A violin solo by Mrs. Austin, accompanied by Mrs. Bishop, was appreciated.

Mrs. Beeman, of Carthage, read a paper on "What a Mission Study Circle Means to a Society."

An instructive illustrated lecture by Mrs. Ponder, of Georgia, on "How to Conduct a Mission Study Circle," was enjoyed.

A song by Mrs. Cassidy and Mrs. Stanley, of Forest, was then heard, after which Mrs. Harry Mitchell, of Forest, had charge of the Consecration Hour. Several very beautiful little talks were made on this subject. Then we were dimissed by Rev. M. L. McCormick.

BYHALIA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY AT THE TOP.

The Adult Society at Byhalia, Miss., has closed out a good year. We are on Standard of Excellence. We have three Circles. Each Circle has charge of the devotional once a quarter. We have put new congoleum rugs in the dining room and kitchen. The kitchen walls have also been painted, and a new cooking stove has been put in the parsonage since Conference. We have paid our Belle Bennett quota. Our Society will also be on Standard of Excellence in Mission and Bible study, with a gold seal and blue star to our credit.

The Young People's Missionary Society will have claim on the silver loving cup at Conference. They reached every point on Standard and also orgnaized two new societies.

The Junior Society is also on honor roll. All told, we have done everything that the Council has asked us to do. We want to do more this year.

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

A GREAT DAY FOR THE SARDIS CIRCUIT.

The board of stewards of the Sardis circuit met with the pastor at the parsonage at Davis Chapel on Wednesday, Jan. 19, for a business session in behalf of the work of the church and the Kingdom of God. Hymn No. 45, "Work, for the Night Is Coming," was sung, Mrs. Woodfin presiding at the piano, after which a Scripture lesson from I Timothy, first chapter, was read by the pastor, and Hymn 231, "Near the Cross," was sung, following which E. E. Arnold led in prayer.

The pastor spoke on the lesson read, his theme being, "The Glorious Gospel."

A roll call showed the following present: E. E. Arnold, W. E. Arnold, Jr., G. L. Gates, T. S. Cline, Foster Dugger, W. P. Hudson, W. J. King, T. J. Newman, Lamar Trotter and W. C. Trotter.

E. E. Arnold was elected secretary. He gave an inspiring talk on "A Steward's Duty and His Relationship to His Pastor," after which some questions were asked, such as—

Can a steward be a blessing to his community and church if he does not like his pastor?

Ought a steward to be in sympathy with all the moves of his church?

A round table discussion took place on these subjects.

At 12:15 dinner was served in the dining-room. This dinner was fine, and we owe to the good women of Davis Chapel church and the community, as well as Mrs. Woodfin, our deepest gratitude for their gracious hospitality.

At 1:30 p. m. the session was resumed, by singing, "Jesus Is All the World to Me," after which W. C. Trotter read a helpful Scripture lesson from the eighth chapter of Matthew, and made an inspiring address therefrom. The pastor led in prayer, after which discussion was had on the subject of "Revivals," and dates fixed for the different churches, as follows:

Wesley Chapel—Third week in July.

Cold Springs—Fourth week in July.

Davis Chapel—Fifth Sunday in July and week following.

Bethel—Third week in August.

Terza—First week in September.

Lake Carrier—Fourth week in August or second week in September.

The pastor was granted the first two weeks in August to hold a meeting at Margerum, Ala., in the North Alabama Conference.

After a spiritual testmony meeting, W. C. Trotter led the closing prayer, and the conference adjourned.

REPORTER.

FROM LOGANSPORT, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: As a news item, I will say that Logansport church has planned to hold a Cokesbury School in April. Rev. A. K. McLellan and I will teach same. Both of us are approved teachers; also a Sunday school institute will be held at Longstreet, June 26.

Rev. A. W. Turner spoke to a large and appreciative congregation at Logansport a few days ago.

The Logansport charge has arranged to hold four laymen's meetings during the year. These meetings will be held at 3 o'clock on the fifth Sundays. Mr. S. D. Johnson is the lay leader of the charge.

Our work continues to prosper in this field. Good congregations attend the public worship, and our Sunday schools are all thriving and increased in attendance.

Fraternally,

R. S. WALTON.

If Back Hurts Flush Kidneys

Drink Plenty of Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Epworth League

CABINET MEETING OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE OFFICERS.

On Sunday afternoon, Jan. 16, 1927, the cabinet meeting of the Conference officers of the Epworth League was held at the Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss. The purpose of this meeting was to make definite plans for the Assembly in June. The time set for the Assembly by the Epworth League Board is June 6-10. The possibility of a change in place of meeting was discussed, but we finally decided to go back to Whitworth. The theme as given by the General Assembly is, "The Christian Life." The slogan is, "All for Christ and Christ for All."

The theme of the Morning Watch Services is "Hindrances to Christian Life." The subjects that will be discussed are: Sin, Selfishness, Doubt, Indifference, Delay, Excuse, and Evil Companions. It was decided to get one leader to take charge of all these services.

The theme for the vespers is, "Steps to Christian Life." The subjects for study are: Repent, Return, Reform and Renew. The vespers will be in charge of a committee.

The subjects for discussion at the evening hour are: "Life at Its Best," "What Will You Do With Jesus," "The Cost of Loyalty," and "All for Christ and Christ for All."

Instead of stunt night, there will be a get-together reception or social after the address of the evening on Thursday night, leaving Friday night for the consecration meeting.

One feature of the Assembly that is new is the Problem Hour, between the business session and dinner. At this time there will be a discussion of Problems of Christian Living. We feel that this will mean much in the lives of the Leaguers who attend the Assembly.

Since we will have only four business sessions, we will need to have the business for each day definitely outlined. We are planning for the districts to organize upon arrival and select their electoral commissioner. This is done in order to have the election of officers the first instead of the last of the week.

After the discussion of matters pertaining to the Assembly was finished, we next turned our attention to District Institutes. It was decided to let each District Secretary decide upon the time of the institute for his district. Since there will be no call for a worker from Central Office, the secretaries may choose a date that is most convenient for their district. It was decided to secure workers from within the Conference for these institutes.

Miss Berta Nall, Intermediate Superintendent, asked the conference to set aside funds to get a worker from Central Office for the Intermediate camp to be held this summer. Her request was readily granted, and our Conference will support an entirely new organization.

Officers attending this meeting were: J. H. Weems, President; Truman Lewis, Vice President; L. F. Alford, Treasurer; D. C. Camp, Secretary; W. D. Hawkins, Dean; Mrs. J. L. Neill, Junior Superintendent; Misses Berta Nall, Intermediate Superintendent, and Frances Ulmer, Editor Epworth League Department. District Secretaries present were: Misses Lilybec Phillips, Meridian District; Florida Williams, Brookhaven District; Mrs. Stuart Dunning, Jackson District; Mr. B. F. Harrell, Hattiesburg District; Miss Grace, Intermediate-Junior Secretary of Hattiesburg District.

Virginia Lady Tells of Taking Cardui and Says She Has Since Recovered Perfect Health.

Lynchburg, Va.—"I have taken Cardui several times for a run-down condition and have found it perfectly splendid," says Mrs. Lee T. Marsh, 715 First Street, this city.

"About ten years ago," she explains, "I became so weak I could not go about. I looked like a skeleton and . . . was dreadfully worried about myself. A friend suggested Cardui and I decided to try it. . .

"I kept up the medicine until I had taken six bottles. It regulated and built me up. I improved greatly.

"Last year we drove up here through the country from Florida. I was exposed to the weather and must have taken cold, for I became ill . . . I got run-down, lost flesh, . . . could not sleep and had no appetite at all. I was so nervous that I did not know what to do.

"I thought of Cardui. I began to take it regularly and it was not long before I began to feel better. I took six bottles, one after another, and at the finish of the last one was perfectly well again. Since then I have continued gaining in weight and all winter have been in perfect health."

Take CARDUI A VEGETABLE TONIC

FROM CARROLLTON, MISS.

Dear Advocate: Our work goes forward with increasing interest and attendance in all branches of church work. Our membership at Carrollton is about 140, and our attendance this week at prayer meeting was ninety-five. We are striving for a large attendance next week.

We believe the interest taken in the mid-week service will do more to strengthen our church and increase our faith than anything else.

Pray for us.

Yours in him,
SAMUEL E. ASHMORE.

COKESBURY SCHOOL AT LAKE ARTHUR, LA.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board, has been with us during this week, bringing us a splendid gospel message on Sunday morning, and, beginning with the Sunday evening service, the Cokesbury Training Course for Sunday school workers.

"The Small Sunday School, Its Plans and Work," Sensabaugh, was the textbook used, and each lesson taught proved to be helpful, practical, and thought-provoking. The discussions were earnest and showed an earnest desire for help on local problems.

While the attendance was not as large as we would have liked, a class of sixteen qualified for credits, and there was a goodly number present at each session who were not working for credit, but who gained the inspiration of the services and will be greatly helped in their future work.

The fifteen minutes intermission between lessons each evening proved to be a time of happy good-fellowship, and were in charge of Mrs. E. C. Davis.

One especially encouraging feature of the meeting was the number of young people taking the course, and the earnest efforts they are making to fit themselves for more useful service.

We heartily commend Brother McLellan to every Sunday school that realizes the need of help and encouragement in its efforts to further the cause of religious education in the local church.

HOW I IMPROVED MY HEALTH

Did It in Less Than One Month

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lawrence Weaver, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

In some families, the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

EDITORIAL.

THE FEBRUARY OPPORTUNITY.

The month of February completes the period of missionary education designated by the General Conference, at the close of which a free-will offering is to be taken for the support of our missionary activities at home and abroad. The sum of one million dollars is asked for in this free-will offering.

If our pastors have faithfully carried out the program suggested by the missionary authorities—and we believe they have—our people have been fully informed concerning the opportunities and needs of our missionary work; as they have gained information, their interest has been aroused, their hearts have been stirred, and their consciences have been quickened. We can well believe that in many congregations there is an eagerness for the coming of the time to take the free-will offering, in order that they may show by their contributions their interest in the evangelization of the world. They await the opportunity to prove their faith by their works.

It is extremely important that every member of the church in every congregation be given the opportunity to make a free-will offering for missions at the close of the cultivation period. If any charge fails to secure at least the amount expected of it, we dare say it will be in practically every case the charge that did not give all the people a chance to make an offering. All the forces of the church—bishops, connectional officers, presiding elders, pastors, laymen—ought to be giving their best efforts from now until the end of the cultivation period for the success of this part of our church program. With the co-operation of all, success is assured.

THE HORSE RACING GAMBLE.

We do not know any more about the inside of the horse race gamble than a child knows about the theory of relativity. All we know about it is what we read in the papers. But what we read is enough to make us believe that it is a shame for a great State to permit such an institution to exist. That it is a gamble pure and simple we do not think anybody doubts, even those who use the puerile argument in its defense that it is necessary to maintain racing for the sake of improving the breed of horses for use in the army. If the Government wants horses of the racing type for military use, let it establish its own breeding farms. If horse racing were a "clean" gamble, it would be bad enough—too bad to allow to exist; but if the sporting editors of the New Orleans daily newspapers know what they are talking about—and we have an idea they know pretty well—the whole thing is as crooked as a dog's hind leg. At least, that is the conclusion we draw from what they have to say about "reversal of form," "in and out running," "upsets," etc. When the Constitution of the State of Louisiana says that gambling is a vice and the Legislature shall adopt measures to suppress it, it is passing strange that the members of that body, with the Constitution to back them, cannot—or do not—formulate and pass an act that will stand the test of the courts and put this greatest of all gambles out of business. It is frequently said that gambers' debts are debts of honor and are always paid; we notice, however, from accounts in the daily papers, that the city of New Orleans is having a mighty hard time collecting a debt the owners of the race track owe it. Louisiana, after a hard fight, got rid of the lottery; its next step is to get rid of the racing gamble—horse, dog, and other institutionalized forms of all kinds.

MUCH FOR LITTLE.

Under the terms of the Special Proposition, the Advocate can be put into the homes of our people for less than two and a half cents a week. The Special Proposition provides that if even as many as one-half the families represented in the membership of a church take the paper, names to be sent as a list and not singly, the subscription price will be $1.25 a year.

For that $1.25, the subscribers will receive the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the official organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Louisiana and Mississippi, a sixteen-page religious newspaper, fifty-two times—once a week for fifty-two weeks. If anybody wants the paper for less than that, we should guess that he does not want it at all! Certainly he cannot hope to get it for any less.

We wonder if all our pastors are letting their people know that they can get their official church paper for so little, and are urging them to subscribe for it. We think the people have a right to know about it, even if they do not take advantage of the offer. We believe, however, that thousands of them would take advantage of it if they were given an opportunity to do so. This chance to get much for little expires on April 1.

Dr. W. Winans Drake, chairman of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate and pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., writes, under date of Feb. 3: "Since the publication of this week's issue, I have sent in a list of thirty, which will be followed by larger lists a little later. If all our larger churches would take the matter up and work it thoroughly, I am sure we could make a larger increase than last year."

There may be Methodist families in Louisiana and Mississippi that actually cannot afford to pay $1.25 a year, less than two and a half cents a week, for the Advocate—but we doubt it; there may be pastors in these two States who actually cannot secure the minimum number of subscriptions to secure the special rate—but we doubt that, too. Be that as it may, we have not the slightest doubt but that 10,000 new subscribers could be added to our present list by April 1 if all concerned would make the proper effort.

PIKE COUNTY METHODIST MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: On Thursday, Jan. 27, at 1:30 a. m., at the home of Rev. J. T. Abney, pastor of Fernwood charge, the Pike County Ministerial Conference of the Methodist Church met for organization for the year 1927.

Rev. H. L. Norton was elected president, and Rev. James M. Lewis, secretary-treasurer.

The following compose the membership of the Ministerial Conference: J. T. Abney, Fernwood charge; C. C. Evans, Centenary, McComb; J. F. Campbell, Pearl River Avenue, McComb; E. H. Cooley, La Branch Street, McComb; H. L. Norton, Summit charge; L. M. Sharp, Bogue Chitto and Norfield; W. C. M. Baggett, Foxworth charge; T. M. Ainsworth, Osyka charge; T. B. Cottrell, Magnolia, and James M. Lewis, Tylertown charge. The associate members are the wives of the above named preachers.

The following were present: Brothers J. T. Abney, H. L. Norton, L. M. Sharp, C. C. Evans, J. F Campbell, E. H. Cooley, T. B. Cottrell, W. C. M. Bagget, and James M. Lewis; Mmes. J. T. Abney, and T. B. Cottrell; visitors, Rev. W. H. Lewis and wife, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, and Aunt Tina Sandal, of Magnolia.

Rev. W. H. Lewis was asked to give a talk, and he outlined in a clear and concise way the program of work for the district, putting emphasis on the group meetings that are to be held soon. He appointed Brother C. C. Evans as chairman of the southern group.

From the reports of the preachers present, the work of the southern part of the Brookhaven District is progressing well. The president appointed Brothers Evans, Cottrell, and Campbell as program committee to get up the program for the next meeting.

The discussion of the "Problem of the Present Missionary Crisis" was postponed until the next meeting.

It was moved and passed that the Ministerial Conference meet on Tuesday after the fourth Sunday in each month. Our next conference will convene in the home of Brother L. M. Sharp, at Bogue Chitto.

After delightful refreshments were served by our hostess and her two accomplished daughters, the conference adjourned with a prayer by Brother W. H. Lewis.

LYNCHINGS AND OTHER CRIMES.

By Bishop Warrren A. Candler.

The crime of lynching is a hideous manifestation of savage passion. It is so barbarous in its nature that no condemnation of it can be too strong. It lynches the law as well as its victim, and, therefore, deserves the reprobation of every law-loving and law-abiding citizen.

But it is possible for us to concentrate attention so intensely on one crime and to overlook all other offenses that we weaken the force of our condemnation of any and all violations of law. Such a result is coming to pass in the matter of lynchings.

The best people in the country, North and South, execrate lynchings and lynchers, as they ought to do. An overwhelming majority of the American people abhor the horrible offense.

But it is doubtful if the annnual publication of the number of lynchings committed in a year and the anti-lynching measures proposed in the Federal Congress do any good. Probably these things are beginning to impair the force of the efforts of good people to put down lynching.

It is said that twenty-nine persons, including two women, were lynched in the United States during the year 1926, and that this number showed an increase of thirteen over the number committed in 1925.

Lynchings in 1924 fell fifty per cent below what they were in 1923, and in 1923 they fell to about half what they had been in 1922.

It cannot be shown that the increase of the number in 1926 over that of 1925 is due to the over-emphasis on the condemnation of lynching and the under-emphasis placed on the reprobation of other crimes; but it is undoubtedly true that such discrimination is not wise or just.

Upon the people of the Southern States condemnation for lynchings is concentrated, although the abominable offense is not confined to the South alone. The anti-lynching bills introduced into Congress are leveled against the Southern States, and they are unquestionably inspired by motives of sectionalism. No good end can be served by such methods; they irritate by their manifest injustice.

In the Southern States there are a little more than thirty millions of people. The membership of the Southern churches is a larger proportion of the total population than is the membership of the churches in any other section of our country. Under conditions of the most trying and perplexing character lynchings in these States during the year 1926 were less than thirty, and during the year 1925 they were no more than sixteen.

But who will tell us how many mysterious and unpunished murders were perpetrated by the "gun-men" and "gangsters" of Chicago during the years 1925 and 1926?

The population of Chicago is less than five millions as compared with a population of thirty millions in the Southern States. Why should not the number of assassinations by Chicago's gun-men be published annually? Why should not the Federal Congress assume to adopt measures to suppress the murders done by gun-men in Chicago, affixing penalties of disfranchisement and other penal prohibitives upon all the citizens of the city in the State of Illinois unless assassinations by gun-men ceased?

The combined populations of the two cities of New York and Chicago aggregate much lesss than half of the total population of the Southern States, but the assassinations annually committed in those cities, for which no one is arrested and punished, exceed the number of lynchings in the whole country for a year. A man done to death by a gun-man is as dead as the victim of a lynching. An assassination by a gun-man is in fact a lynching of the foulest sort. Gun-men kill for money; they are inspired by cold and cruel coveteousness, while most lynchings in the South are provoked by the most repulsive and exciting crimes.

In the last of the annual reports of lynchings it is stated that "there were thirty-three instances in which officers prevented lynchings, twenty-nine of these being in the Southern States." It is further attested in the same report that "thirty-four persons were indicted in connection with lynchings, nine receiving prison sentences, eight for terms ranging from four to twenty years, and one for life."

Is there evidence to show that the officers of the law in Chicago and New York have been equally energetic and successful in their efforts to bring to justice the gun-men and gangsters of those cities?

It may be said that conditions are peculiar in Chicago and New York, and that the enforcement of law against certain classes of criminals is quite difficult. Such doubtless is the case; but so also is the case of the South.

Again, no such enormous expenditures to buy seats in the United States Senate as have been made in Pennsylvania and Illinois, have ever been made in any of the Southern States. The Senate, which has the constitutional right to judge of the qualifications of its own members, has taken hold of this corruption as it did a few years ago in the case of a Senator from Michigan who had bought his seat in the body. Over such matters the Senate has a right to take jurisdiction, and in doing so it does no more than its duty. But the Federal Congress has no right to invade the province of sovereign States in order to deliver a blow at the South under the pretext of correcting a far smaller measure of crime.

Buying seats in the Congress corrupts law at the source of its making, and than that few crimes can be worse.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that every State and every section should be dealt with justly. Justice, symbolized by a goddess holding impartial scales, is a sublime image; but when justice has one eye shut and the other awinking, one finds it difficult to restrain disgust and contempt for her.

The truth is that no section of our country is so free from sin that it may become the censor of all other sections and hold itself up as a blameless model for imitation. Let each correct its own faults, and it will have quite enough to engage its attention for a good many years to come.

Let the Southern States, and all other States in which lynchings occur, punish all lynchers to the full extent of the law without fear and without favor.

Let States like Illinois and New York bring their gun-men to justice and suppress the mysterious murders in them, which are lynchings in another form.

Let great and sovereign commonwealths send to the penitentiary, and not to the Senate, vile men who undertake to buy seats in the highest legislative body of the nation.

Our country is widely extended and enormously rich. Such conditions invite corrputing luxury and defiant lawlessness. These evils must be corrected, and the perils which they bring averted, or the great Republic will perish as others before it have perished from the same ruinous conditions.

A nation-wide revival of religion would rescue our country from these fearful dangers; and nothing else will.

Criminations and recriminations between sections will avail nothing. What is needed is universal repentance in all sections. The nation needs to return to the God from whom it has departed.

If any are disposed to regard as visionary the suggestion that a general revival of religion is the best corrective of crime and the surest remedy for political corruption, let all such persons study carefully the effects of the great historic revivals of the past.

Lecky, a historian destitute of any favorable bias towards evangelical Christianity, in his history of England in the eighteenth century says of the Wesleyan Revival:

> "Althought the career of the elder Pitt, and the splendid victories by land and sea that were won during his ministry, form unquestionably the most dazzling episodes in the reign of George II, they must yield, I think, in real importance, to that religious revolution which shortly before had been begun in England by the preaching of the Wesleys and Whitefield. The creation of a large, powerful and active sect, extending over both hemispheres and numbering many millions of souls, was but one of its consequences. It also exercised a profound and lasting influence upon the spirit of the Established Church, upon the amount and distribution of the moral forces of the nation, and even upon the source of its political history."

John Richard Green, in his "History of the English People," affirms that Pitt's career itself would have been impossible without the influence of the Wesleyan revival. He observes most truly:

> "Rant about ministerial corruption would have fallen flat on the public ear had not new moral forces, a new sense of social virtue, a new sense of religion, been stirring, however blindly, in the minds of Englishmen."

"The Great Revival of 1800" in the United States rescued "the Northwest Territory" from social disorder and political dismemberment, and made a second Aaron Burr impossible.

A great revival of continental extensiveness is the supreme need of our country at this time. Such a divine visitation would bring to pass blessed results which no mere schemes of superficial reforms can by any possibility achieve.

THE TRANSFORMING LOVE.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

In German folk-lore there are legends of a species of water-nymphs called Undines, who are supposed to be very beautiful, bright, happy and sportive, but utterly void of souls. Baron De La Motte Fouque wrote a story which has become classic, in which one of these Undines is the heroine, who, being brought to love a handsome young knight, was at once invested with a soul. The old myth has in it a truth: "Love is a transforming force."

One of our earliest English poets sang:

"Such is the power of that sweet passion,
That it all sordid baseness doth expel,
And the refined mind doth newly fashion
Unto a fairer form."

We have seen a hard, sin-seared man softened and lifted to gentleness of manner and delicacy of feeling by the love wakened in him when a lovely woman had come into his life. Many a childless pair have been wonderfully drawn toward each other into a sweet and hitherto unknown alchemy of hearts by the coming to the home of a bud of a babe. It is the commonest fact of common life that a man and a woman unlike in life and variant in belief and in thought and in purpose marry; and at once begin to grow to like each other, and the process goes on until both are transformed. Selfishness, the commonest ugliness of fallen humanity, fades before love like a morning mist before the rising sun.

"Love took up the harp of life, and smote on all the chords with might—Smote the chord of self that trembling passed in music out of sight.
Love took up the glass of time, and turned it in her glowing hands,
Every moment lightly shaken, ran itself in golden sands."

The poet Bickersteth tells of a young man who had wandered very far from the way of rectitude,

"Until all without was desert,
And wild desert all within,
Plunging with a maniac's madness
Down the awful gulf of sin."

After years of awful prodigality, he was passed one evening by a lovely girl:

"She had seen him sadly smiling
On some children sporting by;
And her heart was touched with pity—
And a tear came in her eye—
And she looked upon him—spellbound
He stood still, and looked on her.
* * * * * *
"Never over human bosom
Came love in such tempest-kind:
All his spirit's dark foundations
Heaved like waves beneath the wind."

That strange, wild, new love led him to repentance, and his whole being was transformed—from the vilest sinner he was changed to a holy man of Christ. And when temptations came as he strove to live that higher life, she who had linked her life with his would with the magic of her love lift him above it all. It is the same old story. The literature of the world and its unwritten history as well are crowded with such recitals.

In Greek mythology we find the myth of Psyche, which has in it a still higher meaning than the legend of Undine. Psyche was, according to the myth, a beautiful maid of mortal birth, who loved and married the god Cupid, and thus became a goddess. The real meaning of the myth was that she who loved a god became like the god. That loving God will make us God-like, is a glorious truth taught in the Bible, as well as in the myths of ancient Greece, and much more intensely and more clearly.

It has ever been God's full purpose that we should be like him. "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness!" was God's proclamation for human creation; and David sang the history of that creation in these startling words: "Thou hast made him but a little lower than God"—Ps. 8:5, R. V. Sin has obliterated much of the divine "likeness," and marred much of the "image" of God; and now the divine purpose can only be met by restoring us to the "image" and "likeness" of God. "God is love," says John; and when love for God is kindled in the soul of a sin-ruined human being, that soul catches a spark of God-likeness; and as this love grows, more and more does that soul grow like God; and more certainly and clearly is the divine "image" and "likeness" restored. This is what Paul means when he writes: "The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit;" and is what John means when he writes: "Every one that loveth is born of God." This is why God gave his first and great law to us fallen men, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul, mind and strength."

It is love that makes us like God. Every home that ever felt the glow of filial affection, or fraternal love, or parental devotion is a proof of the fact that love purifies, elevates, beautifies and ennobles. Every heart that has thrillled with any pure love knows that love is a transforming power.

Any pure love that ever throbbed in any human breast is so much in uplifting, purifying, sweetening power to that soul, that, as Tennyson sings,

"Love is too precious to be lost."

If all this be true—and all of us know that it is very true—of any pure true love, however earthly the object, what must be the infinitely greater transforming power of that love the object of which is the loftiest, lordliest of all beings, the great, great God himself! Thinking only of this lordliest of all loves, let us ask:

"What is love? Go ask the poet
When his soul is bathed in light,
Wandering 'mongst the stars that richly
Diadem the brow of night;
Bid him sing love's witching sweetness,
Timed to passion's moving spell,
Music which the highest angels
Sing where th' pure and deathless dwell:
Bid him sing love's wildest grandeur
Till, on heaven's eternal scrolls,
Earth-divided hands have written
Love's deep bridal of their souls:
Bid him sing love's mystic gladness
Till in gold and purple state
Visions, crowned with rainbow chaplets
Spread to heaven's open gate."

Love stands for everything that is sweet and beautiful, high and holy and heavenly. Men and women whose hearts and thoughts take in that which is true and beautiful, sweet and high and holy, will be lifted in life and ennobled in thought and purified in soul. It must be true then that love is the only transforming power in humanity; and that God uses this agency to transform human souls to the lordly regenerate life. "That disciple whom Jesus loved" wrote: "Beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love."

ANNUAL MEETING—WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will hold its seventeenth annual meeting in the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., March 9-16, 1927.

The calendar for Wednesday, March 9, is as follows: 11 a. m., Executive Committee meeting at the Washington Hotel; 2:30 p. m., Workers' conference in the church; 4 p. m., the Memorial Service, followed by the celebration of Holy Communion; 8 p. m., address by Bishop W. B. Beauchamp.

The first business session will be called to order Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. The program for the succeeding days is full of interest and inspiration.

The Washington Hotel has been selected as headquarters for Council members, and the Youree Hotel for visitors.

Reduced railway rates according to the Certificate Plan have been granted. This means that a full one-way fare of not less than sixty-seven (67c) cents must be paid for a ticket to Shreveport, and a certificate secured which will entitle the holder to a half-rate for the return tickets over the same route; provided not less than two hundred and fifty (250) regularly issued and properly dated certificates are presented in time to be counted and duly validated.

The required number of certificates (250) properly signed by the Council Secretary must be in hand before the railway agent can validate one. When conditions are met, he will validate a certificate any day including and after March 9, except Sunday.

The dates of sale of tickets except from the more remote points are March 6-12, inclusive. From these remote points the dates of sale are as follows: From Colorado (except Juesburg), Montana and New Mexico, March 5-11, inclusive; from Arizona, California and Oregon, March 4-10, inclusive.

The final date of honoring certificates is March 19.

Publicity agents are requested to take note of these dates and to urge all who are to attend to purchase tickets to Shreveport on the proper selling dates, also, to urge those who attend to travel by rail that there may be no shortage in the attendance.

MRS. F. F. STEPHENS, President.
MRS. FITZGERALD S. PARKER,
Recording Secretary.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A. Retired.

Number 3.

En route from Jackson, Miss., to Lexington, Ky., I had my first real army experience. The troops were paid just before we left Jackson. With money in their pockets, it was easy for the men to get liquor at points along the way. We left Jackson at night, so by the next day at least fifty of the five hundred men we had were roaring drunk. From the noise they made, an observer would have thought every man on the train was drunk.

Fifty drunken men can make quite a problem for officers—especially if the men are undisciplined and the officers without experience in handling such situations. Fortunately, the men had no ammunition, so we had no shooting; but there was trouble enough for every one aboard. When the train stopped, it was difficult to keep the men from getting off and being left behind. Guards were stationed at the doors, but they climbed out at the windows. I had seen drunken men, but never such a mob as this.

After exhausting their resources, some of the officers suggested that I go forward and try to persuade the men to be quiet. I tried it. It was not a wise thing to do, but, looking back now, I am glad that I did. I had been with the regiment but a few days, but all the men knew me, and when I appealed to them they quieted down; but just as soon as I was out of sight they broke loose again.

The satisfaction that I get out of the experience now is, no man in all that drunken crowd showed the slightest disposition to resent the presence of the chaplain or show him any discourtesy. I want to say here: During all my twenty-four years with the army, no man, drunk or sober, ever showed me the slightest disrespect. On the other hand, hundreds of them have shown to me in ways not to be mistaken that they loved me as sons. I am proud of that record.

The services are like all other lines of business where crowds of men are thrown together without the presence and refining influence of good women. They are no worse. Such situations test men. It is there home training counts for more than anything else. In my lectures to recruits, I always emphasized this truth: "The army wiill either make you or break you. If you are made of the right kind of stuff and have had the right kind of home training, it will be a liberal education for you. You will end your tour of service a stronger man and a better man. But if you lack these things, no one can predict what you will be at the end of your enlistment." This is true anywhere a young man may go. I wish to go on record as contending that men in the services compare favorably with other groups of men in similar circumstances. Soldiers and sailors are just men in uniform, better than the average, because they are selected men.

I shall have more to say on this line. I say it here because I want all to know my attitude of mind toward the men of the services.

I am a little slow getting away from my initiation. We shall move faster soon.

JUDGE T. L. LAMB.

Early on Dec. 11, 1926, Judge Lamb passed from the church militant to the Church Triumphant. He joined the Methodist Church in October, 1881, at the age of 13 years, and remained a faithful member until his death. For more than forty-five years this good soldier followed the command of his Lord.

Judge Lamb was active in church work. In his every relationship to the church he was accounted worthy. He loved and stood by his pastors; to him they were sent of God, and they always had his sympathy and co-operation. I well remember when I went to Eupora as his pastor he pointed to his beautiful home and said, "The door is always open to you." I found him a faithful friend to his pastor and a faithful follower of his Lord.

He was a faithful teacher in the Sunday school for many years, teaching the Gleaners' class, a class of young married women, for more than twenty-two years. Many times he has left the court room Saturday afternoon, tired from a week's strenuous work, and driven many miles over rough roads to meet his class on Sunday morning.

His lectures to the class were like a sermon. His class believed in him and loved him like a father. They always showed their appreciation of him by remembering him in some special way each Christmas.

One of the tributes at the funeral was resolutions offered by his class expressing their deep sorrow at his going away and their appreciation of his faithful work.

They also passed a resolution to erect a permanent memorial in the church to his memory.

He was a delegate to, and attended the last General Conference in Memphis.

He served as charge lay leader of his charge for many years, and was lay leader of the Aberdeen District at his death.

Judge Lamb was one of the most faithful men I have ever known. I shall miss his fatherly counsel. Eupora will miss him; and not only Eupora, but he will be missed throughout the State.

His funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Rev. C. W. Avery, and Rev. J. W. York.

A large concourse of people attended his funeral.

The floral offering was the most beautiful I have ever seen.

May God's blessings abide with his loved ones.

His former pastor,

W. B. BAKER.

A BOOK COMMENDED.

Since suggesting books to read seems to be in order in the Advocate, a mighty good one is, "Religious Aspects of Education," by John Caswell Roper, M.A., Secretary of Education, Upper South Carolina Conference, from the Cokesbury Press, Lamar & Whitmore. Price, $1.50.

This book deserves a careful reading by every preacher, teacher, parent and citizen of America.

The preface sets forth the author's purpose as "not attempting to treat in a technical way disputed policies in present day education. He seeks to call attention to some of the high spots in the educational life of the past, to note certain present-day tendencies, to consider certain manifest weaknesses in the practices now in use, and especially to note a failure to secure the results in building moral character which society has a right to demand. The necessity for the presence of religion in the process of education is regarded as essential in securing the development of character able to stand the moral strains of life."

The subjects of the chapters of the book show the reader its logical and practical nature: The Contribution of the Church to the Rise of Education in America; The Secularization of the Schools in America; The Merits of Secularized Education Examined; Education Redefined; A Revised Curriculum Suggested; The Teacher and His Qualifications; Moral and Religious Education; The Supernatural in Education.

Hall Summit, La.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE MISSIONARY SOCIETY, MANSFIELD, MARCH 7 AND 8.

The change in place of meeting may be something of a surprise, but when definite plans for the annual meeting were discussed at the mid-year Executive Committee meeting, it seemed unwise to expect that many auxiliaries would be able to pay the expenses of a visitor to the Council meeting at Shreveport, and almost immediately after that the expenses of delegates to New Orleans for the annual meeting of the conference. Believing that the inspiration of the Council was of the greatest value, it was finally decided to ask Mansfield to entertain the annual conference immediately preceding the Council, and thus enable every auxiliary to send at least one member to both meetings.

It was also believed that holding our conference so near the time and place of meeting of the Council, we could have many more Council officers as our guests. We hope to have Miss Daisy Davies and Miss Althea Jones and several others.

Please, therefore, elect delegates from your auxiliary to the annual meeting at Mansfield, and send names to Mrs. Eugene Nabors, Mansfield, La.

For number of delegates, see Conference Year Book, page 82, Standing Rule No. 7. Your attention is also called to Standing Rule No. 8 on the same page, this being a new rule regarding charge for luncheon at the conference meeting.

Report of the Year's Work.

If you have not already sent to your district secretary full reports of your year's work, names of auxiliary officers, amount of pledge, dues, etc., for 1927, please do so immediately. This is necessary, since there will only be time for distribution of yearly reports at this meeting. All reports are to be placed in a large envelope, and envelope placed in the hands of a delegate so that each auxiliary may have these reports to study in detail. Your prompt assistance in seeing that district secretaries have the needed information will facilitate matters.

You will understand this letter refers to annual meeting at Mansfield only. The one visitor to Shreveport Council meeeting may also be a delegate to this meeting, but the name must be sent to Mansfield as well as to Shreveport in that case.

Pray for this meeting.

MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL,
President.

MRS. GEO. S. BROWN,
Secretary.

That Every-Member Canvass

The last General Conference wrote into our Discipline a provision that an every-member canvass should be made annually in every congregation for the purpose of securing a special free-will offering for missions. This canvass is to be made near the end of February.

No wiser legislation was enacted than this. We have never had a complete, honest-to-goodness every-member canvass. We came nearest this ideal in the Centenary, and as a result that was our greatest achievement. Suppose we should actually have a hundred per cent canvass of every member for missions?

* * * *

It requires work—painstaking, persistent work, preceded by wise and careful organization. But it will secure results impossible of attainment by any other method. It will enlist all the people in support of the Church, and not alone "the faithful few."

There are many reasons why an every-member canvass should be made in February for a free-will missionary offering.

* * * *

1. The Discipline requires it—in Paragraph 483, Article XXII. To put a sum in the budget for this special cause, or to take up a public collection, is good—but it does not fulfill the law of the Church.

* * * *

2. It will furnish a real job for the missionary committee. Some committees die of inactivity. They need a definite, specific, concrete task—and such a task is provided by this every-member canvass.

* * * *

3. It will bring a vast amount of valuable information to the pastor. He should furnish the committee with the subscription cards and get a subscription or a report from every member. On the back of the card the committee can put much valuable information for the pastor. The committee will find members who have real or imaginary grievances—some have been overlooked by the Board of Stewards. Every pastor needs the information which can be had only by an every-member canvass.

* * * *

4. It will discover a large number who are not attending Church services, who are not in the Sunday School, who are not in the League, who are not in the Missionary Society. The every-member canvass can be a great recruiting agency for every department of the Church.

* * * *

5. It will get the million dollars. There is no doubt about the Church's putting down the million dollars if the General Conference program is followed—this can be guaranteed. If every pastor holds a School of Missions in every congregation, as the Discipline specificially directs him to do in Paragraph 483, Article XXII—if he preaches on missions, as the Discipline directs him to do in the same section—if he distributes the literature of missions, which is also made a part of his duty by the Discipline—and if he puts on a bona-fide every-member canvass, the million dollars will be secured.

* * * *

6. Such a canvass this year will make it easier to raise the million next year. For it must be remembered that we are having no "campaign" or "drive," but working on the regular legal policy of our Church. The culture, training, and education incident to the annual every-member canvass will soon make a new Church.

* * * *

In view of all these things—and many more, particularly our duty under God and the call of an unsaved world—let every pastor, by means of an every-member canvass, "give every member an opportunity to make a free-will offering for missions."

AT CHURCH FORTY-ODD YEARS AGO.

By Frances Minor Crymes.

(Concluded from Last Week's Advocate.)

It is pleasant to remark how we loved to attend the church services; they were as much a part of the refreshing influence of the Lord's day as was the Sunday school. We loved the feeling of reverence that came over us upon entering the church; the very chandeliers looked holy, as the lamps in the Tabernacle must have looked to the Israelites; the red and black carpeting on the floor, the stiff, straight pews; the ornately carved, red-cushioned pulpit chairs seemed to wear a special dignity belonging to the sacred edifice. The very choir was regarded with reverence. I heard a man several years my senior remark, after I was grown and many of my illusions were lost, that throughout his youth he never doubted that Judge Foote had the finest bass voice in the world; probably many who sat in rapt silence listening to the special numbers rendered on grand occasions never heard better singing.

At one time there were six members of the Foote family in our choir: Judge Foote, basso; Mrs. Foote and Miss Molly, sopranos; Mr. Tom Foote and wife, respectively, tenor and alto; Miss Em, organist. Often a weak form of humor was expended on the family name, when some wag spoke of them collectively as Feet, one would-be wit hinting that the six Footes in the choir made two yards.

The splendid lady that was Mrs. Foote then was our soprano; Galli-Curci is not heard with greater appreciation than we gave her as unsurpassed choir leader. Mr. Tom Foote, as tenor, we accepted without criticism, believing him as capable as now we would regard McCormack in his place; and his charming wife, who sang alto, we held as worthy of a place upon any stage where Schumann-Heink later stood. When they sang a quartet, with Miss Em Foote at the organ, we would with confidence have offered their performance to a New York audience as worth its attention.

At one time we had an organist, a brilliant pianist, who played an ornate prelude before each hymn, as well as fancy interludes between stanzas. Sometimes the choir was in doubt as to when she was ready to begin on the next stanza, and there was confusion—a weak start—though caught in before the second, third or fourth syllable, except one or two giggling girls who couldn't get their faces straight until the second line was reached.

There was one single lady of uncertain age who used to glance at her hymn book and turn her eyes up to sing, repeating this with every line. Sometimes they failed to make connection, whereupon she would keep the place with one finger rather than keep her eyes on the book.

There was one tall, blonde, youngish man, also of doubtful age, who had a bushy mustache; he opened his mouth very wide when he bassed, exhibiting the whole interior, very red and roomy, like the ogre's mouth in the story of Jack and the Beanstalk..

Once a little black and tan terrier came to church with his mistress. After much trotting about up and down and across, he found a comfortable place for a nap on the cushion about the chancel rail. He slept straight through the sermon until the preacher, towards the last, left the pulpit and came down as close to his hearers as possible, pausing close by the marble-topped communion table. He pleaded tenderly, waxed warmer, and struck the table violently with one open hand. The dog had awakened at his approach to the chancel rail, had stretched himself, yawned, and had settled on his haunches, apparently much interested in what was being said. When, in gentle tones, the preacher had spoken of sorrow and sin, and of forgiveness, with outstretched hand, the dog wagged his tail amiably, his ears expressing pleasure, his whole body answering the implied caress. But when, with sudden access of warmth, the speaker stamped one foot and shouted a few emphatic sentences, the little fellow dropped his ears and tail, quivered piteously, then began a slow retreat backwards, his eyes fastened on the face of the earnest man standing menacingly above him, fear and hope contending upon his countenance. Several times hope seemed triumphant, and he waggled delightedly; then a bang, a shout or a stamp put joy to flight and he began another retreat. At last, at the height of his peroration, the orator, flinging wide both arms, brought his hands together with a mighty clap, struck the floor a resounding blow with one foot, simultaneously crying out a strong denunciation of sin. Consternation seized the erstwhile doubtful dog, who now felt sure his presence was not desired, and with yelps he fled down the center aisle and out of the door, not standing upon the order of his going. No doubt his fleeing form was not long reaching the safe shelter of the home roof, where he resolved to remain on subsequent Sabbaths, for he never attended church again.

Once, during a long sermon, a spider crept from beneath a fold of ribbon in a huge, sprawling bow upon a hat worn by a well-dressed woman sitting in front of me, its ribbon loops distended with wires; he improved each shining moment in spinning a neat web inside a big loop, adroitly withdrawing and concealing himself as a fly that had been idling about for some time buzzed down upon the hat where he had taken up his residence. The fly walked briskly about, then stopped for a thorough massaging of his entire person, this cleansing process consuming much time. He seemed to feel that it was good to be at church; at times he faced the pulpit, and seemed to be giving attention to the earnest words of the preacher. At last he decided to take a look at the premises, and started through the very loop holding the web; in a moment he had walked into the trap. Then, as he struggled, the spider got him, wound him up, and devoured him right then It was almost noon, anyway; he wasn't the only hungry individual present. Had the preacher witnessed the event, he might have pointed a moral with advantage to his hearers.

The funniest part of the scene was when the spider, full to the neck after his meal, which he ate thirty minutes before we ate ours, came down upon the hatbrim and frisked around; he ran merrily to the outer edge, launched himself into the air, swung down by a silken rope, and was happy; the closing hymn announced and the organ prelude starting with a crash, he turned, swallowing his rope, and put out for tall timbers. A safe hiding place reached, he subsided, though his brilliant eyes peeped out. Whenever that hat appeared on various Sundays during that summer, there were eyes watching to see if its ribbons still harbored the former inhabitant.

It was awful to be taken with that mysterious malady which we termed "the hiccups" in church; the whole congregation seemed affected by it, the preacher most of all; only the deaf aunties sat unmoved, their trumpets tilted to catch every word of the sermon. Much interest was felt when a somnolent business man snored gently, emitting an occasional inoffensive snort. If the preacher banged the desk, or thundered a terrible warning at the top of his voice, the observers sometimes were diverted by witnessing a sudden rousing of more than one sleeper, who always made a pretense of having been wide awake and listening.

On one Sunday when the sermon had not held my attention I looked through a song book, relic of the last protracted meeting held in our church. Some swain, more sentimental than reverent, had gone through it, adding a word here and there, altering many of the titles. The following are samples of his work:

Blest Be the Tie that Binds—
Me to her and she only.
Wonderful Story of Love—
My love for you, honey.
All Is Well.....O. K. with Jim and Janie.
Sing Hosanna!.....Susannah, don't you cry.
Go and Tell the Story..Better tell the truth.
Ho! Every One that Thirsteth—
Take a drink of water.

I make no boast of having listened to every sermon preached while I sat in our family pew, third from the front on the right, looking up the center aisle, with Mr. and Mrs. Bryson in the pew just in front, and the Augustus family in the one back of us; honesty requires that I confess to having read on most Sundays, straight through the book taken from the library downstairs that morning. Furthermore, there were times when Henry and I read through our respective books, then, after exchanging, both made fair progress towards the middle of the second book before the sermon was ended, this being contingent upon the length of both sermon and story.

Looking back, I am persuaded that our parents allowed, of the two evils, reading or fidgeting, the lesser.

After the prayer there were announcements covering the ensuing week, then the Doxology was sung; often the old tune—Sessions—was used instead of Old Hundred. It was inspiring to hear the volume of united voices sounding the praise of him from whom all blessings flow, and to hear the solemn benediction pronounced from the sacred pulpit, while every head was reverently bowed. The congregation went slowly out with the feeling within all hearts of those who had been with one accord in one place, a blessed feeling of peace.

Hattiesburg, Miss.

TWO NOTABLE GIFTS TO METHODIST COLLEGES.

Two large individual gifts recently made to two of our colleges are especially worthy of note.

Clarendon College, Clarendon, Tex., has received from one man $50,000 for endowment, and Henderson-Brown College, Arkadelphia, Ark., has received a single gift of $100,000 for the same purpose.

During 1927 there should be an unprecedented number of such gifts to our colleges. Additional endowment is imperative with most of them, and men and women of means must give the most of the millions of dollars which should immediately be added to the endowment of these institutions.

The Home Circle

CHILDHOOD'S FOUNTAIN.

By Mrs. Mary V. Jarratt.

A mother tired, at close of day,
I sit me down to rest,
The children in their noisy play,
Close about me press.

I try my best to look above
This weary toil and strife;
I know that God is over all—
He plans my daily life.

And as I sit and meditate,
My baby runs to me;
No royalty can ever boast
Of truer loyalty.

Chubby arms about my neck,
Soft cheeks press close to mine;
A bit of heaven come to earth;
A touch of love divine.

Brown eyes aglow with ectasy,
Above a dimpled chin;
A perfect love, implicit faith,
Reflected from within.

Nestling safe within my arms,
Eyes dewy now with sleep,
Serene she rests without a fear,
While I my vigil keep.

Her simple faith has touched my heart,
I'll heed my Father's voice,
I'll trust him for my every need,
And in his love rejoice.

My cares—they've vanished quite away,
I am refreshed anew;
Childhood's fountain, clear and sweet,
Will do as much for you.

THE TEA PARTY.

By Emma Gary Wallace.

"May I go?" pleaded Clarise as her mother came out of the house all dressed for a walk. "I'll be just as gooa as anything, an' I'll not bover a single little bit."

Mrs. Adams smiled lovingly at her small daughter.

"Indeed, I know you wouldn't bother," she smiled, "and I should like to take you along, but it is not possible to-day, besides I want you to do something for me. Nora is busy in the kitchen and so I cannot trouble her, but you are playing here on the lawn, and I wish you would watch for Mr. Jenks, the postman, and give him this letter, and ask him to take care of it for me as soon as he can, for it is very important."

"But, Mummy," pouted Clarice, "if I can't go with you I want to go over and play with Janet Clark. She has a new doll's tea-set and we can have a make-believe party," she said.

"No, dear" Mrs. Adams replied, "not this morning. I happen to know that Mrs. Clark has a headache, and I'm afraid you children might disturb her. Remain here, watch for the postman, and do not go out of our yard."

Clarice couldn't see what harm it would do, just to run over to Janet's and tell her she couldn't come, so she went slowly down the walk which led from the front steps. As she almost reached the pavement, she looked up the street to see if her mother had turned the corner, and just at that minute, Mrs. Adams turned around to pick up something she had dropped, and Clarice started guiltily.

Then something inside of her seemed to say, "Oh, Clarice—Clarice!" and the little girl turned and walked even more slowly back toward the porch steps. She sat down on the lowest one and began to think.

What was it that her Daddy said just the other night, about it not being right to do things when we feel guilty and do not want to be caught? And there was something about God watching us especially as such times, and feeling very, very sorry, if we keep on and do what we should not.

Clarice couldn't remember just what the rest of it was, but it was suddenly very clear. It would be wrong to go to Janet's even for just a few minutes.

It seemed as if the postman would never come, so Clarice thought she would take her own little broom and brush off the porch and straighten the rugs and make it very neat. That would help Nora and her mother, too.

Clarice began to feel happier—and why, what was this?

Something caught the light of the sun and sent out a little fan of golden rays.

Clarice moved the big chair, although it took all her strength, but there back of it and caught in a wide crack, was her lovely little locket which she had lost some time ago and felt so badly about it.

She worked the locket out of the crevice gently, so as not to mar it, and was delighted to see it wasn't injured at all. And there was Mr. Jenks at last, and he took the letter and message and went on quickly.

Jut then some one came through the hedge. It was Janet.

"I've come to play tea party," she cried. "Muvver said I could."

"And Nora is baking coookies," exclaimed Clarice, "and she'll give us some."

That night when Clarice went to bed, she was very thoughtful and quiet.

"A penny for your thoughts, daughter," laughed her mother.

"I thought I was having an awful hard time," dimpled Clarice, "when I couldn't go with you or to Janet's house either, but, Mummy, I had the nicest time after all and found my locket, too."

"That's sure to be the way," Mrs. Adams nodded. "Much greater happiness comes through doing right than can ever come through selfishness or wrongdoing."

"An' God is happy, too," added Clarice.

"Yes," smiled her mother, "and that's why we are happy—because we are working with him and doing as he wants us to."

Clarice's eyes were shining.

"I understand now what Daddy meant," she exclaimed—"an' I'm glad!"

"So am I," replied her mother as she gave Clarice a good-night kiss.—Selected.

HANDICAPPED OR NOT?

A certain physician is famous for his skill in the diagnosis not only of physical but of mental and moral disorders. A young married man with every hopeful prospect in life came to him one day in a fit of depression.

"Doctor," he said, "I am going to give up. I am a failure. If I only had money or special talent of some kind, I think I could succeed at something, but as it is, I am handicapped."

The doctor looked at him keenly and asked, "Are you quite well?"

"As far as I know, quite."

"Do you have all your faculties unimpaired. You can see and hear?"

"Perfectly."

"Are you physically and mentally fit to do regular work?"

"Yes."

The doctor paused a moment and then said: "Will you go with me on my rounds for two or three hours?"

The young man consented, and Doctor B took him in his automobile to three public institutions.

In the first, an asylum for defectives, Doctor B showed his discouraged patient a girl who had a spinal disease. She had no control over her muscles, which were in constant and painful motion. But she was writing a letter on a typewriter, striking the keys with a stick tipped with a rubber knob. She smiled at her work.

At the second institution the doctor showed his patient a blind boy who was weaving a beautiful rug with an intricate pattern. The boy was smiling at his work. All the blind people in that asylum smiled as they worked.

At the third place, the young man saw an epileptic setting type for advertisements and at the same time directing the teaching of other epileptics. And the workman was smiling at his task.

When the visit was over and the doctor and patient had come back to the office, the doctor said:

"Young man, are you not ashamed, with your physical and mental soundness, to say that you are handicapped in the race of life? Do you know why those defective human beings you have just seen can smile and be happy at their work?

"It is because we are fortunate enough to have in charge of those asylums, superintendents who are Christian men and women. They have inspired those burdened and defective bodies with hope. If they, in spite of their painful and broken lives, can smile bravely and conquer seemingly insurmountable difficulties, are you going to yield to your timid fears and complain of your circumstances? Believe in God and thank him that you have health and strength. Go out and work, and smile as you work."

The young man, with tears in his eyes, thanked the gruff old physician, and went away, a new man.—Youth's Companion.

TIME OUT.

"Eat up your rice pudding, dear." "No, mummy, I don't like rice pudding." "Well, dear, just pretend you like it." "No, mummy, I'll pretend I'm eating it."—The Progressive Grocer.

Grandmother: "William, I wouldn't slide down that banister."

William: "I know you wouldn't, Grandmother."—Exchange.

Young Man: "I'm looking for a job."

Grocer: "Well, I like your looks, but I can't afford more help."

Young Man: "But I won't be much help."—The Atlantic Seal.

Judge: "Haven't I seen you before somewhere?"

Defendant: "Surely; I taught your daughter singing lessons."

Judge: "Fifty years."—Washington Cougar's Paw.

"Willie, you musn't play on the front lawn. It's Sunday. Go play in the back yard."

"Ain't there just as much Sunday in the back yard?"—Life.

She: "I saw the doctor to-day about my loss of memory."

He: "What did he do?"

She: "Made me pay in advance."—Watchman-Examiner.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

Louisiana Conference—Rev. W. W. Drake, D. D., Rev. R. H. Harper, D. D., Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. W. H. Saunders, Rev. J. E. Gray.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. J. W. Dorman, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"The work goes on apace," writes Rev. L. P. Wasson, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District.

Dr. Theodore Copeland recently closed a great union meeting, in which hundreds were blessed, at Jerome, Idaho.

"The year has opened hopefully, and we are looking for good things," says Dr. A. F. Watkins, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, of the Harrisonburg charge, Louisiana Conference, writes that the work goes forward. He expects to secure the mission special in full.

Mrs. H. R. McKee, wife of our pastor at Wiggins, Miss., has recently returned from a month's stay in an infirmary in Meridian, Miss., greatly improved in health.

The Advocate goes into more than four-fifths of the homes of the Coahoma and Jonestown charge, North Mississippi Conference. Rev. R. G. Lord is the pastor.

The First Methodist Church, Corinth, Miss., Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor, has begun the publication of a weekly bulletin. The publication of a bulletin is a forward step.

Dr. William McDougall, eminent psychologist and internationally known scholar in physiological research, of Harvard University, has accepted the chair of Philosophy at Duke University.

"Our mission special money has for some time been in the hands of the treasurer," writes Rev. C. M. Crossley, our pastor at Columbia, Miss. All departments of the work at Columbia are in a flourishing condition.

Dr. R. E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., announces that Dr. Burke Culpepper has been secured for a series of evangelistic services, beginning on March 27 and closing on April 17.

Dr. Henry Atkinson, General Secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, addressed the Ministerial Union at New Orleans at its regular monthly meeting last Monday morning.

The sudden death of William Rushing Howell, son of Major F. A. Howell, in Durant, Miss., on Jan. 27, brought great sorrow to his loved ones and friends. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to those who have been bereaved.

Rev. J. O. Hanes, general evangelist, writes that the meeting at Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., has had gracious results. This is Brother Hanes' second visit to Louisiana—he was with Rev. P. M. Caraway in a fine meeting at Winnfield last October.

The editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, is still confined to his bed, being in an extremely weak condition. There are some favorable indications, however, and hopes are entertained of his recovery. The inquiries and sympathetic messages of many friends are deeply appreciated.

Rev. E. C. Driskell, pastor of the Fulton circuit, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "We have just closed an eight-day meeting, Rev. George G. Yeager doing the preaching. The weather was very unfavorable, but the membership was greatly blessed, and six were added to the church on profession of faith."

In reply to the charge of Clarence Darrow that Christianity was "boot-legged" into the Roman Empire, Rev. Leon I. McCain, our pastor at Minden, La., preached a sermon recently that puts the distinguished barrister out of court through force of undisputable facts. The sermon is printed in full in the Webster Signal of Feb. 3.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, general evangelist, is in a meeting at Miami, Fla. After the close of that meeting, he will return for two meetings in Mississippi. Brother Smoot has the first two weeks in March open, and he would be glad to give that date to some brother in Louisiana or Mississippi. He can be reached by letter or telegram at Greenville, Miss.

The biography of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, written by Bishop Warren A. Candler, is just from the press. It is published by the Cokesbury Press, and is priced at $1.50. Certainly every Methodist preacher in Mississippi will want to read the book, as will thousands of other Methodists throughout the connection. The biography is one of Bishop Candler's finest pieces of work.

Rev. James H. Felts, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Greenwood, Miss., writes: "The mission study is taking well in my charge. Nothing put on since I came to Greenwood has provoked quite so much real interest. Sunday school teachers, members of the Woman's Missionary Society, and a few of the stewards are going into 'Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions' with unmistakable interest."

The Sojourners' Club is an organization composed of Masons in good standing who are or have been commissioned officers in the United States military or naval service, National Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey service, Public Health service, and those who served as commissioned officers in the Allied Armies in the World War. The Club was organized in Chicago in 1918, and it now has sixty-eight chapters, with a membership of approximately 12,500. The Louisiana Chapter No. 33 was instituted on June 14, 1925. Commander Harry A. McClure is president, and Lieutenant E. J. Scott is secretary-treasurer. Meetings are held regularly on the second Wednesday of each month, and visiting members are always welcomed.

THE COURSES OF STUDY ADOPTED BY THE BISHOPS, DECEMBER, 1926.

I have been asked whether the courses of study adopted by the College of Bishops in December, 1926, will be the courses required and taught in the Institutes and Pastors' Schools and by the Correspondence Schools during the current year. The answer to this question is, "They are not." Candidates and undergraduates will not begin the study of the courses adopted by the Bishops in December, 1926, until after the sessions of the Annual Conferences of 1927. For the current Conference year the proper courses to take are those printed in the Discipline of 1926.

General Secretary of Education.

SUBSTITUTES.

By F. Burdine.

In medical science, domestic science and all professions and avocations in life we find substitutes, many of which prove just as effective as the real thing needful.

But how hazardous and fatal in the spiritual realm when we substitute anything for the Lord Jesus Christ. "He loved the church (all believers) and gave himself for it, that he might present it to himself, a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish;" and yet, with all this, the church is not a substitute for the Lord Jesus Christ.

Church membership, church attendance, church loyalty and church work are very vital factors in the promotion of the kingdom of heaven, and yet these are not a substitute for prayer and communion with our Lord Jesus Christ. There may be church "pay-ers," but unless this grace is combined with church "pray-ers," it is "tinkling brass and a sounding cymbal;" whatever is not prompted by the Spirit of God is burned as "wood, hay and stubble."

We may be "workers" and "goers" and "prayers," but the fruit of the Spirit is "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith," etc., without which we are "nothing."

May God help us to use no substitute for the Lord Jesus Christ. "And if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

THE COKESBURY TRAINING COURSE AT MELDER, LA.

We have been putting on a Cokesbury Course for the Melder charge. We decided to have our first training course at Melder, this being the most central point on the work. Good interest has been taken and splendid work done.

Brother A. K. McLellan, our Sunday School Extension Secretary, came to us Sunday and carried us through a study of "The Small Sunday School," completing the book Thursday night.

We put on an inspirational program Sunday afternoon. In this way we got together a good crowd. At this meeting good talks were made by our own Sunday school workers. Brother McLellan presented to us a general outline of the program of work in the small Sunday school. He encouraged us to enroll for the course that we were about to begin. He also told us about the nature of the work and what we would have to do in order for us to get credit for our work.

Fourteen enrolled for the course; besides, we had others who came every night and took part. We had an average attendance of about thirty. We had seven from the Fellowship Sunday school at Hineston. They made the round trip of eighteen miles in their cars every night. Everybody seemed to enjoy themselves; all did their work.

We appreciate the Coksebury Training Course. We want more of it. We think that this will mean a better Sunday school and a better church in our rural district. Brother McLellan is an earnest worker—our people want him back again as soon as we can get him. Our sympathies and prayers are with him in this great work.

F. C. CADY, P. C.

FROM LORMAN, MISS.

"And it came to pass:" A small amount of literature, well chosen. And did we read it? Yes. How? By announcing an all-day study on missions. How many came? The full church. What kind of missionary program could be rendered that would interest a lot of men, boys and girls and a few women who are not interested in the Woman's Missionary Society? By the pastor leading the program and making the best remarks that he could, Rev. Mr. Horn, pastor of the Baptist church, conducting the devotional and using for his subject, "The Bible the Textbook of Missions;" H. Huff telling "Why a Missionary Free-will Offering;" Mrs. T. M. Ford giving a synopsis of the first and second chapters of the book, "Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions;" and the pastor making an inspirational talk based on the third chapter of the above book. What then? The ladies spread the table with enough chicken, chicken pie, salads, cakes, pies, etc., to feed twice the crowd. Where did the crowd go after dinner? Most of them went back in the church. Just to study Missions? Yes. Well, I never heard of such a thing. The pamphlets were distributed, not in envelopes or on the seats, Brother W. D. Hawkins, but each one in the house read aloud a paragraph until we had read them. And then a "round table" discussion. The program was concluded by taking up the last chapter in the above mentioned book, "How to Make the Local Church Missionary." D. M. Dowdell voiced the sentiment of the congregation by saying: "To make the church missionary the members must be educated in missions. From what I have heard to-day I can't help giving to missions."

And other things have come to pass: A miscellaneous linen shower for the parsonage, valued at $125; kitchen and dining-room added to parsonage, costing $750; and entire house painted.

E. D. SIMPSON, P. C.

FROM COAHOMA AND JONESTOWN CHARGE.

Dear Advocate: Just a word from the Coahoma and Jonestown charge. This is my fourth year here. The work is moving along fine. We are busy trying to carry out the program of our great church. The Sunday schools and Missionary Societies are making progress and are doing excellent work. Practically every child and youth in these communities are in the Sunday schools, and we have some very good adult classes that are well attended. There are very few women that are not members of the Missionary Societies. We are trying to train the church, looking not only to the present, but to the future. We are emphasiziinz evangelism this year, and are praying and working for a great season of revivals during the year. During our pastorate here we have raised nearly $6,000 on church debts, and expect to clear all property of all debt by the close of this year.

I want to mention especially the small rural church at Birdie. I preach out there only once per month, in the afternoon, and on the fifth Sundays. Three years ago when I first went out there, the building was very dilapidated, window lights all out, heating facilities very poor, no pews, only a few rickety chairs. The Sunday school had been killed with the first frost, and the congregations were very small. First, we had a great revival, held by the pastor and people, that swept out over the community with power. The Sunday school was revived and has been ever green since. The church building has been recovered, good windows put in, the walls beaver-boarded, nice comfortable pews made, a better pulpit arranged, and a good heating stove installed. They are talking of building, and no doubt will soon build several Sunday school rooms. This has been done by a faithful few, none of whom are wealthy. The Sunday school is working under the "C" Program of Work. They held Sunday School Day last year for the first time. The pastor has taught one Cokesbury training class out there, and we have another one organized, to be taught as soon as we get the books. Brother Gladney was with us last Sunday when we went out there. He has been a great deal of help in carrying on this work. This small band of faithful people deserve praise, but they are just now ready to do greater things, and what they have done can and ought to be done in scores of rural churches in the North Mississippi Conference.

I am sure no pastor has a finer and more loyal people to work with than are found here on this work.

R. G. LORD, Pastor.

UNIFYING THE EDUCATIONAL WORK OF THE CHURCH.

By Rev. W. E. Hogan.

In its quadrennial report to the General Convention of the Christian Church the Board of Christian Education of that church says: "For years the professional workers in our church and in other churches had been advocating the integration of the agencies engaged in the work of Christian Education, but it was the distinctive honor of our church to be the first really to effect such unity of its educational forces." Since 1922 the promotion of the entire educational program of that church has been under the direction and leadership of the Board of Christian Education, and their progress towards a truly integrated program of Christian Education has been entirely satisfactory.

Other churches, notably the Northern Methodists, Presbyterians, and the Disciples, have also placed all their educational work under one Board.

The last General Conference of our church appointed an Educational Commission to study this question during the quadrennium 1926-30, and to make recommendations to the next General Conference. This Commission is at work and will hold its second meeting in February.

A PROPOSITION.

To the Epworth Leagues, Sunday Schools, Woman's Missionary Societies, and all the other Methodists in the State of Mississippi: There is still due on the Back Bay Nursery in Biloxi, Miss., about six or seven hundred dollars.

If this can be raised by the first of March, the Woman's Council will take it over and manage to carry on the work. Now, Biloxi Main Street Church will pay the last $160 of that amount. Come on quick—the time is short, the need imperative. W. M. SULLIVAN, P. C.

Biloxi, Miss.

WANTED.

In the next three weeks, sixty persons, Epworth Leagues, or Woman's Missionary Societies to take a $10 share in freeing the Back Bay Nursery at Biloxi from debt. We want to do this before the meeting of the Woman's Council at Shreveport, March 9. Let us have a quick and liberal response. Send money to Rev. H. L. Daniels, care Back Bay Nursery, Biloxi, Miss.

Presiding Elder Seashore District.

TO OUR PASTORS.

The Business Manager of the Advocate has sent to all the preachers the necessary envelopes, blanks, etc., for putting on the Advocate campaign. If any one of them has failed to receive this literature, a card to the office to that effect will bring a supply. The time to put the Advocate in the homes of all our people at the Special Rate is slipping by, and our pastors are urged to act quickly, if the campaign is to be a success.

There were two negresses living on "Jeems" Island (South Carolina), and one evening Diana, who lived upstairs, upon hearing a noise, said: "Who dat?" Nan, who lived downstairs, said: "Who dat da say 'who dat'?" Diana replied: "Who dat da say 'who dat' when I say 'who dat'?" —Charleston News and Courier.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. ALICE MANSFIELD HESTER, was born at Satartia, Yazoo County, Miss., April 11, 1890, and died in the Baptist Hospital, Selma, Ala., Dec. 11, 1926. She was the daughter of C. M. and Jennie Martin Mansfield, who preceded her to the great beyond several years ago. Those surviving to mourn her going away are her devoted husband, J. Frank Hester, of Lamison, Ala.; three brothers, M. M., H. A. and C. G. Mansfield, respectively of Jackson, Miss.; Nampa, Idaho, and Orange, Tex.; two sisters, Mrs. C. T. Logan, of Bentonia, Miss., and Miss Annie Mansfield, of Lamison, Ala. Sister Hester joined the Methodist church in her youth, and because of her faith in Christ and her exemplary Christian life, was doubtless ready when the summons came. It is sad to see a young wife, just in the prime of life, taken away from loved ones, but God knows best, and we must bow in humble submission to his will. It was the writer's privilege to be her pastor for a few years, and his association with her was quite pleasant. May he who doeth all things well give comfort and grace in this hour of sadness, and may the sorrowing ones look beyond the grave to that upper and better world where some day there may be a happy reunion to know no parting.

The subject of this paper, HAROLD HURLBERT GABLE, was the oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gable and the great-grandson of the late Rev. G. M. Ellis, of the Misssissippi Conference. Harold was born in Donner, La., on Oct. 24, 1917, and died at Touro Infirmary in New Orleans, Oct. 8, 1926. He was carried by loving hands to Hattiesburg, Miss., where his remains were interred, services being held from Main Street Methodist Church by the writer, assisted by the local pastor, Rev. Joseph A. Smith. The profuse floral offerings testified to the many friends he held, and to his beautiful child life. At an early age he showed much interest in music, was a good singer, and his earnest interest in Sunday school and church marked him as a future leader. Some will ask, Why did God take him? I do not know, but with all the created beauty the world contains, I am sure none of them can compare with the beauty of a tender child. Jesus said, "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Of all the sounds the world contains, surely none are as sweet as the voice of a child. Surely we miss the whispered word, or the loud shout, the beaming face, the sparkling eyes, the touch of the finger, or the pressing hand, all like a gentle caress. We shall miss him. We shall miss him, but, blessed be God, we know how and where to find him.

WILLIE DESDA WATSON, whose spirit was so suddenly taken off the stage of action on Jan. 13, while crossing the Missouri Pacific tracks in her home town, Selma, La., while returning from a mission pertaining to the extension of Christ's kingdom, was one of the most beloved and devoted Christian workers it has ever been our pleasure to meet. She was an untiring worker. For seventeen years she taught the young people's Sunday school class in the Selma Sunday schoool. Her influence over the life of the young people and her love for Christ won and held them for the Master. Her smile and loving spirit that dominated her life found their way into the hearts of all who met her. Immediately at the close of our revival in Selma last summer, conducted by the pastor and Prof. B. G. Grenfel, of Dawson Springs, Ky., the good women of the church organized a Missionary Society and elected Mrs. Watson president. To this work she gave the very best she had. The work was new to her, but the love for Christ and her church led her ever on and upward in this great work. No task was too hard, though some were discouraging. Her personality led one to know that she lived to exemplify the life of the Master. Her friends were legion, as was demonstrated by those who attended the funeral services conducted in the home Jan. 14, by the writer. Mrs. Watson is survived by her mother, Mrs. Agnes Dodson; two brothers, Heber Dodson and Lee Dodson, of Kirbyville, Tex.; a half brother, J. E. Moffett, of Selma; two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Gammill, of Selma, and Mrs. J. T. Stron, of Monticello, Miss.; a loving husband and daughter, Brother T. L. Watson and Elizabeth. May that beautiful spirit which possessed her life guide all those who mourn her loss, continuously in the path of peace which leads to the land where there are no broken homes and where the sun never goes down.

MRS. ELLEN SULLIVAN.

On Sunday, Jan. 16, 1927, at 2:45 a. m., a great soul passed from the ranks of the Felicity Church congregation. After days of calm resistance, our beloved sister, Mrs. Ellen Sullivan, succumbed to a stroke of paralysis. She was the very picture of a Christian soul while in good health, and the pains of death did not seem to alter her stable faith and trust in her God. She is survived by five living children: W. A. Sullivan, Edward Sullivan, John Sullivan, Willie Sullivan, and Mrs. Carrie Porter. Her death marks the passing of the oldest living member of Felicity congregation. She united with Felicity Church, Dec. 10, 1876, during the pastorate of Dr. J. B. Walker. She had passed her eighty-fourth birthday when her summons came. Her death is mourned by a host of relatives and friends. The funeral was conducted from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carrie Porter, Monday, Jan. 17, and her body laid to rest in the Masonic cemetery.

"Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit, rest thee now.
Even while with us thy footsteps trod,
His seal was on thy brow.
Dust to its narrow house beneath,
Soul to its home on high!
They that have seen thy look in death,
No more fear to die."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Cradle Roll Superintendents and helpers, Beginner, Primary and Junior teachers of the Jackson District are urged to attend the District Institute to be held in Florence on Thursday, Feb. 3. Miss Mamie Dietrich, District Elementary Superintendent, is promoting this part of the institute; and a sectional meeting will be held for Elementary workers.

Mrs. J. H. Green, of Barlow, Brookhaven District Elementary Superintendent, urges that all Elementary workers in the district make an effort to be present at the District Institute in Magnolia on Friday, Feb. 4. Come ready to participate in the Elementary group meeting.

The new year starts well with checking in Elementary departments and classes. Three schools, all in the Hattiesburg District, showed eight ranking departments when checked. Certificates were issued and the workers of these classes look forward with determination and zeal to attaining rank before Promotion time. The ranking departments checked were: Progressive (attaining six of the ten points required by the departmental program of work). Primary, Magee, and Cradle Roll, Collins. Advanced (eight points), Beginner, Magee; Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary and Junior, Mount-Olive; Junior, Collins.

The district superintendents are sending out to each school in the Conference a card requesting the name of the superintendent (or teacher) of the Elementary groups; and asking when these groups can be checked. This list will be of great value to the district and Conference workers in keeping in touch with the Elementary workers in the Conference.

MAGGIE MAY JONES,
Mississippi Conference Elementary Superintendent.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off—Adv.

LOUISIANA MISSIONARY WOMEN.

As Mrs. Gallion, your Conference Mission and Bible Superintendent, is now convalescing at Touro Infirmary from a recent operation, it is impossible at this time for her to answer any personal letters. However, she requests that these announcements be made:

"All missionary women are urged to study with pastors, 'Yet Another Day in Missions.' Credits will be given for this study.

"Other Mission Study books are, 'Our Templed Hills,' and one book on the Mosiem World, to be gotten at Lamar & Whitmore, 60 cents.

"There is no special Bible Study book provided by the Council. Grace Saxe books are recommended for easy classes. Write Grace Saxe, 218 South Wabash, Chicago, Ill., for price list.

BROOKSVILLE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

On Monday afternoon, Jan. 6, the Woman's Missionary Society in Brooksville, Miss., met in the home of Mrs. F. S. Jackson with a full attendance. Officers having been elected in November, the installation service was read at this meeting by the pastor, Rev. Seaman Rhea.

The following officers will serve for the year 1927:

Mrs. E. H. Johnson, President; Mrs. Seamon Rhea, Vice President; Mrs. J. L. S. Peterson, Treasurer; Mrs. J. L. Calmes, Loocal Treasurer; Mrs. Glover Wilkins, Recording Secretary; Mrs. John Cantrell, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. M. A. Parks, Superintendent of Juniors; Mrs. E. I. Keller, Superintendent of Young People; Mrs. R. K. Price, Superintendent of Social Service; Mrs. W. B. Bell, Superintendent of Publicity; Mrs. A. D. Doner, Superintendent of Bible and Mission Study; Mrs. W. B. Helm, Superintendent of Supplies; Mrs. Albert Glenn, Agent of Voice.

MRS. W. B. BELL,
Superintendent of Publicity.

1926 REPORT OF PURVIS WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

We make the following report for the year 1926 from the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist church, Purvis, Miss.:

We have twenty-five members, and our year's work has been a very pleasant and profitable one. The report of the treasurer shows that the total amount collected on dues, pledges, Belle Bennett Memorial, Wesley House, Scarritt Scholarship and Week of Prayer was $102.65.

The interesting programs were well attended during the four days of the Week of Prayer, with a thank offering of $15.

At the beginning of the year it was decided that money for the local work would be raised mostly by the bazaar shower plan. Three of these were held during the year, at which times members and interested friends donated hand or machine-made articles. Programs suitable to the months in which they were given were rendered at the social hour. The one in June featured a small bride, who, when she had drawn in an express wagon full of gifts, recited a beautiful poem suggestive of the love of each member for the work. The July shower, of course, was of a patriotic nature, the gifts this time being carried in a large firecracker by two small girls, who placed it on the floor, at the same time pulling a fuse on which were attached the articles. In September the school idea was carried out by three old-fashioned pupils wearing sunbonnets, overalls and pantaletts, bringing in the presents in dinner buckets and baskets. Old-time school melodies were sung and readings of the long ago were given by the older members of the Society. From the sale of these articles given at a downtown store in November, $75 was raised. At the same place a few days before Thanksgiving dinner was served two days, bringing in over $50. The Society now has $135 in its local treasury.

The outstanding work which has been accomplished by the ladies this past year has been buying of a $225 lot next to the parsonage, thus enlarging the parsonage grounds.

The Mission and Bible Study has not been neglected in this auxiliary. Much good was derived from the studies, "The Task Ahead," "Adventures in Faith in Foreign Lands," and "Twelve Thousand Bible Questions." Mrs. Lily Weems was the teacher.

The following new officers have been elected for the new year: President, Mrs. R. G. Lander; Vice President, Mrs. John Cooper; Rec. Secretary, Mrs. Henry Purvis; Treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Murphree; Local Trasurer, Mrs. J. T. Tannehill; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. D. W. Slay; Voice Agent, Mrs. Henry Purvis; Superintendent of Social Service, Mrs. J. T. Garraway; Superintendent of Bible and Mission Study, Mrs. C. W. Wesley.

We are now studying "Prayers and Missions," and are getting much inspiration from the same.

Seven new subscribers for the Missionary Voice have been sent in, showing an increase in the appreciation of this valuable paper.

MRS. R. G. LANDER,
President.
MRS. HENRY PURVIS,
Superintendent of Publicity.

A TRUE STORY OF THE CROSS.

One day several years ago in Natchitoches an old neighbor came to my home, in great distress of mind, and told me of a "scarlet" woman who lay dying in a house of ill-fame in the back of our town. The dying woman was begging for some one to come and tell her about God—and pray for her.

The neighbor asked if I would go. The next day the minister's wife and I found our way to this sick woman.

I shall never forget the queer atmosphere of despair and wretchedness of that place despite its handsome furnishings. Lying upon the bed with her face covered with her hands was a young woman about 24 years old—and as she sobbed out her pitiful story—women of our church and Missionary Society—I felt wave after wave of guilt roll over me and I stood condemned before God for not telling the story of salvation more. This was her story: She said at the age of 12 she was led astray and went from bad to worse. Then finally Natchitoches, and illness and impending death. She said night after night she had lain there and begged for somebody to pray for her, that an old Negro woman had come and knelt by her bed and prayed, and it did her heart good. And then somebody put "Nearer My God to Thee" on the graphophone—and then she told with pitiful sobs, "Last a peculiar thing happened to me—I was trying to pray—I know you'll think it was dope or dreaming, but it was not—Something came floating into my room up at the ceiling—I don't know how to describe it—but I know it was God—and then I looked and a cross came floating in and hung just below God, and Jesus was on the cross. And all night long I tried to catch the end of the cross, but I couldn't. I'd raise up in the bed and reach for it, but I couldn't catch it, and I'd fall back again.

"And then somehow I knew why I couldn't catch the cross, my sins kept me from just taking hold and going on home to God. I'm so tired I wish I could have caught the cross and gone home." And then I told her the old, old story and how to catch hold of the cross.

I sobbed with her and in my heart I said, "God, you couldn't get any of us to come, and you came yourself."

Oh how are you going to forgive us, Lord Jesus, for keeping such a story of pardon and love locked in our hearts? Missionary women, there are so many who haven't heard the old, old story! Can't we send it to them today?

A CONFERENCE OFFICER.

Missionary women—what have you pledged for 1927? Was it your best?

BLACK HAWK WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Black Hawk, Miss., church met with Mrs. R. L. Ellis at a recent date, and the following officers were elected: President and Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. D. M. COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEB. 13.

Subject: "Making Our Homes Christian."

Lesson Text: Ephesians 5:25—6:4.

Golden Text: "Let us love one another: for love is of God." I John 4:7.

Teaching Points.

1. If we can make our homes Christian, most of our religious and social problems will be solved.

2. The home is not Christian until all the members of it—father, mother, children—live and act in accordance with the teachings of Christ.

3. We cannot live and act in accordance with the teachings of Christ until we revere him as Lord and know him as Savior.

4. Christian parents are neglecting one of their weightiest obligations when they fail to give definite religious instruction and training to their children.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Dual Extension Secretary has beeen very active during the month of January. He has explained and placed eight Programs of Work in the Brookhaven District. If these eight Sunday schools will go to work on their Programs of Work, they will show an improvement that will more than repay all time and efforts in the placing of the Program of Work.

The Barlow Circuit Institute the fourth Sunday in January was a most delightful institute. They went into a circuit organization and planned to meet at least twice more during the year. The circuit institute will prove a means of drawing the various churches on the circuit into united efforts.

On the fifth Sunday, a circuit institute was attempted on the Bayou Pierre charge. It is hoped that these circuit institutes may be revived. Some of the best circuit meetings we have ever had have been on this circuit.

The Louise and Holly Bluff Circuit Institute was organized and held its first meeting the fifth Sunday. This will prove a most helpful meeting for the charge.

Two new supporters to the Dual Extension work have sent in money this week, and one other school has promised to send its fourth Sunday offering.

The Laurel Sunday school reports an increased attendance of about 100 over last year. This is good news, and we trust simply a foretaste of greater things to come.

The Philadelphia Sunday school reports the largest attendance they have ever had, and I trust this is the beginning of a great forward step for Philadelphia.

Pray for the work and workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Word comes from Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, that he will be with us at the State-wide Conference at Monroe, provided his daughter, who has been seriously ill, has sufficiently recovered to permit his attendance. We trust that this will be so.

The writer had the pleasure of a visit to the Lake Charles District on Sunday, Jan. 30, and was at Lafayette in the morning, Rayne in the afternoon, and Lake Charles at night. At Rayne, we had a "Set Up" meeting in the interest of our District Standard Training School, which is to be held at Lafayette the first week in May. The presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., was elected Educational Director.

On Monday we visited the Preachers' Meeting in New Orleans, and were especially interested in what they had to report about their Sunday schools. The new pastor at Rayne Memorial, Dr. J. B. Mitchell, gave his attendance as about 225, and said he was having splendid council meetings. Rev. E. C. Gunn, of Carrollton Avenue Church, reported an attendance of 300, and said they need more room. Rev. B. C. Taylor, at Louisiana Avenue, reported a fine attendance on the preceding Sunday. Rev. W. H. Giles, of St. Mark's, reported a good attendance, and spoke of his Junior Church. Brother Peters, of First Church, reported an offering of $48 for Missionary Day. His school is mostly an adult school, with a class of adults reaching an attendnace of nearly 200. Rev. L. W. Cain, of Parker Memorial, reported new property bought for a Sunday school annex, while Brother A. M. Serex, of Second Church, reported an attendance of about 150. Rev. J. C. Rousseaux reported a hopeful outlook at Algiers, and the presiding elder, Dr. R. H. Harper, gave a most interesting account of his trip to Pecan Island, where there is a population of about 300, with one Methodist church, one Catholic church, and a school. There was also a splendid report by Rev. Leon Picone of the Italian missionary work being done. While in the city we had a conference with our Conference Adolescent worker, Brother Taylor, and he is planning some good things for our State-wide Conference at Monroe. The former Conference Adolescent Superintendent, Rev. H. L. Johns, was a welcome member of this conference.

Mr. Robert A. Cross, Jr., of Franklinton, reports the organization of a new Sunday school at Varnado, La., with sixty enrolled and prospects for a much larger school. Prof. R. B. McClendon, of the Vernado Agricultural High School, is superintendent. Brother Cross tells us that although it is the newest, it is the largest school on the Washington circuit, and its membership outnumbers that of the church.

* * *

A letter from Miss Corinne Little, Western North Carolina Conference Sunday School Board, states that she is delighted to know that we have Mrs. W. W. Holmes in our "Elementary Family," and assures us that we have a fine worker.

* * *

Through its secretary, Miss Sara Brown, the Covington Sunday school sends an order for the Standard of Efficiency and Program of Work.

Dean R. E. Smith, Conference Superintendent of Adult Work, writes he has secured Dr. Umphrey Lee, of Dallas, Tex., for the State-wide Sunday School Conference at Monroe. Dr. Lee will give the inspirational address on Wednesday night, March 30. The dean is planning other good features for his department.

Louisiana Methodism can afford to expect a great conference at Monroe with such specialists at the head of the following departments: Elementary work, Mrs. W. W. Holmes; Adolescent, Rev. B. C. Taylor; Missions, Dr. W. W. Drake; Leadership Training, Dr. A. S. Lutz; Adult Work, Dean R. E. Smith; Sunday School Administration, T. W. Holloman; Parent-Teacher Work, Mrs. R. E. Smith, and Dual Extension Work, Rev. A. K. McLellan.

We are of the opinion that Lake Charles has the largest school in attendance in our Conference, with the execption of First Church, Shreveport. What other schools claim this honor?

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Let us have one hundred painstaking surveys made of stations and circuits during the month of February as a preliminary step toward the most earnest soul-winning effort ever made in the North Mississippi Conference. This survey is essential in launching any kind of effort toward building the kingdom of God, personal work, revival, finances for self and for the various enterprises the church is committed to. Survey, survey, survey, and then go forward; in God's name, go forward.

A large number of men are doing this work enthusiastically, and every one of them is pleased with the results. If the Lord fails to get Methodist leaders to do this, he can and will find others who will strive to win souls in every way possible. Names of men who are making surveys and are planning to train teachers and others to become soul-winners could be given, but we rather wait until the final reports come in after the work has been done. Soul-winning is our business. Let us open up for "big business."

We are prepared to announce that Standard Training Schools are to be held at Greenville, April 3-8; Clarksdale, April 10-15; Ruleville, April 18-23; Aberdeen, May 9-14; Batesville, May 23-28; Grenada, June 6-11. The courses to be offered in these schools will be announced later. We are planning to offer a course at the Conference Training School to be held at Grenada in the study of the adolescent group of young people. This is to be a study of life problems, the original materials that books are made of. In a few days we will send to pastors, superintendents, and superintendents of high schools four different questionnaires, two to secure information from boys and two to secure information from girls. These questionnaires are to be partially filled by the teacher of the group and partly by the young person. We shall need 2,000 of these cases, 1,000 of boys and 1,000 of girls. When these questionnaires are filled out, they are to be returned to me, and I am to mail them to Dr. Norman E. Richardson, of Northwestern University, for him to classify and analyze. They will be brought by him to the class at Grenada to be studied. This study is being made for the purpose of helping teachers, parents, and other adult leaders to select lesson materials and help build programs that will meet the actual needs, interests, and problems of boys and girls. If these leaders can get accurate knowledge of just what problems cause the greatest amount of worry and anxiety, it will be possible to prepare lesson materials, not from their own, adult point of view, but rather from that of the young people themselves. Each frank, honest, accurate description of a real problem situation, therefore, will be an important contribution to the lives of hundreds, possibly of thousands of young people. Dr. Richardson writes me: "This is going to be one of the most significant educational projects ever carried through under the auspices of a Conference Sunday School Board. I am eager to make it a thoroughgoing success."

To make it a success we must have the hearty co-operation of pastors, superintendents, and high school men. If you desire to help in a big undertaking, write me for a number of these questionnaires, saying you want to take part in the great project launched in behalf of our young people.

THE EXTENSION SECRETARY AT LAKE ARTHUR.

The Extension Secretary spent Jan. 23-29 with Rev. L. C. Wilson and his good people at Lake Arthur. We visited the Sunday school in its regular session. Mr. R. A. Lyons, superintendent, gave us an opportunity to say a few words to the school before the classes went into the teaching period.

We were real glad to note that, though the church building does not permit the separate classrooms as required for the "C" type schools, yet efforts had been made to use curtains to give the desired space and seclusion for a few classes meeting in the main auditorium. The Beginner Department has a real nice separate department to themselves, with quite good equipment. Another department that has made provision for itself is the Young People, under the direction of Mrs. W. M. Buchanan. The secretary, Mr. T. W. Mack, should be complimented for his carefully kept records and the well arranged literature cabinet.

At the morning service we delivered the message on invitation of the pastor. In the evening at 7 o'clock we began the first session of a Cokesbury Training class. A good crowd was in attendance and gave good attention, and manifested a genuine interest in the training work of our church.

The enrollment of the class was sixteen, but there were from twenty to twenty-five in attendance each night. We are proud, and rightly so, of the fact that there were quite a number of the officers and teachers and young people enrolled for the class work and taking credit.

Lake Arthur Sunday school has some of the very best Christian workers, both adult and young people, of any school in the Conference. We predict for them a great year's work and much will be accomplished for the kingdom in a most lasting way. We left them a "C" Type Program of Work Wall Chart, and we hope that when the end of the year comes the check-up will show a 100 per cent school.

The class held its last session on Friday night, closing out with a fine spirit of enthusiasm and a genuine, whole-hearted desire to put in actual practice, as far as possible, in the Sunday school those things discussed, and seek every opportunity for better self-equipment for more efficient service in his kingdom.

It is entirely in order that we express our sincere thanks to all of those who labored so faithfully to make this session of training the success that it was in respect to the whole program of Worship, Study, and Recreation. Especially do we wish to make mention of the splendid program in song given on the last night by the glee club of the Lake Arthur High School.

Brother Wilson is in his fourth year at Lake Arthur. He has done a great work there, and is carrying on this year, and when this, his fourth year, has come to a close it will be an invaluable record of four years of loving, Christian service to those that he would minister to in the name of the Lord and Master of all mankind. Brother Wilson and his family are in good favor with their people, and hold the love and respect, not only of his own people, but those of the other denominations.

We appreciated very much the cordiality and hospitality of the Lake Arthur folk, and hope to be with them again.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have best cough medicine you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this famous home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. It tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

Jackson, April 5 and 6, Capitol Street Church.

A word as a member of the Conference Sunday School Board, then another word or two as Conference Superintendent of Adolescents.

To all the workers and prospective workers of the Sunday school program: You will notice in the January number of the "News Letter" gotten out by the Sunday School Board, a write-up of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Conference for Methodist Sunday school workers. I think this is the first meeting of its kind in our Conference, and I am sure it will be remembered a long time. We are expecting this meeting to mean much in this great program of our church, and all of us need to be there. We look for you.

As a great church, and as a Conference we are doing more in the program of Religious Education than ever before. Naturally, for we have more workers in the field, all busily engaged, efficient in their labors, and very faithful; in the second place, because of your moral support, and last but not least, because you pray for the work.

We pray for our work for Christ's sake; and if it be for his sake, we have to rise from our knees and put on a program of work that will please him, or at least compare adequately with any other program in community life, or we put Christ second in our lives. We will not cheapen Christ or our church by being content to work with a program which does not meet the needs of all with whom we have to do. So I am anxious that we attend this Conference and get all there is for us. It will be great.

Now to the workers of the Adolescent groups, let me say: As Conference Superintendent of Adolescent groups, I want every district superintendent of this group, every teacher in these groups, and many officers of the Wesley Bible classes of this group to be present and meet with us in this group meeting at Jackson, which will be led by an outstanding, experienced leader of these groups out of the bounds of our Conference. The Intermediate, Senior, and Young People's classes, which make up this Adolescent group, will please see to it that we are ready to report the number of organized Wesley Bible classes in their group of the local Sunday school. These are some of the things we want to be thinking about, with other methods of work and activities: We want to look forward to the federation of all the Wesley Bible classes, or a Conference organization as well as for the district, and possibly larger towns where there are several churches. Also, we want to foster and plan Teacher Training classes in this group, for it is from this group our teachers are to come.

I am sure you all will be interested in this great workers' conference, and I insist that you make every possible effort to be there.

H. R. McKEE,
Member of Board and Conference Superintendent of Adolescents.

MERRYVILLE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Woman's Missionary Society social met with Mrs. O. E. Johnson on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 25, twenty-six members being present.

Mrs. Charles Gott, Auxiliary Superintendent of Children's Work, read a letter from Mrs. H. G. Owens, Conference Superintendent, stating that the League board ask that the Young People's and Junior Missionary and Epworthian Junior League combine their work. The missionary literature plans for Mission Study and social service and the League takes care of the rest under this plan.

The work is to be divided into four divisions, the Baby division, primary division, Epworth Junior Society and mothers' meeting. Mrs. Gott appointed the following leaders: Genevieve Walling, baby division; Miss Mildred Cochran, primary division; Mrs. Dollie Davies, Epworth Junior; appointee for mothers' meeting to be named later.

The business of the meeting over, Mrs. Tresmar Johnson entertained with several banjo selections; Miss Bird, two comic readings, which were enjoyed by all.

After a light salad course a short time was devoted to social chatting.

On Feb. 7 a business meeting will be held.

MRS. J. S. ZORN,
Publicity Superintendent.

A FINE MEETING AT GILBERT, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I just want to tell of the results of our revival which closed last Sunday night after a fifteen days' battle with the evil forces of our community. The visible results are forty-one who gave their names for membership in the Methodist church and ten for the Baptist church. Our town was stirred far deeper than the visible results could possibly show, as all who attended were wonderfully blessed.

We had men who were habitual gamblers and drunkards who have resolved by the help of God to live for him. And our men have organized a brotherhood and are willing to go out in search of men who do not know the love of Christ and tell them what Christ had done for them.

I want to say that I have heard many of our outstanding men and leading men of all other demoninations in our country, but Miss Daisy Davies can put the medicine where it should be, and give the largest doses, and keep it on the conscience of her congregations, of any person I ever listened to in my life; and as a result, my church is in fine condition, spiritually far above any I have ever been pastor of.

I have heard it said if you would put the fodder in the rack, the sheep would come after it; so I believe Miss Daisy put the fodder in the rack, for our church is only about four years old, and the pastor of the church, at the time it was erected, said that it would never be filled unless it was during a funeral service; but I am here to tell you, after the first week of the revival, there was not a single night that the church was not full, and two or three times people were turned away after all the available space had been filled with chairs, and small children were seated all around the platform. Mr. A. M. Hutton, from Van Buren, Ark., did the singing, and we were more than pleased with his singing. We pray God's richest blessing upon him.

Drink Water If Kidneys Bother

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts If Back Pains or Bladder is Irritated

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

FROM MEADVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our first quarterly conference was held at Meadville on Jan. 30. Brother W. H. Lewis, our efficient presiding elder, was with us, and rendered a great service for the upbuilding of the church. He is thoroughly alive to every interest of the church. We are always glad when it is his time to come our way.

Brother W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian, was also with us, and gave us some interesting as well as some startling facts in regard to the work of our church. He is wide-awake and goes at his work with an enthusiasm that grips the ear of the people. They all want him to come again. They enjoy and appreciate hearing a layman. Wish we had more consecrated laymen who would inform themselves as to the needs of the church, and go out into the rural districts and help educate our Methodist people. I heard one person remark this morning that Brother Hawkins' talk did a great deal more good, coming from a layman, than it would have done coming from a preacher.

God bless you and the Advocate family, is my prayer.

B. W. LEWIS, P. C.

FROM TROUT-GOOD PINE CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: As I have not written anything since coming to Trout-Good Pine charge, I will tell of some of the things we are doing.

When we had just gotten settled in the parsonage, we heard a knock at the front door one night, and on making investigation, we discovered a large crowd of people with all kinds of good things to eat; such a pounding you seldom ever see. This made us feel that we were appreciated; of course, we appreciated the pounding, and will not get mad if they do so again.

You should see our church at Trout—it looks like a new church. We have just finished putting two coats of paint on inside and out. We have remodeled the seats, and given them two coats of paint, and have given the floor two coats of paint also. Tell you, it looks spick and span.

We have just finished a new church at Good Pine. It is one of the most beautiful churches in this part of the country, with Sunday school rooms, lights, fans. In fact, it is modern in every sense. We have ordered the seats, and by the 1st of March it will be ready for occupancy. We will then divide time between Trout and Good Pine, preaching half time at each place. We will organize a Sunday school at Good Pine as soon as the house is ready. We expect to have this new church dedicated some time this year.

R. H. BAMBURG, P. C.

FROM MELVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: Since coming to Melville, I have been somewhat unsettled and busy getting fixed up in the newly renovated parsonage and getting acquainted with the situation on the charge. I am glad to say that things are beginning to develop wonderfully all over the circuit. The first thing the good folks at Melville did to make us feel more at home and welcome to the place was to give us a bountiful pounding, providing us especially with a large supply of sugar and coffee, the combination of which always reaches the heart of a Frenchman. Then the Woman's Missionary Society got busy and bought a few necessary articles toward furnishing the parsonage, and had the fence about the place rebuilt, and had the hall, dining-room and kitchen painted. Our Society is very much alive in taking care of the parsonage.

We have recently had a Cokesbury Training Course, under the valuable and interesting help of Brother A. K. K. McLellan, our Conference Sunday School Extension Secretary. The course began Sunday night, Jan. 16, and closed Thursday night of that week. Twelve of our workers and others enrolled for the course, but three dropped out on account of unavoidable circumstances. We already have had two volunteer teachers out of the number taking the course. We feel that we are going to reap a rich reward from this effort in the building up of our Sunday school.

We are anxiously planning to carry out the full program of our great church in all of its many worthy causes, and in order that we may do so, we ask any and all who may be interested to pray and help us in every way possible to accomplish the work for our Master.

JAS. A. KNIGHT, Pastor.

METHODIST LADIES ENTERTAINED.

Rev. C. H. Strait, pastor of the Methodist church, and his board of stewards entertained the ladies of the church in honor of the Woman's Missionary Society on Monday, Jan. 17, in the church auditorium.

Brother Strait, in a few well chosen words, outlined his plans for the year's work, and expressed his appreciation of the work accomplished last year. He urged the ladies of the church who are not members of the Society to enlist in the work, stating that his goal for the ensuing year was a membership of fifty active workers.

Mrs. L. E. Alford, our District Secretary; Mrs. W. G. Allen, Mr. P. L. Blackwell, of Newton, and Mr. R. C. Pugh, chairman of the board of stewards, gave very interesting talks along the line of missions.

Mrs. Carrie S. Bullard, who conducts the Bible and Mission study of Decatur Woman's Missionary Society, gave an interesting outline of the work done in the Society.

Miss Ferguson and Miss Townsend, of the high school faculty, gave a piano solo and reading, which added greatly to the pleasure of the afternoon.

Mrs. Strait, president of the Society, in a few very appropriate words, thanked the hosts for their courtesy, after which a plate lunch was served. After enjoying the repast, Mrs. Alford stated the ladies should feel very much complimented inasmuch as this was the first entertainment of its kind on record.

It is to be hoped that the result of this meeting will be the addition of many new members to the Woman's Missionary Society.

GIRLHOOD TO MOTHERHOOD

Iowa Woman Found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Always Helpful

Vinton, Iowa.—"When I was seventeen years old I had to stay at home from school. I finally had to quit school, I was so weak. I suffered for about two years before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, then I picked up one of your books and read it. I began taking the medicine. Now I am a housekeeper with six children, and I have taken it before each one was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. When I am not as well as can be I take it. I have been doing this for over thirteen years and it always helps me. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."—Mrs. Frank Sellers, 510 7th Avenue, Vinton, Iowa.

Many girls in the fourth generation are learning through their own personal experiences the beneficial effects of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mothers who took it when they were young are glad to recommend it to their daughters.

For over half a century, women have praised this reliable medicine.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION ON THE BARLOW CHARGE.

Brother O. C. Hull called the three churches on the Barlow charge, Brookhaven District, together for a Sunday school workers' convention. This meeting was held at Brandywine church, the central place of meeting for the charge, and all three churches were well represented.

The program of work and fourth Sunday offering were thoroughly explained by Brother Hull after the devotional exercise. The congregation was then favored by a vocal solo by a Miss Ball, a student at the Copiah-Lincoln A. H. S.

Then Brother Hull preached a wonderful sermon, using as a text, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." The text was explained in present-day phraseology and a powerful sermon built around it.

When Brother Hull finished, a large number came forward, rededicating their lives.

Dinner was served to everybody, and the good people of Brandywine responded most heartily with one of the best dinners the writer has ever seen.

The afternoon program was given entirely to Sunday school work, being opened by a fine talk from Sister Grimes, wife of our former pastor. Every one in this community likes to think of them as Father and Mother Grimes, and always feel honored by their presence. This most inspiring message was followed by a song by the Jefferson County A. H. S. quartet.

Mr. T. V. Rush, former Superintendent of Education of Claiborne County, was next on the program with the subject, "The Sunday School Teacher as an Evangelist.

Another song by the same quartet and a splendid address by Brother Hull concluded the program.

Our new pastor, Rev. W. C. Baker, stated this was one of the best meetings he had ever attended, and hoped we would have a charge meeting like this every four months. The meeting was a success in every way, and under the wise leadership of Mr. Hull it was carried out fine.

The Brandywine Sunday school had a 100 per cent attendance of officers, and reported good work being done.

Two other Sunday schools, Lebanon and Rehoboth, were well represented.

There were four stewards, two Epworth League presidents, one being from Union church, two Woman's Missinoary Society presidents, one charge lay leader, and, in addition to our Methodist people, a large number of Baptist people present.

The day was one of happiness, information, and instruction to everybody present, and surely will be instrumental in bringing about better Sunday schools on our charge.

May the Lord bless us and our efforts in this great work!

INDIGESTION

North Carolina Lady Says She Had An Awful Time With Indigestion, Till She Took Black-Draught.

Pilot Mountain, N. C.—"For several years I suffered with a bad case of chronic indigestion," says Mrs. Sam C. Inman, of this place. "I had bad spells with my stomach. At times I had severe pains in my right side. My stomach would get upset and I would have an awful time. It seemed like everything I ate disagreed with me. I was in pretty bad shape.

"My husband had been using Thedford's Black-Draught for some time for indigestion. He had spells of it too, so he suggested that I try Black-Draught. I took some from his box, just to see if it would help me, and I found it was the very thing for my trouble. It did me a great deal of good. My condition was brought on by a chronic case of constipation and, by getting relief from this, I found my general health was much better.

"We keep Black-Draught in the house all the time. Whenever I find I need it, I take several doses and thus avert a bad spell of indigestion. It is a splendid medicine and I am glad to say so."

A GET-TOGETHER MEETING AT GALLMAN, MISS.

Just before the holidays, as the old year 1926 was slowly passing out, our efficient and untiring pastor, Brother J. E. J. Ferguson, of Gallman, circuit, with his estimable family, passed from an old dilapidated parsonage in East Gallman to a new, modern and commodious dwelling on the west side. And then he gave his annual get-together meeting. Quite a good assemblage it was, composed of officers and laymen and ladies of the different churches of the circuit, with some distinguished visitors.

The forenoon was the social hour of the occasion, varied by the different ones—home folks as well as visitors—inspecting the new parsonage.

As the noon hour arrived, all were invited to an improvised dining table and partook of a most bountiful repast, served by the hostess.

About 2 o'clock in the afternoon our much beloved presiding elder, Brother W. H. Lewis, called the house to order and held the first quarterly conference for the Conference year 1927. Devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. Claude P. Jones, who made an interesting and instructive talk with reference to the birth of Christ. Brother Jones had endeared himself to the people of Gallman in the past. I think he thinks the parsonage at Gallman stands second to none in the Brookhaven District. And the writer feels sure that the pastor, Brother Ferguson, is due the praise and commendation for the erection of this building—due to his ceaseless and unfailing energy.

We had, as usual, a very interesting conference, with liberal payments for the pastor's salary. All assessments having been made, were apportioned to the different churches.

When the business of the conference had been attended to Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, lay leader of the Mississippi Conference, who had sat quietly and patiently by, was introduced, and spoke on the line of work for which he had been elected at the Annual Conference, proving beyond a doubt his heart in his work and his true fitness and willingness for his work. After a truly pleasant and profitable day, all bade adieu, feeling that it was good for us and the work that we were gathered together.

AN ATTENDANT.

EPWORTH LEAGUE PRESIDENTS' MEETING IN KANSAS CITY, MO., DEC. 28 TO 31, 1926.

The annual meeting of Conference Presidents, Presidents of Epworth League Boards, Junior and Intermediate Conference Superintendents, City Union Presidents, and members of the Central Office staff was held in Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 28 to 31, 1926. Among the outstanding things that were done at the Presidents' meeting are the following:

Unanimously recommended the holding of another Young People's convention for the whole church; the dates suggested were during the holiday season of 1927 and 1928, and also suggested that the program be built around the organization of the church.

Recommended a continuance of the Young People's revival, that at each assembly this summer there would be a class especially for the District Secretaries.

Also recommended that special emphasis be placed in getting the young people from 18 to 24 years old to attend the Summer Assembly.

The importance of the City Union was discussed and emphasized. Everything pertaining to the Summer Assembly as Pleasure, Management, Credits, Registration, etc., was discussed, and many helpful suggestions made. It was recommended that expense of keeping two student pastors, one at Berkley, Calif., the other at Tucson, Arizona, be undertaken by the Epworth League as a special. The next meeting to be held in Birmingham, Ala.

The personnel of the meeting was composed of the following: Presidents of Conference Boards, 25; Presidents of Conference Epworth Leagues, 26; Presidents of Unions, 14; Junior and Intermediate Superintendents, 5; Field Secretaries, 9; members of General Board, 3; members of Central Office staff, 5; visitors, 22.

We were very fortunate in having two addresses by Dr. Forney Hutchinson, which were very inspiring and helpful. These addresses were delivered at Central Church, of which Dr. Marion Nelson Waldrip is pastor. The other meetings were held in the Hotel President.

The Epworth Leagues of Kansas City were very gracious in their hospitality. One of the features most enjoyed was an automobile ride over the city.

You can get 60 McCoy's tablets for 60 cents at any druggists anywhere in America and the vitalizing vitamines will help any weak, worn-out man or woman to better health. Insist on McCoy's.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY AT FLORA, MISS., COMMENDED.

Our Woman's Missionary Society had a nice compliment when our presiding elder, at our last quarterly conference, said: "I doubt if another Woman's Missionary Society in the district can make a better showing," when our report was read. We are proud of our work. We have about twelve members, but they are loyal and faithful and do good team work.

We take care of the parsonage, look after its special needs, and now and then give our pastor and family a little "shower," and sometimes buy something nice for the church.

We make personal visits, send letters and flowers to the sick, and do charity work when it is needed. About $500 yearly is expended in the Master's work.

We have a Mission Study class, a Bible Study class, and will have some socials during the year.

Epworth League

MEETING OF THE TRI-COUNTY LEAGUE UNION AT LUMBERTON, JAN. 28.

On Friday night, Jan. 28, at 8 o'clock, the young people of the Poplarville, Picayune, and Logtown Leagues met with Lumberton Leaguers at their church. There were 19 present from Logtown, 20 from Poplarville, 19 from Picayune. Lumberton had the largest crowd, which was about 75.

The meeting began with the singing of several hymns. Rev. C. A. Schulz, pastor of Lumberton church, read the Scripture, and Rev. H. A. Wood, of Picayune, led the prayer. We were then favored with a vocal selection by Mrs. L. D. Fulmer. Mr. Beal, president of Lumberton League, made the address of welcome, and Mr. Camp, District Secretary, responded.

Miss Cora Weston, president of the Tri-County Union, then took the chair, and we went into our regular business session. Mr. Weems, our Conference President, was introduced by the District Secretary. Each chapter paid dues of $5. The subject of a banner was discussed, and Mr. Camp empowered to make the purchase. This banner is to be given to the chapter that has the best attendance at the Union meeting. It was decided to take into consideration the distance the Leaguers had to go to the meetings.

After the business was disposed of, Mr. Weems spoke of the growth of the Epworth League work in our Conference. He spoke briefly of the plans for the Assembly, and urged each chapter to send delegates. The biggest thing our League is doing is training young people in Christian service, and it is the best organization of its kind, is Mr. Weems' opinion. He closed with the statement that the Leagues had done splendid work in the past and must keep on "keeping on."

Mr. Camp then outlined his plans for the District Institute to be held at Picayune in March. We closed by singing, "It's a Good Thing to Be a Leaguer," and repeating the benediction.

Since we had received a very cordial invitation from the reception committee, we went to the club room, expecting something lovely, and we were not disappointed. The room was beautifully decorated with gold and white crepe paper. On the walls were vases of white and gold chrysanthemums, alternating. The refreshments were in the form of a plate luncheon, consisting of delicious chicken salad, sandwiches, coffee and cake. On the cake was the League emblem, held there by a toothpick.

As soon as we had eaten, the social began. Each League gave a stunt. Logtown led the way with "A summary of news," with appropriate songs. Poplarville stunt consisted of a reading given by "Mrs. Hiram C. Boggs' Aunt." While waiting for the Leaguers to get ready, all came out and sang, "It's a Good Thing to Be a Leaguer." Picayune presented "Mr. Harry Snodgrass," otherwise Billy Stevens, who played several selections on the piano. Last came Lumberton Leaguers, and their stunt consisted of a reading given by a very small girl. The judges awarded Lumberton the second prize and Poplarville the first.

After the stunts all said good night and went to our respective homes. The next meeting will be at Picayune.

The "Know Methodism" contest of the Meridian District was held Saturday, Jan. 29, at Meridian Central Church. L. P. Lipscomb, of Senior Chapter, Central Church, was winner.

This is the first report of a district contest that has come to the editor. We hope that each District Secretary will report the results of the contest to the editor.

LOUISIANA STATE LEAGUE NEWS.

The Field Secretary, Miss Cora Varnado, spent Jan. 16-20 in the Alexandria District. The work of organizing unions in this district was put well under way. Miss Varnado visited the following Leagues during this time: Opelousas, Bunkie, Oakdale, Elizabeth, Pineville, and Alexandria. She reports that the work of these Leagues is being maintained at an especially high standard.

The Shreveport District is hard at work on plans for their institute, which will be held at Pineville, March 13-18. Miss Varnado visited Natchitoches in this district on Jan. 21.

A week's work in the Ruston District has just been completed. Meetings were held in the following Leagues: Homer, Haynesville, Athens, Arcadia, Gibsland, and Ruston. On Saturday night, Jan. 29, the Homer Union met at Arcadia, with an attendance of sixty-one. Miss Nell Gill, the District Secretary, is doing splendid work in the organization and administration of her district.

All the districts have not chosen their orators yet. Those who have been reported are: Homer, Fred Jackson; Minden, La Vou Haffmeister; New Orleans, Maude Valliant.

ZONE MEETING AT GALLMAN.

A meeting of the northern zone of the Brookhaven District was held in Gallman on Jan. 20, 1927.

At the morning session the devotional service was led by Brother J. E. J. Ferguson, of Gallman. Mrs. C. C. Herlong was asked to take charge of the program. Mrs. Nelson Gouldman served as secretary for the day. Mrs. Ferguson gave the welcome address, which was graciously responded to by Mrs. J. T. Galloway, of Crystal Springs. Mrs. Barron, of Georgetown, read a splendid paper on "How to Have Good Meetings." A solo, "My Task," was sweetly sung by Mrs. Sam Wood. Mrs. Herlong conducted a school of information, in which each new officer was instructed as to her specific duty. "Our Duty to the Young People of the Church" was ably presented by Mrs. C. W. Crisler. Mrs. Green told of the work of her auxiliary, and also suggested that a shower of post cards and letters be sent to our District Secretary, Mrs. R. E. Bennett, who is ill at her home at Meadville, Miss.

At noon all were invited over to the new parsonage, where a delicious lunch was served by the Gallman ladies.

Mrs. F. A. Grimes conducted the devotional service for the afternoon. A round table discussion, "The Weakest and Strongest Points in the Missionary Society," was led by Mrs. Ollie Bishop, of Center Point. Some of the weakest points given were poor attendance, indifference, and fear of criticism, while all agreed that the strongest point was co-operation. Members were asked to stand in recognition of Mrs. Seibe, of Crystal Springs, who brought an inspiring message, in which she stated she had been a member of the Missionary Society for over fifty years.

Roll call showed an attendance of sixty-five. Crystal Springs was decided on as the next place of meeting, date to be announced later. Hazlehurst ladies presented a play, "The Missionary Clinic," which won much favorable comment. Mrs. Ferguson dismissed the meeting with prayer.

GRAND CANE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The social meeting of the Grand Cane Auxiliary of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. J. T. Richardson, Jan. 24, with a full attendance of the members.

The special pledge program sent out by the State Superintendent of Publicity was given. The devotional was led by the president, Mrs. C. C. Payne, using Matt. 26:20, 22, as the Scripture lesson. The thought of the lesson, "Lord, is it I?" was still further impressed by the song selection, "Lord, Is It I?"

Mrs. Parker gave a paper on "The Assets and Liabilities of the Council Work," and Mrs. B. F. Chaffin a "True Story" of the need of Christ at our own door.

The theme of the service, "The Cross," was further carried out in the floral decorations, the prayers and the signing of the pledge cards, during which the beautiful song, "The Old Rugged Cross," was softly played on the Victrola. Every woman present felt anew the wonderful privilege of helping to bear the cross for Jesus.

At the close of the program a pleasant social hour was spent, during which Mrs. Richardson served a delicious salad course.

MRS. GEO. N. PARKER,
Superintendent of Publicity.

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 73—No. 7. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3636.

HENRY T. CARLEY, D.D., Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1927. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

"GET UP"—"COME DOWN."

Jesus told the lame man at the Pool of Bethesda to arise—get up; he told Zaccheus, who had climbed into a tree, to come down. Both obeyed, and received great blessings.

There are people to-day who need to hear the Lord's "Get up!" They have become discouraged, pessimistic, hopeless by reason of their misfortunes, disappointments, hardships, sufferings, and have just about quit trying to do anything or be anything. If they will listen to the Lord, take hold of his outstretched hand and commit their ways to him, they can overcome their troubles.

There are other people who need to hear the Lord's "Come down!" They have become tremendously puffed up by their own conceit. They have exalted themselves upon the pinnacle of human self-sufficiency and have seemed to say that there is no place for God and no need of him, anyway. They think they are high and mighty. Their only hope of salvation is to hear and obey the command to come down.

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.

In an address delivered by Mr. Elihu Root, former Secretary of State of the United States, on the occasion of his accepting the award of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, made to him in New York, Dec. 28, 1926, occur the following words:

"Nations always will differ. They differ in inherited characteristics and predilections and traditions and modes of thought and feeling. But there never is a difference so great that it cannot be peaceably settled if approached in the right spirit. And there never can be a difference so trifling that it may not be made the occasion of war if it is approached in the wrong spirit."

The right spirit—that is the thing! Differences of all kinds, between individuals, between classes and parties, between nations, can be settled peaceably if both sides will approach them in the right spirit.

But what is the right spirit, and where does it come from? The right spirit is the spirit of love, and it comes from God. This spirit was supremely exemplified and authenticated in the ministry and teaching of Jesus Christ, who was himself God incarnate.

How, then, shall we settle the differences that distress and disturb individuals and classes and the whole world? Simply by learning the mind of Christ and practicing the principles enunciated by him. There is no other way.

We must, therefore, accept the gospel, live it, and give it to all men everywhere. The gospel of Jesus Christ will save the world, and nothing else will. The Christian's duty is clear.

IS GOD INTERESTED IN YOUR BUSINESS?

Is God interested in your business? Certainly he is, if it is a legitimate business and you have taken him into partnership. He is interested in it because he is your partner, and he wants and expects dividends from that partnership. As a partner, he is willing and anxious to help you succeed in your business.

But if you ignore the partnership, withholding from God his share of the profits, spending all the proceeds of your investments for your own selfish enjoyment, you can hardly expect God to bless your labors. You have broken the partnership by your own unfair dealing, and have lost the help you otherwise would have received.

We read the other day that a prominent Mississippi banker made the proposition to a group of men that if they would conscientiously practice tithing for one year and then declare they were the losers and were dissatisfied, he would refund to them the amount they had thus given to God. He is on perfectly safe groound. He knows what God as a partner can do for a man that welcomes his help and treats him fairly.

The trouble with too many people is that they kick God out of partnership with them and then expect him to keep on filling their coffers.

Take God into partnership, give him his share of the proceeds of the business, treat him fairly—and see how you come out!

GETTING THE FACTS.

We were very much interested in reading last week the statement of Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, in the "Sunday Schoool Notes from the North Mississippi Conference," that one of the courses for the adolescent group at the North Mississippi Conference Standard Training School at Grenada, June 6-11, will be built out of the information gained from a set of questionnaires to be filled by the boys and girls themselves and by the teachers of these groups. It is hoped that one thousand boys and one thousand girls will fill out these questionnaires, which are to be classified and analyzed by Dr. Norman E. Richardson, of Northwestern University, who is to give the course at Grenada.

If the teachers and the boys and girls into whose hands these questionnaires come will answer them frankly and fully, there will be available a great mass of facts upon which to base a constructive study of some of the problems of the adolescent group—and facts are the things we need in any study to-day. We earnestly hope that all concerned will co-operate heartily in this attempt to gather first-hand information. Pastors and others directly related to the young life of the present day can make a real contribution to the cause of religious education by helping to secure these greatly needed facts.

ALL WE ASK.

All we ask of our pastors in connection with the Special Proposition for securing subscriptions to the Advocate is that they present it to their people and urge its acceptance as clearly and as earnestly as they do any other important cause of the church—the Conference collections, for example.

The conditions of the Special Proposition are not onerous—in fact, they are comparatively easy to meet. They are simply these: If half the families represented in the membership of the church become subscribers, the price for each subscription is $1.25 a year; the names are to be sent in together—not singly; the money is to accompany the order, or, if deferred payment is preferred, some reliable person must become definitely responsible for the payment when due.

This issue of the Advocate is dated Feb. 17. The Special Proposition expires April 1. Forty-two days remain for the acceptance of the Proposition. That is time enough to put the Advocate into the homes of thousands of our people if our pastors make an earnest effort—a real effort—to do it. Will they do it? That is all we ask them to do.

WHAT IS "THE MIND OF CHRIST?"

An Exposition of Philippians 2:5-12.

By T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

The world often presents a very fair appearance. The ethical principles of Christianity have so permeated society and influenced our civilization that it seems difficult often to distinguish between the Christian and the non-Christian. Both dress alike, move perhaps in the same social or business circles, belong to the same organizations of various kinds, and outwardly there may appear to be little difference.

Nevertheless, the spirit of Christianity is radically and essentially different from the spirit of the world; and for this to be seen it is only necessary that we catch some clear glimpse of what the mind or spirit of Christ really is.

No passage in the New Testament more clearly reveals this to us than the one before us at this hour. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus;" then with a majestic sweep of vision suffused with lofty feeling, the Apostle reviews Christ's life from his descent from the throne of glory to his ascending again to the right hand of the Father and points out to us thereby just what the mind of Christ really was and is.

But we fail generally to understand him, and the whole paragraph is largely lost to us because of the obscurity of the translation of the first words which follow the exhortation, "Who being in the form of God thought it not robbery to be equal with God." On its correct interpretation hinges the whole message of the paragraph to us. There are two translations, presenting two slightly different but very important shades of meaning. The King James version, "thought it not robbery," no claiming or assuming of rights and prerogatives and glory which did not belong to him, asserts his perfect equality with God the Father. But, you ask, How does that help us? Theologically it may be and is of infinite value as affirming the consciousness in Christ of absolute Deity. But does it help us understand the mind of Christ? Yes, gloriously, with the further shade of meaning brought out which we find indicated in many revised versions—"Thought it not a prize to be grasped, to be equal with God." "Did not make his equality with God a thing to be clung to in selfish self-preservation," but "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." He who knew that to claim equality with God was no presumption on his part voluntarily renounced all in redemptive love for sinful men, and

"From the highest throne in glory
To the cross of deepest woe"

He came; and in that self-sacrificing love we see his mind revealed.

Thus grandly the King has shown himself to be kingly. Frankly, we admit that the mere assertion and information that Christ is God, put it in as strong language as you please, "very God of very God, Light of Light," "the eternal Son of the everlasting Father," is mere theological dogma except as you inform me what kind of a Son he is. That the Prince of Wales is the son of the king of England is nothing to me unless you can show me that something that he has done, some service rendered in sublime sacrifice and devotion reveals him to be a prince indeed. Then I begin to respect him, men may learn to honor and adore him, to gladly crown him as king, and live or die for him.

So the absolute Deity of Christ is essential that his voluntary incarnation, life, and death should be the supreme, transcendent, soul-inspiring example of vicarious sacrifice, worthy of all the honor and praise and glory which it has ever received from men and which heaven rings with infinitely grander expressions of, from angelic choirs and redeemed hosts. We repeat a statement long ago deliberately uttered: "It is only as Jesus Christ is God that his life and death make any supremely strong appeal to men, and it is only when men have seen and believed him to be God incarnate, that he has been to them a transforming power and inspiration to sublime self-sacrifice. If he were only a God-inspired man, we say it reverently, the life and death of St. Paul, announcing his high social and intellectual position, and through love to men becoming long years a persecuted outcast, stoned, beaten and cast out for dead, imprisoned, and finally beheaded, would be of as great if not greater moral influence, would be as lofty if not a loftier example of vicarious sacrifice, as was the life and death of the lowly Carpenter of Nazareth, who had no such exalted position to renounce and whose sufferings were nothing like so prolonged. But when Christ is seen as God incarnate, leaving the throne of the universe, made by him, and thus living and dying, how do all human sacrifices and sufferings fade into nothingness before him, and how truly does he become the Royal Leader of all persecuted apostles, and prophets, and martyrs, and suffering saints of all ages; King of kings, Lord of lords, saints of all ages; bearing in his body the scars which show that he was not only a great Spirit inspiring us from afar, but himself the great Captain of our Salvation, made perfect through suffering."

So the mind of Christ was that of voluntary renunciation of honor, power, glory, ease, the very throne of heaven, unquestionably his of right, in order to loving service to mankind.

And between that mind of Christ and the mind of the world there is, and has ever been, a great gulf, a contrariety indeed. The world grasps tenaciously its very right, prides itself on its honor, wealth, ease, position; and proceeds on the fundamental assumption that it "can't afford" to make sacrifices of any consequence. Worse still, the grasping spirit of the world reaches out after not merely that which it has of right, but demands clamorously that which it cannot rightfully claim, luxuries, pleasures, ease, comfort beyond means or desert: and much of the misery in modern homes is born of the greedy, grasping spirit of young and old, which says imperiously, in the language of a popular ditty,

"I want
What I want
When I want it."

At poles' length removed is this from the mind of Christ which is the spirit of loving, unselfish service. This selfishness is a part of our innate depravity, and manifests itself in grasping babyhood as well as in grasping youth and manhood and womanhood.

Years ago we read in the Atlanta Constitution a Christmas poem reading like this, which reveals again this innate tendency which only Christianity seeks to or can correct:

"A poor little boy
All in velvet and lace,
With a sad little look
On his sad little face,
Sat fretting and fuming
One bright Christmas morn
In a millionaire's mansion,
All sad and forlorn."

The poem went on to describe the presents:

"About him on the parquetry floor,
Were forty or fifty bright new toys
Of the kind which must do
For poor millionaires' boys."

In utter disgust, however, the little fellow cries out,

"And Santa was just mean to send me a wheel,
When he knew that I wanted an automobile."

So the mind or spirit of the world is grasping, reasonable and unreasonable grasping, for things possessed of right and things beyond all rights demanded. And to get, hold fast, and enjoy all this is the world's way to happiness (never found).

The mind or spirit of Christ is giving—love, service, kind words and deeds, even to the extent of great personal sacrifice.

Notice, too, the absoluteness and completeness of this renunciation as exemplified in the life of Christ "a servant," "humbled himself," "unto death, even the death of the cross." Christ had a right to be received with kingly honor: he was born a babe in Bethlehem. Renouncing worldly honor, he had a right to love and gratitude: he was "despised and rejected of men." Renouncing this he had a right to justice: but with no fault found in him, he was crucified, mocked, spit upon. And praying, "Father, forgive them," he died. Not one trace of selfishness, or self-protection, can be found anywhere in his life; and such is the spirit to which the Apostle calls us, when he exhorts: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."

But can we afford it? Let us see. Can we ministers afford it, who stand as the exemplifiers and expounders of his Way? Could Christ afford it? Let us see.

"Wherefore." Note the word, "wherefore:" it is usually a pivotal word summing up great effects from great causes, setting forth the consequences which follow from courses indicated, and it is nowhere more sublimely pivotal than here.

"Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

Because he humbled himself, "was found in fashion as a man," took upon him the form of a servant; because he became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross this inexpressible exaltation follows. Since then the earth has been ringing with his praise; singing it in every tongue, exhausting every art of music, sculpture, poetry, painting, eloquence, official recognition even, by making his advent the center of time in order that this high prophecy might even now be fulfilled. And it doth not yet appear what shall be; but far down through the eternities we hear a great multitude which no man can number, out of every nation and people and kindred and tongue singing,

"Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen."

The King has shown himself kingly. He has manifested himself, and manifested the Father who is in one with him in all these high and gracious plans and purposes, as possessed of all the highest and holiest attributes which qualify for Kingship in an everlasting Kingdom, and earth and heaven rejoice at the manifestation, and yield him highest acclaim.

Returning to our question, then: Could Christ afford it? To live and die absolutely for others? Colossal was the sacrifice to leave the bosom of the Father in glory for the cross in atonement, but colossal has been the reward already on earth, and his place in the skies is radiant forever with ineffable glory.

Can you and I afford it? To forget self? to live truly unselfish, loving lives? following in his steps "Who diu no sin, but who went about doing good?"

I think we can. I know we can. Ask any and all who have tried it, Does it pay? Their answer with one voice comes back through all the centuries: Nothing else does. Paul, the exhorter of our text, bore a noble testimony, and he has not suffered in human esteem by the sacrifices he made for Christ and humanity. He was assured of the crown also. Call the roll of all the worthies, and you will find renunciation, humiliation, glorification the law of fruitful honored life. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." The progress of the sons of God is never a line moving straight upward; but an arc moving first downward in self-surrender to God and renunciation of "the vain pomp and glory of the world," then rising to unmeasured heights of usefulness and glory unsought.

Does it pay? Ask the mother with the large family who buried herself in her home and lived for God and her children, who now rise up and call her blessed. The radiance on her face is the answer. Ask the missionary, foreign or home, Dan Crawford, who buried himself twenty-three years in the heart of Africa, and came back with a heart as big as h man need, honored by kings and presidents; or Camack, who buried his pride, and in his factory appointment among South Carolina mill employees found himself a field of great usefulness and honor. Ask Dr. Manget, absorbed in his medical mission work in China, Does it pay to renounce all for Christ and others? Richly, richly, richly, they all reply; and the reward now is but a foretaste of the glory that shall follow.

A final and very personal word: Have you, my brother, sister, whoever or wherever you may be, this "mind of Christ?" Is self or Christ enthroned within? Oh, humble yourself before him, let Christ dwell in your heart by faith: and God will also highly exalt you and crown you with glory and honor.

Remember, too, this mind of Christ is essential in a Christian. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Religion is not a profession, but a possession of the Christian spirit, and the judgment is to hinge on just this. "Inasmuch as ye did it, Come, ye blessed." "Inasmuch as ye did not, Depart, ye cursed."

Shall it be "Come, ye blessed," because you were akin to Christ?"

Louisville, Miss.

WILLIAM H. HUNTLEY, D.D.

William Henry Huntley was born in Greenville, Ga., Nov. 22, 1857, and died in Brookhaven, Miss., Nov. 27, 1926. His father, William Henry Huntley, was a native of New York, a cultured man of fine business ability, who came South a number of years before the Civil War. His mother was Martha Park Huntley, a member of an old and prominent ante-bellum Georgia family.

Young Huntley entered Emory College, Oxford, Ga., in his fourteenth year, and was graduated in June, 1875, when less than eighteen years of age. At college he was the club-mate and intimate friend of Warren A. Candler, the honored Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

After his graduation he went to Europe, spending three years in England, Austria, Germany, and France, and enjoying some happy months in Switzerland and Italy. Upon his return and while yet less than twenty-one years of age, he was elected the principal of the La Grange High School, having as his associate principal the late John Temple Graves. This position he held several years.

In 1879 he was married to Miss Ida Richardson, the daughter of the celebrated Simon Peter Richardson, of the North Georgia Annual Conference.

In 1885 we find him in business in Natchez, Miss. It is quite likely that from his college days in Oxford he was impressed with a call to preach, and that the helpful association of the Methodist people of Natchez recalled and strengthened the earlier impressions. At any rate, he was licensed to preach in Natchez in the summer of 1886, and appointed as a supply to the Cane Ridge circuit, the charge having been made vacant by the removal of the pastor to Brookhaven.

He was admitted on trial in the Mississippi Annual Conference held in Port Gibson in December, 1886, and appointed to Flora, where he remained three years. During his pastorate at Flora his wife died in 1888, leaving to mourn her loss her husband and four children—Leila, Julius, Helen, and Eugenia. In December, 1888, at the session of the Conference held in Vicksburg, he was ordained a deacon by Bishop Hargrove.

At the session of the Conference in 1889 he was appointed pastor of our church in Brookhaven, serving this church two years. In December, 1890, he was ordained an elder by Bishop Galloway. In May, 1890, he was married to Mrs. Josie Warren Crosby, of Brookhaven.

At the close of a successful pastorate in Brookhaven he was sent in 1891 to Brandon, returning to this charge in 1892. In the spring of 1893 he was elected President of the Port Gibson Female College, where he spent two years, and in December, 1894, was sent to serve the church in Waynesboro. Then followed his appointment to Lumberton, where four happy and successful years were spent. Two years were given to Fayette and one to Hattiesburg.

In 1902 he was made presiding elder of the Vicksburg District. After four years in this difficult but important field, he was returned to Lumberton for a term of three years. We find him in 1910 in Gloster for one year, and in 1911 in Natchez, among the friends of his earlier years. It was in Gloster that he was called to mourn the death of his wife, Josie Warren Huntley. Sharing in the sorrow of this great loss were his beloved step-children, Bessie and George Crosby, and his four children, Will, Michel, Gorden, and Warrene Huntley, and the children of the wife of his youth. From Natchez he was sent to the Port Gibson District as presiding elder, covering, in the main, the territory of the Vicksburg District, which he had traveled ten years before.

In 1912 he became the presiding elder of the Seashore District, to which three years were given. Then followed one year in Columbia, two years in Yazoo City, four years in Shubuta, and four years in Port Gibson, the lovely little city where his ministerial life began forty years before.

At the close of his year at Columbia he was married to Miss Minnow Howland Moore, a cultured and admirable young lady of Mobile, Ala., taking her as a bride to his new charge in Yazoo City.

During the last year of his pastorate at Port Gibson Brother Huntley became aware of the recurrence of an affection of the throat, for which he had been successfully treated five years before, and as the year drew to a close his family and friends became impressed with the gravity of his condition. He was present at the recent session of the Conference in McComb, though evidently far from well. He was appointed to the church in Crystal Springs, but was not able to go to his charge. Instead, before the adjournment of the session, he went for rest and treatment to Brookhaven, to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Bessie Crosby Frizell. Here his condition becoming more grave, he was removed to a local hospital, where, the recipient of the most loving care and of the most skillful professional attention, he lingered until, on the evening of Saturday, Nov. 27, he fell asleep. He realized that the end was drawing near, but was not afraid. He affectionately counseled the loved ones who stood about his bed, and, when unable to speak, graciously smiled his appreciation of every act of loving attention shown him. Then trustful in the faith that he had preached for forty years, he gently passed into the presence of his Lord.

In manner he was gracious and courtly, and marked by a dignity that expressed both modesty and self-respect—a dignity that, in congenial company, easily melted into the most winning grace and good fellowship. In intellect he was of a high order, somewhat poetical in temperament, and something of a mystic, a lover of the beautiful in sound and form and color He was chaste in speech and thought. He was profoundly religious, and, though not demonstrative, was a man of deepest feeling. He was an Israelite indeed in whom there was no guile.

Throughout his long ministerial life he moved with a quiet dignity and grace, unspoiled by success, and meeting with equanimity any adverse changes that came into his pastoral experience. Even in the one or two occasions where his friends felt that perhaps sinister influences had done him less than justice, there came from him no word of resentment or complaint. He was a Christian gentleman, without fear and without reproach. He was a faithful friend, and in the charmed circle of his home was the center of unmeasured devotion, a devotion which he in turn paid back in unmeasured fullness.

Beloved by many and respected by all who knew him, he wrought in the whitening harvest fields till the going down of the sun, and, quietly laying aside the implements of manly toil, entered into rest.

COUNCIL MEETING, MARCH 9 TO 16, SHREVEPORT, LA.

This great body of missionary women, composed of delegates from all over the territory of our Southern Methodist Church; missionaries from our foreign fields; deaconesses and workers from our home fields, is meeting this year within the bounds of our own Conference.

As a Conference, we have but two delegates, the Conference President and the Conference Secretary. The women of Shreveport, however, realizing the value of such a meeting to the whole State, and desiring every Auxiliary to share in the inspiration of such a meeting, have offered to entertain one visitor from each Auxiliary.

Registration cards have been mailed you, but through printer's error, the name of the chairman of the entertainment committee was omitted. Cards should be addressed to Mrs. A. J. Peavy, 876 Jordan Street, Shreveport, La.

Rialroad fare: Provided 250 certificates are turned in to the Council Secretary at Shreveport, a considerable reduction in railroad fare will be given every attendant of this meeting. For fare of 65 cents or more, you may demand and receive certificate, but be sure to ask for this certificate when ticket is purchased.

The importance of this is stressed in the following extract of letter from Mrs. F. S. Parker, Council Secretary:

"It is hard to realize that it is so near the time for the Council meeting. We are hoping for great things in Shreveport and trust that the meeting may be a deeply spiritual one. We think we have a good program. We have certainly tried to have it so.

"Unless the Louisiana Conference and those Conferences adjacent to it work up a large delegation and urge those who come to come by rail at least a part of the way, we will fail to secure our rates and thereby embarrass those who have come from a great distance, and very greatly embarrass your Secretary, who will find it harder next year to get the rates if we do not bring up our two hundred and fifty certificates this year. We have heard of some who were coming through the country in their cars. That makes me feel anxious about the certificates.

"MRS. F. S. PARKER,
"Recording Secretary."

Pray for the Success of This Meeting.

Special prayer meeting should be held, and we urge individual, daily prayer that wisdom and strength be given these women for their tasks.

MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL.

COUNCIL OF CONFERENCE LAY LEADERS, MEMPHIS, TENN., JAN. 26-27, 1927.

Report of Findings Committee.

We, your Committee on Findings, report as follows:

The Benevolences.

For the first time in the history of our church the General Conference has made a particular Board responsible, together with the bishops, presiding elders, and pastors, for the promotion of full payment of assessments. This obligation is placed upon the Board of Lay Activities.

Since the responsibility for this work in the local church falls upon the church Board, together with the pastor, we recommend that each church Board do at least four things toward the collection of all benevolent assessments:

1. Furnish the membership with accurate and understandable information as to the sources and use of all moneys collected by the church. Make it local and definite—in detail, if necessary. Use sermons, lay speakers, leaflets, and local organizations; special literature to be distributed early in March through the lay organization—Conference, District, Charge and Church Lay Leaders.

2. To see that every member in the church is given the privilege and opportunity to share in the church's program. This will necessitate the every-member canvass. The Discipline makes the church Board responsible for such canvass and the collection of the pledges secured therein.

3. Urge the adoption of a church budget, and the payment of all collections in full.

4. Emphasize the spiritual power of proportionate giving. Preach it, and better still, practice it.

5. May 1 is the date for the Church-wide Check-up. Report blanks will be furnished each Conference Lay Leader, who will supply each District Lay Leader, who in turn will send them to Charge and Church Leaders. The Church Leader is to report to the Charge Leader; the Charge Leader to the District Leader; the District Leader to the Conference Leader; and the Conference Leader to the General Board.

Christian Stewardship.

Christian Stewardship is the heart of Christian living. Our income, our possessions, our time, our capacities, our energies, are converted into spiritual resources and contribute to the establishment of God's kingdom in proportion as we apply to their use the principles of faithfulness and accountability enunciated by our Master and revealed to us through the Word. We are all stewards, and all of us must render an account.

However, there is not only a failure in the practice of stewardship, but there is a lack of understanding and appreciation of its principles. It is, therefore, essential that we maintain a continuous education effort. It is also true that these principles must be applied specifically to our giving. Beginning with the tithe as a basis, it is our conviction that every Christian should give as God has prospered him.

Therefore, we recommend and urge:

1. The organization of the Stewardship Committee by the Church Board of Lay Activities as provided in the law. As a guide to its work we suggest the use of the pamphlet, "The Christian Stewardship Committee."

2. The teaching of stewardship through sermons, addresses, lay speaking, distribution of leaflets, stewardship classes, and instruction in the Sunday school.

3. Let the Wesley Brotherhoods give to such teaching a prominent place.

4. Let every church give, from time to time, opportunity to enroll in the Fellowship of Stewardship.

5. Interest all new, or transferred, church members in these principles and give them an opportunity to enroll.

We believe that the application of these principles will contribute powerfully to the advance of the church along all lines.

The Wesley Brotherhood.

Concerning Wesley Brotherhoods we recommend:

1. That we reaffirm our conviction that the Wesley Brotherhood, through its principles of fellowship, prayer, and service, is a most potent factor in utilizing the man power of Methodism in the on-going of the church's program, and that we urge the immediate establishment of organizations in all of our congregations, where practicable.

2. That attention be directed to the fact that District Lay Leaders and Associate District Lay Leaders are especially charged with the duty of effecting these Brotherhood organizations.

3. That we commend the plan of a thorough study or survey of local conditions and needs to determine the advisability of attempting organization of Wesley Brotherhoods. The Discipline makes the Church Board of Lay Activities responsible for initiating and carrying out these surveys.

4. That gifted speakers be used to present the Brotherhood work at the 11 o'clock hour on Sunday where possible, and that a prayerful conference with a group of leaders in the local church be held in the afternoon. This will be effective both in the preliminary work of organization and in the promotion of the work of Brotherhoods already in existence.

Personal Evangelism.

It is the responsibility of the Church Board of Lay Activities to promote evangelistic effort, and the primary task of the Wesley Brotherhood is to reach men and boys and bring them into the kingdom of Christ and into the church for Christian service. However, there is an individual relationship in the promotion of Christ's kingdom which each member of the church should bear in the matter of personal evangelism. We mean by this the persistent, personal effort of each member to reach some unsaved person and bring him to Christ through his church. Let all of our laymen pray for a revival of religion in our church, beginning first of all in the homes of our people, then in the Sunday school, and in the church and extending through personal effort to reach every unsaved person of the community. This is of primary and fundamental importance. This was the principle that actuated Andrew when he brought his brother, Simon Peter, to Jesus; the same principle that led Philip to find Nathaniel. What a great tide of spiritual power would sweep over our church if its members were all witnesses for Christ!

Plan and Program of Lay Speaking.

We earnestly urge the adoption of a definite plan and program for use of lay speakers in all the work of the church.

We suggest the following definite plans:

1. The selection and training of a sufficient number of lay speakers and the furnishing them with literature for preparation, to present various matters of interest in the program of the church both in three-minute speeches and in lay programs. These speakers should be chosen and sent out by the District Lay Leader and the presiding elder.

2. Lay speakers should be used for meetings in rural churches and rural communities. The Charge Lay Leaders, in co-operation with the preachers, should select, instruct, and assign these speakers, with the help of the District Lay Leader and presiding elder, also furnish literature for their information.

3. The use of these speakers offers large opportunity for developing our laymen individually.

4. Three-minute speakers should be used in all our churches in the month of April in behalf of the benevolences. Material for these speeches will be furnished in the March issue of the Methodist Layman.

The Methodist Layman.

The Methodist Layman, a twenty page paper, issued monthly by the General Board, and edited by the staff of that Board, featuring articles dealing specifically with the work of lay activities—namely, Christian Stewardship, payment of benevolent and missionary claims, the Wesley Brotherhood, lay speaking, evangelism, and other phases of the church's program, should be in the hands of every member of the lay organization.

Every lay leader should be a subscriber and a constant reader of this paper. No lay leader can discharge his duties satisfactorily without the assistance of the official organ of his Board. This is an indispensable part of his equipment. The Discipline makes the several lay leaders in their sphere of activity responsible for the circulation of the Methodist Layman. Diligent effort should be used by all of our lay leaders to promote its circulation. The goal should be "The Methodist Layman in every Methodist home." The immediate objective, "All lay leaders and members of Circuit and Church Boards of Lay Activities, members of Missionary and Stewardship Committees, and all members of Wesley Brotherhoods and Boards of Stewards, subscribers."

The Methodist Layman is the laymen's magazine of the Methodist Episcipal Church, South. We urge that diligent effort be made to promote its circulation to at least 50,000 by the close of 1927.

Organization.

It is essential to our success that all the Boards of Lay Activities be organized and made to function. We have a great work to do. It can only be done by completely organizing as the law provides. We urge every Conference Lay Leader, District Lay Leader, and Church and Circuit Lay Leaders to organize and see that his Board functions. In this connection we desire to impress upon ourselves and upon the District Lay Leaders the importance of personal contact in all matters connected with the work of promotion and organization.

We urge every bishop, presiding elder and pastor in our church within his jurisdiction to see that the lay leaders do bring about such organization and endeavor to cause proper and efficient men to be selected for such work. We insist that every pastor in our connection see that his lay leader in his charge complete an organization in line with our Discipline. The responsibility for success or failure depends largely on the ability and faithfulness of such leaders.

"Speak to our people that they go forward."

TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Your Conference Sunday School Board is arranging a splendid program for the Conference-wide Sunday School Conference to be held at Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., on April 5 and 6. Some of the outstandiing leaders in Southern Methodism will take part in this program.

In addition, there will be group conferences for the several departments of the Sunday school work; of special importance will be the conference of Sunday school superintendents.

The enlarged program of the work of the modern Sunday school brings with it increased responsibilities, and demands of the superintendent; if he desires in any way to meet these responsibilities, it is necessary that he give some time to study and preparation, in order that he may in some measure successfully discharge the duties of this important position in the church.

In the group meetings of pastors and superintendents arranged as a part of this Conference, the discussion of the administrative problems of the Sunday school should make it well worth the time and expense for every superintendent in our Conference to attend.

Is the Unanimous Vote of the General Conference to be Taken Seriously or Regarded as a Mere Gesture?

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary of the Board of Finance

The General Conference, assembled at Memphis, Tennessee, in May, 1926, unanimously voted that March, April, and May of each year throughout the quadrennium of 1926-30 should be used by the whole Church for the purpose of raising the quotas for Superannuate Endowment. If that representative and dignified body was not in earnest about this order, we can question whether any other action taken by it was anything more than a scrap of paper.

When the General Conference elects bishops, the Church at once recognizes the authority of the men elected. When it levies assessments for benevolences, the Church moves forward to make collections. When it orders campaigns for Missions or Education at a stated time, the Church responds in terms of these causes during the period stipulated. This is as it should be, and indicates honor and respect for our governing body.

But when the General Conference orders that March, April, and May of each year be used to raise money for Superannuate Endowment, what should the Church do? Shall this order be taken lightly, or as something to be regarded or not as inclination serves? What other movement, projected by the authority of the General Conference, has been temporized with so much by the Church? Why?

Preachers give themselves to the Church's programs without thought of personal gain. They serve wherever sent and at salaries in the average which barely enable them to pay bills for current expenses. When they are superannuated account of age and physical disabilities, they are unfitted and unable to support themselves by any other character of work. If the Church does not care for them then, who will? A dejected, care-worn, sick, penniless, homeless, and lonely superannuated preacher is not a good advertisement for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Gasoline Bill of Southern Methodism For One Week If Paid to Superannuate Endowment Would Yield Nearly $1,000,000

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF OUR EVANGELISTS ON MODERNISM.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

The issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate of Jan. 13, 1927, carried a report of the annual conference of our evangelists, copied from the "Secular Press Bureau," which should have the hearty commendation of every loyal Methodist who believes in the fundamental doctrines of the Bible as accepted and taught by Methodism the world over, and repeated in concert by Southern Methodist congregations every Sunday morning as the Apostles' Creed. For the sake of emphasis, I set down here the resolutions adopted by our evangelists at their recent annual conference:

"Whereas, modernism during the past few years has made serious inroads upon the religious life of America; has injected the poison of its skepticism and infidelity into many of the leading institutions of learning throughout the land; and,

"Whereas, it has confused and unsettled the faith of multitudes of people and thus hindered the progress of the kingdom of God in the world;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That the general evangelists of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in convention assembled, put themselves on record as being opposed to modernism in its four constituent elements of rationalism, liberalism, destructive criticism, and evolution.

"Further, be it resolved, That we take this occasion to express and to emphasize our firm and unshaken faith in the great fundamental doctrines of historical Christianity, such as the divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the Genesis account of the creation and fall of man, the Virgin Birth, the sacrificial atonement, and the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ."

Now, there are some things in these resolutions to which I desire to direct special attention. Let it be noted that our evangelists affirm the existence of modernism, that it is widespread, and that its results have been exceedingly hurtful. They do not hesitate to say that modernism "has made inroads upon the religious life of America; has injected its poison of skepticism and infidelity into many leading institutions of learning throughout the land; has confused and unsettled the faith of multitudes of people and hindered the progress of the kingdom." When I read this outspoken statement of our evangelists, I wondered what those who deny the existence of modernism and its baneful effects upon "the religious life of America" and the "faith of multitudes of people" would have to say in reply. It occurs to me that they find themselves in the position of the man at the marriage feast of the king's son, who, when the king came in to inspect the guests, was found without a wedding garment, and the king said to him: "Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless." Let it be remembered that our evangelists traveled throughout the whole territory of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and beyond, coming in touch with our churches and institutions of learning everywhere, and should, therefore, know what they are talking about. It cannot be believed or thought that they would deliver themselves of such declarations as those cited above unless they were certain of the facts. So, then, we must accept their statement that modernism does exist, that it is widespread and blighting the faith of thousands of our people. Yet there are those among us who would silence those who wish to speak and to be heard from our pulpits and through the columns of the religious press against the insidious propaganda of blatant modernism, although they have taken the solmen vow "to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word."

It will also be noted that our evangelists put themselves on record "as being opposed to modernism in its four elements of rationalism, liberalism, destructive higher criticism, and evolutionism." Furthermore, they boldly and courageously express their "firm and unshaken faith in the great fundamental doctrines of historical Christianity, such as the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the Genesis account of the creation and fall of man, the Virgin Birth, the sacrificial atonement, and the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ." These are great words in these days of modernism to which nothing remains to be added except to say, "I believe in the visible and personal second coming of our Lord," which, I trust, our evangelists will include in their next declaration of faith.

Now, having made these unequivocal asseverations, the doctrinal soundness of our evangelists cannot be called in question, and with Martin Luther they can say: "Here I stand, so help me God!" They have in a decided manner expressed their belief in and acceptance of the fundamental teachings of Methodism, and their loyalty to the "faith which was once delivered unto the saints." Good, say I, for our evangelists; and it is certain that, standing for those old-time doctrines of the Bible and Methodism, their ministry will continue to be fruitful, and no doubt God will honor their labors.

After reading the affirmative declaration of our evangelists, if there should still be any who remain unconvinced that modernism, through its insidious propaganda, is silently permeating the religious life of America and quietly but persistently forcing its way into the life of American institutions of civilization, I would cite them to the warning injunction contained in the address of our bishops and unanimously adopted by the last General Conference which convened in the city of Memphis, Tenn.: "We earnestly request that our Annual Conferences, the connectional boards, trustees of our educational institutions, editors of all our church literature, and all other responsible officers of our church, guard with care our doctrinal standards that the integrity of our faith may be preserved and the spiritual life of our people be promoted." As I see it, these words not only acknowledge the existence of modernism and the dangers that threaten the spiritual life of our people and even our doctrinal standards, but is also a bugle call ringing in the ears of the influential men and official leaders of our great church to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" as against the deadly encroachments of modernism. The question is, Will our "Annual Conferences, connectional boards, trustees of our educational institutions, editors of all our church literature, and all other responsible officers of our church" hear and heed this call which has been sounded forth as a blast from a silver bugle? Only the approaching years of the present quadrennium can answer; or else, the voice of some prophet shouting from some mountain peak and crying, "Watchman, what of the night?" But whatever the future may reveal, we may trust, with confident assurance, the certain fulfillment of the promise of our Lord who said: "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A., Retired.

Number 4.

Our arrival in Camp Hamilton, Lexington, Ky., dropped me into a new world. There were thousands of troops and hundreds of officers in the camp. As I now recall, there were regiments from Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Kentucky, a Territorial regiment, and our own Third Mississippi. Oh, yes, I had been away from home before! As far east as Boston and as far southwest as Monterey, Mexico, and then some. I thought that I knew about as much as the average country preacher, and maybe I did; but looking back now, after all these years, I realize that I knew very little.

At Camp Hamilton I met such men as Francis Murphy, the great temperance evangelist, who was father of the Murphy Movement, which resulted in securing ten millions of signatures to pledge total abstinence; Rev. Sam Small, the orator and writer of national reputation, now with the Anti-Saloon League; Rev. Frank M. Thomas, later one of our Book Editors; McGill, of the Y. M. C. A., and others who were chaplains of regiments. To work side by side with men of that character and vision was a liberal education. My association with these brethren and others was a rich experience which left a residue of memories, pleasant to recall, and which will, I trust, be an asset for my enjoyment of the beyond.

We had left Jackson, Miss., rather hurriedly on account of the outbreak of yellow fever. Here we found typhoid fever—hundreds of cases. Hospital tents covered a large area; and much of the time of chaplains was spent in ministering to the sick of his regiment, writing letters to relatives, friends and sweethearts, sending money orders—all sorts of errands, because the men trusted the chaplains not only to do the thing asked, but to respect these confidences.

I soon found myself growing into an intimacy with these men which I had known in only a few instances as a pastor. It was a spontaneous relationship, without artificiality or formality of any kind. It appealed to me, being a live, natural confidence between man and man. It was inspiring and gave a zest to service which made it a delight. I learned to love men.

I was soon called to officiate at a military funeral. Here I was face to face with an entirely new situation. Everything about a military funeral is presvribed in the Guard Manual, except the chaplain's part. The only thing prescribed for him is where his place in the procession shall be. With the help of the undertaker, I got through that one. Since that I have conducted literally thousands. I held services over about a thousand of our overseas dead whose bodies were returned to this country and sent out to their homes through the Fourth Corps Area. Among the first of these bodies to arrive in Atlanta, was that of a friend of mine, a master engineer of the Second Regiment of Engineers, with whom I had been talking just a little while before he was killed by a shell which took off the top of his head and struck the ground a few yards away and did not explode.

Going back to our hospital service at Camp Hamilton, I want to pay a tribute to the scientists. Both these terrible scourges, yellow fever and typhoid fever, have been shorn of their terror and placed in the list of preventable diseases which no man need fear. The contribution made to this beneficent result by officers and men of the army, merits the gratitude of all right-thinking people. The names of Walter Reed, Gorgas, and other Southerners will ever shine in this list of benefactors of the race. When I hear any one decrying the work of scientists, I think, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do."

OPTIMISM.

That's goin' to fail, it will not work,
It can't be done—oh, fie
On the pessimist lifting his weary wail
At all that the world would try!
Never a great event begun
But the same old cry was heard—
On with the beautiful dream, my son,
Nor list to the croaking bird.
It can't be done and it will not work,
And that will fail—begone!
It's the will to trust and the faith to try
That shall keep the mighty forces fresh
And the revelations new,
And lead to the time when in the flesh
The dreams of the soul come true.

"I SPY."

By B. M. S.

"School begins next week," said Miss Mary. "Remember to be kind to the new pupils, and especially to those who have come from other countries and are new to our ways. Imagine how you would feel to be starting to school in—say Warsaw. Wouldn't you like for the Polish boys and girls to be friendly to you and show you some attention, if you were the only American in all the school?"

All over the room affirmative heads nodded vigorously.

"Don't be content with merely speaking to them as you pass them on the school grounds," she continued. "Spy out something that you can do to really help make them feel less strange and lonely."

"Why, Miss Mary," exclaimed Betty Wilson, "that would make a new way of playing 'I spy.'"

"A fine idea, Betty. Suppose all of you play this new "I spy" for one month, then we'll compare notes at the October meeting and see how many different ways you found to help."

It happened that Betty was to "score one" before she reached home that very afternoon. She lived in the north end of town and it was necessary for her to take the street car.

As she got aboard and took her seat she noticed a little girl on the opposite side of the car who was crying softly. "I want my mamma," she whimpered pitifully. "I want to go where my mamma is."

The child's father tried to comfort her, but she went on crying, as she said over and over again, "I want to go where my mamma is."

Betty hunted through her small hand-bag for some trinket that would interest the little girl, but could find nothing. However, just as they neared the stop on the corner across from her home, she went over and sat down by the child.

"I'm going to get off at the next corner," she said pleasantly. "Won't you please push the button for me?"

The little girl looked up through her tears, returned Betty's smile, and was at once on her feet with her little thumb pressed against the button.

"Thank you," said Betty, as she waved the child good-bye and left the car.

It was not until she reached home and was telling her mother of the incident that she realized it might count in the new game.

"Certainly I should count it," advised her mother. "You did have your eyes open and saw an opportunity to help even if it did not cost so much effort. I'd jot it down as the first on my list."

"I spy," Dorothy Hall said to herself, as she remained in her seat at recess time. Teena, a Swedish girl across the aisle from her, had been confused all morning over the strangeness in her new surroundings. She was too bashful to ask the teacher about the things that puzzled her, and Dorothy, seeing her difficulties, had motioned for her to stay in her seat. She showed Teena about the room and explained how the pencil sharpener, the lockers, and other bewildered things "w-rked." By the time recess was over Teena was much more at ease in her new environment.

Many points in the "I spy" game were won when the Guards were not in the least thinking of scores. When Jack Murphy saw a group of third-graders "picking on" the small son of Fairfield's Chinese laundry man, because he wore white stockings, he made a flying leap into their midst and sent them scurrying home.

Lucile Sprague told him he had won a point in the new game. "Why, I suppose I did," he admitted. "I hadn't thought of it in that way. The little Wang chap was scared stiff, and I had to make 'em let him alone." And so it went.

Few Guards were absent from the October meeting, and every one was on tiptoe to hear the results of the game.

Miss Mary had instructed them to make brief notes of the "points" they had won. These lists, without signatures, were mixed in a hat and passed out to be read. The tally showed two hundred and sixty-eight opportunities that had been "spied" and made use of in the friendly effort to help.—Junior Home Missions.

A LITTLE VALENTINE.

Ethel pasted a red heart in the middle of a square of heavy, cream-tinted paper, and carefully chose tiny rosebuds to drop in toward it from the four corners. That was going to be a pretty valentine. Now one more, and she would have enough for every little boy and girl on her list.

Her list was a long one, too, this year. Of course she wanted to throw a valentine for her very own dearest chums. Then several new children had moved into the neighborhood, and she wanted to remember them. She felt sure it would help a little to make them feel less strange and alone, and more as if they really "belonged."

And not for anything would she have missed placing a valentine for father and mother and little brother at the breakfast table on St. Valentine's morning. She had one for her teacher at school, too, and one for her Sunday school teacher, and one for grandmother, and, oh, half a dozen little cousins.

But it was such fun to make valentines! Ethel had a big pasteboard box into which she carefully dropped each bit of gold and silver paper, each tiny picture of flowers and children, all through the year. That gave her plenty of the very nicest material to work with when Valentine's Day drew near again. With a package or two of hearts and white cards from the ten-cent store, she was ready to begin.

Some of the valentines went out by mail. It was fun to get them ready, and address and stamp them, and drop them in the postoffice. But it was still more fun to go gaily out with them herself on St. Valentine's morning. Knocking at doors or ringing bells, she would quickly drop her white envelopes and scamper away. Of course she tried to hide somewhere near if she could, to watch the children come out and find their gay valentines. That was part of the fun of it all.

Nobody would be out earlier than would she the next morning.

But this time, somebody was!

Anyway, when Ethel opened the front door, her hands full of valentines for Mabel and Bobby and Sue and the rest, right there waiting for her at her own door was the queerest and the dearest little valentine you ever saw.

It was gray, and red, and blue—but its soft gray fur was ruffled up because it was so cold; its blue eyes begged for a warm place by the stove; its little red tongue wanted some milk to lap; and what it said was, "Meow, meow," in a tiny little kitten voice.

Ethel gath-red it right up and made it as cozily comfoftable as little kittens can be.

"I'm going to call him Valentine," she said, "because he's the very nicest valentine I ever did have."—Ellen C. Floras, in Our Dumb Animals.

THE BOY WHO TOLD TOO MUCH.

By Emma Gary Wallace.

Of course, he wasn't christened "The Boy Who Told Too Much." His really, truly name was Horace. But he was always telling things, for he loved to have people stop and listen eagerly as though what he had to tell was of the greatest importance to them.

So Horace would go out and relate what his father said at breakfast, or who had come to see his sister Marian the evening before, or that his father was going to buy a new car and pay a lot of money for it, or some other news.

And, if the truth must be told, Horace sometimes added information which he drew largely from his own imagination. He did this when the story he had to tell was not sufficiently startling to call forth interest on the part of his hearers.

One day Horace saw his father open a letter and take some money out of it and put it in his pocket, and in a few minutes Horace was telling a circle of admiring friends that his "daddy had lots and lots of money, p'raps more'n a million dollars. But he put the money right in his pocket and didn't say a word to anybody."

Not long after, Horace's father had a caller. He came from the government and said:

"Mr. Barrows, we hear that you have had a lot of money come to you, and we do not find that you hava entered this fact in your income tax report. We hope you can explain satisfactorily, or you will be subject to a heavy fine, and there may be even other penalties attached."

Mr. Barrows was amazed. He didn't know quite what to say.

"Well, well," he explained at last; "this is news to me. How did you hear that?"

The government officer hesitated a moment and then replied: "Well, since you are a neighbor, I'll tell you that Horace told the other children all about it, and my small boy told me, and I understand that the news has spread about town, for others have told me much the same thing."

It was not until Horace was brought in and required to tell what he was talking about, that the fact of the letter and the money in it came to light. Then Mr. Barrows laughed heartily.

"I have that letter yet," he said, "and the money I received, and of which the letter speaks, was a small amount I loaned a man once several years ago, and he has just got around to pay it."

Horace felt very much crestfallen, especially when the other boys nicknamed him, "The Boy Who Tells Too Much." And after that, Horace was much more careful not to speak outside of his home of what happened, or was said, and to be very sure at any time that he knew what he was talking about before he talked.

Horace is growing up, and he is proud to know that people believe him and can depend upon what he says. He is no longer "The Boy Who Tells Too Much."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Big Brothers class, Greenville, Miss., had an attendance of 110 on the last Sunday in January.

Miss E. L. Jolly, of Baton Rouge, La., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for more than fifty years. Blessings upon her!

Miss Grace Jones, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. B. Jones, is financial secretary of the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, of the Board of Missions, spent last Sunday in New Orleans, preaching at the First Methodist Church at the morning hour.

"Everything is going nicely with us up here," writes Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference.

"I have been a subscriber to the Advocate for twenty-five years, and always look forward to its coming," writes Mrs. P. M. Franklin, of Oxford, Miss.

Brother J. H. Jamieson, of New Albany, Miss., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for thirty-six years. He is another honored member of the "Old Guard."

Rev. R. V. Fulton, of the Harrisonburg charge, Louisiana Conference, writes that his work moves along well, and that he expects to raise the mission special in full.

The commencement sermon of Whitworth College will be preached on May 29, by Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., Dean of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University.

Our church is now prepared to receive tubercular patients at its hospital in Tucson, Arizona. The church now has in operation eight hospitals, with two others nearing completion.

On Monday morning of this week the following telegram was received from Rev. M. M. Black, our pastor at Richton, Miss., "Richton charge is over the top in cash on mission special." Fine for Richton and Brother Black!

W. R. Quinton, an evangelist of Chipley, Fla., writes that he has a copy of the Advocate dated Dec. 26, 1860. The copy is in good condition. He writes: "As we could use the means that might be offered for same to aid us in futher evangelistic work, if some brother would mail a helpful check for the cause, we would be pleased to register this dear old paper to him."

Dr. Briscoe Carter, Secretary of Education of the Louisiana Conference, passed through New Orleans on Monday of this week, en route home from attendance upon the meeting of the Education Association in Memphis last week.

We learn through Rev. John C. Chambers that Mrs. O. C. Hull, wife of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Extension Secretary, has been critically ill. Their many friends will remember them, we are sure, in their prayers.

Dr. John F. Foster, of New Iberia, La., and Rev. C. C. Wier, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, paid the Advocate office appreciated calls last week. They were in the city in attendance upon the meetings of the Masonic Grand Lodge.

Extensive improvements have been made at Gulfside, the Negro summer resort and camp meeting ground founded by Bishop R. E. Jones at Waveland, Miss. During the summer, various religious and educational activities are carried on at Gulfside.

The Baraca class of the First Methodist Sunday school, Gulfport, Miss., had an attendance of sixty-three men on the first Sunday in this month. At the evening church service, twenty-one men sang in the choir. A congregation that filled the house was present.

Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, Book Editor and editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review, will deliver the sixth series of Quillian Lectures at Emory University during the first week in April. The lectures will be published in book form immediately after their delivery.

Dr. Mark Terrell, general evangelist, has recently held a fine revival meeting at Carter, Okla. Dr. Terrell has two open dates for revivals that he would be glad to give the brethren in Louisiana and Mississippi. His address is 2918 Reagan Avenue, Dallas, Tex.

The Methodist people of Amory, Miss., are expecting to enter their new church about April 1. They have arranged for a revival meeting to begin on April 24, the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott, doing the preaching, and Rev. W. C. Newman, of Houlka, leading the singing.

The ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., have made extensive improvements on the grounds of the parsonage, and added some needed supplies to the house. This is one of the finest parsonages in the whole church.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, our pastor at Horn Lake, Miss., writes: "Things are starting off well on the Horn Lake charge, and the pastor and his family are becoming better pleased each day. We are hoping, planning, and praying that we may be able to report everything in full in November at Clarksdale."

The following representatives of educational interests of the Mississippi Conference atttended in Memphis, Feb. 8-10, the annual session of the Educational Association, Methodist Episcopal Church, South: Revs. J. E. Stephens, H. W. Van Hook, H. G. Hawkins, O. S. Lewis, J. L. Decell, and Dr. D. M. Key.

The Conference on International Relations, held at the Louisiana State University recently, was a profitable and interesting gathering. Methodist schools were well represented on the program. Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, presided at the round table discussion of Friday afternoon. Professor Cline, of Centenary, and Professor Rippy, of Duke University, were on the program. Dr. O. E. Brown, of Vanderbilt University, delivered one of the principal addresses. Several of the members of the Louisiana Conference were in attendance.

We have been informed that Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, pastor of the Epworth Methodist Church, New Orleans, has been appointed pastor at De Ridder, La., to succeed Rev. J. L. Evans, who has asked to be released from that appointment. We have no official information as to the successor of Brother Ledbetter at Epworth.

The editor of the Advocate is glad to be able to report that there seems to be a slight improvement in the condition of his father, Rev. Lyman Carley. He is still confined to his bed and is extremely weak, but is able to take an increasing amount of nourishment. The messages of sympathy and interest have greatly pleased him.

Pending the completion of the endowment, the board of trustees of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., have decided to operate the institution as a Standard Junior College. This will give the school definite classification; and it is believed that with this recognition the patrons will feel more secure, and the attendance rapidly enlarged.

Arrangements are being made to hold a Louisiana Conference Pastors' School at Centenary College, Shreveport, La., June 20-30 having been selected as the tentative date. This will be an official school, giving the regular courses, with credits, and giving this year half the undergradate course of study. Fuller announcements will be made in due time.

The Woman's Missionary Society at West Point, Miss., gave a reception in honor of their pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. E. Nash Broyles, on a recent Thursday evening. The Clisby class room was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and an interesting program was rendered. The reception was largely attended and was enjoyable in every way.

The children of the Primary Department of the Rayne Memorial Sunday school, this city, will give an entertainment, "The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring," at 8 o'clock on Friday evening of this week. The proceeds of the entertainment will be applied to the Sunday school building fund. An admission fee of twenty-five cents will be charged, and ice cream and cake will be sold.

Rev. J. L. Evans, pastor at De Ridder, La., has asked to be released from his work until Conference on account of ill health. Brother Evans has been in poor health for some time, and has reached the conclusion that he must have a period of rest from the heavy burdens of the pastorate. He will have the sympathy and prayers of his brethren in his affliction. We understand that Brother Evans has found congenial light employment upon which he will enter on March 1.

Rev. J. S. Purcell, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is having a happy and successful pastorate at Plant City, Fla. A recent bulletin of the church shows that fifty-nine members were received during the past quarter—thirty by certificate and twenty-nine on profession of faith. There is a total Epworth League membership of 360, and the Woman's Missionary Society has a membership of 100. Other items of the work are in keeping with this fine report.

Miss Lucy Grey Martin, only daughter of Rev. and Mrs. G. W. McLain, of Bowie, Arizona, was married on Jan. 23 to Mr. H. R. Farrell, of Los Angeles, Calif. The ceremony was performed by the father of the bride in the parsonage at Bowie. The many friends of the bride and her family in this section will be interested in this item of news. Brother McLain is pastor of the First Methodist Church at Bowie. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

A Wesley Brotherhood has been organized at Iuka, Miss. A delegation from Corinth attended the installation of officers at Iuka recently, several of them making appropriate addresses. The officers of the Iuka Brotherhood are as follows: R. A. McRee, Jr., president; E. R. Harvey, vice president; S. H. Allen, secretary; W. O. Jackson, treasurer. Rev. G. C. Schwartz is the pastor at Iuka, with whom the laymen are heartily co-operating in all the work of the church.

The Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder, is carrying out the program of the church in its missionary plans, and working faithfully in all the activities of the church. Pastors' salaries have been increased in thirteen of the twenty-nine charges of the district. Three new church buildings will soon be completed—at New Albany, Pott's Camp, and Camp Ground. The new church at New Albany will be one of the best in the State.

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Georgia, a well known temperance lecturer, began a three weeks' speaking tour of Mississippi at Shubuta last Sunday. She will visit about ten towns, speaking under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. She will be accompanied on part of her tour at least by Mrs. Nellie Somerville, State President of the W. C. T. U. Mr. W. H. Patton, of Shubuta, for many years a leader in the prohibition fights in Mississippi, commends Mrs. Atkins very highly.

On Monday evening of this week, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Turpie, of this city, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their marriage. The editor of the Advocate officiated at this wedding twenty years ago when he was pastor of the Parker Memorial Church, and he had the pleasure of repeating the ceremony on Wednesday evening. It may be of interest to some of the readers of the Advocate to know that Mr. and Mrs. Turpie are the parents of Marion Turpie, the eighteen-year-old girl who has achieved a national reputation as a golf player.

A GREAT DAY AT WEST POINT, MISS.

Sunday, Feb. 6, was a great day for the Methodist church in West Point, Miss., the new $6,000 Mohler organ, which has just been installed, being used for the first time. The organ is a splendid instrument, with more than a thousand pipes.

A musical program was given at the evening hour by the organist and choir director, Mrs. James D. Graham, and the choir of more than twenty voices. The congregation completely filled the church for the occasion, and those who are competent to judge say the service was most impressive and inspiring.

We are glad that the people called Methodist realize the value of good music in religious services and that they are equipping their churches with instruments that lend themselves to the development and cultivation of this form of religious activity. We congratulate the Methodists of West Point and their pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, upon the installation of this great adjunct to their work.

TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF MISSISSIPPI.

In January, I addressed a letter to every Sunday school superintendent in the State, making a statement about the needs of the Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi and an appeal to them to use to the best possible effect Sunday School Temperance Days, as designated by the International Sunday School Lesson Committee. Some have written me that they would do so. Sunday, Feb. 27, is the first temperance day for the year. Will not every school superintendent who reads this appeal begin at once to arrange for the most vigorous program possible for that day? Dr. S. L. Morris, our wide-awake field man, suggests the following outline as appropriate for the occasion:

1. A good definition of temperance: The moderate use of what is good, and total abstinence from what is bad.

2. The drink habit is a parent sin. It is a sin on its own account and, moreover, it invariably produces a wicked brood of other vices.

3. God condemns it. It is one of the mortal sins mentioned in to-day's lesson.

You have received my letter written in January, and Dr. Morris' a few days ago. Please, for the cause's sake, do not disregard these appeals. The League must have some money, or it cannot function. It must get this from the churches and Sunday schools, or it will not get it at all. The League was born of the churches; it has been up to this time fostered and supported by them. It is the churches in united action against the liquor business in whatever form it manifests itself. It does seem to one well acquainted with the origin and history of prohibition and the present situation that it would be a real tragedy for the men of Mississippi to disband their prohibition organization and throw the whole burden on the W. C. T. U. This would necessarily mean the loss of much of what has been achieved at the cost of much money, labor and some life. If the League shall close its work, it will be solely because the men have decided that it is not worth their support and especially their sacrifice. If the churches shall fail to support it, it will be because they have lost sight of their objective in its establishment. The church's programs are intensive, but would it not be better for the country, even the churches, for them to increase their load just a little, and thus utilize the splendid legislation which has been secured, than to surrender?

After thirteen years of service as Superintendent of the League, I have been unanimously re-elected by acclamation to continue. My success will depend upon the measure of assistance accorded me by my brethren. And this assistance cannot be long delayed. Will not every church, Sunday school and individual who reads this give this matter the serious and prayerful consideration it deserves, and let me hear from you? If the services of the League are not worthy of your support, then it will be proper to withhold it; but if it is to be virile and function vigorously, you must act quickly. If you allow the League to close, you simply must accept the responsibility. I have done all I know to do. If every Sunday school will make a liberal offering on the 27th, the day can be saved.

Your fellow-worker,
T. J. BAILEY, Superintendent,
Jackson, Miss.

MISSIONARY GROUP INSTITUTE AT ROLLING FORK, MISS.

At the very interestiing and enthusiastic District Missionary Institute held at Vicksburg recently, it was decided that three group institutes would be held in the Vicksburg District, and thus give those interested in the entire district an opportunity to attend at least one such meeting. The first of these proposed meetings was held at Rolling Fork, Miss., last Wednesday, and the following program was carried out:

Devotional exercise and statement of the purpose of the meeting by Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder, Vicksburg District.

"Value of the Cultivation Program," by Rev. J. T. Weems, Anguilla.

"How to Organize the Country Church," by Rev. J. J. Williams, Rolling Fork.

"Can the Cultivation Program Be Put Over? If So, How?" by Rev. I. H. Sells, Holly Bluff.

"The Laymen's Responsibility in the Cultivation Program," by S. W. Sharbrough, District Lay Leader, Holly Bluff.

Each of these subjects was ably handled. After the close of these discussions, several short talks were made on the various phases of our missionary program.

From 12 o'clock to 1, a sumptuous dinner was served by the ladies of the Rolling Fork Methodist church.

The afternoon session was called to order by Rev. J. T. Leggett at 1:15 o'clock, and the devotional exercise was conducted by Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Mayersville.

Mrs. D. Boykin sang a solo, and was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. L. Kicks.

Rev. J. T. Leggett delivered a stirring message, in which he appealed to Methodists for their co-operation and loyalty in carrying out the full program of the church.

After this strong appeal, motion was made and carried to organize a Laymen's Movement, with a view of meeting three or four times each year on the various charges north of Vicksburg for the distinct purpose of planning ways and means by which the church may do its full duty.

The following officers were elected: Rev. J. T. Weems, President; S. W. Sharbrough, Vice President; R. E. Selby, Secretary.

The meeting was well attended, and every one enjoyed the Christian fellowship of his neighbor and the hospitality of the good Methodist people of Rolling Fork.

R. E. SELBY, Secretary.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF FINANCE.

The Annual Meeting of the General Board of Finance will be held in Room A, Missouri Athletic Association, Fourth and Washington, St. Louis, Mo., on April 26 and 27, 1927.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Church Extension, North Mississippi Annual Conference, will meet at the Methodist church, Winona, Miss., Tuesday, March 1, at 1:30 p. m.

Let all applications to the General Board be sent to the Secretary, Rev. J. J. Baird, Pontotoc, Miss., before that date.

W. N. DUNCAN, President.

MEETING OF HOSPITAL BOARD.

The annual meeting of the General Hospital Board will be held at 10 a. m. on Wednesday, April 20, in the offices of the Board, Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga.

The Hospital Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet at 10 a. m. on Tuesday, April 19, in the offices of the General Hospital Board. The members of the Board are invited to meet with the Association on April 19, and the members and visitors of the Association are invited to meet with the General Hospital Board the following day.

CHARLES C. JARRELL,
General Secretary.

WM. RUSHING HOWELL was born in Holmes County, Miss., Feb. 3, 1871, and died, suddenly, in Durant, Miss., Jan. 27, 1927. While quite young he joined the Methodist church, and lived a life of Christian usefulness. He was a rural mail carrier for seventeen years, and made his last round on Jan. 26. He leaves five children, and four brothers and two sisters to mourn his loss, but not without hope. His father also survives. "God's children are gathering home;" and so are mine.

JOSHUA WILLIS THOMASON was born June 28, 1840, and died Feb. 2, 1927. He was a soldier in the Civil War, serving as a volunteer for the four years. He was born in the State of Georgia, but came to this State with his parents when he was nine years old. It is said of him that he learned the secret of prayer when a child at his mother's knee, and ever after he depended upon that source for strength and leadership. Brother Thomason united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Arizona, in the Parish of Claiborne, in his early life, and remained true to his profession all of his life. It was said of him that no man could say aught against him, for his life was a life of prayer and strict obedience to the Lord he loved and worshiped. Brother Thomason was married to Victoria McRee in the year 1873. To this union were born twelve children. Death claimed Sister Thomason after fifty-four years of happy married life, she having reached the age of 71 years. He is survived by seven daughters, one son, and three brothers. To his loved ones and friends, we offer our tenderest sympathy, and ask them to trust in the God and loving Saviour that was so precious to father and mother. He is gone, but we shall remember his kind, loving, and tender affection for his family, his church, and his country.

"And when ten thousand years shall have passed, bright, shining as the sun,

"He will have no less days to sing praise, than when he first begun."

His pastor,

J. F. DRING.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call home a faithful and beloved member of the Woman's Sunday School Class of Cohay, Miss.; and,

Whereas, as her complete faith in and her knowledge of God's Word has wielded a great influence for good and has been an inspiration to our community; and,

Whereas, our beloved member, MRS. ROSA ANDERSON, leaves children and grandchildren who feel deeply the loss of such a mother and grandmother; be it resolved:

1. That in honor and love, we, members of the Women's Class of Cohay, Miss., do acknowledge our loss and express to those loved ones our deepest sympathy;

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy spread on the minutes of the Women's Class.

STELLA MOORE, Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, a consecrated life passed from us when one of our most devoted and faithful members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Bastrop, La., MRS. JAMES HIGGINBOTHAM, left this earth and ascended to that wonderful mansion prepared for her by our Father, where no tears are ever shed and happiness reigns supreme;

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That our church and Missionary Society have lost a valued and consecrated member.

2. While we are bowed with sorrow, we submit to His will and thank Him that we were associated with one so womanly and devout.

3. That her life will be a living memorial to her loved ones, her church and her friends.

4. That we extend deepest sympathy to her devoted husband and children in this, their greatest grief.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our Missionary Society, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, one to the Morehouse Enterprise, and one to the bereaved family.

As flowers shed their beauty and perfume, so shed she her genial smile and happy disposition to those with whom she was associated.

Signed: Mrs. J. W. Pierce, Mrs. E. L. Hadley, Committee.

AN APPRECIATION.

MRS. SARAH ELLEN LEWIS was born at old Mount Carmel, Miss., Nov. 27, 1855, and departed this life in Jackson, Miss., Nov. 23, 1926. Her father, Jasper Bass, was killed in the Civil War and her mother died a few years later. The little orphan girl was taken into the home of her maternal grandfather, Hosea Davis, and tenderly reared. In young womanhood she was married to Joseph W. Lewis, of Pike County, and the young couple made their home in the old Waterhole neighborhood, where for many years they lived happily together. In childhood, Mother Lewis had joined the Baptist church, but after her marriage she joined the Methodist Church, to be in the same church home with her husband. The Methodist Church never had more loyal and devoted members than they. Their home was the preachers' home, and in them the man of God had faithful and consistent supporters. Mr. Lewis was for many years a steward, and was widely known for piety and good works. In his good wife he had a worthy helpmeet, who possessed the same traits of quiet goodness and who sympathetically shared with him the responsibilities and the varying experiences of joy and of sorrow, of sunshine and of shadow throughout their married life of about twenty-five years. Eight children were born of their union: Eppie, Lemuel, Minnie (Mrs. W. L. Baylis, Columbia, Miss.), Walter, Mamie (Mrs. F. L. Applewhite, Newton, Miss.), Earl, Rose (Mrs. Geo. McInnis, Jackson, Miss.), and Lera Belle.

Eppie, the first-born, died in 1893, and Walter was taken in 1917. These were sorrows heavy to bear, but most grievous was the death of her good husband in 1900. Mother Lewis lived on at the old farmhouse with her children until all of them had grown up, and one by one had gone from the old roof tree to establish homes of their own, with the exception of Early, her youngest son, who lives at the old home. She spent the latter years of her life living about with her children, who accounted her presence with them a benediction. She lived in our parsonage home while we were in Jackson, for some years, but when the appointing powers sent me elsewhere she remained there with her daughters, Rose and Lera Belle; and it was in their home that her final sickness came and she quietly passed away.

Mother Lewis was taken back to the old church where for so many years she held membership (now located at Knoxo), and the last rites were conducted in the presence of a large crowd of kinsfolk and old friends by her former pastor, Rev. Irl Sells, assisted by Brothers Abney and J. M. Lewis. In the quiet city of the dead her body rests, awaiting the resurrection morn. We are in no doubt about her destiny. She was so sweet and patient and good. We shall see her again some glad day, when sorrow and sighing shall flee away and God himself shall wipe all tears away.

F. L. APPLEWHITE.

Newton, Miss.

GOD AND ETERNITY.

Remember that God is working for eternity, and has eternity to work in. It takes centuries to make an oak tree; things without worth complete their life-course in a day or a week or a year. As for yourself, for you are building up a character which shall have eternal worth, have patience with God in the working out of His purpose, for He is making a kingdom which shall endure forever * * * Be patient with other people, and out of the patient expectation try to help them.—James Iverach.

Council Meeting at Shreveport, Louisiana, March 9-16

All Communications for this Department should be sent to Mrs. V. G. Hyams, 607 Third Street, Natchitoches, La.

ANNUAL MEETING AT MANSFIELD MARCH 7 AND 8. COUNCIL MEETING AT SHREVEPORT, MARCH 9-16.

The annual meeting which was to have been held in New Orleans will meet at Mansfield instead, on account of the latter's nearness to Shreveport, thereby affording convenient transfer of guests from annual meeting to Council meeting, immediately following. Mansfield, in her usual graciousness, sent to the mid-term executive meeting a special hostess, Mrs. Dowell, with the kind invitation to accept her hospitality for annual meeting. The invitation was gladly accepted.

The conference will last only two days because of Council following, and the session will be concerned solely with buiness, election of officers and matters of urgency.

Many wonderful and elaborate plans for Council meeting have been made by Shreveport women.

Mrs. Wiltz M. Ledbetter, 1134 Dalzell Street, Shreveport, is general chairman of Council Entertainment Committee; Mrs. W. F. French, 850 Ontario Street, is chairman of Homes Committee.

All Conference officers, and District Secretaries and Presidents of Auxiliaries (or a representative) will be the guests of Shreveport at the Council meeting.

The Council meeting opens at noon Wednesday, March 9, with a great mass—luncheon at the Washington Hotel, at which all Council and Conference officers and Auxiliary Presidents will be guests, and all other women interested in Missions from any denomination will have a place at luncheon reserved for them by sending in advance $1 to Mrs. George Sexton, Sr., Centenary Boulevard, Shreveport, who is in charge of this luncheon.

Mrs. Sexton assures us that the luncheon feast will be nothing to compare with the spiritual feast that is being planned for that great assemblage; that missionaries from the field, the Council Presidents and many renowned Christian workers will be there, and the hour will be pre-eminently one for the Master, when it is hoped that his presence shall be there as surely as it was many years ago at the table of Mary and Martha.

The Washington Hotel will have reservations for Council officers, and special rater for guests will be given at that time by the Youree Hotel—Louisiana News.

RATES AT COUNCIL MEETING, SHREVEPORT.

The Washington Hotel will be headquarters of the Council officers; the Youree Hotel, heaquarters for the Conference Presidents and Corresponding Secretaries who comprise the Council body. Visitors from Louisiana and adjoining States will make their reservations at the Youree.

The rates are as follows: Rooms $4 per day, two persons to the room and each room with bath. Rate on single rooms will be $3 per day. For each additional person above two in room, $1.50. These rates are for the visitors to the Council as well as for the Council officers. One accredited delegate from the auxiliaries in the Louisiana Conference will be entertained in the homes.

Club breakfasts will be served for 40 cents, and each hotel operates a coffee room, where a good table d'hote dinner is served for 75 cents. Both the Y. W. and the Y. M. Cafeterias are conveniently near the hotels.

THOUSAND PLATE LUNCHEON FOR WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

Plans are being perfected for entertaining a thousand women at a luncheon at the Washington Hotel in Shreveport on the opening day of the Woman's Missionary Council, Wednesday, March 9. This gathering will give the Methodist women of Louisiana and visitors from other States an opportunity to meet the Council officers, missionaries and deaconesses and to enjoy a splendid program, including a brief inspirational address by some speaker selected by the Council. Plates will be one dollar each. Mrs. George S. Sexton, 3004 Centenary Boulevard, Shreveport, La., is chairman of arrangements and asks that reservations be sent in to her immediately, a dollar accompanying each name. Tickets will be mailed to those making reservations as long as the thousand last. Members of the Council, missionaries, deaconesses, and one accredited delegate from each Louisiana Auxiliary will be entertained without charge by the Shreveport Societies. Plan now to attend the Council in Shreveport, March 9 to 16, and write ahead to Mrs. Sexton for a luncheon tickets so that you won't be turned away for lack of room. Tickets may be transferred.

A letter from Mrs. M. E. Gilbert, of Gilbert, La., states: "We are working on the 'B' Type Program of Work, and would like to be checked the first opportunity. We have just had a two-weeks' revival, with Miss Daisy Davies in charge, and our church work is on a boom. We had a record attendance of 152 at Sunday school last Sunday. Command, if I can be of service."

My week-end trip included visits to New Orleans, Bogalusa, Covington, Natalbany, Hammond, and Baton Rouge. I arrived in New Orleans on Saturday, in time to meet with the Program Committee of which the District Secretary, Mr. J. H. Carter, is chairman. Plans were made for the District Quarterly Sunday School meeting to be held at Felicity Church, Sunday, March 6, at 3:30 p. m.

I reached Bogalusa Saturday night, where I was graciously entertained in the home of Mr. B. D. Talley, Sunday school superintendent; and Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour, I was given the privilege of speaking to the school in the interest of training work.

I was in Covington long enough to learn how well pleased the congregathere is with the new pastor, Rev. H. W. Jordan. At Natalbany, we had our District Sunday School Council meeting, and found on arrival a house full of earnest workers. They planned many fine things. The next meeting will be in connection with the District Conference at Amite, on May 17. The Standard Training School Board of Directors was elected, with Prof. L. A. Sims, Educational Director, and the place for the school was decided on, the invitation from Hammond being accepted. The date of this school is Aug. 28-Sept. 2.

Sunday night the writer preached at Hammond to the largest congregation he has ever seen there. The new pastor, Rev. W. R. Harvell, is in fine favor with his congregation, and they are making wonderful strides, with much interest shown in the new church movement. We shared the hospitality of the parsonage on Sunday night.

On Monday morning, in company with the presiding elder, Rev. H. N. Brown, we left for Baton Rouge, making a stop at Walker to see the new parsonage being built by the young pastor for that circuit, Rev. R. L. Clayton. At Denham Springs, we stopped long enough for the presiding elder to be "pounded" with vegetables.

In Baton Rouge we called on Dr. Taylor, of First Church, Rev. O. L. Tucker, of Keener Memorial, and had a telephone conversation with Brother McCullin, of Istrouma, concerning a "Set-Up" meeting for their city-wide Standard Training School. This meeting will be held next Wednesday night at the prayer meeting hour at First Church.

Mrs. R. E. Smith, who has rendered such valuable service in our Standard Training Schools in Louisiana, will teach next week in a school in San Antonio, Tex. We highly recommend her as a teacher to Texas, but we do hope she will not make too many engagements out of the State, as she has many calls for service in Louisiana.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI RURAL EXTENSION SECRETARY.

Since my last letter, I have visited the following charges: Guntown, Booneville, Okolona, Winona, Sardis, Batesville, Durant, Senatobia, and Charleston. At these places I presented the program of our Conference Sunday School Board and in most places held a Workers' Council and checked up the schools. Guntown, with Brother Weed in the lead, adopted the Program of Work "C." His officers and teachers are enthusiastic and are determined to have a Standard school before the year is ended.

Brother "Jake" Taylor, one of our most faithful superintendents, with sympathetic co-operation on the part of Brother Mounger, is working to perfect a Standard school of the "B" type at Booneville. Mrs. W. K. McMillin is chairman of his missionary committee.

"Frank," in his own way, is wisely piloting the Kingdom's interest at Okolona. His school adopted Program of Work "B" and we confidently expect telling results. Mrs. R. E. Buchanan is chairman of the missionary committee.

We received a cordial welcome and had splendid co-operation at Winona. Brother Johnson, one of our best informed Sunday school pastors, is planning wisely for the extension of the Kingdom. His program embraces every interest of the church. Mrs. L. Small is chairman of the missionary committee.

Sardis boasts of the largest men's Bible class in the Conference—if not the largest, the most effective. Brother "Nick" (J. H. Nichols) makes an ideal president. "Burney" (A. B. Freind), the faithful and proficient teacher, holds spellbound each Sunday his hundred or more members. Brother "Mac" and Hon. John Kyle, the superintendent, are doing beautiful team work, working the Program of Work "B" and contributing to the Dual Special.

It was a pleasure to meet old friends at Batesville, but more so to find how wisely Brother Clanton is leading his people. He and Brother Jarrett will never be satisfied until the school reaches the Standard of Efficiency of the "B" type. Miss Vashti O'Bryant sends the monthly missionary contribution to Rev. H. P. Lewis.

Durant adopted the Program of Work "B" and checked up encouragingly. We received every courtesy from the pastor and superintendent. Mrs. B. W. Moore is missionary chairman.

Brothers Hartsfield and Gabbort at Senatobia have a Standard school in the making. Brother Gabbort is one of our most conscientious and most effective superintendents and we feel certain that Senatobia will, in the near future, support our Dual Special. "Mr. Shipman" builded well in the little city.

Brother Lockhart and his wife are planning for a Standard school of the "B" type at Charleston. His workers are intelligent and constructive. We thoroughly enjoyed our short visit. Mrs. Dr. Clanton Harrison is missionary chairman. Look for results at Charleston.

We are very busy in Sunday school institutes and arranging for Cokesbury Training Classes. The writer is planning to hold a training class on one circuit in each district. At the same time, with the pastor, he will take up a religious census, tabulate results, and work out a "follow-up program. Should any circuit pastor desire service of this sort, I would be glad to hear from him.

* * *

Brother Northington writes: "Prof. Brinson has about forty taking his course (The Pupil, by Barclay), some fifty auditing it. Both of my schools began the missionary offering in January. I mean to get the blue ribbon." Brother C. A. is a "go-get-er."

Prof. Jack Frost is teaching a large class at Holcomb, using "The Small Sunday School" for his text. His class is ready to take examination. "Jack" is an old Millsaps man and is making a worth-while contribution to his church.

* * *

The following schools are contributing to our Dual Special: Greenbriar, Amory, Aberdeen, Lagrange, Fulton, Houston, Houlka, Mathiston, Okolona, Prairie, Shannon, Tupelo, Verona, Booneville, Jacinto, Mooreville, Rienzi, Black Hawk, Carrollton, Drew, Itta Bena, Moorehead, Ruleville, Sidon, Cruger, Sunflower, Tchula, Abbeville, Coffeeville, Ebenezer, Grenada, Holcomb, Holly Springs, Lexington, Pickens, Goodman, Sallis, Vaiden, West, Ackerman, Weir, Brooksville, Shady Grove, Ethel, Kosciusko, Macon, X Prairie, Starkville, West Point, Boyle, Bobo, Birdie, Coahoma, Clarksdale, Duncan, Alligator, Friars Point, Lula, Maud, Robinsonville, Shaw, Sherard, Tunica, Winterville, Arkabutla, Batesville, Colwater, Como, Red Bank, Oakland, Greenville, and Tillitobia. Let others follow.

E. G. MOHLER,
Rural Extension Secretary.

FEELING LOTS BETTER NOW

Writes Ethel May Snider Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hartford City, Ind.—Doing housework and taking care of a sick woman proved to be too much for Ethel May Snider, R. R. 1 of Hartford City, until she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overwork had so undermined her health that she had to give up all outside work, and when she saw this medicine advertised in the "Star" and other papers, she went to druggist and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She took it regularly, was greatly benefited and now feels very much better.

Ethel May Snider's experience is similar to that of thousands of other women in all walks of life, who have sent testimonials to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass.

Among those who praise the Compound are young girls who have been enabled to attend school regularly—working girls who have gained strength and endurance so necessary to them, housewives and mothers who have found that the tonic-effect of the Compound has enabled them to perform their daily tasks more easily.

How to Gain 5 Pounds in 30 Days

If You Don't Do It, Get Your Money Back.

Ask any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. They cost but little, are sugar coated and as pleasant to take as candy.

It's the new pleasant way to take nasty cod liver oil and will not upset the most delicate stomach.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good, healthy, solid flesh, and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 pounds or more in 30 days. As a matter of fact, all druggists are authorized to return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

One thin woman gained 15 pounds in six weeks.

Be sure and insist on McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—60 Tablets—60 cents.

Council Meeting at Shreveport, March 9-16.

Auxiliary Presidents and Other Visitors: This meeting will be a memorable one and an opportunity that not many of us will have again.

Each day lovely luncheons will be prepared for us, but they will not compare with the spiritual feast we will get meeting and mingling with our Council officers, seeing our home and foreign missionaries and deaconesses consecrated.

March 14 is "Minden-Ruston Districts' Day." Let our districts be well represented, and all who can possibly do so avail themselves of this wonderful opportunity.

WEAK, RESTLESS

Tennessee Lady Had So Little Strength She "Couldn't Get Around." Took Cardui With Benefit.

Gassaway, Tenn.—"I wasn't able to do any of my work, and it seemed like I had so little strength I just couldn't get around," says Mrs. Frank Murphy, who lives near here.

"My mother knew of the good Cardui could do, so she told me to take it. I sent and got a bottle, and seemed like all the time I grew stronger.

"I had been suffering with pains in my sides all the time, and Cardui helped this wonderfully. I needed a tonic for female trouble, and Cardui just fitted the need. I was awfully restless and could not sleep at night, but after taking two bottles of Cardui I could sleep 'like a top'. I got along all right, and I know it was due to Cardui. I can certainly recommend it to women suffering from women's troubles.

"My present health is just fine."

Thousands of women have written to tell how Cardui relieved them of pain and suffering, and helped them to improve in health and strength.

Cardui is perfectly harmless, being an extract of mild-acting herbs, and contains no dangerous drugs or harmful ingredients.

Sold everywhere. NC-174

Dear Friends: You who have sent us such fine accounts of your meetings, please pardon us for delaying publishing these accounts until we have gotten in the essential things of the great Council meeting and Louisiana Annual meeting.

EDITOR OF PAGE.

PONCHATOULA AUXILIARY ACTIVE.

We have a real live Missionary Society here. Our present officers were installed at our first meeting in January by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Booth. We are planning to send our president as a delegate to our Annual Conference to Mansfield, March 7 and 8, and on to Shreveport to the Woman's Missionary Council meeting, March 9 to 16.

We have our business meeting Tuesday after the first Sunday in each month; our Bible study the third Tuesday; Mission study fourth Tuesday.

We hope by Divine guidance to do more and better work this year than ever before.

MRS. W. R. KEMP,
Superintendent of Publicity.

FROM LEAKESVILLE, MISS.

Old debt paid on the parsonage; electric lights in church and parsonage; some furniture and decorations on interior of parsonage; outbuildings rebuilt or improved; new fence around garden and patch; a good, substantial lawn fence on two front sides of parsonage yard; a flower garden with quite a lot of shrubbery already planted; a good variety and quite a number of fruit and pecan trees planted; a row of evergreen water oaks around the church, and a piano in the church, are some of the material achievements of my fifteen months as pastor here.

The people of the town gave us a cordial reception on our return for the second year, and gave us a long-drawn-out shower, which was of a substantial nature, and which has not yet ceased.

The country churches of the circuit are very loyal and dependable, though not so well organized.

We are doing our best to advance the interests of the kingdom, and would ask an interest in your prayers.

J. H. GRICE, Pastor.

A NOTE FROM GREENWOOD, MISS.

Dear Advocate: The best way to say what I want to say to the people is to quote Brother J. H. Sherard's letter wihch came to-day. He says: "Dear Brother: I am writing you in the interest of our Hospital, urging upon you the importance of the provisions of 'The Golden Cross Society'—page 255, paragraph 536 of the Discipline. The Hospital has done over $52,000 worth of gratuitous and charity work during the past year. It has heavy obligations to meet, and is very greatly in need of funds." Hear it!

Our Hospital interest is not secondary to anything we have. It is in the class with our Orphans' Home. If there be any "classes" in our Home Mission work, these two benevolences rank all others. And, by the way, J. H. Sherard is president of both boards.

"The Golden Cross Society" does not seem to be "going" very well. The folks say, "We have too many organizations already." That may be true. Sometimes I think it is true. However, if we do not come to the relief of the Hospital Board, through "The Golden Cross Society" or otherwise, we are going to lose another hospital. The issue is squarely "up to us." We must meet it, or lose out. That's all.

If you have the space, you might add that the outlook is hopeful in the Greenwood District. Harmony prevails. While there is considerable depression, on account of the price of cottton (we can raise nothing else, or do not), there is little disposition to retrench. In the matter of salaries, they are proposing a "raise," or at least the same amount they paid last year. Congregations are larger and the interest is better at all of the services. And there is an increase in liberality. This is usually the case. People are not generally disposed to "cut" on the church when times are "tight."

Our asssessments will come out creditably. We expect to do our part, too, on Education and Mission Specials. But in "these stressful times," let us remember very prayerfully and more liberally the needs of our Hospital and Orphans' Home.

COKESBURY TRAINING COURSE.

It has been recognized from the beginning by those who have been charged with the responsibility of the training program of the General Sunday School Board that there were many thousands of Sunday schools and tens of thousands of officers and teachers who labor in the small church where the physical equipment and the number enrolled will not permit the departmentally organized Sunday school. More than eleven thousand Methodist Sunday schools in the South are conducted in buildings of the one-room type. The purpose of the Cokesbury Training Course is to provide a course of study suited to the needs of those who labor in the small Sunday school, whether in city, town, or rural church. With this condition confronting us, the training section was authorized in 1922 to offer a course with suitable awards and credits that would be in keeping with the needs and conditions under which these faithful workers labor. The content of the texts selected, the methods of administering the course and of issuing awards, and the cost of the texts are all based upon the needs of the workers for whom the course has been prepared.

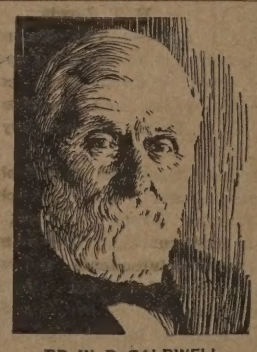
All workers in small schools,

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)



DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

whether pastors, superintendents, teachers, officers, or young people, who are interested in making our small Sunday schools more efficient, should become students in this course and continue their studies in the course until they have received the final diploma.

Contents of Course.

The Cokesbury Training Course consists of eight units. A unit is a group of lessons on a particular subject. Eight units are necessary for the diploma. Six of these are designated as required units and two as electives. Required units are units that must be taken by all students working for the diploma, and electives are to be selected from a large number of courses listed as electives.

Required Units.

The Small Sunday School; the Sunday School Worker; the Sunday School Pupil; Teaching in the Small Sunday School; How We Got Our Bible; What Every Methodist Should Know; the Life of Christ.

Elective Units.

Elementary Work in the Small Sunday School; Intermediate-Senior Work in the Small Sunday School; Young People's Work in the Small Sunday School; Adult Work in the Small Sunday School; a Short History of Methodism; Studies in the Life of Wesley; Studies in the Life of Asbury; Evangelism; Missions.

Textbooks.

Only textbooks listed herewith are approved for use in the Cokesbury Training Course. Texts on other units of the course will be made available as rapidly as they can be written and will be listed in later editions of this manual.

Approved Texts On Required Units.

1. "The Small Sunday School." Text: "The Small Sunday School: Its Plans and Work," by L. F. Sensabaugh. One unit.

2. "The Sunday School Worker." Text: "The Sunday School Worker: His Life and Work," by L. F. Sensabaugh. One unit.

Credits and Awards.

Certificates.

A certificate in the Cokesbury Training Course will be granted by General Sunday School Board to each student who satisfactorily completes the required work, including the study of the text, attendance upon study periods in class or school, and the written work required for the completion of the course. A certificate will be issued for each unit as it is completed.

Diploma.

Students satisfactorily completing the six required and two elective units will be awarded the diploma of the Cokesbury Training Course.

Methods of Taking the Course.

1—In Approved Cokesbury Schools.

An approved Cokesbury Schoool is a training school which meets the following conditions:

(a) Two or more units of the Cokesbury Training Course shall be offered.

(b) There shall be twelve class periods of forty-five minutes each.

(c) One, two, or three class periods for each course may be held on each day of the school.

(d) The school shall continue over a period of not less than four days nor more than twelve days.

(e) The textbooks used shall be the texts approved by the General Sunday School Board for units of the Cokesbury Training Course.

(f) Instructors shall be selected from the list of instructors approved by the Training Section for service in such schools.

(g) Tests shall be up to the standard of the General Sunday School Board for credits in the Cokesbury Training Course, and shall embrace not less than ten questions to be answered in writing.

(h) Students meeting conditions of credit shall be awarded certificates of credit at close of school, indicating credit earned.

(i) A responsible Director shall be in charge of each school.

A One-Teacher Cokesbury School is a training school which meets the following conditions:

(a) One unit of the Cokesbury Training Course shall be offered.

(b) Instructors shall give examination, grade the papers, and report the grades to the Office of Training Work, from which office credits will be issued to those making passing grades.

(c) Points b, c, e, f, and g of the requirements for Approved Cokesbury Schools shall be met.

(d) The school shall continue over a period of not less than four nor more than thirty days.

Wherever these schools are being held results have been most gratifying. With only two instructors necessary for an approved school this very valuable opportunity for training is within reach of the smaller schools in our Coference. The one-teacher Cokesbury School is within reach of the smallest local school who cares to take advantage of this method of training its workers.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

To break up a cold overnight or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, sore throat or tonsilitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the purified and refined calomel compound tablet that gives you the effects of calomel and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

Get a family package, containing full directions, only 35 cents. At any drug store.

Epworth League

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

Recently the editor wrote to each district secretary in our Conference for a report of the League work in the districts. With one—only one—exception, all have responded. I wish that we had enough space to publish all the letters, but since we haven't, I will take the best parts of each one.

Jackson District.

Mrs. Stuart Dunning, of Canton, district secretary, writes that the work in her district is improving, as shown by the last quarterly report. More chapters reported than ever before, and the reports show better work being done. Two Mission Study classes have been formed and one "Book-a-Month Club" has been organized. More chapters are observing the covenants. There are six chapters rating 70 per cent, three rating 80 per cent, one rating 90 per cent, and the Mendenhall Epworth League reports 100 per cent efficient.

During the month of October an "Efficiency Institute" was held by the Leagues of Jackson at the Galloway Memorial Church. Rev. Wm. Graham Echols was the chief speaker and teacher of the week.

The Canton Epworth League had a Japanese tea, and $25 was raised for the League treasury. A number of the Leagues have paid their African Special pledge.

A study class of the Handbook is held monthly by the Leagues of Grace Church, Jackson.

Then Mendenhall League furnishes music for the Sunday night services

Meridian District.

The District Contest in the "Know Methodism" was held, and L. P. Lipscomb, of the Senior Chapter of Central Church, was declared the winner, with Miss Nancy Matheny only one-half point behind him.

Miss Lily Bec Phillips, secr ary of this district, reports a Junior and Senior League organized at De Soto, with Miss Mildred Moody president of the Junior League and Miss Auline McNeil president of the Senior League.

The Meridian Epworth League Union met at the Central Church for its January meeting. Six near-by Leagues were invited to be present, but only Vimville and Enterprise were there. The program was a consecration service, led by Mrs. A. F. Watkins. Many of the Leaguers pledged anew their loyalty to the League and League work. East End and Hawkins Memorial Leagues tied for the Senior attendance banner, and Thirty-fourth Avenue Juniors won the Intermediate-Junior banner.

Brookhaven District.

Miss Florida Williams, secretary, sends us this report of the League work in her district: There are 19 Leaguers in this district that are really doing some worth while work. Brookhaven League is contributing $50 towards a scholarship for a Whitworth College student, besides paying $20 on another girl's business course, and a pledge of $50 for the African Special. The Bogue Chitto League raised enough money to put a roof on their church, their African Special and a part of the $150 Whitworth Endowment Assessment for this district. Tylertown, Wesson and Crystal Springs are contributing to the Back Bay Mission at Biloxi. Summit League is planning to contribute to the new church, and also the African Special and Whitworth assessment. The Centenary League, McComb, is also a very wide-awake League. They have a nice Epworth League room for their business and devotional meetings, and also a room in the church for socials.

The Pike County Epworth League Union meets once a month, and has eight Leagues enrolled. At the last meeting they voted to send $20 to the Back Bay Mission fund and $20 to the Whitworth endowment.

Three Leagues have representatives who will enter the District Contest in the "Know Methodism Contest."

Because of other notes we will leave the reports of the other districts until another issue.

The editor takes this means of urging each district secretary to report the winner of the "Know Methodism Contest" in her district.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL NUMBER

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 73—No. 8. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3637.

HENRY T. CARLEY, D.D., Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1927. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

We are giving as much space this week as we can to the approaching meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, which convenes in Shreveport, La., on March 9 and continues through March 16. This gathering will represent that organization of women in the church which has made a marvelous record of faithfulness and efficiency in promoting the interests of the Kingdom of God. The Woman's Missionary Society has accomplished great things, in which it may justly take a holy pride, and it is going steadily forward to the accomplishment of still greater things. In economy of administration, breadth of vision in its program, and success in its undertakings it is unsurpassed by any other organization of the church. Shreveport and Louisiana will welcome most sincerely and heartily the seventeenth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council.

We are indebted to Mrs. Maud M. Turpin, editor of the Secular Press Bureau of our church, for furnishing us with the cuts and material used in this Council Number of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The preparation of this material is sufficient proof that Mrs. Turpin is "the right woman in the right place." She is one of the most gifted literary workers in the church.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council at Shreveport, La., March 9-16, draws near.

This is one of the great gatherings of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Shreveport is making elaborate preparations for its entertainment.

Approximately 200 delegates and visitors, including missionaries and deaconesses, are expected to attend. Every section of Southern Methodist territory in the United States and the eight foreign mission fields where the Council operates will be represented. A missionary constituency of about 300,000 members of women's, young people's and children's missionary societies will be represented in this gathering, which is the official organization of the womanhood of the church in relation to their missionary obligation and opportunity.

The approaching session is the first of the present quadrennium, and the first since the reorganization of the Board of Missions by the General Conference; and therefore will witness the lining up of the women to support the legislation recently enacted in regard to missions.

Council headquarters will be at the Washington and the Youree Hotels, and the daily sessions will be held in the First Methodist Church, of which Dr. Robert E. Goodrich is pastor. The church is within easy walking distance of the two hotels. Indications point to one of the best attended and most interesting sessions in the history of the Council.

The membership of the Council is composed of the officers and managers; candidate, literature, and organization secretaries; superintendents; and presidents and corresponding secretaries of the thirty-eight Annual Conferences of Southern Methodism, and of the deaconess workers' conference; and officers and women members of the Board of Missions. In addition to these are representatives of the Conference Missionary Societies of Brazil, China, Korea, and Mexico.

Members of the administrative staff of the Board of Missions are: Dr. W. G. Cram, general secretary; Dr. O. E. Goddard and Miss Esther Case, secretaries of foreign work; Dr. J. W. Perry and Mrs. J. W. Downs, secretaries of home work; Dr. E. H. Rawlings and Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, secretaries of education and promotion.

Women members of the Board of Missions included in the Council membership are: Mrs. J. T. Copeland, Baltimore; Mrs. C. W. Nichols, Jackson, Tenn.; Mrs. K. C. Childers, Clovis, N. Mex.; Mrs. Luke Johnson, Atlanta; Mrs. E. J. Harper, Corvallis, Oregon; Mrs. E. P. Peabody, Macon, Ga.; Mrs. Fred A. Lamb, Kansas City; Mrs. J. W. Mills, Houston, Tex.; Mrs. D. N. Bourne, Greenwood, S. C.; Mrs. Lee Britt, Suffolk, Va.; Mrs. R. E. L. Morgan, Clarendon, Tex.

Mrs. H. R. Steele is candidate secretary, and Miss Estelle Haskin, secretary in charge of literature. Superintendents are: Mrs. W. A. Newell, Mount Airy, N. C., social service; Miss Julia Lake Stevens, and Miss Althea Jones, of young people's and children's work, respectively.

Officers of the Woman's Missionary Council are: Mrs. F. F. Stephens, Columbia, Mo., president; Mrs. J. W. Perry, Nashville, vice president; Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, Nashville, treasurer; Mrs. F. S. Parker, Nashville, recording secretary.

The board of managers is as follows: Miss Mabel K. Howell, Scarritt College, Nashville; Mrs. J. C. Handy, Palestine, Tex.; Mrs. R. L. Hobdy, Union Springs, Ala.; Mrs. H. L. McClesky, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Mrs. Henty S. Owen, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss M. L. Gibson, Scarritt College, Nashville; Miss Daisy Davies, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. E. B. Chappell, Nashville; Mrs. Luke G. Johnson, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. W. F. Tillett, Nashville.

Pre-Council meetings will be held Wednesday, March 9, at 9 a. m. and 2 p. m., when the executive committee and workers' council will hold sessions. Wednesday afternoon, also, there will be a memorial service in honor of those who have died during the year, led by Miss M. L. Gibson, president emeritus of Scarritt College for Christian Workers. This will be followed by administration of Holy Communion, Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, assisted by local pastors, officiating.

The first open meeting of the Council will be at 8 o'clock Wednesday night, when Bishop W. B. Beauchamp will deliver an address on "The Present World Situation."

The approaching session promises to be of more than usual interest, not only on account of the noted men and women who will take part on the program, but because at this meeting plans will be made for celebrating in 1928 the "Jubilee" of the Woman's Missionary organization, which has been in successful operation since 1878. During the fifty years the women's work has been conducted by a Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, and Woman's Board of Home Missions, which later were merged into the Woman's Missionary Council (1911). The last time the Council met on Louisiana soil was in 1917, at New Orleans.

From a small beginning fifty years ago, woman's work for woman has grown until now the women of Southern Methodism through their organization are operating in eight foreign mission fields and are doing home mission work in social service and educational lines in the United States, employing in this branch alone probably 400 trained workers. There are on the foreign field about 150 missionaries working under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Council in educational, medical and evangelistic lines, in Africa, Brazil, China, Cuba, Japan, Korea, Siberia, and Mexico.

Approximately $1,000,000 annually is raised and expended by Southern Methodist women in maintenance and missionary work under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Council.

Monthly publications of the Woman's Missionary Council include the "Missionary Voice," with Mrs. E. B. Chappell as editor of the woman's section, and the "Young Christian Worker" for children, of which Miss Estelle Haskin is editor. In addition, there is a large output of leaflet literature, yearbooks, and pamphlets, edited by Miss Haskin. Missionary organizations include adult,

REV. ISAAC LOCKHART PEEBLES, M.D.

Rev. Isaac Lockhart Peebles was born in Forsythe, Ga., July 11, 1854, and died in Meridian, Miss., Dec. 2, 1926.

His parents died when he was a child, and he was reared in Neshoba County, Miss., by his uncle, a good man and an ardent and influential member of the Primitive Baptist Church. From his youth Isaac manifested an interest in the Methadist church and a desire to join that denomination, a desire strongly opposed by his uncle; but the boy persisted, and in due time was converted and became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Of his early educational advantages but little is known. They were doubtless very meager; but he was alert and studious and took advantage of every opportunity to learn. In view of the inadequacy of his early opportunities one cannot but marvel at the attainments in knowledge that marked his maturer years. His knowledge of English was comprehensive, thorough, and discriminating, and he acquired a very creditable acquaintance with Greek, Latin, and Hebrew, and one or more modern languages. He was well posted in philosophy, theology, and the sciences, and while zealously carrying on the work of the pastorate he undertook the study of medicine, which he pursued to completion and was awarded the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He was acquainted with Post-Apostolic and Medieval theology, well versed in church history, and an able champion of Wesleyan Arminianism.

These unusual attainments, we are impressed, were due not so much to exceptional intellectual ability as to an insatiable desire for learning, a veritable genius for hard work. He was laughingly charged by his brethren with an avowed determination to commit to memory the Bible and the English dictionary, and, certainly, his knowledge of these two books was extraordinary. He was an ambitious man—ambitious, not to be famous or rich, but to be wise and good.

He was licensed to preach in 1874, and admitted on trial into the Mississippi Annual Conference in 1878, at which time he was ordained a local deacon by Bishop Keener and appointed to Covington, La., giving two years of service in this circuit. In 1880 he was received into full connection and sent to Lake, where he remained four years. In December, 1884, he was ordained an elder by Bishop Keener, and at this Conference was appointed to Hattiesburg, serving this church for one year and going thence to Newton for a term of four years.

He was married in 1882 to Miss Katie Johnson, of Madison County, who died in 1883, leaving one child, a son bearing the name of his father. While serving the church in Hattiesburg, he was married in 1884 to Mrs. Mary Alice Bancroft, of Ellisville, Miss, the widow of Mr. George Bancroft of that place. To them were born six children, three boys, Walter, Thomas, and Howell, and three girls, Eunice (Mrs. S. D. McWilliams), Emmie (Mrs. A. L. Brothers), Cornelia (Mrs. H. L. Farr), these, with Isaac Peebles and George Bancroft, constituting the family of eight children.

Three years of faithful service (1889-1891) were given to Brandon; one to Edwards; three to Enterprise and Stonewall; one to Meridian, West End; two additional years to Hattiesburg; two to McComb City; four years to Wesson; four to Bolton; three to Meridian, South Side and Poplar Springs; and two additional years to Wesson.

Special mention should be made of three fruitful years (1912-1914) during which he served under the rather unusual appointment as "Doctrinal Evangelist." His commission was to travel throughout the Conference, preaching and teaching the doctrinal principles of Methodism, and assisting in evangelistic services. The labors of these three years bore striking evidence of his unusual mastery of the scriptural questions involved and his spirited and forceful advocacy of the doctrines and practices of his church.

As a pastor, Brother Peebles was a pattern of industry, and as a preacher, strong and earnest. He loved the great themes of the Bible and preached them with the fidelity and zeal of one who must give account. His spirit was evangelistic and his manner persuasive. There was no uncertain note in his utterances. He was sure of the correctness of his convictions and candid in the statement of his views. But he was gentle and kindly in his attitude toward those who differed from him and devoid of harshness in his judgments of others. Toward his brethren his manner was gracious and affectionate. His rugged face easily broke into a smile. He was a devout man, and seemed to rejoice always in a sense of his acceptance with God.

In the years of his active ministry he was a frequent contributer to the religious press, and in his later years was the author of a large number of little books, in which he discussed a variety of subjects of general and scientific interest. For the last ten years he was a familiar figure on the streets of Meridian and at the local railway stations, where he sold or gave away his books and talked to chance acquaintances of the love of God in Christ. Many a passing stranger will miss the tall, slender, pleasant-voiced old man, and recalling him with affectionate memory will, perchance, give heed to the good man's admonitions.

In December, 1916, worn by the labors of forty years, he was given the superannuate relation and his name placed upon the honor roll of the Conference. After his retirement from the active ministry he moved with his family to Meridian, where the remaining years of his life were spent.

His closing hours were filled with the quiet joy that comes with the sense of the presence of God. He has left to his church and to his loved ones the rich legacy of a blameless and useful life.

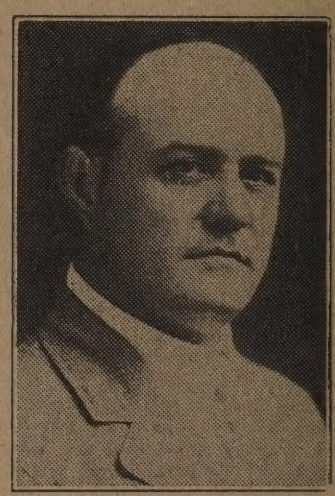
SHREVEPORT THE COUNCIL CITY.

"Shreveport, the City You Can't Resist"—is the way loyal citizens and publicity boosters describe this proud Southern city in the heart of the great Red River Valley of Northern Louisiana. And that is the way the Louisiana women who extended the invitation to make Shreveport the Council city for 1927 depicted her charms.

That Shreveport is making good on all her promises is evident from the elaborate preparations in progress for entertaining the Woman's Missionary Council, March 9-16.

Shreveport claims three distinctive elements which have contributed to her individuality and cultural life. Settled by New Englanders, situated in a State predominantly French, and peopled by a pure Anglo-Saxon race drawn from the Virginias, Carolinas and other South Atlantic



DR. W. C. CRAM,
General Secretary of the Board of Missions, Who Will Deliver an Address at the Council Meeting

States, these influences have so blended as to make Shreveport outstanding in the advantages that have classified her as a city of superior attraction for location and resources, both material and cultural.

Of special interest to Methodist women is the fact that Shreveport is the home of Centenary College, one of the most rapidly developing colleges of the South, which, under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has made great strides educationally and is an important factor in the city's advancement.

In addition to Centenary College, Shreveport's educational facilities include fifty-six public, private, night and business schools and colleges.

The religious life of Shreveport is represented by ninety-eight churches, whose average combined attendance totals over 50,000 each Sunday.

Shreveport's territory has a population in excess of a million persons within a radius of 100 miles. The actual population of the city, according to recent census, is 67,386.

Shreveport has two large daily newspapers, three weekly newspapers, and four magazines.

Shreveport has twelve trunk lines of railways leading into and going out of the city in all directions; and seventy-four motor busses and a splendid system of street railways cover the entire city.

Superior hotel accommodations have assisted in giving Shreveport the reputation of an ideal "convention city." Among her hotels are the Washington, the Youree, the Inn, and others.

Shreveport boasts 141 manufacturing concerns, and is said to be the largest fertilizer manufacturing point west of the Mississippi River. And here is located the largest glass-making plant in the world.

The Shreve Memorial Library adds materially to the educational and cultural development of the city.

The Shriners' Hospital for crippled children—the first one built in the United States—is located in Shreveport.

Shreveport's philanthropic activities are organized under the head of the Shreveport Federation of Community Work. Trained welfare workers are employed in the direction and maintenance of nine charitable institutions under the jurisdiction of the Federation.

WHO'S WHO AT THE COUNCIL MEETING.

Hosts and Officials.

Dr. R. E. Goodrich, pastor-host, now in his fourth year as pastor of First Methodist Church, Shreveport. Dr. Goodrich is a Texan by birth and has filled many important pastorates in Texas as well as in the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder, Shreveport

BISHOP W. B. BEAUCHAMP,
Recently Returned From Europe, One of the Council Speakers.

District. Dr. Holmes is a native of Mississippi. He was for four years presiding elder of the New Orleans District and is now entering his third year as presiding elder of the Shreveport District. Dr. Holmes and Dr. Goddard will officiate at the opening service in administering Holy Communion.

Mrs. F. S. Parker, Nashville, Tenn., wife of Dr. F. S. Parker, general secretary of the Epworth League Board, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Mrs. Parker has been secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council since its organization in 1910. She is a native of Mississippi, and her distinguished husband is a member of the Louisiana Conference.

Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton, Nashville, Tenn., treasurer of Woman's Missionary Council and Woman's Department, Board of Missions. Mrs. Fulton was formerly connected with Kidd-Key College at Sherman, Tex. She succeeded Mrs. F. H. E. Ross as treasurer, being elected in 1925.

Mrs. J. W. Downs, Nashville, Tenn., secretary of Home Missions, Woman's Department, Board of Missions. Until the present reorganization of Board of Missions, Mrs. Downs had charge of home mission work in territory west of the Mississippi River. She was elected in 1918.

Miss Esther Case, Nashville, Tenn., secretary of Foreign Missions, Woman's Department, Board of Missions. Prior to her identification with the work of the Missionary Council, Miss Case was for many years missionary to Mexico. She came into administrative office in 1917.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Nashville, Tenn., secretary of Education and Promotion, Woman's Department, Board of Missions. Mrs. Lipscomb has been identified with the work since 1913.

Mrs. E. B. Chappell, Nashville, Tenn., editor of woman's section of the Missionary Voice, official missionary organ of Southern Methodism; elected in 1915.

Mrs. Hume R. Steele, Nashville, Tenn., candidate secretary, Woman's Department, Board of Missions, and first candidate secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council. Mrs. Steele has been connected with the Council in an official capacity since 1914.

Miss Estelle Haskin, Nashville, Tenn., secretary of literature. Miss Haskin is a native of North Carolina. Prior to her present connection she taught in the missionary training school at Nashville, and was a pioneer in developing missionary and social service work for Negroes. She is author of several books on missions and is editor of the Young Christian Worker and of the leaflet literature of the Council.

Mrs. W. A. Newell, Mount Airy, N. C. superintendent of social service. Mrs. Newell has specialized on lines of social welfare work and is considered an authority on such matters in her own State, North Carolina, and throughout the bounds of the Southern Methodist Church. She has held her present position since 1920.

Miss Julia Lake Stevens, Nashville, Tenn., superintendent of young people's work. Miss Stevens is a native of Grenada, Miss., and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Stevens, of Grenada. She served as missionary to Japan for three years, being connected with the Hiroshima school for girls. She assumed her present duties, July 1, 1926.

Miss Althea Jones, Houston, Tex., and Nashville, superintendent of children's work. Miss Jones for eight years had charge of this branch of missionary work under the Council, and last year when the work was made a part of the department of education and promotion of the Board of Missions, she was elected to the superintendency and removed to Mission Board headquarters in Nashville, July 1, 1926.

THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

young people's and children's missionary societies.

A high point of interest in the approaching meeting will be the consecration of deaconesses and missionaries. These ceremonies are always interesting and inspiring. This year will see a class of thirty-two, including five deaconesses, seven home missionaries, and twenty foreign missionaries. Deaconesses will be consecrated on Sunday during the session, by Bishop S. R. Hay, following the annual sermon by Bishop Hay, who will also officiate at the consecration of the missionaries, Monday night, March 14.

Daily noonday devotional lectures by Dr. Edmund D. Soper, dean of the School of Religion of Duke University, together with addresses on various phases of missions by Dr. J. E. McAfee, of Summit, N. J.; Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, of the Phelps-Stokes Foundation, New York; Dr. W. G. Cram, of Nashville, and Dr. Ora Minor, of Southern Methodist University, constitute interesting and important items.

One night program during the session will be in charge of Scarritt students, and there will be a place on the program for missionaries and deaconesses to give an interpretation of their work, and for nationals to tell what Christianity has meant to them, and the opportunity that awaits the gospel message in their respective lands.

Rivaling the consecration of new missionary workers in interest will be the impressive service in which the missionaries who have served so long and faithfully will take the emeritus relation and receive their certificates of honorable discharge from active service.

The president's message, the vice president's, report of the treasurer, of the superintendents and secretaries, together with the presentation of the estimates of amounts required for support of Council missions, and taking of the pledge, will all mark bright spots in the work of the Council.

Probably second to nothing else in interest will be the official announcement of the glorious completion of the sacred task—that of raising more than $500,000 for the Bennett Memorial Fund to erect at Scarritt College for Christian Workers a worthy memorial for a beloved leader. The report of President J. L. Cuninggim, of Scarritt, will be heard with interest.

MISS ESTELLE HASKIN,
Secretary of Literature.

Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor-host, and Mrs. J. E. Allen, president of the Woman's Missionary Society of First Church, assisted by local Methodists and civic and religious bodies of Shreveport, are leaving nothing undone that will contribute to the success of the approaching session. Following is a list of the local committee chairmen:

General chairman, Mrs. W. B. Ledbetter; Ways and Means, Mrs. A. J. Peavy; Homes, Mrs. W. F. French; Flowers, Mrs. R. T. Moore; Church Arrangement, Mrs. Abel Bliss; Lunches, Mrs. J. L. Scales; Special Fellowship Luncheon, Mrs. George Sexton; Publicity, Mrs. G. S. Sexton; Pages, Miss Jen Moore; Transportation, Mrs. Bickham Dickson.

Social plans include a great thousand-plate fellowship luncheon at the Washington Hotel on the opening day, at which time the Council officers, missionaries and deaconesses will be introduced and an inspirational program given; and a drive through the city on Saturday afternoon, followed by a tea at the home of Mrs. R. T. Moore, at which the women of the missionary societies of First Church will be hostesses.

HOTELS AND RAILROAD RATES.

The Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will hold its seventeenth annual meeting in the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., March 9-16, 1927.

The calendar for Wednesday, March 9, is as follows: 11 a. m., Executive Committee meeting at the Washington Hotel; 2:30 p. m., Workers' conference in the church; 4 p. m., the Memorial Service, followed by the celebration of Holy Communion; 8 p. m., address by Bishop W. B. Beauchamp.

The first business session will be called to order Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. The program for the succeeding days is full of interest and inspiration.

The Washington Hotel has been selected as headquarters for Council members, and the Youree Hotel for visitors.

Reduced railway rates according to the Certificate Plan have been granted. This means that a full one-way fare of not less than 67 cents must be paid for a ticket to Shreveport and a certificate secured which will entitle the holder to a half-rate for the return ticket over the same route; provided not less than two hundred and fifty (250) regularly issued and properly dated certificates are presented in time to be counted and duly validated.

The required number of certificates (250) properly signed by the Council Secretary must be in hand before the railway agent can validate one. When conditions are met, he will validate a certificate any day including and after March 9, except Sunday.

The dates of sale of tickets except from the more remote points are March 6-12, inclusive. From these remote points the dates of sale are as follows: From Colorado (except Julesburg), Montana and New Mexico, March 5-11, inclusive; from Arizona, California and Oregon, March 4-10, inclusive.

The final date of honoring certificates is March 19.

Publicity agents are requested to take note of these dates and urge all who are to attend to purchase tickets to Shreveport on the proper selling dates, also, to urge those who attend, to travel by rail, that there may be no shortage in the attendance.

MRS. F. F. STEPHENS, President.
MRS. FITZGERALD S. PARKER,
Recording Secretary.

A TELEGRAM FROM WINNFIELD, LA.

"Good margin beyond Winnfield's missionary quota raised first hour.

"P. M. CARAWAY, P. C."

(This telegram was received Monday morning, February 21.)

MISS MABEL K. HOWELL,
Professor of Missions, Scarritt College for Christian Workers.

If Jesus Came Now What Would He Say About the Church's Treatment of Her Superannuated Preachers?

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary of the Board of Finance

The Church's lay members are not indifferent to the deprivations of superannuated preachers. They are not informed on the subject. I do not believe that honest-to-goodness men and women would let these old warriors suffer as they do, if the pastors would make the facts known. We active preachers are ashamed to tell the truth about it, I reckon.

1. Think of 1000 used-up preachers. They are old, physically disabled, over 400 of them either blind or deaf, many totally paralyzed, some are victims of tubercular troubles, and very few have sufficient strength to do any kind of work. They have been superannuated by the Church which promised to care for them in old age. Along with these you might also think of 1,500 widows of preachers in a similar plight.

2. The present average annual per capita amount paid the superannuates from all sources combined, is $365; and to widows of preachers, $250. In many cases that $365 must support two, the man and his aged wife. Often the widow of a preacher has herself and children to support on that $250. Is it any wonder that in many instances there is appalling need? If the people really knew the facts as I know them, they would raise the Endowment double quick.

Why don't you lay members do something about this thing? Maybe your pastor is not urging you to pay your Charge's quota for the Endowment, because he fears you don't want him talking about money so much. If this is true, go to your pastor and PINCH him. Tell him to wake up, that he has you all wrong, that you want to do your part for this wonderful Cause, and that you are ready to help in every possible way. If he doesn't get busy, keep on PINCHING HIM.

"Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but when I am coming, another steppeth down before me!"

"FLAMING YOUTH."

By Rev. James H. Felts.

The day of youth, "flaming youth," youth will not be denied, inquiring youth, the mind of youth, the ideals of youth, doubting youth, the viewpoint of youth, growing youth, the problems of youth, educated youth, youth and the church, youth, youth, youth. Where is all this noise coming from? It would silence a saw-mill. Surely an army of cats, all with nine lives, all the nine lives being offered at once, is advancing in high—Jazz—Lizzie led.

Who has sinned that our boys and girls are so lit up?

Fond parenthood has slipped a cog. Their thunder has been stolen. The monotonous drone of their voices, lauding the virtues and brilliancy of their ordinary progeny to long-suffering friends, is lost in the medley of voices crying aloud and sparing not, youth, Youth, Youth, magnificent youth, self-rising, self-starting, super-high-ferlutin youth. What's it all about?

True we haven't learned who hit Billy Patterson, or the age of Ann. We understand Billy was hit real hard and that Ann was as old as she said she was. A woman is always that old. The only sure way of knowing her age is to count the coats of paint she wears. There is also some doubt as to the number of inhabitants on Mars. One highly scientific Frenchman waxes bold to doubt if Mars is inhabited. He even intimates that the ditches discovered are pure figments of the imagination of excited astronomers. Think of it!

But youth is with us. We should easily know where all this noise about these lime-light figures comes from. The "look and listen" sign is at every corner. "On this line" is not half so frazzled as "flaming youth." The first thing we know some one is going to think he is it. True, this writer is no longer classed with verdant youth, nor is he old and deaf and blind. He had a very good time yesterday. He is having a better time to-day. He expects to have the best time to-morrow. His observation is that youth is no bigger, better, brighter or noisier than rampant youth of yesterday. Youth is not even less serious or more reckless than yesterday. Larger numbers are in the currents. The implements of war, peace, pleasure, profit and progress are more manifest. The ox-cart, like the "One-Hoss Shay," ran till it fell. Brief displays of crinoline appeared at times. The old wagon, drawn by pestle-tailed mules, passed as a carry-all for youth. It also gave glimpses of garments seldom mentioned in polite society. And the buggy, including the "hug-me-tight," has about passed. It was preached against and about. Youth was riding to the devil. Now we are doing it with gas. We have the same old road-hogs, the same selfishness, the same reckless lime-light seekers. Just a few more ways of being a fool. That's all.

But the noise, the noise! Who's making it? Matured men and women of certain and uncertain age. Take the Memphis meeting of a year ago. It was a farce, pure and simple, so far as being a young people's meeting. It was called, run, led, directed, dominated, including the "findings," by men of many years. I was there. I attended every meeting. I "listened in" where young people were really in action. They were having a good time as usual. They made as much noise in the Chisca Hotel as an "Irish Wake!" At the Presbyterian church, where we were "building a Christian community" (?), it was as laughable as a small boy losing his pants in the presence of company. I was there. The man presiding was "gray as a mink." The man leading might have been a grandfather. And most of the noise came from the old bucks.

This writer is often before high school students, goes to their games, knows many of them personally. He has yet his first boy or girl to meet who is essentially different. It is the same bunch, dressed differently, but not more alarmingly so than their parents. Not even their language differentiates them from Whittier's barefoot boy in a way more marked than obtains among their parents. Perhaps a few girls smoke—their mothers or grandmothers dipped snuff at the same age. There now!

But they are leaving the church! Who said so? This delta country is not noted for church-going. Yet I dare say the per cent of youth attending church is as great, or greater, than formerly. Our population has grown. Nor is this state of affairs peculiar to the delta. While Dr. Arthur Moore was preaching at Galloway Memorial, Jackson, recently, I looked over the congregation. Youth was there in large numbers. And the response to the gospel call, as usual, was largely young people. Dr. Moore was preaching a full gospel. I have made like observations elsewhere to the same effect. In Montreal, Canada, last summer, I worshiped at the United church on Sunday evening. Throngs of young people present. My candid judgment is that wherever preachers are doing honest work and preaching honest-to-goodness gospel the response is encouraging. Theories, a make-believe gospel, an assumed scholarship, a wiser-than-thou attitude, question marks before every premise, a mutilated Bible, soap and water salvation, lectures on Browning and Shakespeare—certainly youth will be indifferent. So will other people. That kind of gospel can be gotten better elsewhere. Children intuitively sense fraud.

And the effect to make the church a playground will fail, ought to fail. It is a place of worship. When it ceases to be so used its place is no longer justified. Practically every attack, and some of them are vicious, made on the church has been on the "milk and cider" variety. Youth and age alike are well fed up on burlesque, long-winded dissertations on "salvation by soup," and "social uplift." Face-lifting is more successful. A painted stove is a poor substitute for "red hot" in cold weather. I blame no man for declining to attend church when the appeal is no higher than a movie show or a maiden lady lecturing on the "care of children." Matured people must have sanity and faith if they expect their children to live sanely and decently.

"The Gospel for an Age of Doubt" is still Jesus Christ and him crucified. Substitutes are seldom popular and never profitable. They who dare preach a full gospel and live it command respect. Nor will they have just ground for pessimism. When we quit shooting hot-air-guns, quit trying to paint the sky a deeper blue and the sun a more flaming red, and feed our people on meat instead of sea-foam and imagination served by short-tailed monkeys on age-old skeletons, the noise will largely subside. Folks are still folks. New clothes don't change the skin. The same old sin is killing, the same old gospel is making alive, Preach the Word.

The people in a drought section had gathered at the church to pray for rain. They called on the oldest and best loved man in the community to lead the prayer. "Lord," said the old man, "send us a south wind. Send us a south wind for three days, we pray thee, for Christ sake. Amen." The people were amazed. They complained. "Do you call that a prayer for rain?" they said. "Yes," said the man of few words, "if the Lord will send us a south wind for three days, the devil himself can't keep it from raining!"

If we will preach the gospel, not the old gospel nor the new gospel, but the gospel of our Lord, the devil himself can't keep the church from growing. "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." The same gospel that saves a grown man will save our youth.

GROUP MEETING AT PORT GIBSON.

At our Missionary Institute held at Fayette, Vicksburg District, it was agreed that we hold a group meeting of the pastors and officials of the following charges at Port Gibson on the 3rd day of February, 1927: Crawford Street and Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg; Utica, Hermanville, Rocky Springs, Harrison, Nebo, Oak Ridge, Fayette, and Port Gibson. Accordingly, on the date mentioned, the pastors and officials to the number of fifty-nine assembled in the auditorium of the Methodist church at Port Gibson at 10 o'clock a. m. All the charges of the group were represented except Nebo, Oak Ridge and Fayette. Brother Smith and the officials of the Fayette church were providentially prevented from attending.

The meeting was called to order by our presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, who called on the writer to act as secretary. Rev. J. Early Gray, of Vicksburg, was called on to conduct the devotional exercises, after which Brother Leggett outlined the purpose of the meeting, to-wit, the discussion of ways and means of educating our people to the needs of the church, and especially with reference to the Missionary Special and the benevolences. He said, in effect, that the church attained its mission just in the measure that the membership is educated to its needs; that the Master had a world vision, and if we have a like vision, local conditions will not, in any manner, circumscribe our vision of the world's need.

The first subject discussed was that of "The Cultivation Program and Its Value to the Church," by Rev. G. H. Thompson. Brother Thompson's presentation of the subject was very practical and helpful. He emphasized the point that people are not interested in what they do not know about. He urged the preachers and laymen to acquaint their people thoroughly with the need of the church and their responsibility therefor, if they would secure results.

The next subject discussed was that of "The Laymen's Responsibility in This Movement," by Mr. H. H. Crisler. Mr. Crisler gave a most excellent talk, emphasizing the point that the laymen should not regard it so much as a responsibility as an opportunity.

At the conclusion of Mr. Crisler's talk, Rev. Otto Porter, pastor of the Port Gibson church, made a motion that the meeting adjourn for luncheon, to meet again at 1 o'clock. In a few well chosen words he welcomed the visitors and invited them to the basement of the church, where, he said, the ladies had luncheon prepared, sufficient for all, which was soon verified.

The meeting assembled again at ' o'clock. The presiding elder announced hymn 101, after the singing of which he presented Rev. Otto Porter, who discussed the subject, "How to Organize the Country Church for the Every-Member Campaign." Brother Porter's talk was along the line of his own experience as a pastor of a country charge. He stressed the necessity of the pastor's being organized himself before he could hope to organize his charge.

At the conclusion of Brother Porter's speech, opportunity was given for a free-for-all discussion. Several good talks were made, and a number of valuable suggestions were made toward making this the best year in the history of the Vicksburg District. An atmosphere of optimism seemed to pervade the meeting. There was not a discordant or pessimistic note heard during all the discussions of the day. The meeting was in every way a success.

A motion was made and carried that the meeting constitute itself a permanent organization for the purpose of holding group meetings once each quarter. The motion was carried, and the following officers were elected: President, Rev. Otto Porter; vice president, Rev. J. Early Gray; secretary, Mrs. Griffin, of Vicksburg.

Rev. J. Early Gray offered a motion expressing to the pastor and the ladies of the Port Gibson church the thanks and appreciation of the visitors for the hospitality and delightful luncheon which they served. Luncheon was served in the basement of the church by the ladies themselves, and this hour within itself was sufficient to make the day a most delightful one.

THEIR TELEPHONE.

Two spiders stretched a telephone
From a pear to an apple tree,
Then sat down at either end
To see what they could see.

"Hello!" said spider Number One
To spider Number Two.
"A fly is coming down your way;
Now see what you can do."

"Speak louder," answered Number One;
"I can't hear what you say."
"Too late," replied his crafty friend;
"The fly has gone away."

"Hello! Hello! Dear me," he said,
"I wonder what's the matter!"
Then turned his eyes around to see
What made the dreadful clatter.

A bird in flying through the air
Without the least intention
Had brushed its wings against the wire
And broken connection.

A SURPRISE FOR TWO.

When Sally Ball left her Northern home to visit her uncle in the far South it was the 12th of February. So she bought at the station a blue-and-pink valentine to send to Jean Harvey, her best friend. But in the excitement of the long trip she forgot all about the valentine. She did not remember it until the morning of the 14th, when she had reached her journey's end.

"And now it's too late," mourned Sally. She put the valentine back into its envelope and tried to play with the toy aeroplane tthat had been her father's parting gift, but it was not much fun to play by herself. Uncle Dan and Aunt Margaret had no children, and already Sally was beginning to feel lonely.

It was the queerest weather for February! Flowers were growing fast, and the air was like June. "At home, now," thought Sally, "snow is on the ground, and Jean has on a coat instead of a short-sleeved dress." The thought made her a little homesick.

She wandered into the back sitting-room. The windows were open, and the yard was full of birds; but there was no one for her to play with out in the yard. Sally decided that she would send Janet's valentine, anyway. She sat down on the carpet under the window, with pen and red ink, and decorated the inner envelope.

"If I had a real flying machine instead of a toy one," she thought, "Jean's valentine would get to her before night."

She found a piece of string and tied the envelope to the aeroplane, just for fun. She wanted to see how well it could carry a valentine across the room. Then she wound up the little machine, held it high and let it go. It started off with a brave whiz.

But it went further than she intended. She had headed it in the wrong direction; instead of flying across the room, it skimmed lightly over the window-sill and went droning and buzzing out among the bees.

For a moment Sally was so astonished that she sat perfectly still on the floor. Then she scrambled up and rushed to the window. She thought she heard a faint whirring in the distance, but there was no sign of the aeroplane.

She searched all the morning for the lost toy. Once she started to cross the hedge and look in the yard of a plain little house that stood with its back to Uncle Dan's; but she was too bashful to do that. It seemed a pity to worry her aunt, and so after a while she gave up the search without saying anything about it. After that she felt lonelier than ever.

That afternoon Aunt Margaret sent her on an errand to the next street. As she walked slowly home, she kept looking round for a playmate. It did not seem strange when all at once some one called clearly, "Hello, there!"

Sally stopped short. Presently the vines of an upper porch parted, and a head poked out. "Hello!" said the voice again.

"Hello, yourself," Sally replied. She saw that the head belonged to a boy.

"Come up here," the boy commanded. "There are some steps at the side of the house." Sally climbed the outside stairway and reached the porch. The boy sat in a wheel chair near a table. "I'm Ben Fletcher," he said.

Sally told her own name and shook hands with him gravely.

"Did you get valentines?" Ben asked.

"Two," Sally replied. She made a move toward the stairs. "Shall I show them to you?"

"Wait a minute," the boy said. "Ask me if I got one."

Sally looked round her. The porch was quite bare; there was no sign of his ever having had anything to play with. "Did you get one?" she asked obediently.

Ben's pale face shone. "I surely did," he said. "Not a boy in this town has a valentine to beat mine!"

He drew a toy flying-machine out of a box on the table and held it up.

At first Sally could not think of a word to say; was it her toy flying-machine?

"That's fine," she said a little faintly. "But how—how did you know it was a valentine?"

Ben dived into the box again. "Oh, it said so," he answered. He showed her an envelope with "To My Valentine" written on it. "There's a fancy thing inside," he added.

"I'll tell you all about it," Ben went on. "This morning I was lying here wishing I had something to play with, when all at once, zoom! something began to buzz in the distance. Then in a minute the sound was right in the vines of the porch, and there was this jolly thing whizzing away like mad. I soon helped it make a landing, you'd better believe." He began to wind the flying-machine. "I don't know who sent it, but it's going to surprise mother when she comes in. It's been flying all day at the end of a string. I can't walk, you see."

"Oh!" said Sally. She gazed at Ben, and her cheeks turned red. She forgot to think about the lost aeroplane. "I'm going back and ask my aunt if I may stay and play with you," she said, and hurried away.

She was out of breath when she reached Uncle Dan's house and told the story. "Yes, you may play with him," Aunt Margaret said. "He lives just behind us, and he's had a hard time, poor little chap! But what about your flying-machine, Sally? He will be willing to give it up, I am sure."

Sally's eyes grew wider and brighter than Ben's had been. "Aunt Margaret," she said, "he can't walk a step, and I've got two perfectly good legs. I wouldn't let him give it up!"—Barbara M. Carew, in the Youth's Companion.

DOGS HAVE OWN LANGUAGE.

In "The Reasoning Faculty in Dogs," an article published in the Scribner's Magazine, J. Ranken Towse, from many years of observation, asserts that dogs not only can tell their master when they're hungry, but have a canine language by which they communicate with each other.

"In my English home, many years ago, there were two dogs who were almost inseparable companions. One, a fine bull-terrier, a veritable Hotspur, feared nothing; the other, a thoroughbred Skye, was a bit of a phenomenon in his way, for, though alert and inquisitive, as most of his tribe, he was an arrant and shameless coward. He would hunt rats enthusiastically, but could not be induced to tackle them. He insulted every dog he met, and then fled ignominously, trusting to his fleetness of foot. With the bull in attendance, he was, of course, assured of efficient protection. But occasionally he made excursions on his own account. And sometimes he fell into peril. On one occasion he was chased home by a big yellow dog who could have made short work of him. Soon afterward I saw him and the bull-terrier apparently in close colloquy. Presently they started off together, and I, out of curiosity, followed them. By their actions they were evidently tracking the yellow dog, whom they found sunning himself in front of the village public house. Instantly the bull had him by the throat, and would unquestionably soon have killed him had I not interfered. No case could easily be clearer. The Skye had sought out his champion, had somehow informed him of what had happened, and invoked his assistance. How he could possibly have done so, except by some sort of intelligent speech, I leave for others to detrmine. I can only set down the unvarnished facts."—Our Dumb Animals.

A FOREIGN MISSIONARY'S CHALLENGE TO THE HOME CHURCH.

By Rev. O. E. Goddard, D.D.

Rev. W. B. Lee, of Sao Paulo, Brazil, has contributed $100 on the Million Dollar Special for January and February. Brother Lee throws out the question as to how many others will contribute a like sum. I am sending his challenge to the preachers of our church. Would it be possible to find seven thousand preachers who would give $100 each for this campaign? Not every preacher can give this much, and some can give vastly more, but if our seven thousand preachers would respond with an average amount of $100 and meet Brother Lee's challenge, it would make an aggregation of $700,000.

Let the bishops, the connectional officers, the presiding elders and all consider this challenge seriously, and let each man who can give over $100 feel free to do so, and thus make up for others who cannot possibly contribute $100. If Brother Lee, on the meager salary of a missionary, with a family as large as he has, can contribute $100, surely the major part of our preachers can contribute that much.

Will not each pastor be an example of sacrificial living and sacrificial giving for his own church? We cannot expect our people to go beyond the pastor in liberality and devotion to this cause. This is the time to show your loyalty and liberality.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION OR RELIGIOUS EDUCATION?

By Rev. W. E. Hogan.

What is the difference in meaning between Christian Education and Religious Education? This question is frequently asked, and numerous statements of the difference have been written. A new Board of another church recently had to give itself a name and it offered the following in explanation of why it named itself a Board of Christian Education rather than a Board of Religious Education:

"Perhaps it would be well for us to explain why we prefer the term Christian Education to the term Religious Education. Christian Education, in our judgment, connotes all that is included in the term Religious Education plus the inclusion of the colleges and the other institutions of higher learning in a unified program of education. Christian Education we would, therefore, define as the process by which we learn to live with and for each other and unto God as revealed in Christ and as interpreted by the Holy Spirit, including the service of all the agencies engaged in this work from the home to the college, the professional and graduate schools, and universities."

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Big Brothers class, Greenville, Miss., had an attendance of 170 on the first Sunday in February.

Dr. W. G. Cram, General Secretary of the Board of Missions, spent a busy day in Mississippi last Sunday, speaking at Pascagoula, Biloxi, and Gulfport.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, remains practically the same as for several weeks past. No complications have arisen, which is taken as a most hopeful sign.

Dr. Elmer T. Clark, representing the Board of Missions, concluded a tour of Louisiana on last Sunday, during which, in company with Rev. J. G. Snelling, Conference Missionary Secretary, he visited most of the principal towns of the State.

The work as a whole in the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, of which Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., is presiding elder, moves along well. Brother Doss paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week.

Mr. Samuel Edwin Virden, of Jackson, Miss., announces the marriage of his daughter, Annie Sullivan, to Mr. Hugh McDonald Morse, on Wednesday, Feb. 16. The Advocate extends all good wishes to this fine young couple.

Rev. Alonzo Monk, Jr., general evangelist, is in the midst of a successful revival at East End Methodist Church, Nashville, Tenn. Dr. Monk's home address is 411 Southwestern Life Building, Dallas, Tex.

The First Methodist Church, this city, began the every-member canvass last Sunday for the mission special. Approximately $1,000 has been raised. Rev. J. B. Peters is the hard-working and successful pastor of First Church.

The editor of the Advocate regrets being out of the office when Brother J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., called one day last week. Brother Streater is one of the "grand old men" of Methodism in Mississippi.

A delightful membership reception was given at the Felicity Methodist Church, this city, on Friday evening of last week. In spite of disagreeable weather, there was a large attendance. Rev. R. L. Armstrong is the efficient pastor of Felicity.

Mrs. H. P. Lewis, wife of our pastor at Ruleville, Miss., underwent a serious operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, on Feb. 18. She stood the ordeal well, and, at last reports, her condition was satisfactory.

Mrs. A. W. Turner, wife of Rev. A. W. Turner, Legislative Director of the Louisiana Legislative Prohibition League, recently underwent a serious operation at a hospital in Shreveport, La. She is slowly regaining her strength, and her loved ones expect her to be fully restored to health.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, pastor of the West Monroe Methodist Church, West Monroe, La., has been holding a "Wesley Biblical and Missionary Institute," the graduating exercises of which were held last Sunday, with a fine program for the occasion. There were twenty-five members of the graduating class.

The list for the second round of quarterly conferences of the Baton Rouge District, Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder, received too late for publication this week, shows the following as the first appointments of the round: Ponchatoula, Feb. 27; Amite, Feb. 27; Zachary (Q. C., Apr. 13), Mar. 6; Keener Memorial, March 6. The list in full will appear next week.

Rev. H. L. Johns, our pastor at Natchitoches, La., who recently underwent a serious operation in this city, has returned to his work, still somewhat weak, but steadily improving. During his absence beautiful new pews were installed in the church. All departments of the work are in fine shape.

A telephone message from Abbeville, La., brings the fine news that one of the greatest meetings in the history of the town has just been held by Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist. There were many additions to the church, some of the most prominent men of the community applying for membership. Brother Thomas is one of our most effective evangelists.

Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, has paid in full its Centenary pledge, the balance due having recently been contributed by Mrs. R. S. Crichlow in memory of her father, the late Rev. R. A. Davis, one of the honored and distinguished superannuate members of the Louisiana Conference.

A delightful reception was given at the New Orleans District parsonage on Friday afternoon of last week, Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Harper entertaining a large number of representatives from all the Methodist churches. A fine program of music and talks was given, and delicious refreshments were served. The district parsonage committee assisted in receiving.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, in sending in the announcements of his second round of quarterly conferences, writes: "Missionary vision and evangelistic passion seem to characterize both preachers and people. Our mission special quota will be met—definite plans are laid for collections in full."

Rev. John W. Ramsey, pastor of the Chunky charge, Mississippi Conference, writes: "Everything going well on this charge—large congregations at every church, 100 attending prayer meeting in Chunky, pastor's salary paid monthly at each church, new church building just completed at Meehan, Advocate proposition already put over at some churches, and will be at others."

Rev. W. F. Roberts, pastor of the Ida-Hosston charge, Louisiana Conference, is having a good year. The pastor's salary has been increased from $1,200 to $1,700, and is being paid monthly. Three Epworth Leagues have been organized—two Senior and one Intermediate. Two mission schools have been held, and the pastor is confident the full amount of the mission special will be secured.

The State headquarters of the Mississippi Woman's Christian Temperance Union announces that February has been a "big month" in the work of the organization. Two speakers of national prominence, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, have toured the State, Mrs. Armor speaking in the northern part and Mrs. Atkins in the southern part. The State president, Mrs. Nellie Nugent Somerville, held two institutes—one at Pelahatchie and one at Gulfport.

Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Newton District, Mississippi Conference, writes: "With only two exceptions, the attendance upon the first round of quarterly conferences was unusually good, and weather conditions prevented the attendance at those two. Good reports by pastors and stewards give an encouraging outlook for the year. Good progress is being made on the Missionary Special, and where they have already asked for the money, they have gotten it. The total increase in the pastors' salaries will approximate $2,500. We have had 2,148 accessions on profession of faith during the three preceding years, and a net gain membership in the district of 2,769. We are trying to make this year the best of the four. We have a fine group of earnest, consecrated preachers as co-workers in the Newton District."

TO THE PASTORS OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: When this issue of the Advocate reaches you, you will either have finished your "Every-Member Canvass" in the Mission Special or you will be in the midst of the canvass. I trust under your leadership that the Missionary Committee will really make this an "Every-Member Canvass," that is, that every member of the church will be solicited for a contribution for the maintenance of our missionary work. It will not only result in doing what we have the privilege to do for the Mission Special, but it will greatly stimulate the church in doing all the other work that is to be done during the year. I am making an earnest appeal that you make your report at the earliest possible moment, using the quadruplicate blank that was furnished you, and that your remittance be sent, and as soon as the canvass is finished, to Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, Meridian, Miss. I am very anxious that our Conference hold the record that it made last year, to be the first to pay out, but especially in order that the Board of Missions may know just what to count on, and furthermore that the money may soon be in the mission fields. Finally, let us be very prayerful in these days of our great privilege. Assuring you of my continued good wishes, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Missionary Secretary.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A., Retired.

Number 5.

Camp Hamilton was situated four or five miles east of Lxington, Ky., in the heart of the famous Blue Grass region. Fine horses, chivalorus men, and beautiful women in that veritable Garden of Eden, made a picture in memory that time has not effaced.

We had opportunity to see them in all their splendor. General Breckenridge, who had commanded the corps, was succeeded by General Wilson. A grand review of all the troops was given in honor of General Breckenridge when he relinquished command, and the elite were there, for Lexington was the General's old home, and no man was ever more popular among his own people. What a concourse it was! I shall not attempt to describe it, but if I had a visitor from another world and wanted to show him humanity at its finest, I should feel satisfied could I let him look on that assemblage.

This was the first big military review I had ever seen, and it stirred all the martial instincts that I had inherited from my ancestors, from Sigurd Ring, the Viking, down through the centuries. Great masses of men in uniform moving as one in perfect alignment, the shouts of command, bugle calls, martial music, the flashing and clashing of arms, troops of cavalry going by, first in a trot, then circling round and by again in a gallop, massive field guns drawn by six and eight splendid horses going by in a roar that shook the earth—picture all this in such a setting on an ideal October day, and you have a scene worth going round the world to witness.

Then I began to understand something of the meaning and power of military discipline. This is the kind of training that develops heroes—men who count not their lives dear to themselves when a cause is at stake. It sends the blood surging to the brain and genders big ideas and inspires the will to achievement. It is the experience that puts more into a day than can come into a decade of insipid, ditch water existence. It is this kind of thing that shakes a man loose from non-essentials and brings out the real values of life. There is much sighing and sadness over the horrors of war, but it is not done by the men in the hot of the fight. It is done by those on the side lines who have no part in the game. The soldier says, "I am only sorry that I have but one life to give."

Here is a different story. Just after payday, two husky young Mississippians were riding on a street car in Lexington. The car was crowded and some were standing. A lady entered the car, and one of the Mississippians, like the gentleman he was, rose and offered her his seat. Before the lady could sit down a Negro man slipped into it. That was where he made a tactical error. Signals passed between the two; in less time than it takes me to tell it, that Negro found himself lying flat in the street while the car sped on its way. At the next street one of the lads stopped the car, and in a voice which silenced all protest, said, "Here is where all Negroes get off." And they did, "toot sweet." Taking a stand at the door, no Negro was permitted to enter the car. When one essayed to enter he was waved away, and one of the boys gave the conductor a fare. This was a great news story, and the Associated Press sent it all over the country. Then trouble began for the boys. Right away letters began to come in, and the stream grew till their mail rivaled Ponzi's in flush times. And such letters! I never knew there were so many foolish women in the world. From every section of the country came letters, approving of course, but they did not stop at that. Each of the lads had at least fifty letters from women who were ready to marry such a "hero," "sight unseen!" Fortunately we left Lexington in a few days, or the boys might have been forced to marry in self-defense.

MEETING OF DELTA MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Delta Methodist Ministers' Association met with Rev. L. A. McKeown, of Hollandale, Miss., on Tuesday, February 8. This was the third meeting of the group. There were five preachers present. The general topic for discussion was, "Moral Decay." After each of those present had discussed the matter from various points of view, it was voted to hold the next meeting at Greenville, with Rev. C. A. Parks as host. The topic for discussion for that meeting will be, "The Relative Value of Extra-church Activities." The association will meet Tuesday afternoon, March 8.

Our association is in its infancy, but it is a rather lusty baby. We hope to have it grow and develop in numerical strength and influence.

THE EDUCATIONAL SITUATION IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Board of Education of the Louisiana Conference, recognizing the seriousness of the condition that confronted our colleges in the matter of finances during 1926, issued $300,000 worth of bonds, authorized by the Annual Conference.

Our growth at Centenary has been no less than marvelous. I don't recall any such growth in the same length of time in any school. For the sake of getting some idea of it, let's look at the contrast in September, 1921, and March, 1926:

September, 1921.

Students	50
Faculty	7
Administration	6
Buildings	4
Equipment	$13,000
Endowment	$90,000
Library volumes	5,000
Assets	$436,400
Debt	$100,000

March, 1926.

Students	666
Faculty	41
Administration	13
Buildings	19
Equipment	$68,900
Library volumes	12,444
Endowment	$651,851
Assets	$1,231,992.89
Mortgage debt	None

It is in reference to the question of the debt that this "piece" is written. In order to get the money due us by the General Board of Education in New York, it was necessary that there be no debt on the physical property; hence the bonds were issued and the debts paid off. In the agreement between the colleges and the Board of Education, all the unpaid and undirected pledges to our General Education Movement were allocated to the Conference Board of Education, together with the pledges to the Centenary College Centennial Campaign and the State pledges to the Greater Mansfield College Movement.

Now all the moneys named, as collected, go to the Conference Board of Education and to paying the principal and interest on these bonds. Every dollar paid in goes to our work here in the State. If all our people redeem the notes they signed for this next greatest movement ever inaugurated by our church, there will be little extra money to be raised and the obligations of the Board will be met promptly and easily.

If not—but we are not anticipating any other than an earnest and honest effort on the part of every one to do his best.

No Conference school has made the rapid and safe progress that ours at Shreveport has.

I am writing to urge each, as he gets his notice of amounts due, to send in his amount, so that the great aggregate will be met.

Please send as much as you can and as soon as you can, that these obligations of our church and Conference may be met.

Please make all checks payable to the Conference Board of Education.

BRISCOE CARTER,
Conference Secretary of Education.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING.

The work of Religious Education is making notable strides in our day. Increasing emphasis is being put upon Sunday school work.

We are glad our great church stands in the forefront in the Sunday school program. And our own Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board is alert, seeking to stimulate interest in religious training. We call particular attention to the Conference-wide meeting to be held in the Capitol Street Methodist Church in Jackson, Miss., April 5 and 6.

There will be group meetings in order that each individual may gain practical suggestions in rendering efficient service in his own department. All the groups will assemble for inspirational addresses.

Let every worker that wants to see the church come to the exercise of her full powers plan to attend this meeting. "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." If you expect dividends, you must make investments.

MEMBER OF THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY NINETY YEARS.

An event of much loving interest to her many friends, and of great enjoyment to the participants, was a dinner given to-day to Mrs. S. E. Howe by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Crawford Street Methodist Church of this city, in the dining room of the newly completed church edifice, on the occasion of her ninety-seventh birthday.

Mrs. Howe is the daughter of Judge James Bland, long a prominent citizen of this community, and she was born at Clear Creek, Warren County, a few miles from Vicksburg, Feb. 16, 1830. When she was about 5 years of age her father moved to town, and since that time, with the exception of some twenty-five years, during which she lived with her daughter, the wife of the Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, at various stations in the Mississippi Conference, she has been a valued member of the Crawford Street Church. She stated at the dinner that she had been a member of the Missionary Society for ninety years. Five different church buildings have been erected by this congregation during her long and useful life.

There were some sixteen guests present at the dinner, and Mrs. Howe was easily the brightest and liveliest of the company. She will surely long pass the century mile-stone.

REV. WILLIAM POWELL, son of Joseph and Mildred Wommick Powell, was born in St. Helena Parish, La., on June 13, 1844, and died Dec. 7, 1926, at his home near Liberty, Miss., where he had lived for forty-seven years. His body was laid to rest in the family cemetery near Tangipahoa, La. Early in life Brother Powell was converted and joined the Methodist church. Later on, though while still young, he was licensed by the same church to preach. He remained a faithful local preacher till the end of his days, preaching whenever and wherever opportunity could be had, so long as health and strength would permit. At the outbreak of the Civil War he answered the call of his native Southland, and for the entire duration of the war gallantly defended the cause that lay so near his heart. He was ever found at his post of duty and proved himself to be a good soldier of his country and his God. Brother Powell was married to Miss Missouri Waller. To this happy union were born nine children, six sons and three daughters. Three sons, R. P. and J. W., of Liberty, Miss., and H. W., of Sunny Hill, La., and two daughters, Mrs. T. M. Brabham, of Liberty, Miss., and Mrs. Tom Talbert, of Osyka, Miss., survive him. To him there was neither surprise nor fear at the call of his Master, but with confident assurance that he was the Lord's and the Lord was his, he quietly went home to be forever with God.

T. M. AINSWORTH.

"A good man is gone," was heard from the lips of many when it was learned that DAVID CLAUDE LEA had suddenly been called from earth into the presence of the Eternal. Brother Lea was born Aug. 4, 1869, at Greensburg, La., the son of C. E. and Mary Hutchenson Lea, and died at his home near Chatawa, Miss., Dec. 6, 1926. The following day his funeral was had in the Osyka Methodist church, of which he was a member, and his body was tenderly laid to rest in the midst of a host of friends and loved ones. On May 23, 1893, he was married to Miss Julia L. Carruth, who, with one of his sisters and many other relatives, survives him. When only a youth, he was converted and joined the Methodist church, and remained a faithful and loyal member of the same until he was called to the Church Triumphant. That he was a good man, a loyal citizen, and an affectionate husband, is the opinion of all who knew him. May God's comforting presence be with the sorrowing ones, is our prayer.

His pastor,

T. M. AINSWORTH.

MRS. A. J. BROOME.

Sister Broome was born at Moscow, Ala., Oct. 27, 1851, and eighteen years later she moved to Tate County, Miss., where, on Dec. 24, she married A. J. Broome, Sr., and later moved to Panola County, Miss. On Feb. 4, 1927, the White-winged Messenger came, and she peacefully closed her eyes in death and was wafted to the mansions above, where there will be no more pain or death, but songs of joy and love. She was a member of the Methodist church at Cypress Corner, and loved the principles for which her church stood. She leaves three sons and three daughters: F. C. and A. J., Jr., of Como, Miss., and W. M., of Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. R. L. Carter, Mrs. J. T. Taylor, and Mrs. D. F. Smith, all of Como. Burial services were conducted by her pastor, the writer of this article, at Freedonia church.

RESOLUTIONS.

To Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Bledsoe, Bossier City, La.

Whereas, in the providence of God, your dear and youngest son, Marion, has been called to his heavenly reward;

Whereas, in his passing from your midst, you suffer great grief in the sad separation;

Whereas, we, too, are greatly grieved with you in this sorrow;

Whereas, we hold you in the highest esteem as friends and workers in the church and all Kingdom enterprises;

Be it therefore resolved, That we, the Sunday school of Bossier City Methodist Episcopal Church, South, express our sincere sympathy and heartfelt sorrow in this bereavement, and pray God's blessings upon you and yours forever.

Signed: Mrs. T. P. Pearce, Mr. Tom Hickman, Mrs. Don E. Dulaney, Sunday School Committee on Resolutions.

MR. S. B. RAGAN.

Some time there is a task to which we are called which has great depth. The character about whom we are writing, Brother S. B. Ragan, is one whose depth of soul was probably never fathomed. At least, only his inner circle ever saw to the depth of his soul. Many duties befell him in this life, but he heroically met them without murmuring. Among the duties was the providing for a large family, which he did most beautifully. Often, we have had the pleasure of sitting in the family circle and listening to him as he would tell us of the sweet fellowship that he enjoyed with the Holy Spirit. He was a great man, and being frank in his expression, he was often misunderstood. It was while returning home, late on the afternoon of Dec. 15, from town that his foot got caught in a wire fence, throwing him to the ground, inflicting a wound from which he never recovered. He was carried home, and was never able to walk again. His suffering was great, but he was a great sufferer, for he had learned that through the ministry of suffering God reveals himself as he does in no other way. He bore his suffering calmly, till on Friday, Dec. 31, 1926, the sweet Messenger of God whispered softly in his ear, "It is enough, come up higher," when he peacefully closed his eyes to the light of this world, to look out on the light of the Perfect Day. Brother Ragan was born Oct. 1, 1848, and lived to the ripe age of 78 years and 3 months. He professed faith in our blessed Saviour, at Ebenezer church, at the early age of 20, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Camp Ground, of which he remained a member till his going away. He was a loyal Methodist, and loved the doctrines of the Methodist Church, and was an ardent defender of them. He was a faithful companion, a loving father, a good neighbor, a noble citizen, and a preachers' friend We loved him. He always met us with a smile and a word of cheer. The last time we had the privilege of being on the streets of Chalybeate, for only a few minutes, we had the pleasure of grasping his friendly hand, and receiving an urgent invitation to go home with him and to spend the night. He leaves a wife and eleven children, all of whom were at his bedside when the summons came. He has one brother, four sisters and twenty-two grandchidren still living. After a beautiful service conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. T. Philips, assisted by the pastor of the local Baptist church, Rev. Mr. Edmonds, his body was tenderly laid to rest in the Camp Ground cemetery, Jan. 1, 1927, to await the resurrection morning. The great concourse of people, together with the wonderful floral offerings, testified to the loving esteem in which he was held.

"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won
And thou art crowned at last."

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, say well-known druggists here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

A GOOD SOCIETY AT ROSETTA, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Rosetta Methodist church met at its usual hour with a nice attendance.

The meeting was called to order by its president, Mrs. W. R. Broomfield, Jr., and was opened with devotional exercises by Rev. G. P. McKeown, of Woodville, assisted by Mrs. McKeown, the district secretary, who gave us a splendid talk on mission work.

Our Society was organized only a short time ago, but is full of "pep," having the good women of the community who have the work of God on their hearts and are ever ready to do their part.

Our community has taken on a new life since Annual Conference, and our new pastor, Rev. J. O. Williams, and his devoted wife have come to this work. We all have learned to love them so much, as they are afire with the love for the Master and his kingdom. They were present at our meeting and reported many things that they are doing in the way of organization work, and asked that the district secretary visit Mount Olive Woman's Missionary Society at its next regular meeting, to be held Feb. 26, which invitation she accepted.

We wish to thank the Annual Conference for sending this pair of coworkers into our midst, seeing so much good work being done by them in so short a time.

MRS. W. R. BROOMFIELD,
President.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GOOD REPORT FROM CLEVELAND, MISS., SOCIETY.

The Methodist Woman's Missionary Society of Cleveland, Miss., held an all-day meeting in the home of Mrs. P. B. Woollard, Tuesday, Feb. 1. The morning was devoted to the program. A delicious lunch was served by the hostesses. We all enjoyed the social hour as well as the lunch. We had about fifty present. Much important business was discussed. The line of work was laid out for the year. More than $100 was paid into the treasury.

We have a wonderful president, Mrs. H. D. Todd. All of our officers are very efficient. The outlook for a successful year is very bright—so many of our young women are coming forth to this great missionary work. The Methodist women who do not hear the call to active service through this channel will be left out of the onward march, for we are truly going forward, trying to extend the kingdom of our Christ to the uttermost ends of the earth.

REPORTER.

AT THE MEMPHIS EDUCATIONAL MEETING.

The College and University, Junior College, and Religious Education divisions held helpful sessions Feb. 7, 8, and all came together Feb. 9, 10, in the eighth meeting of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Dr. J. R. Countiss, of Grenada, presided with dignity and efficiency. Many thoughtful addresses were made, followed by helpful discussions. The writer feels that by all means the suggestions made by President J. M. Williams, of Galloway College, in regard to utilizing the alumni in advancing the interests of a college should be adopted by the alumnae of Whitworth College.

Thursday, the writer had the privilege of taking lunch with three of his former pupils, graduates of Port Gibson Female College: Mrs. Nellie Chambliss Spencer, Dr. Marie Milliken Long, and Miss Stella White, all of whom hold responsible positions in the heart of Memphis, near Court Square.

These three young women informed of other former students residing in the city; and the whole of Thursday afternoon and evening was spent in visits and telephone conversations with these other former students.

At the home of Mrs. Beatrice Chambliss Irving, at 8 p. m., the bright little daughter, Ray Lolette, 8 years old, was baptized preparatory to her coming into membership of the church, along with others, at the approaching Easter occasion. The child is a great-niece of the late Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

NEW WORK IN PLAQUEMINE PARISH.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am glad to report through the columns of the Advocate that the Louisiana Conference has enlarged her territory. Plaquemine Parish was unentered by Protestantism, that is, no evangelical church was doing anything in the way of organizing churches or missions. Our church can now say we are still pioneering the way of the gospel in this parish.

On Jan. 22, I went with Captain Zatarain, one of the stewards of our Algiers church; through him I was able to ride on one of the great fruit ships, and that evening we got off at Pilot Town, La. On Sunday morning I baptized the baby of Mr. Williams, and at 3 o'clock p. m. held a Sunday school and services at the little school house; we had twenty-five present. At this place a chapel would be a great thing for the whole church; from here, about 600 ships pass each month, and a chapel here would be the first thing the incoming ships would see, and the last thing to see going out of the U. S. A.

Last Sunday I went to Pointe-a-la-Hache. This place is the county seat of Plaquemine Parish. I had arranged with Sister Tabony for this service. We had a fine attendance. Dr. Lockhart was teaching the Bible class. At this place also we need a chapel. I hope some one will provide the needed funds, so that we may plant for good Methodism in these two points in this parish.

On this trip Brother Perkins was with me, and we distributed along the forty-six miles route more than 350 portions of the Bible.

Most of the people were sitting on the levee; many of the men were gambling their money and time away. We are thankful to God for the Methodist church, and for his blessing in the work of missions.

This new work has enlarged the New Orleans District more than one hundred miles. This missionary district is about 300 miles wide, and much of our territory is untouched. Dr. Harper and I will be glad to give any information concerning our needs.

Yours sincerely in Christ,

LEON PICONE,
Missionary Evangelist.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off—Adv.

A HAPPY PASTOR.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am a happy pastor just now, because of the fact that we have Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the general evangelist, and Rev. Ed Philips, the cowboy singer, with us at North Back Bay Methodist Church, holding a series of services. We are glad to state that eight or ten conversions have been experienced, and many others have renewed their faith in Christ. The church as a whole has been blessed. Thank God for his power that moves upon the hearts and minds of men and women.

Any pastor desiring a real good meeting will make no mistake in securing these two great men of God.

We hope to begin a series of services at the Methodist church in Mississippi City March 9, with the noted Conference evangelist, Rev. H. M. Ellis. We hope to have a great outpouring of God's Spirit at this meeting. Rev. H. M. Ellis is a forceful speaker. He is able to hold a real soul-stirring meeting for any pastor who wants his church revived. Pray for us.

REV. R. S. SAUCIER,
Pastor Mississippi City Charge.

What Are You Doing For Your Puny Child?

One Boy Gained 11 Pounds in 7 Weeks and is Now Strong and Healthy.

For weak, frail, under-developed children—and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in sever weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust.

Sixty tablets for 60 cents at all druggists—but be sure and insist on McCoy's—the original and genuine.

Give them to the sickly, frail child for 30 days, and if they don't help—wonderfully, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Hattiesburg District Sunday School Institute was held Wednesday. There were ninety-five people present for the work of the institute, which was a most excellent showing. All but one of the district officers were present. Only six of the preachers were absent, and it was reported that they were kept away on account of high water.

The elementary workers reported forty persons present for the elementary work. This was a most encouraging attendance. Last year we were not quite so fortunate as this in the attendance.

Several goals were agreed to. The institute thought they could raise the allotment for Sunday School Day of $400. They also felt that it was possible for the district to have Sunday School Day observed by all the churches of the district. Brother Jones, the presiding elder, was with us, and was a great help to the spirit of the meeting and contributed no little to its success.

The ladies of Broad Street Church served dinner, which was greatly appreciated and much enjoyed by all.

Lucedale closed a non-standard class Thursday, Feb. 10. There was an excellent attendance on the class, and there were eighteen who promised to take the examination. Lucedale was checked at this time, and it looks to us as if they are in the mood to move forward and do a fine and outstanding piece of work.

Miss Jones conducted a Standard Cokesbury class at Hermanville last week, in which there were eighteen credits given and much good work done. We are glad to pass on this fine report from these fine people.

Miss Jones also visited Natchez on this same trip, and reports a fine trip.

Sunday was spent by us at Benton. We enjoyed being there very much. The condition of the roads kept us from meeting our appointment at Midway, but we had the pleasure of being with Brother King for dinner and being at Benton Sunday night. The folks at Benton were kind, as they always are, and we appreciated this kindness very much indeed.

On April 5, at 7:30 p. m., the Conference Sunday School Conference opens at Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss. This meeting will continue through Wednesday, April 6. A great program is being arranged. Plan to come. We hope to secure entertainment for those who desire it, at reasonable rates. If you care for this service, please write us.

Be in Jackson for this great meeting.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENC.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, pastor of Horn Lake, Sardis District, is the first to send order for Sunday School Day programs. He ordered programs for the four churches under his care. "A Story of Progress" is the title of the program prepared for the C-type school; "The Abundant Life" is the title of the program prepared for the A and B-type schools. Copies of these two programs have been sent to every pastor in the Conference so the pastor may select the one best suited to his people. It will save time, money, and work if these programs are ordered this week. The programs are paid for out of the funds raised by the Sunday School Board. The day can be observed early in April before Easter. Order from your district superintendent. These volunteer workers are interested in making the district in which they live the banner district of the Conference. Just north of us the Memphis Conference raised $5,714, and south of us the Mississippi Conference, $2,239 in 1925. North Mississippi can do as well as her neighbors.

The pastors all over the Conference are making surveys, giving instruction in evangelism, studying the missionary book, "Yet Another Day," and are busy at the main task. Rev. J. H. Holder, of Grenada; Rev. Mellville Johnson, of Winona, and Rev. A. T. McIlwain, or Corinth, have done exceptionally fine work of late. Good results are sure to follow their painstaking labors.

If half the pastors would make surveys and have these surveys carefully followed up, we could add 5,000 to our Sunday school rolls. If half the teachers were trained in the art of winning souls, we could add not less than 4,000 to the church. We may get all the outside help available until "doom's day," but the task of winning souls to Christ is in the hands of the members of the local church. The sad thing is, so few church members have enough religion to approach a soul and lead it to Christ. One's religion will depend just in proportion as that person prays and works to lead others in the Christ way of living. Let us not forget this: "The permanent redemptive forces of the community are the resident forces."

Rev. A. Y. Brown, of Minter City, has ordered two wall charts for schools of the C-type to aid these schools in doing more and better work. Let us have 100 others do likewise. Now is the time to begin to do better work.

While you think of it, draw a ring around June 6-11, so this week may be set aside for the Conference Training School to be held at Grenada. The Conference Board of Missions and General Board of Education are participating in this school. They each are furnishing a strong instructor. We ought to have a great school with this united effort.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Our week-end trip included visits to Vivian, Shreveport, Ruston, and Monroe. We reached Vivian Saturday night and enjoyed the hospitality of the Methodist parsonage there. Sunday morning we were in the Sunday school service, and preached at 11 a. m. At 2:30 p. m. there was a meeting in the interest of a Standard Training School in this section of the Shreveport District, which will be called the "North Caddo Standard Training School." The following schools were represented by pastors and superintendents: Vivian, Belcher, Gilliam, Ida, Hosston, Mooringsport, Oil City, Trees City, and Mundalyn Chapel. Rev. W. F. Roberts, of Ida, was elected Educational Director of this school, with Dr. Holmes as chairman of the Board of Managers. The date of the school is June 19-24. If the school comes up to the interest shown at the "Set-Up" meeting, it will be one of the largest and best schools ever held in Louisiana Methodism. There will be five courses offered.

Sunday night we were in Shreveport and visited Claiborne and Mangum Memorial churches. There were large congregations at both services, and at Mangum we heard a great missionary sermon by the presiding elder, Dr. Holmes. There will be a "Set Up" meeting for a Standard Training School at Mangum Memorial on Friday, Feb. 25.

Monday morning we visited Ruston and had a fine conference with Dr. Drake, chairman of our Sunday School Board. In the afternoon we reached Monroe and had a conference with the pastor there in the interest of the State-wide Conference to be held in that city March 29-30. We are to have a joint meeting in Monroe at 3 p. m., Sunday, Feb. 20, with the Conference staff and the local committee.

The following card sent us by a New Orleans pastor exhibits a unique form of publicity:

"Say, is all this talk I hear on every turn of the corner about our Parker Memorial being now one of the most active and attractive Methodist churches in New Orleans true?"

"Why, man, that seems to be generally conceded. Evidences: Large congregations every Sunday, twenty-two new members received during December and January, additional property purchased to provide room for overcrowded Sunday school and to accommodate the Men's Brotherhood, etc."

"Well, well, that's great! Count on me Sunday. I must get in the 'push' with you fellows."

Mrs. R. H. Harper, chairman of the Elementary Council, has started working up interest in the attendance at the meeting of this Council to be held in connection with the State-wide Conference at Monroe in March.

* * *

Sample copies of the Sunday School Day programs issued by the General Board for use in the 1927 observance of this special day, which is planned with the definite purpose of bringing to the entire membership of the church the purpose and work of the Sunday school, have been received. "The Abundant Life," suggested for use in A and B type schools, is very fine indeed, while "A Story of Progress," for use in the smaller, or C type schools, is most excellently arranged.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

Personal Comment By Mrs. McMoy

West Monroe, La.—"I received a great deal of benefit from taking a small amount of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I know a lady who was almost in a perfectly helpless condition. She finally began taking the 'Favorite Prescription' and regained her health completely. If any woman wishes to know the particulars about what Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will do, I will gladly tell what I know about it."—Mrs. J. M. McMoy, 203 Natchitaches St.

cational building, which is indeed modern in every particular. The teachers and superintendents of each department were asked to criticize the arrangement of their departments, and together with the pastor, Dr. Brooks, and the general superintendent, Mr. T. W. Holloman, many minor changes were worked out.

The office has received from Dr. Albert S. Lutz a splendidly worked out program and invitation to the graduating exercises of the Wesley Biblical and Missionary Institute to be held at West Monroe next Sunday at the 11 o'clock service hour. We congratulate Dr. Lutz on this splendid work.

Mrs. Cora Trawick Court, connected with the Parent-Teacher department of the General Sunday School Board, will be in Alexandria on Friday for a short conference with this office relative to the State-wide Conference at Monroe in March, at which we hope to have Mrs. Court to speak to the workers of the State about Parent-Teacher work in the Sunday schools. Mrs. Court is returning to Nashville after having assisted with two Training Schools in Texas.

Dr. Cleanth Brooks, of First Church, Alexandria, has been successfully conducting a series of mission study classes in his church, reaching every department in the church by means of classes arranged at many different hours.

Epworth League

GOLDEN CROSS ENROLLMENT.

May 8-15 are dates set by the General Hospital Board as Hospital Week. At this time enrollment in the Golden Cross will be made. The movement is one which will embrace the entire church and should receive especial emphasis in the Epworth Leagues. In the past the League has given its support to every forward movement in the church. The youth of to-day who call themselves the followers of the Master must help the church in this great work of hers. To fail her here would be to lower our old banner and to raise in its stead another bearing the inscription, "Only part for Christ."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LEAGUE NEWS.

An Account of League Work in Newton District.

James Taylor, secretary of this district, writes that there are about twenty active Leagues in this district. The Leagues in Laurel are in first-class condition. They are at work on their Mission Study class. Mrs. Furlough is their teacher, and she is a capable teacher. The secretary of this district has been sending League literature to each chapter in order to help them improve their programs.

Seashore District.

The Seashore District is working steadily. We don't hear much from the Leagues, but every League visited by the district secretary, D. C. Camp, has been in good condition. Recently the secretary visited the Gulfport Leagues and found them going steadily forward in their Epworth League work. They have a well rounded program and are carrying it through. The most remarkable feature of this program is that they give special emphasis to the cultural side of League work. Several new Leagues have been organized recently, the latest at Vancleave. Mr. Flurry is president of this League and it has twenty-five members.

Notes from Hermanville League.

The "Reds" entertained the "Blues" during January. The program was interesting, full of fun and pep.

Tuesday afternoon, "The Old Maid" Leaguers played a basketball game with the Married Ladies. Admission was ten cents, and the League realized quite a sum for their budget. Since none of the ladies had played for quite a while, the game was comical. The Married Ladies won by a score of 7 to 5.

Attendance at the devotional meeting is holding up well and the programs continue to be interesting and well rendered. The pastor has offered a substantial cash prize to the Leaguer in the chapter who writes the best paper on "Why I Am a Methodist."

A Cupid Party at Hawkins Memorial.

"A cupid party—
A welcome hearty—
A bunch of young folks gay—
Won't that suffice?
Now be real nice,
And join us at our play."

This is the way the invitations to the party given by Hawkins Memorial Epworth League read. This party was given on Friday night, Feb. 11, at 8 p. m. We haven't the details of the party. But doesn't the invitation sound interesting?

A Request.

The editor requests that each district secretary send her the date for the District Institute as soon as this is decided. Also send other information that you would like the Leaguers to read through this column.

TO THE WOMEN OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Co-Workers: When the fourth quarter's reports of our Woman's Conference Society were tabulated, we found that we had much for which to praise our Heavenly Father.

Every obligation to Council was met in full. Also we paid our quota to the Belle Bennett Memorial, the Conference quota being $17,295.

The total of the treasurer's report was $37,888.85, this being an increase of almost $11,000 over any previous year.

Surely God's Holy Spirit has wonderfully led us during the past year. May we turn our faces to the tasks of the new year planning to do even greater things for him. As our women get a clarer vision of the needs of the world, they are ever ready to make greater sacrifices that these needs be met.

The following is a list of the Auxiliaries that paid their quota to the Belle Bennett Memorial in full and are entitled to have their names inscribed in the "Book of Remembrance:"

Collins; Shubuta; Gallman; Gloster; Gulfport, Johnson Auxiliary; Gulfport, Adult; Holly Bluff; Osyka; Richton; Meridian, Central Church; Norfield; Yazoo City; Pelahatchie; Magnolia; Brandon; Anguilla; Lake; Phoenix; Canton Wesleyans; Braxton; McComb, Centenary; Mount Olive; Magee; Lumberton; Cayuga; Natchez; Hattiesburg, Main Street; Forest, Young Women; Moss Point; Canton, Woman's Missionary Society; Avera; Columbia; Jackson, Galloway Memorial; Laurel, Seventh Street; Satartia; Edwards; Brookhaven; Mayersville; Pocahontas; Prentiss; Biloxi; Morton; Newton; Mount Pleasant; Petal; Fernwood; Jackson, Capitol Street; Poplarville; Florence; Laurel, Young Women; Forest; Meridian, East End; Hattiesburg, Court Street; Mendenhall; Bay St. Louis; Bay Springs.

To each of these Auxiliaries I wish to express my admiration and appreciation for the splendid work they have done. We shall always rejoice that we have had a share in this outstanding achievement. May the students that are trained and equipped for service in this institution be a mighty factor in giving Christ to a changing and needy world.

Our greatest need for the new year is increased spiritual power in the lives of us who participated in the missionary enterprise and in the church as a whole.

Again let me express my deepest appreciation of all your splendid work and the assurance of my assistance whenever you feel the need of it.

Yours for service,

MRS. L. W. ALFORD,
President, Woman's Conference Society.

A FEW WORDS FROM THE SATARTIA CHARGE.

I want to say as pastor, this is my first year at Satartia, Miss., but on our arrival we were given a hearty welcome. It affords me great pleasure to say I have some very fine people at each church—people that I appreciate and that are standing by their pastor, so far, in a financial way.

Some few weeks ago we had a meeting of all the officials of the charge, for the purpose of organizing and letting each one understand what his or her duty is, making the assessment for the charge, and giving each church its portion. The stewards were given the work of collectiing the pastor's and the presiding elder's salary; and all the benevolences, including the Superannuate Endowment, were put into a budget, and a committe of four appointed at each church, with the church lay leader as chairman, to collect these funds. So we are pretty well organized, and are hoping for a successful year.

As this is mission month, we are expecting to get every dollar asked from the Satartia charge as a free-will offering. On last Wednesday night, Brother A. B. Kling was to have led the prayer meeting for us, but he substituted Dr. Carley, the editor of the Advocate. Dr. Carley gave us a talk on the missionary work of our church and the importance of maintaining the work.

We are praying for a great year, in the name of Jesus Christ. As pastor, I am presenting the truth as I understand it, condemning the wrong, standing for the right, and I need the prayers of all the readers of the Advocate.

We are now trying to secure our help for our revivals at each church. We are praying for a revival out of which sons and daughters will be born into the Kingdom of God. I am carrying the worth of souls that are lost as a burden on my heart. Pray for me.

A. J. LEGGETT, P. C.

CHILDREN'S ILLS

Arkansas Lady Says She Has Never Found a Better Laxative Than Thedford's Black-Draught.

Mineral Springs, Ark.—"We use Black-Draught in our family of six children," says Mrs. C. E. Nutt, of this place, "and we find it a good bowel regulator. I give it to my children for colds and constipation, or any other stomach disorders, and it certainly is very helpful. I have never known it to fail them. Where there are so many children, it is a good idea to keep a laxative on hand, and Black-Draught is what we use.

"I have taken it myself for indigestion. I would feel dizzy, have gas and sour stomach. I would also feel a tightness in my chest. I took a good dose of Thedford's Black-Draught when I felt that way and it would relieve me. I would feel better for days.

"My husband takes Black-Draught for biliousness. He says he has never found its equal. When he has the tired, heavy feeling, he takes Black-Draught night and morning for a few days and he doesn't complain any more. I sure do recommend Black-Draught."

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT Purely Vegetable

HIGHER THAN WOOLWORTH BUILDING

Year's Sales of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. ED. DAUGHERTY
1308 ORCHARD AVENUE, MUSCATINE, IOWA

The Woolworth Building in New York City, which towers 792 feet above the street, is the highest building in the United States.

If all the bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sold in 1925 could be placed end to end, they would make a column as high as the Woolworth Building with enough left over to extend from Lynn, Massachusetts to Cleveland, Ohio.

In many little villages as in many thriving cities along the route, who are glad to tell others about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In a recent letter, Mrs. Daugherty says, "I was ill for four months before I took your medicine. I found one of your books at my front door and read it. It seemed to fit my case, so I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every one I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. Daugherty, 1308 Orchard Avenue, Muscatine, Iowa.

Mrs. Carr Also Helped

Muncie, Indiana.—"I could not get around to do my work. I took treatments and they did me no good. I had always heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and I thought it would be like all the others, but I found out after I took half a bottle, as I have proved it wonderful. I am taking it yet and I can do all my work. I am feeling fine now, and it is your good medicines that have done it. I tell every woman of the good I get from taking the Vegetable Compound and from using the Sanative Wash."—Mrs. P. W. Carr, 721 West Powers St., Muncie, Indiana.

A SERMON-LECTURE,

Brilliantly Illustrated in Symbols of Glittering Gold,

"The Diamond in the Rough," or the Circuit of Life Between the Cradle and the Tomb; or, to speak more specifically, Life as it is lived, or should be, between the birth hour of its budding into existence, and that of its sunset hour at eventide, by the Rev. R. Manson Evans, of Holly Springs, Miss., box 257.

As I have no churches to serve, my time is at your command, 11 a. m. or 7:30 p. m.—or you can have the sermon-lecture in the morning, and a real revival sermon at 7:30 p. m., if desired. This would please me very much, as the sermon fittingly follows the lecture.

Any Denomination or School—No fixed charges, simply a free-will offering at the close to cover travel expense.

Kindly read the endorsements following, and note with care the standing of the individuals whose names are herein affixed, and then if you can, with an open mind and a glad heart give to me an opportunity to bring to your people my message of love and help.

Thanking you in advance for your brotherly co-operation, and with love, yours in the work,

R. M. EVANS.

To Whom It May Concern.

Holly Springs, Miss.,
Jan. 25, 1927.

This is to certify that I heard Rev. R. M. Evans deliver his lecture, "Diamonds in the Rough," illustrated, in the courthouse in Holly Springs.

His lecture is interesting and instructive, filled with impressive and practical truths.

His illustrations are works of art that attract the audience and impress their memories with the wonderful truths as they see them with the eye, as well as hear them with the ear.

This lecture is suited to the old as well as to the young, and is worthy of being heard from any platform.

Should the opportunity present itself I should be pleased to have it delivered in any and all of the school houses of the county.

I take pleasure in commending Brother Evans and his lecture as worthy of the consideration of all people.

Respectfully,
C. H. CURD,
Superintendent of Education,
Marshall County, Miss.

We, too, have heard the lecture, are in hearty agreement with the above statements and commendations:

W. W. Woollard, pastor Methodist church, Holly Springs.

Wm. B. Allen, rector of Episcopal Church, Holly Springs.

Rev. Mr. Sandusky, pastor First Baptist Church, Holly Springs.

S. W. Mullins, president M. and F. Bank, Holly Springs.

Rube Ford, sheriff, Marshall County, Holly Springs.

And numerous others too tedious to name.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Mother!

Child's Best Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! Even a bilious, constipated, feverish child loves the pleasant taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

FROM THE AMERICUS CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few lines from the Americus charge. I do not trouble the Advocate office very often with my writings, but every charge likes to see an occasional mention of its activities.

We are serving a most excellent people on the Americus charge. It is one of the pleasant places in which to live—a quiet and restful place, a well furnished parsonage, with ample room inside and out. Our people gave us a most hearty welcome back for the second year, and gave us a bountiful pounding on Thanksgiving Day after our return from Conference, which was highly appreciated.

We held our first quarterly conference, Jan. 7. It was well attended. Brother J. L. Sells, our efficient presiding elder, was with us, and rendered a great service for the upbuilding of the church. He is thoroughly alive to every interest of the church. We are always glad when it is his time to come our way.

There has been quite a bit of improvement done around the parsonage and on the parsonage since we have been here, and I hope to do some more work this year.

The good ladies of my charge, to my surprise, bought me a nice blue serge suit a few days ago, which was appreciated very much.

Yours for service,
EUGENE WEDGEWORTH, P. C.

MEETING OF THE NORTHERN GROUP—BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

The Northern Group of the Brookhaven District met in the Hazlehurst Methodist Church, Hazlehurst, Miss., at 1:30 o'clock p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 22, for organization for the year 1927.

The meeting was opened with devotional service conducted by the Rev. Charles W. Crisler, D.D., our pastor at Hazlehurst.

The purpose of the meeting being outlined by the presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, it was suggested by him that a chairman and a secretary be elected. Dr. Charles W. Crisler was elected chairman, and Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, secretary.

The following were present from the various charges of the Northern Group: Crystal Springs—Rev. James G. Galloway, M. M. Todd, P. K. Grice, and Rev. C. C. Griffin; Gallman—Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson; Georgetown—Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook and Mrs. Hilary S. Westbrook; Barlow—Rev. W. C. Baker, J. H. Green, C. M. Bufkin, and William Smith; Hazlehurst—Dr. Charles W. Crisler, A. B. Weeks, and Rev. F. A. Grimes; Wesson—Rev. A. S. Oliver, C. A. Rea, and G. R. Granberry.

The Group was addressed by the Rev. W. H. Lewis concerning the "Study of the Lay Activity Program of Our Church," and he was followed by Dr. Charles W. Crisler. These brethren spoke in strong and reassuring terms of the layman's place and work in the church. They were followed by three splendid laymen, Brothers J. H. Green, G. R. Granberry, and P. K. Grice, who brought us under obligation to them for their thoughtful addresses concerning the layman's place to function as a Christian layman in the church of God.

The summary of the reports called for by the presiding elder from the pastors of the various charges on the Mission Special are as follows:

Number of special missionary services held	20
Number of books sold	97
Number of Mission Study classes	9
Number attending classes	83
Number of leaflets distributed	1,073
Number of offering cards distributed	300
Number of offering cards returned	112
Amount of offering received	$266

Rev. James G. Galloway, of Crystal Springs, made a timely address "On the Reading of Good Books," and when he had finished Mr. M. M. Todd recommended the reading of the Discipline by ALL Methodists.

The last address was by Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Wesson, on "How to Make the Group Meetings of Real Value to Our Work." His speech was to the point, and very suggestive.

Some altar light reflections worthy of mention are:

The Sunday morning 7 o'clock prayer service which is well attended at Wesson.

The pastor and his family are comfortably domiciled in their new parsonage home that is nearing completion at Gallman.

Brother Oliver held special services at Beauregard, preaching only in the evening, and as a result of these helpful services six members were added to the church.

The church at Hazlehurst settles all bills monthly.

A new piano has been purchased and installed in our new church at Hopewell, on the Georgetown charge.

The new church at Hazlehurst is assured. All money is in hand. The edifice will be free from debt when completed.

Eighty is the average attendance upon the prayer meeting service Wednesday evening at Beauregard.

The men's prayer meeting on Friday evening at Georgetown is meeting with success and helpful fellowship.

The Hazlehurst church has an average attendance of 65 at the midweek prayer meeting.

These group meetings are a source of inspiration and information, and we are of the opinion that they will provoke a lively interest in all the activities of the church's work.

Gallman was selected for the next meeting place.

The group meeting adjourned with the benediction being pronounced by Rev. W. H. Lewis.

HILARY S. WESTBROOK, Sec'y.

Georgetown, Miss.

METHODISM'S GREATEST NEED.

By Rev. James M. Lewis.

If I were asked, What is the greatest need of Methodism North and South to-day?—I would certainly say: "It isn't organization, for we are organized to our throats now, and at times it seems that we are going to be submerged in the overwhelming machinery of our church. The average layman is bewildered and his brain in a whirl when he undertakes to read and digest the 1926 Discipline of our great church—he wonders where the pastor will have time for meditation, fasting, and prayer! Where will he find the time for study and devotion? Where will he find the time for pastoral visitation? He sees that the program of the church calls for this council meeting, that board meeting, that group meeting, this zone meeting, and if a prominent layman is on many boards he must be out nearly every night of every week, etc. No, we are well organized with a marvelous complex machinery."

"It isn't great leadership that we need—our church was never so blessed with great leaders as she is to-day.

"It isn't a restatement of our fundamental doctrines that we need—they are being stated and restated more to-day throughout the religious press of our church than ever before.

"It isn't efficient organized evangelism that we need now—we are well stocked with a great organization of specialized evangelists, with potential powers lying dormant in them sufficient under God to revolutionize this world."

The greatest need of Methodism to-day is a new Pentecost, a fresh Holy Ghost baptism. How shall it come? Fasting, Heart-searching, Prayer. Let the leaders of our church call the pastors together in each Conference for one week or ten days in Fasting, Abstinence, Heart-searching and Prayer—no lecturing, no oratorical displays of great preachers, but reading together God's Word, talking together of those things that are common to each of us, witnessing for Jesus, and praying for one another—confessing our faults to one another, and getting rid of all those suspicions and doubts and ill feelings preachers have against each other. Tarry there in "Jerusalem" until we have been indued. And bless your soul, it will come.

Pentecost—I hear some people say, "He is visionary," "That is impractical." Maybe so; the early disciples were very "visionary" and they were extremely "impractical" in some things they did; but the power came and they were all filled with something that some of us haven't got and that we need greatly to-day.

"They were all in an upper chamber,
They were all with one accord
When the Holy Ghost descended,
As was promised by our Lord."

"Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be indued with power from on high. The church needs to go into that upper chamber again. Will she go?

COUNCIL MEETING—SHREVEPORT, MARCH 9 TO 16.

If your auxiliary has not selected its representative to this meeting, kindly do so at once. We are quite anxious that each auxiliary send a delegate.

It will be necessary for all guest cards to be mailed to Mrs. W. F. French, 850 Ontario Street, Shreveport, not later than March 1.

All representatives to be entertained, coming by automobile or on the bus, will come direct to First Methodist Church, where they will be met by members of the Committee on Homes.

Committees will meet all incoming trains on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Owing to the great number of Council guests, we can only entertain one delegate from each auxiliary in the Conference, together with Conference officers and district secretaries.

MRS. W. F. FRENCH.

"MY HEART FOUND WINGS."

By Rev. H. Walter Ledbetter.

(This poem was originally published in the Homiletic Review.—Editor.)

O Master of the beautiful,
Creating us from hour to hour;
Give me this vision to the full,
To see in lightest things thy power.

This vision give, no heaven afar,
No throne, and yet I will rejoice;
Knowing beneath my feet a star,
Thy word in every wandering voice.

When that my soul, too far from God,
In earthly furrows crawled about,
An insect on a dutsy clod,
Wandering aimless in and out,

At deepest dusk I looked above,
And saw a million worlds alight,
That burnt immortal veils of love,
And left it shining infinite.

I gazed and gazed with lifted head,
Until I found my heart had wings;
And now my soul has ceased to dread
The weary dust of earthly things.

BIBLE FINDINGS AFTER SUNDRY SEARCHINGS.

By Frances Minor Crymes.

No. 1—Revelation—Rewards for Overcomers:

2:7 —To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

2:17—To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth, saving he that receiveth it.

3:21—To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me even in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

2:11—He that overcometh shall not be hurt by the second death.

3:5 —He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.

3:12—Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of Heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name.

2:26-28—He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers, even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the morning star.

No. 2—Revelation Beatitudes:

1:3 —Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep these things which are written therein.

14:13—Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them.

16:15—Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

19:9 —Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb.

20:6 —Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

22:7 —Behold I come quickly. Blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

22:14—Blessed are they that do his commandment, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

No. 3—Revelation Promises:

2:1 —Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.

2:23—I will give unto every one of you according to his works—I will put upon you no other burden; but that which you have already hold fast till I come.

3:3 —If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.

3:4 —Thou hast a few names which hast not defiled their garments—they shall walk with me in white, for they are worthy.

3:10—Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world to try them which are upon the earth.

3:21—Behold I stand at the door and knock—if any man hear my voice and open the door I will come unto him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

7:13-17—What are they which are arrayed in white robes, and whence came they? These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.

They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them into living fountains of water; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The Board of Christian Literature of the Louisiana Conference in its annual report recommend to our constituency the maintenance and support of the current periodicals published by our church. In this, no doubt, we were doing what most, if not all, the Conferences of Southern Methodism did.

Yet the question is repeatedly asked, Why should one take a church paper, since the daily secular papers publish church news and church affairs? This reply, to my mind, is one of the chief reasons for patronizing and maintaining our church periodicals. There are tremendous forces in the way of civil, commercial and social influences brought to bear on the secular press to-day, and much of this influence is antagonistic to the life and spirit of evangelical Christianity. The two great political parties of the United States are accustomed to use for their advancement to power and control anything or everything as propaganda. Take the Nicaraguan imbroglio, for example, or the situation in Mexico and China. Great interests are involved, financial and ecclesiastical. Leading men, men of talent, men to whom the people have entrusted the laws and government of this country, array themselves on opposing sides, and some of them prophesy dire ruin and wholesale destruction of the people's rights. But here comes a well written, calm, dispassionate letter from a man like Dr. Winton and throws a flood of light on conditions in Mexico; or a missionary who is in touch with the people of some other country which is struggling through gloom and revolution to larger light and life—gives a different and more hopeful view of conditions obtaining there. You won't find these letters in the secular papers. You will find them in our church papers.

Then it is not only necessary that one subscribe for the church organ to keep in touch and sympathy with the great movements in the church, but even more necessary in order to ascertain the truth concerning national and international affairs.

* * *

In connection with these thoughts, there is an ill-concealed propaganda against missions of the Christian churches heralded abroad in many of our secular papers. Even the Roman Catholic mission work, toward which this section of the press is generally favorable, does not escape misrepresentation. Now every one knows that missionaries, both Romanist and Protestant, are not easily frightened from their post of duty, and many of these have a glorious record of sacrifice, even unto death. Revolutions are not new in church history, and I feel assured that the faithful men and women who have the same heroic spirit which characterized saints and martyrs in the past, will not desert their converts in the hour of need. However, this spirit of sacrifice on the part of many of our missionaries does not seem to enter the mind of the writer who so glibly reports them as leaving their posts. There is no doubt but that "the heathen rage," but I am as fully assured many "vain things are uttered" by writers who are not in sympathy, or lack knowledge concerning the great movement for winning the world for Christ. Again I write, as I have written before, nothing but the truth can save men from sin and error, and the secular press does not have a monopoly of this saving grace. Read the Christian Advocate.

A STATEMENT BY BISHOP CANNON.

(Bishop Cannon urges every reader to write or wire his Senator, insisting on the passage of this important legislation before March 4.)

As chairmain of the Commission on Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, I beg leave to make the following statement:

1. The enemies of prohibition in the Senate assert that it is a failure because it cannot be enforced, and persistently and violently denounce the law on the floor of the Senate.

2. The Prohibition Department has insisted that the passage of the Reorganization Civil Service Bill is necessary for efficient enforcement, and the President in his annual message has urged the passage of this bill.

3. The Reorganization Bill was passed by the House nearly a year ago and was put on the Senate calendar last summer.

4. The moral forces of the country—the Federal Council of Churches, the Methodist General Conferences, the Baptist Conventions, the Presbyterian General Assembly, and other church bodies have petitioned for its passage.

5. It is difficult to understand why this bill has not been called up for consideration and passage in a body in which there is declared to be an overwhelming majority favorable to the Eighteenth Amendment and its enforcement. Is it true that a few opponents of prohibition can prevent even open consideration of such a measure for nine months?

6. Have not the moral forces of the country the right to expect that this will be called up at once and a time fixed for voting upon it? If a time can be fixed to vote upon the farm and banking legislation, cannot a time be fixed to vote upon law enforcement legislation, even if it be necessary to adopt cloture? Shall it be said that a few vociferous opponents of prohibition prevented the adoption of any form of "dry" legislation by the Senate during both long and short sessions?

Will you not personally insist upon consideration and let responsibility for success or failure be placed where it belongs? "The King's business demandeth haste."

JAMES CANNON, JR.,
Chairman, Commission on Temperance and Social Service.

A FRIEND OF THE ORPHANS' HOME.

Dear Dr. Carley: Here is a sample of the letters I receive that cheer us on in our efforts in behalf of the Misssissippi Orphans' Home:

"Dear Brother Brown: Your letter received this morning. I am glad of an opportunity to help carry on the work of the Orphans' Home. I like children so well, and I realize the fine work done by the Home. The two little ones in my home give me a more sympathetic attitude to other young people. . . . I am sending you my check for ten dollars for the Orphanage. I will be glad to have you call on me again.

"Yours very truly,"

This letter came in response to a printed letter in which I gave a few facts about the Home and asked for a donation from the friends of the Home. I sincerely hope many who have received a copy of the letter will respond as did this brother.

I am sure when the Methodists of North Mississippi Conference realize that this great work is maintained only by voluntary donations, and that $3,000 is needed each month to pay the running expenses, and that there is due on the new dormitory at this time $40,000, there will be many to write me as did the writer above.

I always appreciate an invitation to visit the charges in the interest of the Home.

Yours for our Orphans,

S. A. BROWN,
Commissioner for North Mississippi Conference.

MEETING OF ABERDEEN DISTRICT METHODIST MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Aberdeen District Methodist Ministers' Association met at Shannon, Miss., on Feb. 17. Rev. J. J. Garner preached an excellent sermon, after which the house was called to order for business by Rev. W. R. Lott. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. J. J. Baird, president; Rev. F. H. McGee, vice president; R. T. Holliingsworth, secretary. The following program committee was appointed by the president: Revs. R. G. Moore and J. J. Garner.

After the business session, the ministers enjoyed a most wholesome and delicious luncheon, which was served by the good ladies of the Shannon church.

The house was called to order for the afternoon session at 1 o'clock. Hymn No. 110, "Savior, More Than Life to Me," was sung, after which Rev. A. R. Beasley led in prayer.

The first topic, "The Pastor's Relation to the Men of His Church," was spoken to by Rev. J. J. Baird.

The second topic, "To the Homes of His People (Women and Children)," was discussed by Revs. L. P. Wasson, R. G. Moore and W. R. Liming.

The third topic, "The Ministers' Relation to the Sick and Shut-In," was discussed by Revs. F. H. McGee, H. H. Wallace and T. L. Oaks.

The message of each of these brethren was full of inspiration, and therefore enjoyed by all.

Brother Beasley's invitation to go to Ebenezer church, on the Buena Vista charge, for the March meeting was accepted.

The following ministers were present and joined the Association: J. J. Baird, B. F. Bullard, W. R. Lott, J. J. Garner, S. M. Butts, H. H. Wallace, T. L. Oaks. W. R. Liming, W. C. Mattox, G. C. Gregory, W. C. Beasley, W. L. Pearson, J. A. Biffle, R. G. Moore, F. H. McGee, W. N. Dodds, W. M. Hester, R. T. Hollingsworth. Rev. J. T. Lewis was not present on account of illness in his home, but expressed his desire to join the Association.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH, Secretary.

NOTES FROM THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT.

Amite is adding another building to its property, making provision for more Sunday school facilities, which are needed for its fine program. B. H. Andrews is the pastor.

George D. Purcell is beginning his third year on the Baker charge. Work is projected on the church at Baker, and improvements are also in prospect for the parsonage. Brother Purcell suffered an attack of "flu" in January.

Dr. B. P. Taylor has the situation well in hand at First Church, Baton Rouge. He is closing out the Missionary Special campaign and is rounding up the prospects in the Sunday school evangelism movement. His congregations are large and growing.

P. B. McCullen is keeping up his record of looking after all the interests of the church, and doing something special each year. A new church has been built and paid for and dedicated since he took charge three years ago, and he is lining up his church for the payment of the parsonage debt this year. He will do it, too, and leave a fine plant clear of debt at the end of his quadrennium. His charge is Istrouma.

O. L. Tucker is leading his splendid congregation at Keener Memorial in launching a new church enterprise. Their building lot on Government street is paid for, and a neat sum is in bank toward the new church building. His people are now raising funds for a new automobile for his use. He is pushing the campaign of Sunday school evangelism and the Missionary Special.

The church at Bogalusa, under the pastorate of R. W. Tucker, is enjoying a steady and healthy growth. In spite of an advance of $1,000 in two years, they paid all assessments in full last year, and are making plans for a Standard Training School, which will be three in the district if it is held. Brother Tucker is in high favor with his people, and they are saying that they would like to give him a lifetime tenure of their church.

B. D. Watson has started off well at Clinton, which is a combination of the old Clinton charge with parts of the East Feliciana charge. He has had some sickness in his family, which has delayed him some in his work.

R. L. Clayton has a big program for a beginner, but he is going forward like a veteran. The church at Denham Springs is nearing completion. It will have four class rooms besides the main auditorium, and with aid of a small donation from the Board of Church Extension will probably be clear of debt before Conference. A new parsonage is under construction at Walker, and will be completed in a few weeks.

C. C. Miller, at Franklinton, is rapidly recovering from his illness that occurred at Conference time, forcing him to miss Conference for the first time in his ministry. He underwent an operation in New Orleans, and is now back in his charge. During his illness, F. N. Sweeney, a superannuate, has had charge, and has kept the work well up to the standard established by Brother Miller. Brother Sweeney will be available for revival help in several meetings this year.

New life is manifest in the old charge of Gonzales, under the leadership of J. P. Bonnecarrere, who is making full proof of his ministry. The new church at Frost, organized last year by A. L. McQueen, of Springfield, is one of the best churches on this charge. Improvement is in prospect for the parsonage.

J. S. Rutledge is keeping up his record for faithful work on the Greensburg charge. His people love him, and he is getting firm hold on the work at the six points constituting his circuit. In addition to his Ford, he keeps a horse and saddle, which this elder borrowed for a recent trip over roads that were not navigable by automobile, owing to excessive rains and floods.

Everything is in fine shape at Hammond, under the leadership of W. R. Harvell. He looks after the whole program of the church. A new church building is in prospect, a new site has been bought, and it is hoped that the new church will be started this year. The Standard Training School for the central section of the district will meet at Hammond the latter part of August.

J. H. Bowdon has made a good start at Jackson and Ethel, and the people are highly pleased with the manner in which he leads off in the work of the church. He looks after all the program of the church.

William Schuhle is doing his usual faithful and efficient work at Kentwood, and it is meeting a response in the expressions of appreciation of him as their new pastor.

The wrtten report of W. H. Royal for the first quarterly conference at Natalbany reads like a list of household supplies for a year. The explanation is that the people there appreciate their new pastor, and have given him such a thorough pounding that he will hardly get over it in a year. Repairs on the parsonage are under way, new life is shown in the work of the Sunday school, League, and Missionary Society. Mrs. Royal has recently undergone an operation in Touro Infirmary in New Orleans, and is progressing nicely.

A. E. Barrett and his people of the Pearl River charge have undertaken to raise the debt on their new parsonage, with good prospects of success, as most of the immediate needs were in sight at the quarterly conference, Jan. 9.

The work on the Pine Grove charge is progressing well under the leadership of J. T. Parsons. Brother Parsons is in the apostolic succession; he is not only a successful fisher of men, and he is that, but he has a reputation among his people as a first-class fisherman. He finds time for that sport between his engagements looking after his circuit, and repairing his parsonage.

B. W. Waltman is settled and hard at work in his new field at Plaquemine and Donaldsonville. His charge has four points and is sixty miles long. All his points are on the west side of the Mississippi River, in the sugar cane belt.

Ponchatoula and J. W. Booth work well together in double harness. Brother Booth is in his fourth year, and from all appearances his best year to date in that charge. He has a fine body of laymen who are actively supporting him in every item of the church program.

A. L. McQueen has completed the church at Springfield that was started by J. L. Frazier, his predecessor. He has also built a new parsonage. He looks well after his work.

St. Francisville is well organized and hard at work under the pastorate of T. G. Stamps. His salary has been advanced to $1,800, with a further advance as a possibility.

R. A. Cross is in the first year of his ministry on the Washington charge. The Varnado church has taken on new life since Conference, and there is prospect of a strong church at that point.

H. W. May reports that things are moving on satisfactorily at Zachary and Slaughter. Sickness and death have visited his flock, and the ministry of consolation has been a prominent part of his work since Conference. He reports good congregations, and good interest.

The district conference will meet at Amite on Tuesday to Thursday, May 17-19. B. H. Andrews will be the host of the conference.

H. N. BROWN, P. E.

MEETING OF CENTRAL GROUP, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

The Central Group meeting of the Brookhaven District was held in Brookhaven church on Feb. 23. By request of the president, Rev. P. D. Hardin, Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder of the district, presided.

After reading and elucidating the second chapter of II Timothy very briefly, Brother Lewis explained the recent laws of our church enacted by the last General Conference, and stressed with great emphasis the necessity of knowing the Discipline of the church, its rules and regulations, and strictly adhering thereto.

He pointed out the fact that the group meetings would enable its members to study together the laws and programs of our church and better plan to put them into execution. He also emphasized the absolute necessity of having the Holy Spirit to guide us in the work of the church; and while carrying out all programs, rules and regulations of the church, all must be done, whether teaching, collecting moneys, exhorting or admonishing, with the all-important object of leading our people into true regeneration and the worship of God in spirit and truth.

He also called attention to the importance of the detailed work of the pastor and his workers, asking greater precision in the rendering of their reports and carrying out the missionary program, stating that where we observe the program we invariably succeed, and where we are not respectful enough to the church and those in authority to obey the authorities and keep inviolate our obligations to do so, the work suffers.

Brother Lewis said, with the implicit confidence he had in the good laymen of our church, who have always stood by their leaders, he believed that were the missionary program carried out and every member given a chance thoroughly to understand the plan and necessity thereof, they would give every cent necessary to carry on the work of our Mission Board and enable it to go forward with a greater success, rather than retard its work.

He closed his remarks with a very strong appeal to the brethren to value their time and spend it well; be much in prayer; stay under the influence of the Holy Spirit, and trust the Lord with an implicit confidence; work in brotherly love and unity, and teach only those things that the Holy Book and God's Spirit approve.

Rev. J. L. Snelgrove led in prayer, praying that all of us might heed the presiding elder's admonition and that God would look in mercy upon us and guide us in the work.

Rev. P. D. Hardin tendered his resignation as president, expressing the desire that some competent layman be elected to that office. Prof. R. C. Morris was elected, and George G. Yeager was elected secretary.

By request of the chair, Brother V. D. Youngblood delivered a very interesting address on the duties of the laymen.

Brother S. G. Armstrong also, on request of the chair, made a very impressive talk in which he stressed the need of closer affiliation on the part of the pastor and his workers and the need of a more explicit understanding of their desires and needs.

Rev. L. M. Sharp, of Bogue Chitto, reported great success in the missionary study on his work. He believes that his work will meet all expectations along all lines. He reported the parsonage being greatly improved and everything pointing to success.

Rev. P. D. Hardin, of Brookhaven, reported all well. He is serving a good people that never fail on anything asked of them by the church. He and his loyal congregation have recently installed a nice pipe organ, at a cost of $13,000, and made quite an improvement on the interior of the church about the altar.

The pastor of the Scotland charge reported some success along some lines; has covered the church at Hawkins' Chapel, made some improvements about the parsonage, and collected about 55 per cent of his mission special.

Rev. L. J. Snelgrove, of Monticello, reported great progress on his work. He is busy carrying out the special mission program, and feels sure of complete success along all lines of church work on his charge this year.

The reports of the brethren as partially received show that we have collected $189.50; held forty special mission services; organized and taught eight mission study classes, with an attendance of eighty; sold thirty-seven "Yet Another Day in Methodist Missions;" distributed a large number of tracts and leaflets.

The Central Group meeting will be held again in the Methodist church at Brookhaven, and everybody, including the following charges, is expected to be with us: Bogue Chitto, Brookhaven, Meadville and Bude, Monticello, Scotland and Wesson.

Brother Hardin and his great people have a wonderful church at Brookhaven and they welcome us. Brethren, let us bring all our people and fill that great church and spend half a day there with God and one another, praying and planning for the greatest of all work. May God bless us all.

REPORTER.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A., Retired.

Number 6.

When I volunteered for service with the Third Mississippi Volunteer Infantry I had no expectation of trying for a position as chaplain in the regular establishment. However, while I was with the regiment, I wanted to learn all that I could. I had found that all sorts of knowledge are useful to a minister. I had heard somewhere some lines that ran:

"Other persons may have limited lore,
Of people and countries and kings;
But the preacher, if he would not be a bore—
His knowledge must compass all things."

This is more truth than poetry, but it taught me an important lesson. When I was trying to keep out of the ministry, I gave as an excuse to one good preacher the fact that I knew so little and could not make sermons that would be acceptable to intelligent people. He answered by assuring me that making sermons was a very easy thing. All I needed was a copy of "Five Hundred Sketches and Skeletons of Sermons." That would give me all the outlines I needed and I could fill them in for myself. Another advised me not to read too much. He said reading ruined one's originality and every honest preacher wanted to be just himself, but if he read books, possibly without his knowledge, he would be using other men's ideas, and stealing a man's ideas was as bad as stealing his coat.

Fortunately for me, my first presiding elder was Rev. J. W. Honnoll, one of the greatest characters I have ever known. He believed in books. Others have told me how, when he was pastor at Corinth, he did all his pastoral work and studied never less than eight hours a day. For fear he might sleep more than the four hours he allotted himself for sleep, he slept on a plank. Such study gave him a style as limpid as a mountain lake, and a brevity of expression that was the wonder of all who heard him. He could say more with fewer words than any man since Lincoln, whom he much resembled in appearance and in rugged character.

His advice to me was read, read good books; lose no time on books that have not proven their worth. Read the books that stimulate your own thinking. Authors with whom you do not agree will make you think more than those with whom you do agree. Don't accept a thing as true because it is in a book. Learn to run everything through your own mill.

He introduced me to Albert Taylor Bledsoe. He let me read his copy of Bledsoe's Theodicy, and gave me some copies of the old Southern Review which Bledsoe edited from 1867 to 1878. It took me a long time, but I finally got all of Bledsoe's Reviews but the first volume, and had them nicely bound.

Going into the army with a background like that, I wanted to get all that could be taught me. There was much to learn. Whom, when and how to salute was one thing. How to distinguish the markings of the various uniforms one sees in such a camp was another. I was as ignorant of insignia as the young bride who had married a young lieutenant just out of West Point. She went with her hubbie to a shop in New York to help him buy his uniforms. He was looking at some plain shoulder strap uniform for second lieutenants when his wife broke in with, "Oh, Jack, don't get those plain things, get some of these nice ones with the eagles on them." Eagles are the insignia of a colonel.

In any camp or post one hears bugle calls every little while during the day, from reveille in the morning to taps at night. Every one of them means something, and if an officer or soldier does not know what they mean, he is likely to be embarrassed. Not having an ear for music, it was difficult for me. I found that there were words that had been fitted to some of the calls, and by singing these over I could get the call. For example, the Second Missouri was brigaded with the Ninth Pennsylvania. The Missouri boys made a little jingle which ran:

"I'd rather be at home with the girl I love so much,
Than be in the army with the Pennsylvania Dutch," which they sang to the notes of the assembly. I learned that one easily. Then mess call, too, was easy. Everybody has heard now, but they hadn't then, the familiar,

"Johnny, Johnny, doughboys, come and get your beans," and the
"Soupy, soupy, soupy, without a single bean;
Coffee, coffee, coffee, without a speck of cream;
Porky, porky, porky, without a streak of lean."

Taps is the most plaintive of all the calls. Mrs. Custer has written a beautiful verse fitted to the notes, but I am unable to find a copy.

Another thing that I had to learn was the chaplain's position in formation. In a big formation like a regiment, one gets along all right if he is in his right place, but if he gets out of his proper place, woe be to him. In parades and reviews, this is no easy matter, especially for one on the regimental staff.

In addition to learning my official duties, the city of Lexington and vicinity offered many interesting historical and natural objects worth visiting. Near our camp was the famous Bryan spring, near which the early settlers had built a stockade. Once they were besieged by the Indians, and when the supply of water inside the stockade was exhausted, the women took their buckets and went to the spring for water. They had to have water, and they risked their lives to get it. The Indians thought it was some kind of trap and did not molest them. In 1898 they still showed the stump of the sycamore tree in which an Indian climbed during the night, and from which the next day he was picking off such persons as exposed themselves inside the stockade, till Daniel Boone slipped out and located him secreted in the boughs of the tree and brought him down like a coon with a shot from his trusty old rifle. We saw the Daniel Boone cabin at Highbridge, and the Shaker settlement nearby. In Lexington city were the home of Henry Clay, Transylvania University, and the world famous Tattersall Stables, which have probably sheltered more fine horses than any other stables in the world.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The annual meeting of the General Board of Missions will be held in the Lambuth Building, Nashville, Tenn., beginning on the morning of Tuesday, May 3, at 9:30 o'clock. The session will probably continue for two days.

W. G. CRAM, General Secty.

WHEN THE OLD AND TOOTHLESS WATCH-DOG IS HEARTLESSLY PUSHED ASIDE AND LEFT HUNGRY, THE YOUNG WATCH-DOG IS TEMPTED TO WATCH FOR HIMSELF.

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary of the Board of Finance

THERE ARE MANY REASONS WHY THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, SHOULD BE STIRRED TO AN HOLY ENTHUSIASM IN RAISING SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT QUOTAS DURING THE PERIOD MARCH, APRIL AND MAY. SOME OF WHICH ARE AS FOLLOWS:

1. Because the Church cannot afford to accept men for her ministry for life and then support them only so far as they are physically able to serve, leaving them in old age to suffer great deprivations.

2. Because the General Conference has ordered by unanimous vote that every Charge should follow a specific plan to raise within a given period its part of $10,000,000 Endowment for this purpose.

3. Because the spectacle of 2500 age-worn and superannuated employees of the Church, having to exist in loneliness and poverty-stricken conditions, raise a doubt in the public mind as to the sincerity of the Church concerning the Gospel she proclaims.

4. Because all other denominations are now strenuously engaged in various programs looking to rid themselves of the reproach for failing to provide a comfortable old-age support for employees who are utterly used-up in service.

THERE ARE MANY OTHER REASONS, BUT THE ABOVE SHOULD BE SUFFICIENT TO CAUSE EVERY PASTOR TO BESTIR HIMSELF IN BEHALF OF THIS MOVEMENT WHICH HAS BEEN SHUNTED ASIDE AND NEGLECTED MORE THAN ALL OTHER MOVEMENTS OF THE CHURCH COMBINED.

IF ANY DISTRICT CONFERENCE PLANS ADJOURNMENT WITHOUT A SPEECH ON SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT, SOME LAY MEMBER SHOULD COME TO THE RESCUE.

BISHOP CHARLES BETTS GALLOWAY.

By Rev. J. Loyd Decell.

In his life of Bishop Galloway, just issued from the press, Bishop Candler has portrayed with characteristic force and beauty the excellencies of the life of Mississippi's first citizen and Southern Methodism's foremost leader. The book itself is its best witness.

It is only purposed in this article to record some observations drawn out of the historical facts and accurate data set down in the biography and give emphasis to them as guiding principles and safe policies for us yet—eighteen years after Bishop Galloway's death. The characteristics and dominant principles revealed in the lives of yesterday's great sons can to advantage be our light and leading to-day. That which was demonstrated by the extraordinary success in Bishop Galloway's brilliant career of forty years will prove of continued interest and blessing to his beloved Zion. We observe first:

Lofty Leadership and Extensive Labors.

Charles Betts Galloway was marked by Providence for large leadership and endowed with the capacity and disposition "to toil terribly."

Graduating from the university at the early age of nineteen, with a rich Christian experience, versatile gifts, cultured mind, and becoming modesty, a place of distinction was inevitable. "He did not forge his way to the front by unseemly self-assertion nor discreditable schemes of self-aggrandizement," but his rise to eminence among his fellows was of the lofty type which came by his love for and interest in men, rather than his authority over them. Dr. C. W. Grafton, a university mate, says: "Unremitting devotion to daily duties" was one of his chief characteristics at college. That devotion to duty never became a spent force in his busy life.

After only five years in the pastorate, at the youthful age of twenty-four years, he was pastor of the First Church in his Conference. Before he was thirty-three years old he was unanimously chosen editor of one of the most influential Advocates in the Connection. Four months prior to his thirty-seventh birthday he was elected bishop—the youngest man ever elected to that high and responsible office.

As one reads the chapters in this book, he can but be amazed at the number of worthy and exacting causes to which Bishop Galloway gave competent, aggressive and successful leadership. Sabbath Observance, Negro Uplift, Education, Temperance and Missions were all advanced by his ennobling services.

The exigencies of the hour and the methods have something to do with the man. He was "Mississippi's first citizen and wisest leader." The enduring good which he accomplished in behalf of his native State—thereby the Nation—in the Prohibition Cause, Educational Development, and Negro Uplift, even with such an unusually forcible personality as his, could not have been realized under a plan of quadrennial change in episcopal residence. It takes more than short-term prestige of position and power of eloquence to achieve such benevolent results—it requires indigenous fellowship and matured confidence. Bishop Candler says: "A Methodist bishop loses all local influence without securing any compensating gains to the church, when he severs his connection with the people to whom he is bound by the enduring bonds of long and loving associations and shifts his residence with every change of his episcopal district."

The cause of missions prospered mightily under his wise administration abroad and enthusiastic support at home. During the twenty-three years of episcopal labors he not only presided over practically every Annual Conference in the homeland, but he visited all the foreign mission fields. In the Indian Mission, Mexico, Cuba, Brazil, Japan, Korea, and China he toiled, working into the dark pattern of the centuries gleams of light which will never grow dim. His soul was stirred as he saw at first hand the needs of a lost world, and the Pauline passion to carry the vision back to the church gripped his unrelenting soul. The cry in Brazil became so vocal that he said: "How I did wish that the tones of their voices might fall with a divine emphasis upon the ears of the six thousand itinerant preachers at home!" And starting home from his first visit to the Orient he resolved: "I shall redouble my efforts for the evangelization of these heathen millions." New Orleans, in 1901, felt the impact of that high resolve, and all succeeding years have lived in the glow of his enlarged aim.

His understanding of the world's need, and intimate knowledge of the church's condition at home caused him to occupy an influential position in the affairs of church and State. It appears that after he had given the mission fields the benefit of his counsel and brought them the inspiration of his hope, he did more by representing them in the homeland than he could have done by representing the homeland continuously in the mission field.

The law of his growth, the widening of his influence, and his unsought-after rise to ecumenical leadership would seem to establish as a sound principle the general superintendency, and not diocesan supervision, for a Methodist bishop.

Wholesome Catholicity and Courageous Loyalty.

The Bishop's wide travels, unfailing courtesy, race-wide sympathies and Christian charity marked him to be what he himself said of another: "Too broad to be a bigot, and too great to be a narrow partisan." He gave unstintedly of his strength to all America and withheld not his service in distant lands. He was a catholic Christian. He prophesied the uniting of Japanese Methodism, and foreran our recent "Central Conferences" and possibly the eventual establishment of National Methodist Churches, relating themselves to the whole only for fellowship, information and inspiration.

He was not so widely catholic that he did not hold to anything definite. His intelligent loyalty gave to his section and church wise guidance through more than one delicate situation. He neither ignored racial integrity nor overlooked national consciousness. At Birmingham he would say: "There will never be intermingling between the races in the South," and to a British audience, in speaking of the division of Methodism: "It was not a schism but a constitutional separation for mutual convenience and prosperity. . . . Slavery was the occasion but not the cause of separation. It was not for slavery but the privilege of saving the slaves our fathers chiefly contended. And theirs was the most magnificent missionary achievement in the history of the Christian church." And yet there was no man who, in the face of criticism, labored more constantly for the salvation and education of the Negro, and pleaded so eloquently for equal justice in his behalf.

Consecration for him was not convenient, but courageous. Loyalty to personal duties was as pronounced in him as his convictions concerning policies in church and State were open. Whether battling against Roman propagandism in Brazil, fighting superstition in China, or contesting with prominent statesmen about prohibition in America, he was unswervingly true to that which honors God and helps man. His courageous loyalty made him to sail war-infested seas around Japan, face cholera in Korea, and carried him down to death's door with yellow fever in Vicksburg. Providence kept him.

Graceful Manner and Powerful Preaching.

Bishop Galloway was courtly in bearing, charming in conversation, and powerful in preaching. "In him there was something of the sparkling brilliance of Prentiss, the splendid dignity of Davis, and the irresistible fervor of Lamar. All these great gifts were laid in charming humility, beautiful simplicity and unreserved consecration upon the altar of the church." And "handsome in person, graceful in bearing, gifted by nature, cultured by study, he might have been anything for which mental gifts, intellectual attainments, and lofty character qualify a man; but deliberately and joyously he chose to be a minister of the gospel, and to that heavenly service he gave himself wholly, without the least regret or slightest misgiving."

Though a great missionary leader, an educator and temperance worker, above all he was the prince of preachers. With the logic of love, power of persuasion, and with periods of eloquence, he preached the "glorious gospel of the blessed Son of God" on all the continents of the earth and made plain the Way of Salvation to the men of the world. "The great themes of the gospel were the staple matters discussed in his sermons. No sensational treatment of minor issues characterized his ministry."

He believed and preached the doctrines of Biblical Christianity which he conceived to be the standard doctrines of Methodism. He had no time for "colorless convictions and boasted breadth of views." To Ecumenical Methodism he declared: "We guard with jealous care the doctrinal purity of Methodism. Theological adventurers and creed-makers are not at a premium among us."

Of the apostate Doshiha University, a Congregational school at Kyoto, he wrote: "It saddened my soul to think of this criminal waste of a sublime opportunity," and, "Alas for the church when in the presence of superstition and false religions her representatives begin to prate about speculations that lead to disintegration and defeat!"

He believed the Scriptures, and his sermons were supported with its truths. He said: "That the Bible has come down through the ages of palm and papyrus leaves, with so few omissions and interpolations, preserved in its integrity and entirety, can only be attributed to a sleepless Providence who 'hast magnified thy word above all thy Name.'" "In civilization he discerned no redemptive power. He trusted nothing else to save the world but the Redeemer revealed in Biblical Christianity; and except Biblical Christianity there is no Christianity at all." Such was the basis of his faith and preaching.

Noble virtues! Leadership that was too lofty to be small and labor which enlarged the soul and knew no geography; loyalty that "kept the faith," remained true to Jerusalem, and loved all to the uttermost part, and courage that feared no danger; a grace that dignified worship and preaching that purposed to reconcile men to Christ! So magnanimous a man as he is at ease in the presence of God.

The sound principles and tested methods which engaged the heart, gave range to the activity, and afforded opportunity for the growth of one so great as Charles Betts Galloway should be carefully guarded and zealously practiced. Even though one like him should only tower forth once in twenty-five, fifty or an hundred years, the time and effort would be amply justified.

Again the fertile pen of Bishop Candler, our honored and much beloved Senior Bishop, has brought the church, and particularly Mississippi Methodism, under lasting obligations to him for the writing of this undying book on the imperishable life of Mississippi's best loved son.

A SPELLING MATCH.

Ten little children standing in a line:
"F-u-l-y, fully," then there were nine.

Nine puzzled faces, fearful of their fate:
"C-i-l-l-y, silly," then were eight.

Eight pairs of blue eyes, bright as stars of heaven:
"Bus-s-y, busy," then there were seven.

Seven grave heads, shaking in troubled fix:
"L-a-d-d-y, lady," then there were six.

Six eager darlings, determined each to strive:
"D-u-t-i-e, duty," then there were five.

Five hearts so anxious, beating more and more:
"S-c-o-l-l-a-r, scholar," then there were four.

Four mouths like rosebuds on a red rose tree:
"M-e-e-r-ry, merry," then there were three.

Three pairs of pink ears, listening keen an true:
"O-n-l-e-y, only," then there were two.

Two sturdy laddies, ready both to run:
"T-u-r-k-y, turkey," then there was but one.

One head of yellow hair, bright in the sun:
"H-e-r-o, hero," the Spelling Match was won.

WISHES THAT CAME TRUE.

"I wish I had something to do," said Dorothy as she came out on the porch, where Aunt Nora was sitting with a tablet and pencil in her hand.

"I wish I had something to write," smiled Aunt Nora. "Tell me something to write, Dorothy."

Dorothy's eyes brightened. "A story, you mean, Aunt Nora?"

"Yes, a story. Can you tell me one?"

"I—don't—know many stories," began Dorothy. "I know one about—"

"But I don't mean that kind," Aunt Nora told her. "I mean one that nobody has ever told before."

Dorothy sat down beside Aunt Nora, put her chin into her hand, and began to think. Aunt Nora sat waiting and watching.

"Well," said Dorothy at last, "I saw Jimmie Stone run into that crippled boy on his skates yesterday, and I was sorry for both of 'em."

"Why should you have been sorry for both of them?" asked Aunt Nora, "Jimmie ought to be ashamed, running into the poor little fellow that way."

"O, but he didn't mean to," said Dorothy. "He came round the corner and—"

"But you haven't told me why you were sorry for Jimmy," Aunt Nora reminded her.

"Well," said Dorothy, "Jimmy was hurt, too, but he never cried."

"Did the little crippled boy cry?"

"At first he did," said Dorothy, "but Jimmy picked him up and wiped the dirt off of him. Then he took him to the drug store and bought him a cone of ice cream and a nickel's worth of chocolate suckers."

"Why! That was nice of Jimmy," smiled Aunt Nora. "And I should think that would have made him happy."

Dorothy sighed. "But that was Jimmy's last dime," she said, "and he was saving it to buy something for teacher's birthday."

"Oh!" said Aunt Nora. "So that's why you were sorry for him."

"Yes'm. And when all others were giving her a present he could not, and he didn't say why."

"But why didn't you tell her?"

"I did. And then she told him that what he did was nicer than any sort of present."

Aunt Nora began to sharpen her pencil. "Why, but you have helped me a lot," she told Dorothy.

"Me?" cried Dorothy. "How? Will that make a story?"

"It surely will," said Aunt Nora.

"Whose story will it be?" asked Dorothy. "Will it be mine or yours or Jimmy's?"

"I think I shall have to say it belongs to all three of us," laughed Aunt Nora, "since we all had a hand in it. I'll give you something for it. What shall it be?"

"Give me a dime to give to Jimmy, so he can buy the teacher a present," said Dorothy.

"All right, I'll do that. Run and take it to him at once."

Dorothy went back, but a short time later she was back, still holding the dime in her hand.

"Couldn't you find him?" asked Aunt Nora.

"Yes'm, I found him, but he had worked and earned another dime and had bought Miss Kate a pretty handkerchief. He said for me to keep this dime, and I'm going to buy me a tablet and pencil so I can write stories, too. Will that be—selfish?"

"No," said Aunt Nora, "I'm sure it won't. And the nicest thing about it is that we both got our wish."—Flora Swetham, in Florida Baptist.

HOW BOBBY CELEBRATED.

By Frank H. Sweets.

Bobby's mamma had been reading to him about George Washington, when he was a little boy and when he grew up to be a man, and what a great and good man he was. Bobby was very much interested, and when mamma had laid down the book and had answered a great many questions Bobby said:

"If to-day is his birthday, I think we ought to—to have a party or something. Don't you, mamma?"

"I don't see how you can have a party to-day, dear," said mamma.

"Well," said Bobby, "it seems as if I must do something to—to—you know what, mamma."

"Celebrate?" said mamma.

"Yes, celebrate," said Bobby. "That's it. I want to celebrate George Washington's birthday. How can I, mamma?"

Just then Nora, the maid, came to say that somebody wished to see Bobby's mamma, and Bobby was left to himself.

When mamma came back to the library she heard Bobby talking in a loud voice, and she wondered whom he had for company. The door was ajar, and she peeped through.

The center-table had been cleared of books and papers, and was now covered with tin and wooden soldiers ranged in rank and file, Noah and his family, who were leaning against a most dilapidated ark, and several old dolls. Bobby was standing in a chair fronting this strange audience, evidently delivering a speech. This is what his mamma heard:

"George Washington was a nice man. My mamma says so, and the book says so, and they know. Fellow-citizens and soldiers, he did not tell a lie, and—and you must not tell a lie, too. George Washington was a general, fellow-citizens and soldiers and Noah, and—and—and—when he has a birthday, I want you all to celebrate it. Fellow-citizens—"

Just here Bobby's little neighbor, Freddie Welles, came running through the hall, asking if Bobby could go out and slide with him.

Bobby heard him, and came to the door, saying:

"I can't go now, Freddie. I am celebrating. We've got a meeting and I'm talking to the people."

"Can't you finish up your speech and close your meeting?" said mamma. "It is so warm and sunny, I think you had better go with Freddie."

"Well, I will," said Bobby.

Then he rushed to the table, saying:

"Fellow-soldiers, you can go home now, and remember to be good, like George Washington. I'm going sliding."

At dinner Bobby's papa said:

"Washington's birthday has passed very quietly; no celebration of any kind."

"Why, papa," said Bobby, "I celebrated."—Presbyterian of the South.

AH FENG—THE COOK WHO BECAME CAPTAIN.

By John F. Cowan.

When I first met him he was a barefooted Chinese cook boy in Hawaii. His mother was a coolie vegetable peddler. He had just finished the grammar school, and was saving money to enter high school. He helped in a night school for Filipinos, and worked during spare moments at typesetting. Then he entered high school, working his way by doing housework. He graduated with honors, winning a college scholarship. He made the acquaintance of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, later president of the Southern Chinese Republic, then in Hawaii.

Then we entered the World War. He tore his scholarship into bits and entered an officers' training camp, where his yellow skin and almond eyes were against him. But he won a commission, where some Caucasian rivals failed. He was assigned to training recruits, and later promoted to a captaincy. His community was so proud that a subscription was made, by Caucasians as well as Orientals, to present him with a gold-hilted sword as he left for France.

There he was detailed in charge of some of the 300,000 coolies whom China had sent to labor and release allied fighting men for the trenches. He insisted for fair play for his countrymen, and won their hearts.

After the armistice, we lost sight of Captain Feng until his former employer, traveling in China, was alarmed to find himself between two opposing armies, and the railroad torn up so that he could neither advance nor go back to Canton. He set out to walk, but under hot cross fire was wounded, and in peril. He was about to give himself up as lost when out of the smoke of battle roared a motorcycle. The rider saw him and drew near. What was the relief of the wounded man to recognize his former Hawaiian cook, now Colonel Feng, of Sun Yat Sen's army. Recognition was mutual, then a safe retreat on the motorcycle, to Colonel Feng's regiment of former coolies in France.

It sounds like romance, but life is full of romance for the determined, ambitious, hard-working boy—not war romance ever again, we hope; but achievement in business, citizenship, Christian character.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

TITHING.

By Mrs. W. E. Neely.

And shall I fail to pay my tenth
To him who gave his life for me?
Ah, such a paltry recompense,
Thou blessed one of Galilee!

To him who gave us all we have,
Life, health, and strength and wisdom, too,
To earn and fashion what we make,
And hope and courage to endure;

How can we then, refuse to pay
The simple tenth of what we have
To bear the message on its way
That Jesus died, that we might live?

Lord, help us all to realize
The debt of love we owe to thee,
And may not any minimize
This great responsibility.

Then let us bow with humble hearts,
And ask for grace to understand
How best we pay this debt of love
To our God and fellow-man.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Brother R. B. Bellew, Biloxi, Miss., has been taking the Advocate more than forty years.

Mrs. Eva Richardson, Shreveport, La., has been a reader of the Advocate for fifty years.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, of Harrisonburg, La., had secured nearly half of his mission special quota by Feb. 6.

Rev. J. E. Selfe, our pastor at Loke Providence, La., has organized a Senior Epworth League with thirty members.

The new church at Winnsboro, La., is nearing completion, the roof now being on. Rev. H. W. Rickey is the pastor.

Rev. A. D. George, pastor of the Wisner charge, Louisiana Conference, has organized a Woman's Missionary Society at Sicily Island.

"The work is moving along nicely on the Fulton circuit, and we are going forward with the mission special," writes Rev. E. C. Driskell.

Rev. D. B. Boddie, our pastor at Opelousas, La., has planned to begin a revival meeting on Easter Sunday, to continue probably two weeks.

As a result of the meeting held at Gilbert, La., by Miss Daisy Davies, the pastor, Rev. F. M. Miller, received about forty members into the church.

The Seashore District Conference will be held at Pascagoula, March 30-31, instead of April 14-15, as previously announced. Rev. J. L. Sells is presiding elder.

The New Orleans District Sunday school meeting will be held at Felicity Church on Sunday afternoon, March 6, at 3 o'clock. Mr. J. H. Carter is the district secretary.

Under date of Feb. 24, Rev. G. H. Corry writes: "We have gone over the top in our missionary special on the Winnfield circuit, with two churches still to hear from."

Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, is chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Louisiana, and Dr. John F. Foster, our pastor at New Iberia, is chaplain of the Grand Chapter.

Rev. Ralph E. Nollner, assistant secretary of the Epworth League Board, has been appointed general superintendent of the Southern Assembly, Lake Junaluska, N. C., and will assume his duties on May 1.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, desires that attention be called to the change of date of the Vicksburg district conference—from April 19-20, to May 3-4. Let all concerned take notice.

Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor at Tallulah, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week. He was in the city for a day or two on business. He secured more than his mission special quota on Feb. 20.

Ruth, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Lee, of Homer, La., underwent an operation for acute appendicitis at the Haynesville sanitarium on Feb. 21. She stood the operation well and is doing splendidly.

Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder of the Newton District, Mississippi Conference, announces a change in the date of the Newton District Conference, from April 20-21, to April 26-27. The conference will be held at Walnut Grove.

Rev. J. A. Alford, pastor at Rayville, La., has faithfully followed the special missionary program, and is confident of securing the full amount asked for from his charge. A movement for a new church is getting under way at Rayville.

Rev. W. N. Ware writes: "I wish my address changed from Jackson, Miss., to Ellington, Mo. The doctors have advised against my return to Africa now, and I have been appointed by Bishop McMurry to finish out the year at Ellington."

The "Methodist Visitor," issued by Rev. H. D. Suydam, pastor of the Arcola charge, is an interesting church bulletin. We learn from it that Rev. James H. Felts will assist Brother Suydam in a meeting at Arcola, beginning on March 7.

Mrs. M. C. Bell, of Cary, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, says: "It is an old and valued friend—one that I cannot afford to lose. It has been coming to my house since I was a baby, which is a long time." Blessings upon her!

Rev. T. A. Ferguson,, pastor of the Forest and Morton charge, Mississippi Conference, recently underwent a serious operation at the Jackson Infirmary. He is in the hands of a skilled surgeon, and he expects to be permanently restored to health.

Rev. Henry T. Young, member of the Louisiana Conference and one of our most efficient general evangelists, began a meeting with Rev. L. E. Crooks at Selma, La., on last Sunday. Brother Young has an open date, April 3-17, that he would be glad to have taken. His address is De Ridder, La.

The Ruston Motor Company, through its manager, Mr. L. B. Breed, recently gave to the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage a new, fully equipped Chevrolet school truck, to be used in conveying the children to and from school in bad weather. This is a magnificent contribution to the work of a great institution.

The Methodists of Homer, La., have let the contract for a new parsonage, and the builders are at work. The building will have eight rooms, bath, ample porches, with oak floors throughout. The exterior will be of brick veneer. When completed, it will be one of the best parsonages in the Conference. Rev. J. W. Lee is the pastor.

Brother J. L. Porter, Sr., Gulfport, Miss., writes that the Advocate was taken by his father when it was first started, and he himself has taken it for forty-nine years. He was formerly of Lexington, Miss., and knows many of the preachers and laymen of the North Mississippi Conference. We appreciate his kind words concerning the paper.

The Advocate is authorized to announce that Rev. R. A. Bozeman, of Pleasant Hill, La., Louisiana Conference evangelist, has been appointed pastor of the Epworth Methodist Church, this city, to succeed Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, who was appointed to De Ridder, La., to succeed Rev. J. L. Evans, released from his work on account of his health.

It is good news that Rev. C. C. Miller, our pastor at Franklinton, La., who has been ill since Conference, is now able to take up his work. He preached for the first time since Conference on Feb. 20. During his illness, Rev. F. N. Sweeney, a superannuate member of the Conference who lives at Franklinton, filled the pulpit efficiently and acceptably.

Rev. William L. Robinson, of Coffeeville, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a real revival at Coffeeville. There were eleven additions to the church—ten on profession of faith and one by letter. Some of these went to the Baptist church, some to the Methodist church, and one to the Presbyterian church. Rev. Shed Hill Caffey did the preaching, and Rev. W. C. Newman directed the singing."

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, Gulfport, Miss., a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, has been preaching for about fifty years, and has been reading the Advocate about the same length of time. He is now in his eighty-seventh year. He served throughout the Civil War, being in all the battles of his regiment, without even the slightest wound. He and Sister O'Bryant make their home with their daughter in Gulfport.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, Mississippi Conference evangelist, has moved from Jackson, Miss., to Hattiesburg, Miss., his new address being 103 Fourth Avenue, that city. Brother Jones has recently been made a member of the International Federation of Christian Workers, of Siloam Springs, Ark., of which Rev. John Brown is president and Albert C. Fisher secretary. Brother Jones has some open dates for the spring and summer that are available for the brethren.

Mrs. Isabelle O'Pry, widow of the late Captain James T. O'Pry, passed to her reward on Friday of last week. Mrs. O'Pry had been an active member of the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, this city, for many years, and the funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Dr. J. B. Mitchell, on Saturday afternoon, with interment in Metairie Cemetery. She is survived by two sons and a daughter, the daughter being Mrs. R. F. Harrell, wife of Rev. R. F. Harrell, our pastor at Many, La. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends of the deceased.

The eleventh annual session of the Louisiana Conference State-wide Sunday School Conference will be held at Monroe, La., March 29-31. Dr. F. C. Wrenn, of Winnfield, is president. Free entertainment will be furnished all delegates whose names are sent to Mrs. Robert McCann, Monroe, by Tuesday, March 22. Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis; Dr. F. N. Parker, of Emory University, and Dr. Humphrey Lee, of Dallas, are on the program. We are indebted to Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Sunday School Superintendent, for an invitation to attend.

The Seashore Divinity School will meet this year on June 14, and continue for two weeks. The undergraduate course of study for this year will be given and, in addition, two platform lectures daily. Those who have attended this school on the historic Seashore Camp Ground know what a fine institution it is and how fine the fellowship enjoyed. It is almost an ideal place at which to combine a restful vacation with profitable study.

The school is conducted under the auspices of the Alabama, the Mississippi, and the Louisiana Conferences.

With the compliments of the publishers, the Cokesbury Press, we have received a copy of the Combined General Minutes and Yearbook of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 1926-1927. It is edited by Curtis B. Haley, assistant editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review. We cannot see how any preacher can get along without it—and it is just as valuable for the layman. In addition to all the official minutes of all the Conferences, it gives a great deal of interesting and valuable information about the work of the church. It really is interesting. The volume has nearly 500 pages, and sells for 50 cents! The Cokesbury Press is the trade name of our Publishing House, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

A LETTER COMMENDING A GREAT WORK.

Dear Brother Gladney: If I have any influence it ought to be in the North Mississippi Conference where I have held my membership for forty years, and I want to put every ounce of what influence I have behind the Religious Education program. I believe in it with all my soul.

The more I study it the more I am convinced that it is getting back to Christ's own program for his church. "He taught as never man taught." What was his ministry but a teaching ministry? The very first thing he did was to organize a leadership training class of twelve. The Sermon on the Mount is a lecture to this class on the ethical principles of the kingdom. The Commission is his final instructions to this class as to the manner of carrying on his work. "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsover I have commanded you." If that is not a teaching program, I do not know the meaning of language.

He took "a little child and set him in the midst of them," to represent his idea of greatness. He is greatest in whom there are greatest possibilities. A child is greater than an adult because he has not learned so many things that are wrong. Unlearning is twice as difficult as learning. But even an adult can learn if he wants to know and has an open mind.

I am proud of the fact that our church is leading the world in Religious Education, but all the live churches are realizing its significance, even the Romanists and Jews. It speaks well for our ministry that 70 per cent of them are taking the training courses and equipping themselves to be directors of Religious Education in their own churches. The good women, too, are seeing the meaning of this movement. Our men are too busy making money just now, but they are bound to fall into line. Only five per cent of our Sunday school superintendents are taking courses in our training classes. The result is that in many places good women are being elected superintendents.

I wish you Godspeed in your work, and many you see of the travail of your soul and be satisfied.

Cordially and fraternally yours,

JOHN A. RANDOLPH.

CONFERENCE-WIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING.

On April 5-6, there will be held in Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., a Conference-wide Sunday School Conference. This meeting is to serve all people of the church in the Mississippi Conference. There will be group meetings on the morning of the 6th, for those who wish to attend, of the following groups: Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary, Junior, Adolescent, Adult, Missionary, and Check-Men. It is hoped that all those who are specially interested in any one of these phases of the work will be present and get the instruction in the group dealing with their special phase of the work. There will be visiting workers present, and besides the group meetings mentioned, there will be inspirational addresses given from time to time. We earnestly hope that every pastor, superintendent of Sunday school, with all other interested Sunday school workers of the local Sunday school, will be present and help make this meeting a great success for the Kingdom of our Lord and Master.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE-WIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

There is no more important work before our church to-day than the work of religious education. The need for trained workers is imperative. The trained day school teacher has the children for five days in the week. If the church school is to compete in thoroughness and in methods of instruction with the day school, the Sunday school teacher must specialize in the work of religious education by taking teacher training work, which is so amply provided for by our church to-day. The work of teacher training is of the highest importance to the successful prosecution of our Sunday school work. The courses given in the training work are both fascinating and helpful to those who are engaged in such work and is bound to exert a most wholesome and helpful influence in our Sunday school work.

There is to be held in Capitol Street Methodist Church in Jackson, Miss., April 5 and 6, a Conference-wide Sunday school conference. The purpose of this conference is for counsel and helpful suggestions and information for pastors, superintendents, and teachers. The program being prepared for this conference will be found to be interesting and suggestive, and on it are to be some of the outstanding Sunday school workers of the church. It is hoped that as many of our workers as can do so will be in attendance on this great conference.

W. J. DAWSON.

Shubuta, Miss.

ATTENTION!

The New Orleans Christian Advocate offers a special rate to churches on a wholesale basis. If your church will secure subscriptions from one-half of the families of your church, we can let your church members have the paper at $1.25 per annum, provided all arrearages are paid. This offer expires on April 1.

On Jan. 12, 1927, we laid to rest all that was mortal of BROTHER JAMES T. MEANS. The summons came very unexpectedly. While enjoying good health and in the active discharge of duties, his spirit quietly slipped out and went home to be with the Heavenly Father, whom he had served so faithfully here. Brother Means was born Jan. 2, 1867. At an early age he joined the Episcopal Church, but after his marriage to Miss Dell Bonner, in 1895, he united with the Methodist Church, in whose service he remained active until the end. The corner stone of the Ida Methodist church, which was erected in 1904, bears his name as chairman of the building committee. He furnished a house, free of rent, to the first resident pastor of this charge. During the twenty-five years of the history of this church, he has been closely identified with its progress and has been a part of all of its activities. He was truly the preacher's friend. Brother Means was modest, but with a keen sense of humor. In him were blended those fine characteristics of industry and good judgment that gave success in a business way, coupled with charity and brotherly love that gave him a host of friends. He was for the past twenty-three years a member of the Caddo Parish School Board, and has had much to do with the development of the splendid educational system of this parish. As a husband, he was tender and sympathetic. As a father of a splendid family of children, he was kind and gentle. In his going the home, the church and the community have sustained a very keen loss.

W. F. ROBERTS.

BROTHER JESSIE PARKER was born Dec. 27, 1845, and died Nov. 18, 1926. He was buried at the Gibson cemetery, near Pleasant Hill Methodist church, where some of his loved ones had preceded him to the great beyond. Brother Parker was a lifelong member of the Methodist church, which he loved and served as a faithful official for many years. Many people have mentioned especially the remarkable power Brother Parker exercised in prayer—his prayers seemed to ascend immediately to the throne of grace and to be heard by the Heavenly Father. A great throng assembled at the cemetery to attend the funeral and to express their sorrow at his passing. The eloquence of tears proclaimed that many not related to him felt a personal loss, and even hardened sinners used such eloquence to speak their sorrow and their appreciation of him. He leaves to mourn their loss his aged wife and four sons and four daughters, and their families. May the consoling grace of the Holy Spirit continue to comfort those who love him, is the prayer of his pastor.

EUGENE WEDGEWORTH.

On Tuesday morning, Dec. 7, 1926, Mr. T. A. WAFER passed quietly away He was born near Homer, La., June 17, 1853, and in early life joined the Methodist church. He was a devoted Christian worker until his health failed a few years ago. Although he suffered much, he bore it all with patience. He said, "I am ready to go just any time God calls, for I know there is nothing in this world but suffering for me." He was buried in Mill Creek cemetery, by the side of his parents. Besides his wife, he leaves an aged brother, Mr. W. C. Wafer; three children, Mr. J. A. Wafer, Mrs. A. L. Messick, of Coushatta, La., and Mrs. J. R. Arresett, of Hallsville, Tex., to mourn their loss.

ONE WHO KNEW HIM WELL.

THOMAS GLENN LOGAN, infant son of Zach and Viola Logan, was born Jan. 17, 1926, a beautiful little boy, the idol of the home. His was a great heritage from parents and grandparents—noble Christian men and women. This family had, only a few months ago, gone through a great sorrow, and now the loss of the dear little boy is heart-breaking; we all feel keenly the sorrows of these parents, and would help them carry the burden. It seems that the most beautiful flowers of earth are often chosen to be transplanted to that lovely garden to bloom where the chilling winds of earth can never touch them. Thomas Glenn went to his heavenly home on Jan. 27, 1927, to be with his grandmother and other loved ones, and with Jesus, who loves little children. He will be waiting to welcome you. We know how feeble are any words of mortals to help in a time of such grief, but God "is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think," and he will take care of you. May his memory be a guiding star to father, mother, and Bob and Joe, shining on your pathway, leading you to heaven.

MRS. M. L. WHITE.

FROM CARTHAGE, MISS.

Carthage Methodism is advancing. The rearranging of the work in making a station of Carthage called for a new parsonage, which is being built by the Carthage church and the Carthage circuit, and is nearing completion. The Carthage church has launched a move for a new modern brick church, with twelve Sunday school rooms, which we expect to begin soon.

Every department of the church work is advancing. The congregations at the regular services have been encouraging.

We have planned for our revival to begin March 18, and continue through March 27. Revs. E. A. King, R. T. Hollingsworth, and C. W. Alford will be with us in this meeting. These three men, with the writer, sang together as a quartet while in school, and the pastor is happy to have these men with him, not only for their fellowship, but because God has used them wonderfully in other revivals. We are praying for and expecting the greatest revival this church has ever known.

The people have been very thoughtful of pastor and family and have shown them every courtesy. The pastor and family are delighted with the work here, and feel that we have a wonderful field for labor. Surely our lines have fallen in pleasant places.

Fraternally yours,

M. L. McCORMICK.

ZONE MEETING, ST. JOSEPH, LA.

The regular quarterly meeting of the eastern zone of the Monroe District, Woman's Missionary Society, was held at the Union church in St. Joseph, La., Feb. 10, 1927.

The meeting was well attended, there being fifty-two members present and about fifteen visitors. The delegates represented the Societies of Tallulah, Waterproof, St. Joseph, and Wesley Chapel.

The meeting opened at 12 o'clock, when Mrs. German Baker, president of the St. Joseph Society, welcomed those present, and a luncheon was served by the home Society.

The regular program began at 10 o'clock, being called to order by Mrs. Yourtee, the zone president. The congregation then sang, "When Love Shines In."

Mrs. T. D. Lipscomb gave the Bible reading and an interesting talk on "Faith." Prayer was offered by Rev. Ellis Smith, of Tallulah. All then enjoyed a beautiful solo, sung by Miss Margie Davidson.

The main program for the day was based on, What the Missionary Council is doing in the following foreign countries: China, Mexico, Brazil, Japan, Cuba, Africa, Siberia, Russia, and Manchuria. These talks were given in an interestling way, being illustrated by the use of maps, the following ladies taking part: Mrs. Smith, of Tallulah; Mrs. Boswell, of St. Joseph; Mrs. Cook, of Wesley; Mrs. Lipscomb, of Waterproof; Mrs. Lindsay and Miss Lindsay, of Wesley Chapel.

Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Lipscomb sang a very beautiful duet.

The zone president conducted an interesting oral quiz on the Yearbook and Minutes of the Louisiana Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Mrs. Wimberly, of Tallulah, sang a solo. Then, after a short business session, we were dismissed with prayer by Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, every one pronouncing the day a great success and inspiration.

MRS. W. R. DANIEL.

FEBRUARY MEETING OF THE SOCIETY AT CLEVELAND, MISS.

The February meeting of the Methodist Missionary Society of Cleveland, Miss., was an all-day meeting in the beautiful home of Mrs. P. B. Woollard. The president, Mrs. H. D. Todd, called the meeting to order.

The morniing session consisted of a very interesting program, led by our recording secretary. We studied about Africa as a mission field, which was ably discussed by several of our women.

At the noon hour, Mrs. Woollard, assisted by eleven other ladies, served a two-course luncheon to about sixty women. We all enjoyed the delicious luncheon, and also the social hour spent together. We defy the card-playing folks to say they had a better time than we did.

The afternoon was devoted to business. We did not have to rush. As usual, much important business was dispatched, and when time came to adjourn we felt the day had been both pleasant and profitable.

These social meetings help us to understand one another better, and, doing so, enables us to do better service, for we are colaborers together with God.

MRS. S. C. TAYLOR,
Publicity Superintendent.

FINE ZONE MEETING AT HATTIESBURG, MISS.

The zone meeting of the Woman's auxiliaries of Main Street, Court Street, Broad Street, Petal, and Bonhomie Methodist churches was held at Court Street Church, Monday afternoon, Jan. 29, with Mrs. D. E. Edwards, the newly elected president, in the chair.

Mrs. J. R. Jones, wife of the presiding elder, gave an inspiring devotional talk.

Two numbers, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," and "Jesus, Savior, Pilot me," were rendered by Mmes. Herbert Owen, T. P. Crymes, Charles Ehlers, and Tom Longre, with Mrs. Nellie Barbour at the piano.

Mrs. W. A. Bilbo, treasurer, gave an interesting report on finances.

Miss Harriett Leech impressed her hearers with her talk on "The Lepers' Colony," which is so near, being located at Carville, La. She reminded those present of Christ's injunction, "Cleanse the Leper," and gave the "Pig Bank" plan as a means of helping. This talk was followed with the touching song, "He Cares for Us," written by a leper, and sung by Mrs. Lester Cochran.

There was a vocal trio, "Now the Day Is Over," music by Mrs. Charles Ehlers, sung by Mrs. Herbert Owen, Miss Blanche Trigg, and Mrs. Tom Longre, with Miss Kathleen King, accompanist.

Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, who is just back from a meeting in Nashville, Tenn., gave quite a thrill when she reported that the Belle Bennett Memorial fund had gone over the top, and especially did the Misssissippi Conference reach its quota.

Two voice numbers, "Upward Bound," a Negro spiritual, and "O, Sheltering Cross," both words and music by Mrs. Frances Minor Crymes, were rendered by Mrs. Tom Longre.

The free-will offering amounted to $11.22.

A duet, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," was sung by Mrs. Herbert Owen and Mrs. Tom Longre, accompanist, Mrs. Nellie Barbour.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess Societies—those from Court Street and Petal churches—and a social half hour very much enjoyed by all.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Chaplain John A. Randolph, an honored member of our Conference, a member of our Sunday School Board, whose address is 2607 Oakland Avenue, Nashville, Tenn., has agreed to put on Point I of the Program of Work in the schools of the Greenville District, with the aim of holding a District Federation of Wesley Bible classes in the early fall. Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, presiding elder of the district, and a number of the pastors have agreed to lend all aid possible in making the Greenville District 100 per cent in Religious Education as well as 100 per cent in finances. Let us see what can be accomplished by doing real team work all over this great field.

A copy of each of the Sunday School Day programs has gone to every pastor in the Conference. The district superintendents write me they are sending the programs to all who order. R. G. Lord, of Coahoma, says he is going to have every charge in his district observe the day. He has received orders from fifteen schools already.

Suffer me to exhort all Sunday school superintendents to see that each of their teachers is supplied with a copy of the Workers' Council. This magazine has information that all the teachers need. The March number has an Easter program, it has the missionary program for small schools, large schools, for primaries, and juniors, and a program for the monthly Workers' Council. Send for several copies and use the help it affords.

Questionnaires have been sent to several men to be used in studying high school boys and girls. We need the help of 200 men and women to secure this information. Dr. Richardson writes me we can make a notable contribution to the entire nation if we secure as many as 1,500 of these questionnaires. It appears to me that this is one of the most original and helpful pieces of work we have ever undertaken in behalf of our young people. Many of them are groping for light and find no guiding hand to lead them. I wish I could pray a prayer that would reach the Father that he would move upon a thousand hearts to lend a helping hand in this enterprise. All who know how to pray are urged to help pray.

A manual, "Missionary Education in the Sunday School and Dual Special," has been mailed to the pastors and superintendents of the Conference that as leaders they may become thoroughly informed on this burning question and that they may help make our church missionary in spirit and practice. The last word of our ascended Lord uttered was, "Go teach." No heavier obligation could be put upon his followers. If we fail, the church he died to redeem will suffer loss. We cannot, we must not, neglect the giving of instruction to the people. The missionary spirit is far removed from all selfishness. No wonder it is difficult to get leaders to undertake the missionary objective. The last thing that shall be destroyed in us is selfishness. May the Lord open our eyes and let us see what he wants done to establish the Kingdom.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Sunday schools of the Conference are reminded first that the Sunday School Day programs have been ordered sent to the preachers in charge. I trust you will use care in getting these programs into the hands of the proper persons, that the Sunday school may have a program that will advertise the school and make a real impression on the community for religious education.

Try to observe Sunday School Day as near the proper time as possible, and send all moneys direct to me, that due credit may be given.

The same Honor Roll for Sunday School Day will be promoted this year as last, and I am hoping that many more schools will put on the program than ever before.

The Golden Cross membership campaign will begin soon. It is hoped that every Sunday school pupil in the Sunday schools of the Mississippi Conference will become members of the Golden Cross. This is a membership campaign just as the Red Cross membership campaign. It is an effort to get the rank and file of the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to have placed on the hearts the call of the sick and afflicted.

This Golden Cross membership campaign can be made into a real means of grace to the children of any Sunday school. It will be a fine thing if it is handled in this way. All children love to be helpful, and this gives a fine opportunity.

The Newton District Institute was held in Newton, Miss., Feb. 22. Because of cloudy weather and the road conditions in the district, the attendance was not as large as we hoped for, but we had fifty present, representing fifteen Sunday schools. This was very fine indeed.

The Elementary Institute was conducted by the elementary superintendent of the district, Mrs. J. E. Okey, and Miss M. M. Jones. They reported a most interesting session.

The reports from these fifteen Sunday schools indicated a fine spirit and growth, both as to the enrollment and the average attendance. They reported healthy collections.

The discussions indicated an interest that was very gratifying to all who were present. Plans for the coming year were entered into which, if carried out, will mean much for the work of the district.

It was our pleasure to visit Port Gibson the third Sunday. We enjoyed the trip very much indeed and were gratified beyond measure to find Brother Porter in such high favor with the folks. Port Gibson is going forward, and by the meeting of their district institute they will make a report that will make the district proud of them.

Miss Jones visited Natchez, to much profit and to her own delight. She has checked quite a number of the schools, as well as the elementary departments. Her work for the month shows much labor and attention to the details of her department.

Mrs. Hull is much improved. Brother Hull will be confined at home a while longer, but hopes to be in the field at an early date.

The District Standard Training Schools are scheduled as follows:

Brookhaven, at Brookhaven, March 13 to 18.

Jackson, at Jackson, March 20 to 25.

Meridian, at Meridian, March 27 to April 1.

Please keep these dates in mind and work for the success of these meetings.

The Conference Sunday School Conference for Methodist Sunday School Workers will be held in Capitol Street Methodist Church, April 5 and 6. We are getting more encouragement over this meeting than any single thing ever announced. Please help us bring a great crowd of people here to do actual work in this institute. We are getting a worth while program and we wish to share it with many.

Pray for this meeting earnestly.

The Missionary Dual-Extension work continues to grow; two new schools sent in money yesterday, making five new schools for the week.

There were sixty schools in arrears the first of this month. We have lined up twenty of these again. Now if we can get the other forty and forty more, we will be in fine shape.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

On Sunday, Feb. 20, we spent a pleasant day at Monroe and West Monroe. We were in this North Louisiana territory in the interest of the State-wide Conference, which is booked for March 29-31, at Monroe.

We noted on the bulletin board the attendance at Monroe at the Sunday school hour to be 478. This record will rival some of our largest schools in the State. At West Monroe the attendance was 302, which is also worthy of note. The superintendents are S. M. Collins, at Monroe, and Wyatt McClendon, at West Monroe.

In the afternoon there was a joint meeting of the Conference staff with the local committees. Much interest and enthusiasm is being shown by both churches in the approaching conference. One of the special features this year will be a recognition of the general superintendents of our local schools, the men who mean so much to the success of the Sunday school. We are planning to have a superintendents' supper, at which the greatest Sunday school superintendent in America will be the guest of honor, John R. Pepper, of Memphis, and there will be a great opportunity to discuss the wonderful opportunity of the Sunday school superintendent.

Another feature of the conference will be the Parent-Teacher work, under the leadership of Mrs. R. E. Smith. Mrs. John A. Rice, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, has been secured to assist in this new feature. There are many other good things in store for our workers.

Dr. W. W. Drake writes that he plans to have all district superintendents at the Monroe meeting, and is busily engaged in completing his district organization. He is awaiting replies from several fine workers, and hopes to see great things in the missionary department of the conference at Monroe in March.

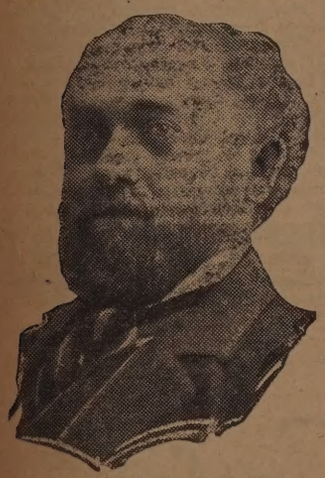
Word comes from Brother J. R. Westerfield, of Covington, that they have completed the organization of a Wesleyan class at that place. We congratulate them, and send them our very best wishes.

* * *

On the 23rd instant I was in Baton Rouge to attend a fine "Set Up" meeting for a Standard Training School. The date of this school has been fixed for May 8-13. Mr. A. A. Wren was made chairman of the board, and this board elected Miss Helm as educational director. All the pastors and superintendents of the three co-operating schools were present except Mr. W. S. Holmes, who was reported ill with "flu." We trust that he will soon be entirely recovered. Prospects are splendid for the largest and best school yet held at Baton Rouge. The presiding elder, Rev. H. N. Brown, was there, and rendered us fine service.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.



A Benefactor

A public benefactor is one who helps people to be happy. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce.

It is impossible to be happy if you are suffering—in pain or distress—ill. To restore health and strength to ailing people was Dr. Pierce's mission. During his lifetime, he gave to the world a priceless herbal remedy in his Favorite Prescription, for restoring the health of weak, nervous, over-worked women, and thereby increasing happiness in the home.

As a skilled physician, an honored citizen, Dr. Pierce was known far and near for integrity and fair dealing. His phenomenal success was due to the unquestioned purity of his medicines.

Women in every walk of life today say Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has relieved them of nervousness, weakness and kindred ills. It is a reliable medicine made from roots and herbs, sold by druggists, in both fluid and tablets. Send 10c for trial pkg. tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

How Does Your Garden Grow?

OUR Home Garden Department has been organized for the express purpose of assisting Southern women in making their gardens better and more prolific.

The amount of time and toil given to the home garden should bring greater returns.

Vegetables to eat, vegetables to can and some to hand to less fortunate neighbors add to the prestige of a gardener and housekeeper as well as to the comfort of the household.

Nowhere in agriculture are better or more profitable results obtained than from the intelligent application of a little fertilizer in the garden.

May we help you make your garden better?

EXPERIENCE OF WESTERN GIRL

Found Cannery Work Too Tiring

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America. This is possible through the magic of the humble tin can.

In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was complicated work because she did sealing and other parts of the work. It was strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition.

She tried various medicines. At last, a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a trial.

"Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes. "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 652 North Front St., Salem, Oregon.

Girls who work in factories know just how Miss Schmidt felt. Perhaps they, too, will find better health by taking the Vegetable Compound.

TERRIBLE PAIN

Alabama Lady Tells How She Obtained Relief by Taking Cardui. Feels Fine and Enjoys Life Now, She Says.

Talladega, Ala.—Mrs. Mary Hardy, 406 Henderson Avenue, this city, says that seven years ago she "got down sick" and was unable to attend to her housework.

"I have never been so weak before or since," she says. "I had a terrible pain in my side—so sore in my side and the lower part of my body.

"Across my back ached, and I was so nervous I couldn't stand up. I had just about given up when some one who came to see me began talking about Cardui. This caused me to get it. I took about two bottles before I saw much improvement.

"After this, though, I picked up right away. I slept better at night. I was hungry, enjoyed my food, which I hadn't done for some time.

"The pain and soreness gradually left my side. I regained my strength. I took about six bottles and left off for awhile, then took two or three more. . . I feel just fine, enjoy life and can work now, too."

Cardui is purely vegetable, and contains no harmful drugs. It has helped thousands of suffering women and should help you, too. NC-168

A GREAT MEETING AT ABBEVILLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have just closed a great meeting at Abbeville. We began on Jan. 16, and closed Feb. 18. We had with us W. E. Thomas, of Nashville, Tenn, who did the preaching; and he did it well. I found Brother Thomas sincere and earnest. He is a hard worker. My people were delighted with him. We had as song leader and soloist Rev. O. H. Scott, of McComb City, Miss. He is a fine song leader. He captured both young and old. He is fine with young people.

As a result of the meeting the church was awakened, so the old settlers say, as it has never been before. We received into the church thirty-three on profession of faith. All except three or four were grown people. We organized the Woman's Aid Society into a Woman's Missionary Society, with twenty-seven members. So far as I know, we have never had a Woman's Missionary Society here before.

Thomas and Scott make a fine team. I heartily recommend them to those that want help. We give God all the glory and praise for his goodness to us.

Yours for the Master,

J. R. ROY, P. C.

BROTHERHOOD ORGANIZED AT WINNFIELD, LA.

It would be of interest to you, no doubt, to know of the organization of the Winn Wesley Brotherhood at Winnfield recently.

This Brotherhood was organized from the membership of the Winnfield church and of the smaller churches in the towns adjacent to Winnfield in Winn Parish.

P. M. Carraway, pastor, and C. L. Smith, lay leader of the Winnfield church, have been very active in the promotion of this Brotherhood.

We hope and pray that the Brotherhood movement in our church will be the means of doing much for the cause of our Master among the men of the church.

JAS. RUSSELL, Secretary.

A WORD FROM THE IDA-HOSSTON CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a word from the Ida-Hosston charge. After a very cordial reception, we have gotten off to a very good start. The pastor's salary has been raised from $1,200 to $1,700 and is being paid monthly. We have organized two Senior and one Intermediate League.

In carrying out the missionary program, I have just completed a mission school at Ida and have one in progress at Hosston. We expect to take care of our special missionary quoeta in full.

Just as soon as I have finished with the missionary period of cultivation, I shall send you a list of subscribers to the Advocate.

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

To break up a cold overnight or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza, sore throat or tonsilitis, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calotabs, the purified and refined calomel compound tablet that gives you the effects of calomel and salts combined, without the unpleasant effects of either.

One or two Calotabs at bed-time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

Get a family package, containing full directions, only 35 cents. At any drug store.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter them from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, can not injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

A GREAT WEEK AT WINNFIELD, LA.

Sunday, Feb. 20, closed a great week for the Winnfield church—a great week, not because it was a Conference or the close of a great revival with a famous visitor present, but the local congregation and the pastor "carrying on" under ordinary conditions. On Sunday morning, the Sunday school opened with the best attendance of the year, the men's class leading in attendance. A large crowd was on hand at the 11 o'clock service, and at the close of the sermon on missions, the offering was taken, and more than the quota reached, the canvass being completed this week.

The pastor preached to a full house Sunday night. He is preaching a series of sermons on marriage, and I cannot say whether it is the popularity of the preacher or the subject that accounts for the fine attendance.

The Epworth League has shown an improvement in its programs since the last visit of Miss Varnado, and has assumed the responsibility of the song service for the Sunday evening preaching hour.

The Missionary Society and the Sunday school are having better than average attendance and interest. Ninety-five, by actual count, were at prayer meeting last night.

Just a word, in closing, in regard to our pastor. I do not like to use the overworked expression that he is in high favor. When he came to us over two years ago, an entire stranger to this flock, one of the younger members, in describing his manner of preaching, said, "He grabs the ball and runs for a touchdown." So it seems fitting to say, just now our church is on the upgrade, on a smooth road, running in high, with our pastor at the steering wheel and stepping on the accelerator.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

F. F. F. F. NIGHT.

Wednesday night, Feb. 16, we had at Bay Springs Methodist church what I chose to designate as F. F. F. F. (Fun, Facts, Figures, and Faith) night, and it was, at least, a mediocre affair. The object was to get better acquainted with each other, have some innocent fun, and get before the church some definite goals. These three things were realized to some extent, at least. It was pretty well attended, interest was fine, and it was the beginning of some definite undertakings in the future. The goals voted on by the congregation to be undertaken for the Conference year were as follows: (1) Fifty conversions and accessions to the church on profession of faith; (2) Every member of the church a member of the Sunday school; (3) An average attendance of at least one-fourth of our membership at prayer meeting; (4) A live and flourishing Epworth League, and (5) All assessments paid in full. I have every reason to believe every one present at this meeting will keep these goals in mind and work and pray for their fulfillment, and I am confident members who were not present will readily and heartily fall in line. You may look for Bay Springs church to "put it across" by the Lord's help, and the other churches of the charge seem like-minded. Don't charge any one at all for these lines.

Faith steady,

J. A. WELLS.

Epworth League

TO THE PASTORS AND EPWORTH LEAGUERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I was appointed by your Conference Epworth League Board to be responsible for the Anniversary Day program, and am taking this opportunity to remind you of the date, which is March 27. Please put forth a special effort to render a program in each League and take the offering, forwarding the same to the Conference Treasurer. If there is a church that has not an organized League, try to get your young people to put on the program; and if this is not possible, take an offering anyway. To render such a program might be a help in organizing a League. You can secure the programs from the central office. Whatever plan you adopt, be sure to have a program and take the offering.

I trust that there will be a marked improvement in each League during the year, and that others will be organized.

Fraternally yours,

M. L. McCORMICK.

MISS HELEN SELLS ATTENDS STUDENT CONFERENCE.

Miss Helen Sells, one of our own Conference girls at Scarritt College, had the privilege of being one of the five delegates to attend the National Student Conference at Milwaukee, Dec. 28 to Jan. 1. The trip there was made more enjoyable by the fact that all the Nashville students had a special car.

Miss Sells says that a deeply spiritual atmosphere prevailed throughout the conference, and those who attended were greatly helped. Especially helpful and inspiring were the worship services led by Stuart Kennedy, when every one felt as if he were standing on holy ground, and the discussion groups held every afternoon by Glenn Clark, particularly the discussion held on the subject of "Prayer."

On the return trip, Miss Sells spent two days in Chicago with friends, visiting while there the Methodist Temple, the Art Gallery, Hull House, the Ghetto, and other places of interest.

Poplarville League Entertains.

A very jolly crowd attended the Progressive Party given in the Methodist church annex by the Character Builders' Class and Epworth League. There were eight tables of progressive games, partners being obtained by matching hearts and arrows—the girls holding the hearts and the boys the arrows. As each couple progressed, partners were changed, the arrows and hearts being punched for progression and the points counted at the close. Henry Rhodes and Orene Simmons were awarded the prizes; and in a later motion picture contest, Aubrey Smith won. The awards were huge sticks of candy. Throughout the evening Billy Stevens very obligingly, and to the delight of all, presided at the piano. The girls of the class served a salad plate lunch with iced tea, the salad and small cakes being cut in the shape of hearts. Altogether it was an enjoyable party and everybody seemed to have a pleasant time.

WHO'S WHO MEETING AT CENTRAL, MERIDIAN.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., held a "Who's Who" meeting on Jan. 31 for the purpose of "Taking Stock of Ourselves."

Miss Trawick, head resident of the Wesley House, gave a most helpful talk about the work and the needs of the House, thereby increasing the enthusiastic interest already manifested by the members.

A passing review of the officers and Circles enabled each member to see and learn each face, each name, each officer of the Society.

Seven publicity superintendents, acting as ushers, wearing question mark badges, represented the central thought of the meeting: "Who are you? Who am I?"

The guests of honor were Miss Anne Trawick, of Wesley House; Miss Bessie Bunn, home missionary, of Wesley House; Mrs. Waldo W. Moore, wife of the pastor of the Seventh Avenue Church.

We believe the result of the meeting will be a more loving fellowship, a keener appreciation of our stewardship in our King's Business.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ON APRIL 1.

By the above caption we mean merely to call attention to the fact that on April 1 the special offer by which the Advocate can be had on wholesale terms expires. Up to that time, any church that will send a list of subscriptions comprising at least one-half the families represented in its membership, can get the paper for a year at the nominal rate of $1.25 each. After that time, the regular price, $2 a year, will prevail.

We are beginning to wonder if any considerable number of our people, preachers and laymen, have any real interest in the circulation of a church paper. It almost seems that Methodists, at least, are not greatly concerned. After an honorable history of more than seventy-five years, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, with a constituency of approximately 200,000, has a circulation of something more than 10,000—and that is about the largest it has ever had. If it can live seventy-five years more, maybe it will reach the 20,000 mark.

THE SUICIDE FAD.

It seems to have become something of a fad for high school and college students to commit suicide. We believe it is simply that and nothing more. From the newspaper accounts of those who have taken their lives, we are unable to arrive at any definite conclusion concerning their mentality, their moral character, or their philosophical outlook upon life; hence we are unable to trace any common views that inevitably lead to their thus summarily shuffling off this mortal coil. It is convenient for those who hold this view or that with reference to philosophy, religion, science, sociology, etc., etc., to find the explanation of these suicides in the prevalence of conceptions that are contrary to those which they themselves assume to be essential to right living. Maybe so. It is our opinion, however, that these young people merely acquire the suicidal complex and take the fatal step before they have come to their senses. We can hardly call it a fad, since only about twenty out of millions have done this silly thing.

WHAT A NON-CHURCH MEMBER THINKS.

Sometimes church members can learn useful lessons from those who are not members of the church. We call attention to one such. In the March number of the Methodist Layman, the following brief article signed by Dan Stokes appears: "I have been a tither for the past five years. I am not a church member. However, I find lots of pleasure in my tithing. It has become a part of me. I have never been without money since I began tithing; in fact, I have made more money that I ever made in my life before. If every man would do his duty along this line, there would be no need of big drives to raise money. The money would already be raised, and we would never miss the money, but, on the other hand, would receive a great blessing."

While we commend most heartily this example of Mr. Stokes in connection with tithing, we respectfully commend to him also the example of those good men who do belong to the church, thus publicly professing their allegiance to him whose we are and to whom all our possessions belong.

CONGRESSIONAL FIGHTS.

When we speak of Congressional fights, we are speaking literally and not figuratively—several fisticuffs having recently taken place, according to newspaper reports, between members of the distinguished body which ended its labors on Friday last. There are some provocations that become extremely exasperating, and it is small wonder that men feel like fighting under some circumstances. The best authorities agree, however, that it is better not to fight—it is so childish and, withal, so futile. Still, when men are "mad enough to fight," we suppose it is no more immoral to engage in combat than to harbor the feeling for so doing. If these Congressional fights result in no serious damage and at the same time serve to clear the Congressional atmosphere, they may not be without their value. Of course physical encounters would be altogether out of place in ecclesiastical assemblies, no matter how acrimonious the debate might become!

TOO MUCH HORSE RACING.

As one race track closed on Tuesday of last week, another opened in Jefferson Parish, easily accessible to New Orleans, on Wednesday, to continue its operations for several weeks. The whole racing business is a commercialized gambling proposition. Any of it at all is too much—one track is abundantly more than enough. Yet the public is subjected to the enticement to bet week after week, and the Legislature of the State, whose Constitution says that gambling is a vice and the Legislature shall take steps to suppress it, seems either unwilling or unable to pass a law against this form of gambling that will hold water.

The argument for a law against gambling is not based on religious grounds, but on economic and social grounds. It was not the religious argument that brought about the Eighteenth Amendment, but the economic, and it is the economic argument that is going to maintain it. Likewise, the economic argument will ultimately do away with licensed gambling. But it takes the lawmakers a terribly long time to learn the economic fallacy of the argument that you can get something for nothing. If all the promoters and hangers-on of the race tracks and the poor suckers that support them would go to work, they would make a real contribution to the welfare of the community. As it is, they are parasites on society. And some of them, judging by what we read, are just plain criminals.

MAKING A GOOD PREACHER OF A POOR ONE.

Once in awhile a congregation complains that it has a poor preacher. Doubtless there is sometimes ground for this complaint. However, every congregation has it within its power to make a better preacher out of the poor one it has if it will determine to do so. If the people will go to church, listen attentively and sympathetically, enter into the spirit of the service and co-operate with the preacher in every possible way, they will soon find that their poor preacher has shown great improvement. Preachers make congregations—and congregations make preachers.

IT WOULD HELP.

We do not know of anything that can take the place of faith in a personal God and a personal acceptance of Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior. But it would help the world a good deal if people would get rid of "the mists of fear, envy, hatred, suspicion and greed which have blinded our eyes and thrust us asunder," and learn "to walk together in the ways of human friendship." Doing this would not save the world, but it would make it a pleasanter place for Christians and non-Christians to live in. And it would make it an easier place for God to work in.

SUGGESTED BY ROMANS VII.

By Mrs. Laura M. White.

O God, why has thou given this desire,
This urge to reach the highest life;
A yearning soul, a heart on fire.
Yet ever torn and tossed by strife?
Held down by self, by envy flayed,
Enslaved e'en by the thing I loathe,
Shall I no more on earth be free?
Dear Christ, thy power shall break the bonds
And freedom I shall find in thee.

METHODIST EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION MEETS.

An educational agency of our church which is growing rapidly in influence and usefulness is the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The eighth annual meeting of this Association, held in Memphis, Tenn., recently, was, perhaps, the most successful one yet held, and demonstrated again the wisdom of that legislation of the General Conference of 1918 which brought the Association into being.

The attendance was excellent, nearly all the educational institutions and Annual Conference Boards of Education having one or more representatives present. The General Sunday School Board, the Epworth League Board and the Board of Missions, all of which are at work in the field of religious education, were well represented. The four departmental groups held separate meetings on Tuesday, for discussion of questions and problems peculiar to themselves, while the Association as a whole held four sessions on Wednesday and Thursday.

The general theme of the program was, "Unifying the Educational Program of the Church," and the entire educational task of the church was brought within the scope of the discussions. Space will not permit even the mentioning of the many excellent papers and addresses. The president's address on "The Contribution of the Church College to the Work of the Church," by Dr. J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, and the message brought by Dr. William S. Bovard, General Secretary of the Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, were the two outstanding features of a rich and full program. Dr. Bovard's address was a fine exposition of the unified educational program now in operation in his church.

The Joint Committee on Religious Education, whose duty is to promote religious instruction and training for leadership in colleges, and which is composed of members of the General Sunday School Board and of the General Board of Education, was also in session in Memphis, and presented to the Association a report on curricula for colleges and junior colleges. After discussion the report was referred back to the joint committee for further study, revision and publication. The report will be published and distributed not later than June 1, 1927.

Of the "Findings" adopted by the Association, I can mention only a few of the more important recommendations:

1. That each Conference Board of Education seek to have the observance of Education Day ordered by the Annual Conference.

2. That each Conference Board of Education hold a mid-year meeting.

3. That there be a uniform method of forming Conference Boards of Education.

4. That the General Conference Board of Education make a study of all the junior colleges of our church as to cost of instruction per literary student, salaries paid, tuition charged, income, endowment, Conference assessment, and all other matters which affect the efficiency of the work of these institutions.

5. That college tuition and fees should be increased as fast as circumstances will permit, but that in order that the door of opportunity may not be closed to worthy and needy students endowed scholarships and generous loan funds should be accumulated wherever possible.

6. That a new emphasis must be laid by our colleges upon the worth and dignity of scholarship.

7. That the church college must study itself afresh with the view of meeting more fully and definitely its obligation to give richer intellectual and spiritual returns to the church to which it belongs.

8. That every financial resource of the church must be developed in order that our colleges may be equipped to render in a more effective way a larger service to-day and to-morrow.

By the adoption of the following resolution the Association went on record as opposing all legislatin that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American colleges:

"We, the members of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 10, 1927, hereby put ourselves on record as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges.

"Whether or not we have been in position to form opinions on current scientific theories or whatever opinions we may have formed on these subjects, in any case, we are opposed to such legislation because we believe it will be futile and can serve no good purpose."

Rev. G. F. Winfield, president of Lon Morris College, Jacksonville, Tex., was elected president of the Association for the year 1927-28. President Winfield is the first junior college man elected to this most important and responsible position, but no one doubts his ability to maintain the high standard of administration set by his distinguished predecessors.

W. E. HOGAN, Secretary.

THE ASTOUNDING ACTION OF THE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

The newspapers of the nation recently carried in box-car letters the following headlines: "Methodists Oppose Acts on Evolution;" "Educational Association Feels Such Legislation Hurts Church;" "Science Holds Its Own." These headlines relate to the astonishing action of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its meeting in Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 10, 1927. On that date, the Educational Association of our church, according to press dispatches, with only two dissenting votes, whose names were not given to the public, adopted the following resolution:

"We, the members of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 10, 1927, hereby put ourselves on record as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges."

The scientific world should take notice that the Educational Association of the Southern Methodist Church has put itself "on record." Exactly! Very good; that settles the matter and clarifies the atmosphere! To put itself "on record" was perhaps a commendable thing for it to do. At least some of us are glad to have the Association put itself "on record" that we may know precisely what position it takes on certain questions of controversy; and now that it has openly and unequivocally declared itself, we know where it stands. So far, so good; but how and for what has the Association put itself "on record?" The resolution almost unanimously adopted by the Association answers the question: "Put ourselves on record as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges."

If these gentlemen composing the Educational Association could have delivered themselves in a declaration of their own opinion concerning the subject matter involved in the adopted resolution, I should have nothing to say relative to their action, because I believe that a citizen or any group of citizens of this great Republic has a right to entertain and express an opinion about anything in the heavens above, the earth beneath, or underneath the earth; but the members of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, acting in their official capacity, are representatives of the whole church, and, therefore, could not possibly adopt the above resolution without involving the entire membership and ministry of the Southern Methodist Church. While I am only one of the thousands of ministers, and only one of the millions of the members of our church, I stand on my feet and declare before the whole world that when the Educational Association adopted the quoted resolution, it did not represent me and had no right to speak for me, as they did, by acting in its official capacity—it put itself "on record" without my approval or consent. I should like to raise the question in this connection, Who delegated to the Educational Association the authority to speak on a subject of this nature for the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South? I, for one, both as a minister and member of our beloved church, clothed with the same rights and privileges as those who profess themselves scholars, raise my voice in protest against the official action of the Association.

Furthermore, I object to the action of the Association because of the political tendencies of the adopted resolution which would very naturally and necessarily, of course, influence pending legislation. It will be remembered that some time ago the Legislature of the State of Tennessee enacted a law prohibiting the teaching of evolution. The Legislature of Mississippi, at its last session, enacted a similar law; and when the Educational Association put itself "on record" in the adoption of the quoted resolution, an anti-evolution bill was before the Legisatures of Alabama and Arkansas. The resolution adopted by the Association in the use of the expression "scientific subject" had specific reference, of course, to the teaching of evolution in the schools and colleges—the subject matter of pending legislation. That the term "scientific subjects," as employed in the resolution under discussion, refers specifically to evolution is indicated by the ex cathedra utterances of Dr. W. E. Hogan, secretary of the General Board of Education, as reported by the press dispatches: "Science is not being hurt, but the church is suffering immeasurably from the effects of ridiculous legislative measures prohibiting the teaching of evolution in schools and colleges." He is also reported as having said: "Educators realize that the mind cannot be legislated. The whole thinking process of our students is thrown out of gear when they are confronted with such controversies as the Tennessee anti-evolution law has brought about." It is a wonderful thing to be a scholar and talk learnedly about legislating the "thinking processes of the mind." If there is any citizen in this nation who wants to legislate the mind, I have never heard of it. I wonder if the Doctor thinks the prohibition amendment enforced by the Volstead Act is just another way of legislating the morals of the people. Although I believe our Articles of Religion clothe me with the authority to speak for my church in this matter, yet I speak only for myself when I say that I favor, with all the powers of the soul and the convictions of my mind, all legislative enactments intended to prohibit the teaching of the unscientific theory of evolution in State schools. What right has the State to tax its Christian citizenship to support the schools, while it outlaws the Christian's Bible, and makes atheists of the Christian's children by teaching the unproved and unprovable theory of evoluton as an established fact of science? The common people, who compose the body of the membership of the Methodist church, know that the teaching of evolution in the schools will destroy the faith of their children in the Genesis story of the creation and fall of man, the necessity of the atonement, and every other fundamental teaching of the Christian's Bible. The common people are, therefore, against the teaching of evolution in the State schools and the church schools as well, and all the resolutions adopted by educational associations, whose members profess themselves scholars, will not hinder to any appreciable extent the enactment of prohibitive legislation. My conviction is that God is back of the movement and intends to see to it that the teaching of evolution is eradicated from the schools of this nation, both State and church. So mote it be!

Still another reason I object to the action of the Educational Association is that it presumes to classify evolution among "scientific subjects." "Scientific subjects" indeed! When did the Association, or any other group of professed scholars of the world, succeed in the remarkable achievement of placing the unsubstantiated and materialistic hypothesis of evolution in the classification of "scientific subjects?" If it has been done, the announcement has not yet been made to the scientific world. Any school boy knows that evolution is only a theory, and a very poor one, unsupported by a scintilla of evidence; and men who think for themselves, unafraid of the pronouncements of so-called scholars, know that certain well established principles of the science of biology forever bar the classification of evolution among scientific subjects. The mental gymnastics of evolutionists is one of the marvels of the present day.

In closing, let me say that I agree perfectly with the head of the Starke University School who, in a recent article referring to the anti-evolution bill before the Alabama Legislature, said: "I, for one, object to being taxed to pay for such unscientific instruction. As the youth of Alabama and this nation are taught, so they thinik. As they think, so they are." There is no doubt in my mind that evolution and other atheistic teaching in the schools is responsible for the suicide within recent months of eleven youths, school students, one of whom left behind him the dying statement: "Death is a great adventure;" and another said: "Life is not worth while." Hence also the atheistic societies and the so-called "thinkers' associations" now organized among college students. The professed scholars among our present day leaders are sowing to the wind, and shall ultimately reap the whirwind! Once more, I affirm that I am within my rights as a member of the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when I enter my emphatic protest against the action of the Educational Association.

TO THE METHODIST CHURCHES IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren and Sisters: I am writing this appeal to you by order of the Board of Directors of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

We are confronted with conditions that up to now have not been known to us. We are out of money to pay our running expenses, and will have to borrow money to pay our bills until the returns from the Easter collections come in.

Our Work Day collections last October fell below the previous year $3,000. We have now twenty-five more children than we had last year—180 being in the Home now. This alone makes an increase of $500 in our running expenses per month.

What the Board wishes above everything else is, that on the only two days and the only collections we have for this great work, Easter and Work Day Sunday in October, the preachers present the claims of the Orphanage to their church congregations on those days and not leave it only to the Sunday schools.

Our records show that two-thirds of our support comes from the Sunday school and that most of the big churches never present this important matter to the general congregation at the services on those days. We wish particularly that the members of the congregations urge this upon the preachers.

There are several particular needs that are imperative, and possibly there are some among you who have some of the Lord's money in reserve and would like to do some special work with it. For such we offer the following investments:

The fire escapes, costing about $2,000. These for the main building, which is now the girls' dormitory. We need these and have not the money to erect them. The necessity of this is evident.

As soon as the money is at hand, we must remove the barns from their present location and erect new. This is an important item in our expansion program. We will have to build these barns according to the regulations of the Board of Health of the State. This will necessitate a greater cost. We are not prepared to state probable cost yet on this account. Benevolently inclined persons who wish to do this part of the work, will please get in touch with Brother Vaughan.

Then the main building, which has served us so well for so long a time, needs repairs. The estimate is that it will take $1,000 to put it in first-class condition.

We have deemed it best to come directly to you with our appeal for our needs; this has not been our usual method, but we think the present needs demand a more direct appeal. Follow the promptings of the Spirit of the Lord when you finish reading this and send in your thank offering to Brother Vaughan.

Thanking you one and all for past gifts, and praying their continuance,

Your servants,

THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS,
By Briscie Carter, Secretary.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A., Retired.

Number 7.

In October, 1898, the regiments at Lexington, Ky., not intended for garrison duty in Cuba, were sent home for muster out. Those that were intended for duty in Cuba were kept at Camp Hamilton till the middle of November. By that time we had some quite cold snaps. I learned the value of newspapers as bed covers. I had a folding cot, and next to this I put a layer of newspapers. On them I put my mattress, then another layer of newspapers, and on them two sheets and a blanket. On top of the blanket another thick layer of papers, and on that all the other covering I had. When once snugly between the sheets I was safe from cold.

On Nov. 14, the Second Missouri, the First Territorial, and the Third Mississippi left Lexington, Ky., for Albany, Ga., where they were to be put in shape for duty in Cuba. This brigade was commanded by General John N. Andrews, who, on account of his good nature, was called in the army, "Charity Andrews."

I can look back now and see how charitably he treated me. I wanted a leave of absence for a few days. I had heard some one who was supposed to know, say, "When you want anything in the army, go after it, and don't let up till you get it." So I got the Sergeant Major to write out my application for leave, got it endorsed by my Colonel, and took it myself to brigade headquarters. It was late in the afternoon and the General and his staff had gone to the hotel where they stayed. I went right on up to the hotel and found the General in the lobby and told him what I wanted. The General said, "All right, Chaplain, just leave your application at the office and I will sign and send it off in the morning." But that did not suit me. I couldn't be put off that easy. I told him I should like to have him sign it then. Had he been any one of dozens of officers I have since known, a chaplain would have had a lesson taught him in very emphatic terms, but not so Charity Andrews. He took my application over to the clerk's desk and wrote on it "approved," and signed his name. Not a word of censure. Bless his memory!

We had a beautiful camp site at Albany—on a high bluff overlooking a clear, cold stream and about two miles from the heart of the city. The people of the city were hospitable. The officers and soldiers were welcomed in the churches and in the homes of the city. Rev. W. F. Smith was pastor of our church, and I had the pleasure of preaching to his people many times during the five moths we were there.

As soon as we were settled in our camp, officers got busy preparing the men for service in Cuba. Up to this time they had not been given modern rifles, nor had ammunition been issued to them. Here Krag-Jorgenson rifles were issued and the men were put on the range to learn how to shoot. How proud the men were of their new guns! Many of them had never handled a high power rifle before, and the temptation was great to try it out on steel bridge spans, and good sized trees to see just how big a tree a man would have to find to be safe. An ordinary tree would not afford much protection.

Right in the midst of our preparation, when we were all set for going to Cuba, rumors began to be whispered that we were to be mustered out and would not see Cuba. It is strange how rumors get in circulation among soldiers. I presume that it comes from the confidential whispering of clerks who handle correspondence at headquarters. I remember once we were in Mindanao, P. I., and had no thought of returning to the States in a year, when one day a sergeant whispered to me, "Chaplain, we are sailing for home Oct. 10." I said nothing. I always respected the confidences of the men, and they would tell me anything. Sure enough, in two or three hours after the sergeant told me, an officer of our battalion had a wire giving us the news semi-officially. Soon these rumors of our muster out were confirmed. The Third Mississippi would be mustered out March 17, 1899.

You can see where that put me. My Conference had met in December, 1898. I had been appointed "Chaplain United States Army," and now to be mustered out, left me with a family to support and no job.

I got busy, and how it all worked out you will see in our next installment.

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER—NO. 1.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will attend the services of his church regularly.

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Heb. 10:25.

The initial duty of the church member toward his church is to be in regular attendance upon all of its services. It is not an easy matter always to do this; it is indeed a difficult task to discharge fully any Christian duty. God does not require us to do only the easy things of life; but to do his will challenges the very best that is within us. One should form the habit of permitting nothing other than unavoidable hindrances to keep him from attending all the services of his church.

THE CONFERENCE BOARD GROUP OF THE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

Dear Brother Carley: It was my privilege to attend the Southern Methodist Educational Association held recently in Memphis, and I feel grateful for the opportunity of thus becoming better acquainted with the work and problems of our educational interests. I especially enjoyed the address of the president, Dr. John R. Countiss, as well as many other features of the general program. But the main thing I want to call attention to was the meeting of the Conference Board Group.

Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, of the North Georgia Conference, was the convener, and had prepared a well balanced program on the general theme, "Making the Conference Boards More Effective." I was very much impressed with the zest with which the members of the group meeting entered into the discussion of the program, revealing a deep interest in making our Conference Boards more effective. It was very gratifying to me as a member of the Mississippi Conference Board of Education to find the members of our Board on the whole take a greater interest in the work than most Conference Boards, and that many progressive measures advocated by the group meeting have already been adopted by our own Board.

The following recommendations were brought in by the Findings Committee: (1) Education Day to be recommended by Annual Conference Board each year. (2) Mid-year meetings of the Board of Education should be held. This was found to be profitable in many Conferences, among them the Mississippi Conference. (3) Uniform procedure in the formation of Annual Conference Boards throughout our church should be observed. Members should be carefully chosen for their value to the cause of Education rather than merely to supply one layman and one minister from each district regardless of the special qualifications of the appointee.

The discussion also emphasized: (1) The Conference Secretary of Education should be authorized by his Board to go to each district conference, and the presiding elders asked to recognize him in the district conference program. (2) Every Conference Board of Education should create and maintain a Ministerial Loan Fund for its own young preachers. (3) Annual Conference Boards should help religious work in tax-supported schools, especially Methodist students. (4) Have three-day schools of Education in every church in Conference annually. (5) Efforts should be made to get each member of the Board of Education in close touch with the schools and colleges and thus develop keen interest in the work of education.

Dr. G. W. Read, of Birmingham, Ala., who was the anniversary speaker at the last session of the Mississippi Conference, was elected convener for 1927-28.

WOMAN'S CONFERENCE SOCIETY MEETS IN BROOKHAVEN.

The sixteenth Annual Session of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference convenes in Brookhaven, March 22-25.

Rev. P. D. Hardin, pastor-host, Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder, and pastors of our surrounding territory will participate in our program from time to time.

The choir, under the supervision of Mrs. Merideth Wood, will furnish special music each evening.

Miss Althea Jones, Council Superintendent of Children's Department, will be one of our guests. With the close of the last quadrennium there were changes in this department of work and we count ourselves fortunate to have with us one who has had a large part in the formation of new plans and programs for this department.

Miss Julia Lake Stevens, who is a Mississippian by birth, and was formerly a missionary to Japan, now Council Superintendent of the Po Pe Mi So (Young People's) Department of our work, will be present during the entire conference session and will address us on subjects of vital importance from time to time.

Rev. J. L. Neill, our pastor in Yazoo City, will have charge of the Bible Hour. His general theme will be, "Citizenship in the Kingdom of God." His specific subjects will be: 1. "Our Relation to Humanity." 2. "Our Relation to God." 3. "Our Relation to God's Created Things." Those of us who know Brother Neill will be looking forward to each of these Bible Hours with great pleasure.

Mrs. R. D. Bennett, efficient president of the local Auxiliary, together with her group of splendid women, is leaving nothing undone for the success of the conference. Let each auxiliary elect its delegates and send names to Mrs. R. D. Bennett. Then let each delegate be present to help make this the greatest session in the history of our work.

May our prayer for the conference session of 1927 be that God's Holy Spirit will lead and direct us that we may each be so filled with His Spirit and power that we may be "Witnesses Unto Him."

Yours for Service,
MRS. L. W. ALFORD, President.

TIME FOR THE SUPERANNUATE CAUSE.

There is but one way to do a worthy task, and that is to work at it. March, April and May were set apart by the General Conference in which to collect the Superannuate Fund.

There are a few things you should do in order to carry out the will of the General Conference.

Have your committees see every member at each church, and those who are friendly.

Have some one call the attention of the congregation to the amount of your quota, and deficit, if there be one.

Set a time for the final collection of this year's quota.

Some are using Easter as a special time for this work. It is a most suggestive period in which to undertake it.

Unless we pay our quota, we get no returns from the General Funds. The sum of $78,379.62 has been paid out of an apportionment of $269,029.50. What has your chage paid of this amount?

You can be of service to your superannuated brethren by giving me the names of persons you think can be interested in making a donation to the Mississippi Conference Endowment Fund, and also those you think would be glad to aid in building homes for superannuates.

Anything I can do to help you in your task, I shall be very happy to serve.

Cordially yours,
J. M. MORSE,
President Conference Endowment Fund.

NOTES FROM THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Rev. Robert Selby, the presiding elder of the Meridian District, has finished his first round of quarterly conferences for the twenty-two charges of the district. There is a fine spirit both among the pastors and the people. In the main, the people seem to be pleased with their pastors, and pastors with their charges.

The main thing with which the district has concerned itself this quarter has, of course, been the cultivation and making the every-member canvass for the maintenance of our missionary work. The district is in the midst of this canvass, and the reports thus far indicate a good interest, and when it is over we trust there will be a good showing in this great work.

But other things have also been given attention. Six of the charges have increased the pastors' salaries over last year; others may do this, as several of the charges have not yet fixed the pastors' salaries. Quite a few have been received into the church on profession of faith.

One hundred and twenty-five Disciplines have been distributed. Our Elder believes in the Methodist folks having the Discipline of the church, and so far as he is concerned, he is doing all he can to put them in the homes of the people.

Most of the pastors of the district have organized their Boards of Lay Activities and elected the committees, as authorized by the Discipline. The District Standard Training School has been planned for, beginning March 27.

Pastoral Evangelism has been given special emphasis by the presiding elder. Plans have been partially made to hold revival services at all the churches of Meridian, led by the pastors and presiding elder, in the near future, provided this plan meets the approval of the officials.

Quitman, Pachuta, and Fifth Street, Meridian, are looking forward to new churches for their congregations to worship in.

The Methodist Ministers' Association of the city of Meridian is putting forth an effort to enlarge its work by enlisting all the near-by pastors as members. This effort has already borne fruit, and it is hoped that most of the pastors of the district will soon become members.

The pastors as a whole are busy at their tasks, and the presiding elder is on the job leading the work in a most splendid way. We feel that the Meridian District has made a good showing for the first quarter.

POISON LIQUOR.

Official Statement by Anti-Saloon League of America.

Neither the Anti-Saloon League nor any other temperance or prohibition organization ever suggested that any poison be placed in industrial alcohol. In 1906, at the insistence of alcohol-using industries, Congress passed the law for the tax-free distribution of denatured alcohol. Under that law methanol (commonly called wood alcohol) is used as a denaturant. It was already in common use for that purpose in nearly every civilized nation. Great Britain and Canada today use it in percentages rising to 30 per cent.

Four parts of methanol are used to 100 parts of ethyl (or grain) alcohol in the United States denaturing formulas. When alcohol so denatured is diverted to beverage use, it is unpleasant to the taste but not a menace to life. Reduced to the usual beverage strength, such denatured alcohol would contain about a teaspoonful of methanol to a quart of liquor, and very much less when the liquor was further reduced in making cocktails or highballs. The drinker of such alcohol would die from excessive drinking long before he could consume a potentially fatal quantity of methanol. This is even more true of the other denaturants in use.

The wets object to denaturants because they are unpleasant to the taste, not because they are dangerous to the health.

The widespread reports of hundreds of deaths from poison liquor in New York City and many such deaths elsewhere are false. At the request of the Senate, the Secretary of the Treasury investigated these rumors. His report to the Senate gave the official statement of the New York City health authorities that there was just one death from wood alcohol poisoning in that city. He also officially denied that the Anti-Saloon League had ever corresponded with the Treasury Department on the use of wood alcohol or poison in industrial alcohold.

Every container of industrial alcohol bears the label "poison." The bootlegger who removes that label is responsible for any harm done by beverage use of that alcohol. The Volstead Act explicitly provides that any who are injured in person, property, means of support or otherwise through the intoxication of any person, shall have the right of action against the unlawful seller of liquor. The Anti-Saloon League has successfully supported the passage of laws by a number of States declaring the maker or dealer guilty of murder if death results from drinking illicit liquor.

THINK OF THE DEPRIVATIONS OF THE CHURCH'S SUPERANNUATED PREACHERS AND THEN READ WHAT FOLLOWS

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

"An aged Arab priest, who had ridden with his people over rocks and burning sands in search of pasture and water for fourscore years, is about to take his last ride. See him, with form still erect, leaning on his staff, his hair and beard white as snow. He stands apart turning his eyes, dim with age, toward the shoreless desert and rising sun. His Arabian steed, with heavy flowing mane, and tail clean and white as linen, seems to know that some bereavement has come into his master's life.

"Do you see that group of men standing at a distance in earnest conference? The old man knows what it means. Having grown old to the point of helplessness and dependence he knows that he must be dealt with according to tht ancient custom of his people. The lots are cast, and two men withdraw and saddle their steeds. Another saddles the beautiful steed of the old man who sadly but silently yields to their ministrations. They bathe him after their manner, and put on him clean apparel. All others have disappeared in their tents. The old man is silently and gently lifted into the saddle and those who drew the lots ride up, one on either side of him. Without parley of good-bys, at once and in silence, the three ride straight into the desert, from early morn till high noon. Then, as if by appointment, they stop.

" The attendants dismount and gently lift the old man from his steed, and spreading a beautifully colored cloth on the sand, lay him not unlovingly upon it. Leaving him with a crust and a bone, they take his staff, mount their steeds in silence, take the leading strap of his steed and ride back to the camp. No questions were asked."

THE DAYS OF MARCH AND APRIL AND MAY OUGHT TO BE RED LETTER DAYS FOR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT — DO NOT LET THEM BECOME DEAD LETTER DAYS

GIVE IT A SQUARE DEAL.

By Rev. R. H. Bennett, D.D.

Give what a square deal? The Anti-Saloon League. Why? Let us see. The League is the bureau through which the churches do their work for temperance and prohibition. It is the church at work against the liquor traffic, as the Mission Boards are for missions and the Boards of Education for education. It is practically a part of the organization of the churches.

Through the League the Christian forces of our land have won their great battle against the saloon. The League does not claim the entire credit, but it is very doubtful if we could have won without it. What other agency could have united the many groups of temperance workers, sometimes almost as bitter in their internecine contentions as in their war against the common foe, into one irresistible phalanx?

The lethargy that follows success has come upon us. Too many have thought the battle won, and that we can now rest upon our shields. The denominational campaigns for other good causes have so filled the minds of the churches that the work of the League has suffered. The churches are not opening as freely to it as they once did, and they are not always putting the claims of the League in their budgets.

The results are apparent and will be more regrettable unless the churches awake to the situation. The support of the League is vital. In certian parts of Canada, where the friends of temperance concluded that it was no longer necessary to keep up their interest in the League, the saloon has come back under the thin disguise of "light wines and beers." This should sound a blast of warning in our ears.

The enemy recognizes the value of the League. A brewer is said to have held up in a brewers' meeting an Anti-Saloon League subscription card, and said, "Here's the —— thing that put us out of business." The New York World, probably the leading wet paper in America, said editorially not long since that if the United States wants light wines and beer in this country, they must first put the Anti-Saloon League out of commission; the World went on to tell how to put the League out of commission, viz., to close the doors and pulpits of the churches against representatives of the League, thereby cutting off its moral and financial support. Let us remember, then, that when a pastor or church does not freely open to the League speakers and give them the cordial, enthusiastic backing of church and pastor, it is thereby, albeit unwittingly, playing the game of the enemy and giving strength to the illegal and desperate liquor traffic in its avowed purpose to make the enforcement of the law a hissing and a byword.

The League was never more worthy or more in need of the hearty and genuine support of Christian men and women than to-day. It is the one organization competent to protect the homes of America from the present onslaught, through floods of wet and false propaganda of the liquorites, whose defiant attempt to nullify the Constitution of the United States is an affront to all true patriotism and decency. In one of our wet State legislatures the wet lobbyist opposed in committee the enactment of a bill to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. The chairman of the committee said: "You do not seem to understand the situation. This is simply a bill to enforce laws already enacted and to protect that sacred document, the Constitution of the United States." With a sneer the wet lobbyist said: "Sacred document indeed! When we get through with the Constitution of the United States it will look like a tattered rag." What is this but treason pure and simple?

Such has always been, such will always be the spirit of our liquor traffic. Will our pastors and people any longer permit that false sense of security to cripple their support of their great temperance leader, the League, whose educational work was the dominant influence in securing the Eighteenth Amendment? Will they listen for a moment to the ceaseless ridicule and slander of the temperance leaders? Will they remember the 600,000 young men and women coming to voting age in America every year who need the teaching work of the League?

Says one of our great editors: "It is unthinkable that the drys should allow these millions (of new voters who have attained their majority since the business of drunkard-making was outlawed) to be deceived and mis-taught by the wet propaganda of hundreds of daily wet newspapers in this country, without awakening and getting busy again in a great and worthy way—especially through supporting and strengthening the work of the Anti-Saloon League." "To your tents, O Israel."

Brother pastor, open your pulpit promptly and cordially to the Anti-Saloon League. And do not shunt this great and vital cause to a night hour, unless that happens to be your better service. And back up your visiting speaker with strong words of your own. The ultimate protection of your own church, your country and your home is in this situation. I do not speak in my own behalf, for a somewhat wide acquaintance with our church brings me to an open door in my work. But our State Superintendents are having a difficult time. I bespeak for them a cordial welcome from our pastors. It is not easy to have to ask for a hearing and to be denied. Surely our churches can all give one service in a whole year to this cause when we consider the issues that are at stake. And where your State Superintendent cannot get over all the ground and come to you every year, cannot, will not, every church put the Anti-Saloon League in its budget for from $50 to $250 a year, according to the church's ability? Brother pastor, think on this. Brother presiding elder, will you not ask at the quarterly conference about this, and suggest that the Church Committee on Temperance and Social Service be developed in its acitivity in this and other ways? Surely this is God's work. Let us do it.

And men and women whom God has blessed with means, under whose eye this falls, should without hesitation send out of their tithe to the League from $100 to $1,000 a year. This is patriotism, religion and commo sense. And this way lies permanent deliverance from the blight and curse of the liquor business, and victory for decency and law observance.

BEING MAROONED BY SATAN.

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

In keeping with my potent subject, allow me to ask a question: Is it not possible to reach a condition in this life where a sinner becomes so hardened in sin, or so completely given over to the devil and his emissaries, as to render salvation impossible? Is it not possible to sin away one's day of grace, and, although alive in the flesh, the sinner be dead while he lives in this prodigal world? To reach the hard condition of Esau, who "found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears?" To resist the Holy Ghost, as did the Jews (Acts 7:51, 52) until he departs forever?

The unpardonable sin: it is a sin, or the final stroke in a series of sins, which forever destroys in a man the capacity for penitence and holy aspiration, rendering him incapable of meeting the conditions of pardon. There is no divine forgiveness without human penitence. In my candid opinion, it would be any deed of blasphemy or extreme devilshness which would extremely provoke the wrath of God—if there be such an extreme in God's just wrath as to bar a sinner from love and mercy. Of this I am very doubtful. I rather think the dead line is in the soul of man, and not in the mind of Almighty God, and that our unperplexed reasons given cover every case where the unpardonable sin has been committed by any living soul.

The Scriptures seem to teach, and experience seems to warrant the belief that such a condition is altogether within the realm of the possible, and that an occasional one is marooned by Satan.

We should let our duty be made obvious—first, to sound the clarion call, "whosoever will," let him come to the fountain and drink, and, second, to warn every sinner against the hardening process of sin; remembering that with God all things are possible." Jesus stands ready to save the sinner from every sin and harm, and secures his soul each day. Should we meet an inquirer who fears he has committed the unpardonable sin, the answer is ever at hand; tell him that the fact he is exercised with reference to the matter is an outstanding indication that the Holy Spirit has not left him, but is really woking on his mind and heart, and Jesus waits to save him with salvation eternal, that he can live with him here and hereafter.

What a comfort is this, that Jesus is still able to save to the uttermost all that come to God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them! The dying thief beheld the brightness of that serpent of brass as he saw Jesus hanging at his side, and it saved him; and so may you and I look and live, for he is "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever."

"Faint my head, and sick my heart,
Wounded, bruis'd, in every part,
Satan's fiery sting I feel
Poison'd with the pride of hell;
But if at the point to die,
Upward I direct mine eye,
Jesus lifted up I see,
Live by him who died for me."
He lifted me.

PRINCELY GIFT TO METHODIST HOSPITAL.

By Charles C. Jarrell, Secretary, General Hospital Board.

The Methodists of Ohio, and particularly of Cleveland, are rejoicing in the well-nigh royal generosity of Francis Flury Prentiss, who has just given $1,047,000 to the St. Luke's Methodist Hospital, of Cleveland. This is said to be the largest single cash gift ever made to a Methodist Episcopal institution.

Dr. G. T. Notson, Secretary of the National Methodist Hospital and Homes Association, announced that $10,000,000 has been expended for new hospitals and homes (of the Methodist Episcopal Church) in the last year.

Among the great gifts to hospitals in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should be classed the bequest of Mr. Robert A. Barnes, of St. Louis, which built the Barnes Hospital; the benefaction of Mr. Asa G. Candler, Sr., and his children, which built the Wesley Memorial Hospital, with the Lucy Elizabeth Maternity Pavilion; and that portion of the Duke Foundation that will go to the hospitalization.

We congratulate our sister Methodism in the progress of the hospital work in their hands, and assure them that we also mean to follow him who "went about doing good and healing all manner of sickness."

A little boy was given $2 by his uncle. He had heard that a certain make of popular automobile is very cheap, and he wrote to the factory for one for $2. The automobile people were so amused that they asked the kiddie to visit the plant. His aunt took him to the factory.

"Go around," said the manager, having taken the boy's $2, "and choose the model you like best."

The youngster wandered around, looking at the various cars.

"Well?" said the manager after the boy had made a thorough inspection.

"Please, I'd like my $2 back," said the lad—Good Hardware.

DONKEY PICTURES.

When mother tucks me in my bed
And I my ev'ning prayers have said,
She makes me pictures on the wall,
And one I like the best of all,
I ask her for 'most ev'ry night—
A donkey picture that can bite.

He opens wide his mouth, and I
Just push my finger in. And my!
He snaps his jaws just dreadfully,
But doesn't hurt a bit, you see,
Then mother laughs and 'fore I know
That naughty donkey's grabbed my toe.

I pull my foot up under me
And right there on the wall I see
That selfsame donkey laughing now.
Just 'cause I hollered, "Ow-oo-ow!"
Then mother kisses me good night
And finally turns out the light.

WHEN THE TWINS TRIED TO AGREE.

By Florence Isaacson.

The twins, Molly and Dannie, had quarreled. The trouble was the one twin was just as stubborn as the other and they were both too stubbborn to speak first.

It worried big Sister Vera to have them quarrel, for mother and father were away on a business trip and she had the house to look after and the twins to care for. But now she had an idea that she thought would make them speak. She called them in.

"Now, here is twenty-five cents," she said, holding out a bright, shining quarter, "and I want you to go up to the little store and agree upon something to buy for both of you."

"Now, remember," sister said, "that you are not to divide the money and buy something separately, but you are to spend it for something that you will both like."

"Who is to carry the money?" asked Dannie.

"Well, you will have to settle that between yourselves," sister said.

"Well, you can carry it for a while," Dannie said to Molly, "and then I will carry it the rest of the way so that I will have it to pay the lady."

"All right," Molly said, already forgetting the quarrel.

But deciding upon one thing for both of them turned out to be a difficult task.

"Let's get a ball," suggested Dannie.

"Oh, I don't want any ball," objected Molly, "but I would love that little doll."

But Dannie scorned the doll idea. "Everything you want is so girlish," he said.

"Well, everything you want is so boyish," Molly complained.

"Let's get candy, then," Dannie suggested.

"Oh, we can have candy any time," Molly said, "but we don't very often have a whole quarter to spend and we ought to get something nice with it. Isn't Sister Vera the grandest sister you ever saw?"

"You just bet she is," declared Dannie emphatically.

"Oh, Dannie," exclaimed Molly, "maybe we could agree on something to get for Sister Vera. Wouldn't that be nice? It would surprise her."

"Oh, let's," agreed Dannie. "It ought to be easy to find something for her."

Bye-and-bye they came hurrying into the house.

Sister Vera greeted them with a happy smile. "Did you finally agree on something?" she asked.

"Oh, sister," cried Molly, "we couldn't agree on anything for ourselves, but we found that we could agree upon something for you, so we bought this pretty handkerchief for you. It has a pink border and Dannie let me carry it all the way home."

"Oh, you little dears," exclaimed Sister Vera, taking them both in her arms, "who ever had such dear little twins?"

"Molly wanted to get one with a yellow border," Dannie said, releasing himself, "and I wanted one with a blue border, but then we remembered that you liked pink, so we got the pink one."

"Oh, I do love pink," said Sister Vera, "and it will match my new muslin dress."

Then the twins went out to play a game of croquette, forgetting all about the quarrel they had over the last game.—The Lutheran.

THE BOY AND THE PLEDGE.

"This little shaver's name is Alfred Atherton. He lived in a little town up in the State somewhere; and when his parents died, a couple of years ago, he struck out for himself, and came down to Cincinnati. For a few weeks he sold papers, then got into the messenger service, and finally landed here. He was good-natured and clever, making many friends, but exciting some hostility by his indomitable teetotalism. While he was not aggressive about his temperance ideas, it became perfectly evident that he disapproved of his shopmates' habits of 'rushing the growler.' They resented this, of course, ridiculing, abusing and tempting him cruelly. Nothing could move him, however, and they resorted to the scurviest trick you ever heard about.

"Eight or ten of the biggest and roughest boys in the shop devised a scheme to inveigle him into one of the saloons, and either persuade or force him to drink a glass of rum. Somehow or other they got him inside the door, and, failing to make him obey them voluntarily, began to threaten. 'We'll pour it down your throat,' they said. 'You will?' he cried with flashing eyes. 'We'll see! My father fills a drunkard's grave, and I promised my mother on her dying bed that I'd never drink a drop! Now make me break that promise if you can?' With these words still on his lips the little shaver flung off his coat and set his back against the wall.

"In a jiffy the crowd was on him, and he went down, but fighting like a wildcat! Several of them held his mouth open, and one was just going to pour the whisky into it, when this same big Irishman sprang from his chair, and, seizing them one after another flung them across the room as if they had been five-pound bags of salt. When he came to little Atherton at the bottom of the pile, he picked him up, set him on the bar, slapped him on the back, and said to him, 'You little spalpeen. you make me want to sign the pledge.'

"'Then do it,' said Atherton.

"'But I can't keep it.'

"'Yes, you can, with the help of God,' the boy replied.

"There was something about the honest look in the boy's eyes and the clear ring in his voice that made the giant tremble. He had been a terrible man, you understand, having taken to drink on account of the death of a little child. He was the best puddler in the city, earning eight or ten dollars a day; but spending it all in weekly drunks, and going home to abuse the sweetest and most patient little woman in the world.

"For a moment McGinnis looked him blankly in the face, while the crowd of boys picked themselves up and stood watching from a distance.

"'My Dennis would have been just about your size,' said the half-drunken puddler, and burst into tears.

"'Don't cry! Don't cry!' exclaimed little Atherton, putting both hands on his shoulder in an agony of sympathy, for it hurt him to see the giant weeping.

"'Come home with me, lad,' the Irishman replied, and, lifting him down from the bar, led him out of doors. No one knows just what happened, but it looks as if the McGinnises had adopted the boy, for he stayed in the house, and the 'Volcano' has never drunk another drop."

"Send that boy to me at 7:30 to-morrow morning. I've been looking for him for twenty years," said the president, when the superintendent had finished his story.—Epworth Herald.

RESISTING TEMPTATION.

"Grandma, what is resisting temptation?" asked five-year-old Maude.

"Why do you ask, dear?" said grandma.

"Our teacher wants us to tell her next Sunday."

"Your teacher reminds me of something I heard when I was a little girl like you," answered grandma.

"Please tell me," pleaded Maude.

"It is a temptation which came to a little girl, and to which she almost yielded. Her papa gave her a big, round silver dollar, saying, 'Nellie, take this to Bennett's bakery and get it changed into pennies.' Nellie took the dollar to the bakery, and when the man gave her a big roll in change, she opened wide her eyes. In those days the cents were much larger than they are now, and a great many of them were in constant use. This little girl was very fond of candy called 'juba paste,' made in the candy shops in that beautiful old city which was her home. She thought: 'I could take just one cent and papa would never miss it out of all these.' She knew she could get a nice large piece of candy for one cent, enough for any child. You see, my dear, there was temptation to take what was not hers, to do wrong," said grandma.

"Oh, did she take it?" exclaimed Maude, with wondering eyes.

"I will tell you. She sat down on the white curb of the pavement and slyly slipped a penny out of the roll. She looked at the shining thing, then slipped it into her pocket—all little girls at that time had pockets in their dresses. She pushed her handkerchief over it and stood up saying to herself, 'Nobody will ever know.' She could go no further, for suddenly the words of her Sunday school teacher came to her, saying, 'God sees and knows everything.' She felt ashamed that God knew, and then the thought came that perhaps the dear mother who had died and left her, knew also that her dear daughter had come so near to sin. At once the little hand went into the pocket, the coin was withdrawn and placed with the others, and Nellie went home, glad that she had resisted temptation which had almost overcome her. Do you understand now, Maude?"

"Yes, grandma, I'm so glad she resisted."

"Well, you see, there is always a thought sent us showing the right way to resist temptation which comes to us all," replied grandma.—Child's Gem.

A Wall Street man, keen on having proficient clerks in his employment, had each applicant submit a written examination on business. At one examination the question was: "Who formed the first company?"

A certain bright applicant answered it by writing: "Noah successfully floated the first company while the rest of the world was in liquidation." He passed.—College of the Pacific.

The tired business man was returning from the country club, after nineteen holes of golf. Approaching the end of a concrete bridge, where construction was under way, he collided with a truck. Immediately he climbed out of his car to engage the truck driver in the usual heated argument, but he was unable to find him. Turning to a colored bridge watchman, he inquired where the driver of the truck had gone.

"Boss, dat truck ain't got no driver," was the reply. "It's been parked there for two days."—Everybody's Magazine.

DIRECTIONS.
All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.
Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The American College of Physicians will meet in New Orleans in 1928.

From reports reaching us, we learn that practically all the churches in New Orleans secured their special mission quotas, and more.

Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks is happy in his work at Clarksdale, Miss., and his fine people are following his leadership in all the work of the church. Of course Clarksdale responds to all the calls of the church.

Rev. H. C. Murphy, our pastor at Eros, La., has been "roughly" handled this year—his people have given him two heavy "poundings." However, he seems to be happy. The charge will raise its mission special quota in full.

We have received a copy of "Methodist Bullets," the church bulletin issued by Rev. W. C. Newman, pastor of the Houlka charge, North Mississippi Conference. It is mimeograph form, and is attractive and interesting.

"The wise steward begins early," says Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, in sending out notices to officials of quarterly conference dates. These are wise words.

Rev. J. P. Bonnecarrere, our pastor at Gonzales, La., reports that he has secured his quota on the mission special, and that he will probably secure more than that amount. His loyal people worked faithfully to meet this special call of the church.

Rev. J. M. Murff, pastor of the Sallis charge, North Mississippi Conference, is enterprising a new church at McAdams. This is the location of the Attala County Agricultural High School, and a good church building will mean much to our work there.

We have received a copy of the "West Laurel Methodist," a monthly bulletin published by Rev. G. E. Allan, pastor of the West Laurel Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss. It is in attractive form, and carries enough advertising to make the bulletin possible.

From the "Big Brother," Greenville, Miss.: "The Methodist church was the scene of an interesting affair Tuesday evening when the ladies of the Methodist and the Presbyterian churches entertained in honor of Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis and little Zaidee Jane, who will leave about March 15 for the Belgian Congo, Africa, where Dr. and Mrs. Lewis will resume their medical missionary work."

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, is still undetermined. He has been confined to his bed for more than eight weeks. He has, perhaps, gained a little strength, and it is hoped that the coming of warm weather will hasten his recovery.

On Monday morning we received the following telegram from Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference: "Please announce time of holding Hattiesburg District Conference changed to April 12 and 13. Notice for publication will follow." Let all concerned take due notice of this change.

Rev. C. C. Griffin, Crystal Springs, Miss., a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, requests us to state that his health is good and that he is ready and willing to help the brethren in any way he can, filling appointments and helping in meetings. A letter addressed to Brother Griffin at Crystal Springs, Box 313, will reach him promptly.

Rev. Claude P. Jones is with Rev. J. B. Shearer in a meeting at Braxton, Miss. This is the second meeting Brother Jones has held at Braxton, he having been there in an eight-day meeting in September last year. The editor of the Advocate has a tender spot in his heart for Braxton, that place having been the scene of his first labors in the itinerancy.

After that part of the paper containing the quarterly conference announcements had gone to press, we received a request from Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, to make note of a change of date of the Chalybeate charge, from April 14 to April 19. Let all concerned take due notice thereof.

Mrs. R. P. Neblett, of Como, Miss., who was elected Corresponding Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, Woman's Missionary Society, at the recent meeting in Starkville, and Mrs. T. M. Clark, of Tupelo, President of the North Mississippi Conference Society, are delegates to the Woman's Missionary Council in session this week at Shreveport, La.

The deepest sympathy of their many friends will go out to Rev. and Mrs. J. Early Gray, Vicksburg, Miss., in the death of their daughter, Mrs. Mamie Gray O'Mara, recently. She was a beautiful and accomplished young woman, a devoted Christain, with every prospect of a happy and useful life. Blessed are the consolations of the gospel in such a time of sorrow!

The Mississippi Junior College Commission, Professor M. Latimer, president, and Professor G. L. Harrell, secretary, after thorough investigation, recently approved the application of Whitworth College for rating as a junior college, and gave it high rating in that class, accrediting it for two full years of college work. Only three other junior colleges in the State have such standing.

Rev. Payton A. Sowell, an honored superannuate member of the Tennessee Conference, whose home is at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., but who usually spends part of the year at the Seashore Camp Ground, has been somewhat ill at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Williamson, Jr., of Tulane University, this city. We are glad to learn that his condition is improving.

The Whitworth College Glee Club, consisting of twenty-five voices, under the direction of Mrs. Hambly-Hobbs, during the month of March are filling engagements, and delighting their audiences. In addition to Monticello and Brookhaven, where they have already appeared, they are to appear as follows: Meadville, March 7; Auburn, March 9; Crystal Springs, March 25; Hazlehurst, March 27.

Beginning on Sunday afternoon, March 13, at the First Methodist Church, Brookhaven, Miss., and continuing six days. there will be held a Standard Training School for Sunday school workers. Six courses will be offered and credits given for the completion of the courses. Sunday school workers in the Brookhaven District are urged to enroll in this school. Enrollment blanks and the books to be used can be had upon application to Rev. P. D. Hardin, at Brookhaven.

The following are members from our church of the World Conference on Faith and Order, to be held at Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 3-21 of this year: Bishops James Cannon, Jr., U. V. W. Darlington, and W. A. Candler; Drs. F. N. Parker, C. C. Selecman, H. N. Snyder. The alternates are: Bishops John M. Moore, and W. N. Ainsworth; Drs. D. R. Anderson, A. C. Millar, George E. Booker, Forney Hutchinston, C. W. Tadlock.

We learn from the Kosciusko Star-Herald that the work of the Methodist church there goes forward under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. R. P. Neblett. On the fourth Sunday in February, the attendance at Sunday school was 236, and the offering amounted to more than $15. The response to the mission special was good at the service on that day, and other contributions were expected. A survey of the town from the Methodist point of view was planned for last Sunday.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, presiding elder of the Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Full reports on the mission special are not yet in hand. Bad weather and worse roads have absolutely prevented the circuit preachers from taking the matter up with some of their congregations. They will do so later. Here are some reports: Holly Springs, $401.55; Lexington, $200; Pickens church, $132; Durant, $100. Only partial reports from a number of charges. Will make a fuller report next week."

Rev. George H. Thompson, pastor of the Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., writes: "On Feb. 20, we held the initial service in the auditorium of our new church. We think that ours is the best and prettiest church in the State. Our auditorium has a seating capacity of 1,000, is finished in gold and oak, and has acoustic properties as nearly perfect as can be found. A superb Mohler organ was installed while building the church, and it pleases every one. The church has about 30,000 feet of usable floor space, and when it is finished it will easily furnish room for a thousand in the Sunday school."

The Southern Reporter, of Sardis, Miss., in its issue of March 3, carries a full account of the banquet of the Brotherhood Class of the Methodist Sunday school, celebrating the conclusion of a membership contest between the "Reds" and the "Blues," which was won by the "Blues." Nearly one hundred and fifty were present, including quite a number of guests from other churches of the city and from other places. Rev. E. G. Mohler and Rev. J. A. Randolph, former pastors, were present, Brother Randolph having made the trip from Nashville for the occasion. A fine program of toasts and responses was given. Rev. J. T. McCafferty, the pastor, writing about the banquet, says: "For a town of this size, this banquet was the biggest thing I have ever attended. Good fellowship was never more thoroughly enjoyed."

A VALUABLE FREE BOOKLET.

"Missionary Education in the Sunday School, a Manual," has just come to our desk. This little handbook sets forth succinctly the aim of missionary education through the Sunday school and defines the policy of our church in this regard. The missionary special in the Sunday school is defined and plans and materials for missionary education fully described as is the relation of the Sunday school special to the missionary education process.

This little book answers practically every important question that will arise in the mind of Sunday school leaders interested in missionary education. It should be in the hands of every pastor, every superintendent, and the chairman of every Sunday school missionary committee. It can be secured free of charge by request from your Conference Superintendent of Sunday School Work, or from the General Sunday School Board, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

By Henry G. Hawkins, President.

As difficulties were surrounding us in trying to run Whitworth as a four-year standard college without the adequate endowment, as president of the college, I asked the Board of Trustees to consider the advisability of operating for the next year or two at least as a Junior College, by which is meant a college with just two years of college work; and at their meeting held for the purpose, Feb 3, the matter was considered from every angle, and by unanimous vote of those present it was decided to take the status of a Junior College. It is the belief that with two years fully recognized in the educational world, the institution will have a better appeal for patronage than when operating four years unrecognized and unstandard.

Accordingly, the Junior College Commission has already acted in the matter, and Whitworth has been placed in a leading position among the Junior Colleges of this section. At the end of the two-year course a diploma or certificate of graduation will be given, and those who have planned their studies for the purpose may automatically secure licenses to teach. Others who may wish to pursue their academic courses further will have entrance to the Junior classes of leading colleges and universities.

Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College, is announcing that Millsaps will not receive any young ladies as Freshmen and Sophomores, except bona-fide residents of Jackson; and the catalogues of the two schools will announce a definite correlation of courses of study.

Nearly all of our present Freshman class expect to return for 1927-28, and are engaging their rooms; and we have at the present date, March 5, more new students definitely enrolled for 1927-28 than we had on May 5, last year, for the then coming session.

In the meantime there is no purpose to cease the effort towards completing the campaign for endowment of the college. We have $53,000 productive paid up endowment, after paying expenses of the campaign, and about $130,000 in pledges; and the need for endowment is urgent, and current events should emphasize the necessity that this claim be heard by those individuals and congregations that have not yet allowed this call to reach them in an effective way.

Brookhaven, Miss., March 5, 1927.

THE SCRRITT CHRISTMAS OFFERING.

By Albert E. Barnett.

Shortly after the Christmas season of 1924, the students and faculty of Scarritt College adopted the following resolutions:

"With a deep conviction that the increasing expenditure of money in wasteful Christmas giving brings sorrow to the heart of him whose birth we celebrate, and with a keen realization of the world's supreme need of Christ, we, the students and faculty of Scarritt College, herewith covenant together to observe the following plan in our Christmas giving: First, to refrain from unnecessary expenditure of money for Christmas cards for relatives and friends; second, to give the funds thus saved as a birthday offering to Christ our Lord and Saviour; third, to direct these funds through regular church channels in order that we may render larger assistance to the church in giving Christ to the world."

PARKER MEMORIAL METHODIST CHURCH, New Orleans, La., Rev. L. W. Cain, Pastor. To the rear of the church, on the right, facing Perrier Street, can be seen the property recently purchased to take care of the growing activities of this church.

In December of 1925, Bishop Beauchamp and Dr. A. J. Weeks both spoke at chapel services on Methodist missions in Europe. Their presentation of the need and possibilities of the situation in Poland led the students of Scarritt to direct the funds obtained from their Christmas offering to educational work in Poland. The amount so raised and directed was $566.91.

Early in the fall quarter of the present school year the students began to consider causes in the church to which they might direct their Christmas offering for 1926. After careful consideration, they voted to join with the Woman's Missionary Societies of Southern Methodism in a great Christmas Love Gift to Christ for the completion of the Belle H. Bennett Memorial Fund—this, in appreciation of the splendid accomplishment of those who conceived the Bennett Memorial and Greater Scarritt ideas, and of the generous giving of thousands of Southern Methodist women that is making the achievement of these conceptions possible.

Several weeks after the decision to direct their offering to the Bennett Memorial, Dr. Thomas Elsa Jones, new president of Fisk University, spoke at a Scarritt chapel serivce. He told most interestingly of the spirit in which he had undertaken his work at Fisk, of the very urgen financial needs of the institution, and of his high hopes that Fisk might do even greater things than ever before for the cause of Negro education. After the service, a number of students and faculty members, without any concerted agreement, began to suggest that it would be a fine thing for Scarritt students to share their Christmas offering with Fisk. A student body meeting was called, and it was decided to give everybody an opportunity to contribute to a free-will offering for the Fisk campaign. Within a week, $200 was collected, and a check for that amount was sent to Dr. Jones, together with a note expressing heartiest approval of his plans.

On Christmas morning, the "Scarritt Family" gathered in the chapel at 7 o'clock for a beautiful service, consisting of an appropriate pageant and the service of Christian giving. The total of the amount presented as a "White Gift for the King" was $421, which amount has been sent to Mrs. Fulton, the treasurer of the Bennett Memorial Fund.

Included in the Scarritt Christmas offering was $61 sent in by alumnae and by one Epworth League. The alumnae sending in contributions to the fund were Misses Mabel Stokes, Johnsie Hobson, Crystal Harrison, Susie Teel, Bertha Hogg, Alford, and Rossner. The Epworth League contributing was that of Central Methodist Church, Hot Springs, Ark. Accompanying the gift from the Central Epworth League was a splendid letter which ran, in part, as follows:

"A week or so ago, in our missionary meeting, we read the article on Christmas at Scarritt College. How fine and sacrificial for you all to give to Jesus the money otherwise spent on gifts. We had never really thought of giving a gift directly to Jesus on his birthday. So in our League program last Sunday we decided to take a special offering and send to Scarritt to be used with the Scarritt donation. So, the enclosed check for $12 goes to the Scarritt Christmas fund from the Epworth League of Central Methodist Church, Hot Springs, Ark."

One other contribution to the Christmas fund demands special mention. It represents one of the most beautiful echoes of the whole Christmas season, and manifests the spirit of true giving. The following letter from a good woman in Texas brought her gift of $1:

"Beloved Scarritt: The little boy saying, 'Mamma, why don't we give Jesus a birthday present?' and the Scarritt student body deciding to give their Christmas gift to the Bennett Memorial, made me want to send the only dollar I have to give to it.

"With love to the memory of dear, sainted Miss Bennett and for our precious Saviour," etc.

Every contribution to Scarritt's $621 Christmas gift to Christ represented sacrifice and consecration. Many of them represented genuine self-denial. If Southern Methodists generally were to give on a similar per capita basis, the day of "drives" would be over, and every worthy cause in the church would be adequately financed.

MRS. SUSIE E. COLEMAN was born Sept. 11, 1861, and died Dec. 30, 1926. She was married to H. H. Coleman, March 4, 1880, and to this union were born eleven children, three of whom passed to their reward some years ago—Mrs. Kate Nickelson, Burson, and an infant child. The children living art: W. S. Coleman, of Haynesville; Cliff Coleman, of Homer; Cris Coleman, of Tullos; J. H. Coleman, of Homer; Mrs. Aubin Dawson, of Homer; Mrs. Mary Mosley, of Homer; Mrs. T. L. Binson and Bell Coleman, of Shreveport. Sister Coleman was a member of Wesley Chapel Church, on the Athens charge, having transferred her membership from old Tulip a while before her decease. The records show that she had been a member in good faith for more than thirty years, and during that time she was found to be a true and tried, faithful and obedient Christian. She was truly a great mother. Without stint, she gave herself to the training of those committed to her care, and there is no doubt in the mind of the writer that she has left the impress of her Christian faith upon her entire family. To the loved ones we can only say, "The will of our God is done," and pray that he who doeth all things well may sometimes lead us all to know him, whom to know aright is life eternal. And we extend to the family our tenderest sympathy, love, and prayers. We can truly say, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Her pastor,

J. A. DRING.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

RESOLUTIONS.

The Kingdom-Builders Wesley Bible class of the First Methodist Church, of Mansfield, La., in regular session assembled on Sunday morning, Feb. 20, adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, in the providence of God, BROTHER J. R. BROWN has been removed from our class, church, and community; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we hereby express oour deepest sympathy to Sister Brown and family, and assure them of our prayers in this hour of great bereavement.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and a copy be sent to the Mansfield Enterprise and the Christian Advocate.

Signed: J. W. Lowrey, O. H. Jordan, H. L. Thornton, Committee.

The Methodist Benevolent Association is doing a service to the church in keeping with Mr. Wesley's idea when he organized the Itinerant Methodist Preachers' Annuity Society in England.

The Methodist Benevolent Association has representative men on the board of directors from the various General Boards of the church, the editorial staff, pastors, and prominent laymen.

The Meridian district conference will convene in East End Church, Meridian, April 6, with an opening sermon by Dr. Rolfe Hunt, at 7:30 p. m. The business will be continued through Friday, the 8th. Delegates should be elected in time to send names to the pastor, A. M. Broadfoot, and to me in time to make out the official roll of members.

MATHISTON AND MABEN ON THE MAP.

We are so glad to have two Woman's Missionary Societies to report, organized since Conference; also have organized a Senior and a Junior League at both places. The Leagues will contribute to missions, and we can count them on our Standard of Efficiency.

When we got on our feet we were so anxious to get in a zone; so Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 25, Mathiston Society entertained the Maben and Eupora ladies, Mmes. Scott, Stevens, and Carter as hostesses, at the lovely home of Mrs. W. R. Scott. The beautiful reception hall, living room and sun parlor were thrown into one. Forty-two guests were present.

The January program on "Christian Stewardship" was given by Eupora. They also put on a playlet on the same subject, which was very inspiring. The gentlemen present were Brothers York, Patterson, and Carter, and Mr. W. R. Scott, all of whom made splendid talks, showing their appreciation of the woman's work in the church. Quite a number of the ladies spoke out of their hearts about their interest in the work.

Some suggested organizing a zone while we were together. Mrs. H. E. Carter was asked to explain the work of the zone, after which all the ladies voted unanimously for the zone. So then and there the chairman, secretary, and program committee were appointed, and we will have our first real zone meeting at Maben the last of March.

We hope by then to take in one or two other Societies, and have this neck of the woods going toward God. Pray for us.

MRS. H. E. CARTER,
Superintendent of Publicity.

ZONE MEETING AT KOKOMO, MISS.

The quarterly meeting of the southern zone, Brookhaven District, was held at Kokomo, Monday afternoon, Jan. 31. Kokomo's pretty little church had been made very attractive inside with vases of lovely narcissus, and there were many comments from the visitors on the beautifully kept and well arranged house of worship. Several delegates, taking advantage of the balmy weather, had enjoyed a picnic lunch on the roadside before arriving at Kokomo.

Roll call showed every auxiliary in the zone represented, there being four delegates from Osyka, nine from Magnolia, eight from Tylertown, nine from Kokomo, and six from Foxworth. Three pastors were present—Brothers T. B. Cottrell, Magnolia; W. C. M. Baggett, Foxworth, and J. M. Lewis, Tylertown.

Roll call, with response, "Why I Belong to the Missionary Society," brought the expression of a desire for service through the Missionary Society and love for the work and fellow-workers.

Mrs. D. E. Lampton, who has served so acceptably as zone leader, asked to be relieved, and Mrs. E. W. Reid, of Magnolia, was elected for 1927.

Mrs. Lampton had prepared a very instructive program, having as its subject, "Duties of Officers of the Woman's Missionary Society." The various officers were represented by the women present.

Brother Lewis gave two appropriate songs between program numbers.

Mrs. Cottrell spoke of the successful completion of the Belle Bennett Memorial campaign, and urged the immediate payment of the indebtedness on the Biloxi Day Nursery.

The Foxworth Auxiliary asked for the next meeting, and the date was set for April 13.

MRS. E. W. REID.

ROBINSONVILLE AND QUALITY.

Nestled in the corn and cotton fields of the rich Mississippi Delta, some thirty miles below Memphis, is a little country church which possesses a very long name—Robinsonville. The Woman's Missionary Society of this church made quite an enviable record last year—'twas certainly a case of quality, not quantity! Though very few in number, these good women, under the leadership of their conscientious president, Mrs. H. C. Donaldson, "buckled down" to work one with the other, and, as a result, came out one hundred per cent in both the Adult and Junior Societies. To the initiated, this speaks volumes and no detailed comments are necessary. As tangible proof of excellence, however, our delegate, Mrs. G. M. Shaw, returned from Annual Conference with inspiring Honor certificates and likewise a beautiful banner—this last belonging to Juniors, and presented to them because of their splendid work. Plans for the coming year are now well under way, and from present prospects we bid fair to "continue in well doing."

MRS. W. E. COX,
Superintendent of Publicity.

CENTRAL ZONE MEETING OF THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

The Central zone meeting was held in the Methodist church at Monticello Feb. 24. The meeting was opened with congregational singing, and Rev. L. J. Snelgrove, pastor of Monticello church, conducted the devotions. The welcome address was given by Mrs. E. E. Graham, and the response by Mrs. Van Sanders, of Norfield.

Mrs. Curtis Youngblood, of Wesson, had a splendid paper on "Stewardship and Tithing." She stressed the importance of carrying out God's plan of Christian stewardship found in Malachi, chapter three.

Words of appreciation of our new district secretary, Mrs. Van Sanders, were given by our zone leader, Mrs. Boyd, and the entire body stood up as an expression of their appreciation. We regret so much the continued illness of our much loved Mrs. Bennett.

The names of the auxiliaries were called; only two failed to be represented.

There were thirty-two members from visiting auxiliaries and quite a number of the Monticello people, including friends from both the Baptist and Presbyterian churches. Brother King and wife, of Silver Creek, were with us in the afternoon.

A dear little 8-year-old Junior from Norfield sang "I think, when I Read That Sweet Story."

"Making the Best Use of Program Material Sent Out by Our Leaders," was the subject given by Mrs. Boome, of Brookhaven. Mrs. Boome could not be present, so Mrs. Boyd called on several to tell what they thought of literature. Every one said she thought the programs very fine and that the Bulletin was full of concrete information.

Mrs. Gilliam read Mrs. Freeler's paper on "Our Part in the Wesley Housework."

Another precious little Junior from Norfield gave two readings, "Which One Was Kept," and "Six Times Six are Thirty-six," which varied the program from all business, and injected "pep."

The Monticello Young People sang, "The Victory May Depend on You," after which the congregation sang No. 150, and Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Wesson, pronounced the benediction,

A more bountiful luncheon could scarcely be imagined than was served to this body of Christian workers in the basement of their lovely little church. As for real old Southern hospitality, you do not find it in so great a measure in every small town as was ours to enjoy at Monticello.

The meeting was called to order at 1 o'clock by singing, "A Charge to Keep I Have." Mrs. Sanders conducted the devotions, reading the twelfth chapter of Romans, commenting on same, and leading in prayer.

Mrs. Boyd divided the Methodists into two groups for a "quiz" as to who our Conference officers are, and the duty of auxiliary officers, which was responded to by each officer present.

Mrs. McWatters, of Brookhaven, gave a splendid account of our work at the Wesley House at Biloxi. Having lived in Biloxi and assisting in the work at different times, her heart goes out in sympathy for the foreigners of our coast towns, and she rejoices at the wonderful progress being made among them.

A duet, "Transformed," was sung by Mmes. Snelgrove and Graham.

"Urging Our Officers to Acquaint Themselves With Every Phase of Our Work," was discussed by Mrs. Brister, of Bogue Chitto.

"Why Help Our Pastors Carry Out the Plans of the General Conference?" was the subject discussed by Mrs. A. S. Oliver, of Wesson.

The minutes of the day's work were read and approved, after which we sang, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Brother Snelgrove dismissed us with prayer.

Every one went away feeling like saying as David did, "We were glad when they said, Let us go up to the house of the Lord."

MRS. A. S. OLIVER, Secretary.

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.).

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Last Sunday was spent in the Minden District. We reached Rochelle in time for the Sunday school hour, over which Prof. M. A. Walsworth presides. We noted two outstanding features in this school—good music and a fine Young People's Wesley Bible class. The writer preached at the 11 o'clock service on "Sunday School Evangelism."

At 3:30 in the afternoon a district council meeting was held, with Dr. Wren, of Winnfield, secretary, in the chair. The presiding elder, Rev. K. W. Dodson, was present, and rendered valuable service. It was decided to hold two Standard Training Schools, one at Minden and one in the southern part of the district, the date and place to be decided on by a committee, Rev. K. W. Dodson, Mr. Able, of Rochelle, and Rev. P. M. Caraway.

Rochelle is now a station, and Rev. J. T. Harris is pastor there. We enjoyed a splendid hospitality in the parsonage, which is presided over by Brother Harris' mother.

Recently our office at 611 Commercial Bank building, has been honored by a number of visitors, among them, Rev. D. B. Boddie and Mr. Shell, of Opelousas; Rev. L. E. Crooks, of Standard; Mr. J. R. Simmons, superintendent of the West End Sunday school, of Alexandria, and Prof. H. W. Rickey, district secretary of the Alexandria District,

* * *

During the week we attended two Workers' Councils, one at Alexandria and the other at Natchitoches. Bad weather interfered with the attendance at both of these meetings, but the fine spirit shown by those who did attend put enthusiasm into the meetings. At both meetings the note of Sunday School Evangelism was sounded, and at Alexandria there were two interesting talks by the workers, bringing out the methods of Evangelism in the various groups of departments of the Sunday school.

At Natchitoches we enjoyed a most unusual hospitality, extended to us by the pastor and his wife. It is pleasing to note that while Brother Johns' improvement is slow, yet he is making progress toward restored health, and his devoted church people there are delighted. He is planning to be in Monroe for the State-wide Conference, and we sincerely hope that his plans will materialize.

The first publicity matter pertaining to the State-wide Sunday School Conference was recently distributed, and we have received a fine letter from Brother C. A. Bowen, Associate Editor of the Department of Sunday School Literature, in which he assures us of his wishes for a big success at this inspiring gathering of our workers. The matter of our curriculum material will be ably discussed at the Monroe Conference by one of our presiding elders, Rev. H. N. Brown, of Baton Rouge.

* * *

On Friday, we had a fine meeting at Mangum Memorial, Shreveport, in the interest of a Standard Training School there. The co-operating Sunday schools were well represented. Mr. A. McGuirt was chosen as chairman of the board, with Dr. W. W. Holmes, educational director. The date of the school will be May 9-13.

* * *

The Woman's Missionary Society of West Monroe was asked to take charge of the banquet for the young people of the State-wide Conference, and we are delighted to receive a message from Mrs. I. A. Hearn, president of that organization, to the effect that a great deal of interest is shown by the members in the matter, and that they hope to make the banquet a huge success.

* * *

We are pleased to announce that Brother James B. Grambling, of Grand Cane, will have charge of the music at the State-wide Conference at Monroe.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

NOTES FROM THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EXTENSION SECRETARY.

Sunday, Feb. 27, was Missionary Day. Every Sunday school in the Louisiana District should have observed this day with a prepared missionary program, taking an offering at the same time and sending same to Mr. A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, La., not later than March 10.

We are very anxious to publish from month to month lists of those observing in each district and amount of offering each local school sends to Brother Mayo. As this is the only way we are to know who observes and who doesn't, it will be seen that a correct list can only be prepared when each school sends offering promptly. Another advantage is that this will enable Brother Mayo to get the foreign share of the offering off to Nashville, enabling it to reach Kim in Korea and the European field in the quickest possible time. Thus Brother Mayo has asked that each school send in their offering to reach him not later than the 10th of each month.

We have had a most hearty and generous response from our Sunday schools. A large number are observing Missionary Day with a program and offering. Thirty-six new schools observed Missionary Day, Jan. 23. This is a splendid record and we hope more will observe from time to time, until every school has taken up this splendid opportunity of missionary education in the local school and help to further Sunday school work through Kim in Korea and in the European field.

March 27 is Missionary Day.

On last Sunday we preached at the morning service for Rev. H. B. Thomason, of Boyce. The Sunday school observed a missionary program. Mrs. N. M. James gave us an opportunity to say a few words about missions in the Sunday school, and the Dual Special.

In the afternoon we visited a district council meeting at Rochelle. We were glad to note the interest manifested by this group in leadership training in particular and Christian education in general. The hope was expressed that some Cokesbury schools might be held in the district. We were given an opportunity to present the cause of missions in the Sunday school. The Rochelle Sunday school observed Missionary Day with a program and a splendid offering. Rev. J. T. Harris is the wide-awake pastor, and is doing a splendid work. He is much loved by his people.

We began a Cokesbury One-Teacher School for Rev. Martin Hebert, Morgan City, March 6.

A. K. McLELLAN,
Extension Secretary.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Virginia Thomas, Elementary Superintendent.

A training class is being held in the Brewer church, on the Shannon charge, this week. This is the third class held on this charge since Conference. The pastor promotes these classes because he believes in the work of the Sunday school, and wants his teachers to have every opportunity to prepare themselves for more efficient work. We wonder if there is a charge in the Conference which can compare with this record in the same length of time? These people are awake, and eager to have a part in leading little children and young people, as well as the older ones, to know the Master.

Brother Gladney and I have recently held an institute at Goodman, with the best attendance we have had in some time. The Pickens and Richland churches were represented in all of the meetings, and Lexington had representatives at two. The teachers and superintendents of these churches are trying to arrange their rooms in order to have separate departments for their children. They realize that the only way really to train in worship is by this means, and they are working toward that end. This has already been done in Lexington, and the school there is moving forward and making much progress. They hope to organize a Parent-Teacher Association in their Sunday school, which will be a decidedly progressive step. When our mothers, fathers and Sunday school teachers can get together to study and discuss this great problem of winning the children for Christ and training them in the Christian way of living, then we are going to see real results. The home is the starting point, and until teachers and parents are working together the best good cannot be accomplished. We would certainly like to see more of our schools follow Lexington's lead in this.

To the Elementary workers especially, I would like to call attention to the fact that during April there will be held in each district a district elementary institute. The dates have not been finally arranged as yet, and you will receive definite notice of these meetings. But in these we hope to bring a large group of our workers together to discuss our problems and ways and means of solving these. Each one please prepare to be present. Let us all remember that our aim as Sunday school teachers and officers is to lead our pupils to know the Master, and to develop Christian character.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Tho Yazoo City School began work on the Program of Work "B" this week. Brother Chambers met with the Workers' Council, and the group seem ready to go earnestly to work on this program. Miss Jones checked the Elementary work last week, and those departments are working toward the requirements for Standard. The Beginner Department was found to be Progressive. They are all looking forward to bigger and better work in the new building that they feel assured of having in the near future.

The Training School at Brookhaven for the Brookhaven District will begin Sunday afternoon, March 13, with the following faculty: Mrs. W. W. Adams, Beginner Organization; Mrs. E. B. Harwell, Primary Organization; Mrs. Ida J. Conrad, Junior Organization; Rev. L. M. Rippy, Intermediate-Senior Organization; Rev. J. C. Chambers, the Sunday School; Dr. C. W. Crisler, Life and Letters of Paul. This gives Brookhaven a strong faculty,

Watch Your Thin, Weak Child Grow Strong Take on Weight

In just a few days—quicker than you ever dreamed of—these wonderful flesh making tablets called McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets will start to help any weak, thin, under-nourished little one.

After sickness and where rickets are suspected they are especially valuable. No need to give them any more nasty Cod Liver Oil—these tablets are made to take the place of that good but evil smelling, stomach upsetting medicine and they surely do it. They do put on flesh.

Ask any druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—as easy to take as candy and not at all expensive—60 tablets 60 cents.

Be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine, and give the child a chance for 30 days. If you aren't delighted with results just get your money back.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found how to save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap, but it has no equal for results. It gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PINEX for Coughs

with four special units. This should challenge the Sunday school workers of the Brookhaven District to an unusual effort in behalf of the school.

The Jackson District Training School begins Sunday afternoon, March 20, in Galloway Memorial Church. Mrs. W. W. Adams will teach Beginner Pupil; Mrs. E. B. Harwell, Primary Organization; Mrs. Ida J. Conrad, Junior Organization; Mrs. J. W. Perry, Intermediate-Senior Agencies; Miss Allene Moore, Young People's Organization. J. C. Chambers will teach Rural Management, and Professor J. E. Stephens will teach a specialization unit in Bible, leading to a Bible diploma—Social Teachings of Jesus. This is the first school we have had in our Conference offering all specialization units. We trust that the patronage of the Jackson Training School will justify this effort on the part of the Board of Managers.

The final announcement of the Meridian District Training School will be in next week's Advocate. Please watch for this announcement.

There is being mailed to each pastor and Sunday school superintendent a poster in regard to the Conference Sunday school meeting. We trust that will help us get this before the Sunday school workers of the Conference.

The list of missionary receipts will appear in next week's Advocate. If you desire your name in this list, please let us have your fourth Sunday's offering promptly.

If the proper person is not getting the literature for the missionary programs in your school, please notify us so we can send it to that person. The person responsible for the worship service on Missionary Sunday should receive this material.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

SICK HEADACHE

No Pleasure, Says Ohio Lady, to Go Places, Till She Took Black-Draught Which Brought Relief.

Langsville, Ohio.—"For years and years I suffered with severe headache," says Mrs. Jane Campbell, of this place. "It wasn't any pleasure for me to go places, for I came home with sick headache. If I went to church or to any social gathering or to town to shop, when I got back I would have these headaches and have to go to bed for a day or more, till I would just get out of heart and would not try to go.

"About 15 years ago I discovered that Black-Draught was good for these headaches. I began using it. I would take it two or three nights in succession if I felt the least bad, and it sure did wonders for me. It is about 14 years since I had sick headaches, and I can go places and really enjoy life. It surely is splendid."

Headache often is a symptom of constipation. The best relief is secured by treating the cause of the trouble and in such a case many people have been greatly helped by the use of Thedford's Black-Draught.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE ON PICKENS AND GOODMAN CHARGE.

Dear Brother: Brother Gladney and Miss Virginia Thomas, our Conference Sunday school workers, were with us in a charge Sunday school institute Thursday and Friday, Feb. 24 and 25. The meetings were well attended from all churches on the charge, and a great deal of good was accomplished. These two workers know their work, and not only that, they know the secret of imparting their knowledge to others. Among the things accomplished were, a Workers' Council for each Sunday school, a survey to be made as soon as possible, and a working toward a 100 per cent "C" type school in both churches.

Any preacher that has a work with as fine people as are found in Pickens and Goodman, and has the privilege of having as fine workers as Brother Gladney and Miss Virginia Thomas, can expect great things if he is willing to do his part. Needless to say, we are expecting results from our work this year.

We are planning to put the Advocate subscription campaign on this month.

Your brother in the work,

CASPER W. AVERY, P. C.

FROM WAYNESBORO, MISS.

The first quarterly conference for Waynesboro was held last Sunday afternoon, Feb. 27. Rev. R. Selby, presiding elder, preached Sunday morning and evening, and gave us two excellent sermons. Altogether, it was a great day.

The reports showed encouraging progress. Eighteen members had been received—nine on profession of faith; all departments of the work in a healthy condition; congregations good, and $2,575 raised for all purposes. Nearly one-fourth of budget for the year was in the hands of the treasurer.

Within the past three years the amount assessed for the support of the ministry has been increased $775, and for General, Conference, and District Work, $665.

We are now worshiping in a commodious, well-arranged and beautiful building, worth at the very lowest estimate $25,000. The sum of $1,000 has been spent on the parsonage. Recently a bath room has been built, fitted out, and water and sewerage connections made. The parsonage is among the first homes to receive the benefit of our splendid new water and sewerage system.

These things have been accomplished by the blessing of our Heavenly Father and the loyal co-operation of a fine body of people, whom it is a real joy to serve. Among the many tokens of appreciation we have received was the recent gift by the congregation to the pastor and his wife of a lovely silver service.

We are praying and believing that this shall be a fruitful year in every way, and first of all in the salvation of the unsaved and development of the spiritual life of the church.

W. A. HAYS, P. C.

LOUISIANA LEAGUE NEWS.

Louisiana Conference Oratorical Contest.

The Louisiana Conference Oratorical contest of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held at the First Methodist Church, Alexandria, Sunday, Feb. 13, 1927, the subject of the contest being, "Know Methodism."

There were three speakers, whose names are as follows: Miss La Von Hoffmaster, of Minden, La., representing Minden District, whose subject was "Know Your Methodist Heroes;" Miss Maude Valiant, of Epworth Church, New Orleans, representing New Orleans District, whose subject was, "Methodist Doctrine," and Mr. Henry Rickey, of Natchitoches, representing Alexandria District, whose subject was, "Methodist Youth and Law Enforcement."

All three made very interesting speeches, and it was difficult for the judges, who were Mr. John Evans and Rev. C. C. Wier, of Alexandria, and Rev. James Harris, of Rochelle, to decide which was the winner; however, the decision was rendered in favor of Miss Valiant, of New Orleans.

Miss Valiant will represent the State at the Regional contest to be held at Conway, Ark., the latter part of this month.

Rainbow Banquet at Epworth Church.

The Young People's Department of the Epworth Church celebrated Washington's birthday with a Rainbow Banquet. It was one of the most beautiful and elaborate ever held at Epworth. The entire west wing of the church was decorated to represent a huge blue and yellow tent. Seven courses, representing the seven colors of the spectrum, were served. After each course there were talks, ranging in subject from "The Message of the Violet" and "Dark Blue Thoughts" to "Who's Yellow" and "Orange Hopes." There were eighty-five people present. Except for the untiring work of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Wall, this most enjoyable evening would have been an impossibility.

De Soto Union Organized.

At Grand Cane, the organization of the De Soto Union was completed on Feb. 13. The Union includes Leagues from Mansfield, Logansport, Stonewall, Grand Cane, Bethel, and Longstreet. The meetings will be held every fourth Sunday of the month at the towns of the various Leagues. The first meeting was led by Rev. James Grambling, who explained the purpose and program of such Unions. The results of the election were: President, Charles Hunter; vice president, Winnie Moseley; secretary, Jack Midgett; treasurer, James Enloe.

Ever Ready Union Meeting, Minden District.

Sunday, Feb. 13, at Haughton, La., was held the regular monthly meeting of the Ever Ready Union of the Minden District. The devotional began at 2:30 p. m., with each League giving some number. Among the number of those on the program were: Doyline, talk by president; Haughton, piano solo, short talk by one of the boys, and saxophone solo with piano accompaniment by two brothers; Minden, vocal solo, and talk on missions by Rev. L. I. McCain; Bethel, vocal duet by two brothers. Mr. George, president of the Haughton League, led this part of the program.

Following a brief intermission, came the business meeting, with Vice President Cassells in the chair. Many important matters of business were taken up, among them the coming institute and how to finance it, the importance of paying mission special pledges, organizing new Leagues, and other topics. The roll of chapters was called, the following Leagues being represented: Springhill, Doyline, Haughton, Bethel, and Minden. At the close of the business, Mr. Nelson stated that every one should sit and talk, "and wait," after which light refreshments were served to the large number present. The next meeting will be held at Bethel, Sunday, March 13.

Several new chapters have been organized in the district—Rochelle, Senior and Junior; Selma, Senior; Yellow Pine, Senior-Intermediate; Dubberly, Senior-Intermediate. There is the prospect of a Junior and an Intermediate League at Cotton Valley, but the organization has not yet been completed.

After A Hard Cold or the Flu Tone up Your Body with Golden Medical Discovery

Five Points, Alabama—"I hardly know how to express the gratitude I owe Dr. Pierce for the good his 'Golden Medical Discovery' has done me in bronchial trouble that the influenza left me with when it first came into this country in 1918. After trying three doctors and one specialist the 'Golden Medical Discovery' has done me more good than all the other medicines I ever tried, and they were many. The 'flu' left me in an awful condition. For three years I could not do anything and got no relief until I commenced using the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' It has done me a wonderful amount of good in every respect. Any one in a weakened, run-down condition will find it to be a great medicine."—C. O. Humphrey.

FROM WHEELER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We had Rev. Charles Assaf, of Jackson, Miss., to preach for us, Sunday, Feb. 20, at the 11 o'clock hour, and continued services twice daily through Wednesday evening. We had great services from the beginning, and the power of the Holy Spirit was felt and manifested in each service. There were two additions to the church on profession of faith, and one infant baptized. At the last service, when Brother Assaf asked those that wanted to rededicate their lives anew to the Lord to come forward and kneel at the altar, scores came forward until the altar and aisles were filled with those kneeling.

The spirit of building a new church was revived, and they all said by the help of the Lord we will build, so the work is to begin at once on a new church that we are so much in need of at this place.

Brother Assaf preaches the true gospel, and the power of the Spirit is with him, and the name of Christ is honored and glorified through his service. May God use him many days hence for his service!

Nitrate of Soda Grows Giant Rhubarb

RHUBARB is the greediest feeder of all garden plants.

If you would have giant stalks of juicy tenderness, cover the plants well with manure during the resting season.

When growth starts, fork in the manure and put a half pint of Nitrate of Soda around each hill. Repeat this when cutting begins.

If the plants are well watered the result will be amazing.

Lettuce and early greens will respond to Nitrate of Soda applications very quickly.

Radishes should have a top-dressing of Nitrate of Soda as soon as the seed sprouts.

Our new pamphlets will help you make better gardens. We will send them to you without cost if you will cut out this advertisement, write your address in the margin and mail to

THIS WOMAN'S BATTLE

Wins Against Ill Health

"At times I was hardly able to do my housework," writes Mrs. Margaret Wallace of 1547 Safford Ave., Columbus, Ohio. How many women have found themselves in this same condition! How many women have fought bravely on day after day, cooking, washing, ironing, doing the dishes, and keeping the house clean, when they were in a weakened condition and had not sufficient strength to perform these duties easily and properly!

When Mrs. Wallace was experiencing great difficulty in carrying on the daily tasks, a friend advised her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a fair trial. "I just can't give enough thanks to it," she writes. "Now I can eat anything at all and I am feeling better than I have for years. I shall never be without your medicine again."

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling bugles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

Many other women tell us, as Mrs. Wallace did, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was their faithful ally in the struggle for better health.

ATTENTION, PASTORS AND STEWARDSHIP CHAIRMEN.

A new and attractive pamphlet on the Christian Stewardship Committee has recently come from the press. It explains the organization and duties of this committee, and gives a summary of all the references to stewardship contained in the new Discipline.

This pamphlet is invaluable to pastors and lay leaders and indispensable to the chairmen and members of Christian Stewardship Committees.

This is not a free pamphlet. But through the assistance of friends of the stewardship cause, we are able to give a copy to each pastor and stewardship chairman according to the following plan:

It is to be distributed to pastors through the presiding elders. A sufficient number has been mailed to each presiding elder for the pastors of his district. If any pastor has not received his copy, let him communicate with his presiding elder.

It is to be distributed to the stewardship chairmen from the office of the Stewardship Department of the General Board of Lay Activities with an accompanying letter concerning their work and duties.

The presiding elders have been requested to send in the names and addresses of the stewardship chairmen of their districts as soon as they can secure this information, and as the names come in, the letter containing the organization pamphlet and other enclosures is mailed to the stewardship chairmen.

Brother pastor, please send your presiding elder the name and address, or names and addresses, of your stewardship chairmen at once, if you have not already done so. The Discipline makes it his duty to secure this information at the fourth quarterly conference, but in order that the first year of the new quadrennium may not be lost, it is highly important that this list be obtained in the first part of this year.

The price of the pamphlet is five cents per copy, 50 cents per dozen. Let the stewardship chairman or pastor order enough copies of the organization pamphlet for each member of the committee and the members of the Church Board of Lay Activities. Send cash with order.

J. E. CRAWFORD,
Stewardship Secretary.

ACTIVITY OF THE WETS.

At a dinner given in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Philadelphia, on the evening of Jan. 19, under the auspices of the Philadelphia Boosters' Association, some remarkable things were said. The event was called the "anti-prohibitionists' enlightenment dinner." This was a very appropriate designation for the occasion; for, granting that the speakers and promoters were honest, they evidently need enlightenment. They said in their resolution that "the Eighteenth Amendment has been conceived in bigotry, perpetrated by iniquity and enforced with hypocrisy," which is to say that all the good prohibition laymen, nearly all Protestant preachers and all the good women composing the W. C. T. U. and similar organizations are wicked, bigoted hypocrites. How long will the decency and morality of our great nation stand such insults flung into our faces? How long will they have to? It is also set out in their resolutions that "prohibition has distinctly set back the cause of temperance." As space forbids further discussion here, suffice it to say prohibition has not set back the cause of temperance. Each statement is an assertion without proof. Now, which is true? And furthermore any one with a grain of sense knows that this group is losing no sleep on account of the alleged decline in temperance.

Again they say that "prohibition has transferred the saloons to the private home, caused a general increase in drinking, drunkenness and abuse of intoxicating liquors." If the saloons are good things, as this group holds, they ought to be put in the homes, as the homes are the most sacred places on earth and therefore entitled to the very best of everything. All such talk as was indulged in on that evening is maudlin silliness and the very cheapest twaddle. Let him that is wise be not ensnared. So far as being a beneficiary to our nation in any sphere whatever, this group of 1,000 is not in the race compared to that other 1,000 in the nation set for the defense of soberness and high morals.

In view of this and many other demonstrations and the activity of the eighty-seven organizations active in their efforts to overthrow the Constitution of the United States, does it not seem that every true prohibitionist ought to enlist actively in the effort to maintain prohibition by the enforcement of the law? The Anti-Saloon League, which was endorsed by the last Baptist State Convention and the Methodist Conferences is the only organziation in the State composed of men for the destruction of the liquor business. Will not every reader of this article send at once as large a contribution as possible to the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, Dr. T. J. Bailey, Jackson, Miss.? If the League is to be largely influential in heading off such men as Al Smith, it must receive much more financial aid than our people have been giving. If you really want to help in the work, do not delay. This is addressed to Mississippi readers of the Advocate.

T. J. BAILEY,
Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NOTES.

"Christian Citizen," the following members taking part on the program: Messrs. James H. Meade, Willie Rogers, Peale Harmon, Carl Christmas, Misses Chesley Hagan, Lucille Davis, Dorothy Rogers.

News from Hermanville League shows that they are already urging their members on to the Assembly. We hope that other Leagues are doing the same thing and that we will have a large attendance of Senior Leaguers at the Assembly in June. Now is the time to plan.

Richton and Gulfport Leagues each sent $12 to the Back Bay Nursery. And Meadville Epworth League gave one dollar to this same cause. We note that these are recent donations, and rejoice that the Leagues are still contributing to this worthy cause.

A copy of the Methodist Messenger, official paper of the Brookhaven church, has been sent to the editor. There are two items of interest that we wish to mention here. The first tells of a very fine way of keeping young people in the church. We quote from this paper:

"At prayer meeting last Wednesday night we had as our guests the members of the Intermediate-Senior Department. There were twenty-five at the meeting. Mr. Langford gave a splendid talk, and the ladies gave a song."

The second item of interest was about the Scarritt Training School for Christian Workers. As the Epworth Leagues are represented at this college by a number of student volunteers (the best known is Miss Helen Sells), we are sure that all readers of this page will be vitally interested in this article.

"Community service is a very important part of the Scarritt College curriculum. Not theory alone, but putting theory into practice, tests the students' mettle.

"Nashville furnishes many centers for community work. Centenary Institute, Wesley House, Bethlehem Center, Masonic Home, Tennessee Industrial School, Young Woman's Christian Association, and the various churches and their Epworth Leagues and Sunday schools, as well as mission centers, laundries and factories, are inviting places for Christian work. There are few institutions in Nashville that have not been reached with a more or less strong influence from the work of Scarritt students.

"There are varieties of work included in the service in order to prepare the students for their future vocations. Sunday school classes are organized and taught; sewing and cooking classes prepare the children for efficiency in home-making and domestic service. Home Makers' Clubs are held, where children are taught to make and keep home attractive, Business Girls' Clubs, gymnasium classes, and Girl Reserves are led. Games are taught according to the principles of physical education. Story hours are conducted in various parts of the city, with games in connection with them, that carry ideals of heroism and noble living to many lives otherwise devoid of incentives to higher life.

"Their one purpose is to exalt Jesus Christ by exemplifying his life."

THE GOLDEN CROSS ENROLLMENT—MAY 8-15.

Every Methodist in the Southern Church feels a sense of gratification that at last our own church is diligently ministering to sick humanity in our hospitals. But no part of our church rejoices more in what we are doing for the repair of the broken bodies of our race than our active, progressive young men and women. Our General Hospital Board reports that we now own eight completely equipped hospitals that are in operation, and that we have seven Nurse Training Schools. Our hospitals maintain 1000 beds, and last year we took care of and treated 23,000 patients. Our Training Schools have enrolled 7,375 splendid young women to train for their life work of nursing. We have given diplomas to 605 graduates, and every day we are employing 363, and 237 graduate nurses.

The plan of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in building and maintaining hospitals is embodied in the Golden Cross Society. No wiser and more beautiful plan has ever been devised. It brings the whole church to share in the hospitalization program of the church. There are no dues in the Golden Cross Society. The only cost to the member is the enrollment fee. Like the Red Cross, the enrollment is yearly. Any adult may enroll any year for $1. This dollar helps his church in the hospital program.

The law of the church makes every Epworth League a recruiting station, and every Epworth League president a recruiting officer of the Golden Cross enrollment. The enrollment period is May 8-15. During this period every League president will see that his chapter enrolls one hundred per cent, and every member of the Epworth League will be proud to wear the Golden Cross button.

WHAT EVERY METHODIST SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE GOLDEN CROSS.

"Golden Cross" is a Southern Methodist term. It belongs to us. Lifting up the Spirit of Christ and blessing humanity, the "Golden Cross" will find its place in the heart of mankind, and will honor our Lord and commend his church to the world.

"Golden Cross" is a symbol, a Southern Methodist symbol. It symbolizes something at the heart of Fatherhood, something at the heart of Brotherhood, something at the heart of Jesus, something at the heart of the Gospel, something at the heart of the Atonement, something at the heart of Love. The Golden Cross is the heart of Charity.

The Golden Cross Society is the institution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, embodying the Plan by which our hospitals may be built and maintained, and affording the method by which the whole church may participate in our ministry to the sick.

The Golden Cross Society, under the law of our church, shall be organized in every Methodist congregation, and the enrollment is required as an annual program for every charge. The time fixed for the Golden Cross enrollment is National Hospital Week, which for 1927 is from May 8 to May 15, embracing the second and third Sundays. It should be made clear that no person enrolling as a member of the Golden Cross Society assumes any financial obligation for the future. It is not a subscription or a promise to pay something in any other year. Like the Red Cross, each enrollment fee is a cash transaction, and there are no dues. A Golden Cross button is given to every member.

Every Methodist should know that in the Golden Cross Society:

Any child may be a Junior member for 25c
Any adult may be an Adult member for $1
Any person may be an Active member for $5
Any person may be a Supporting member for $10
Any person may be a Sustaining member for $25
Any person may be a Service member for $50
Any person may be a Comrade member for $100
Any person may be a Life member for $500

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE SUPPORT OF OUR ORPHANAGES.

We hope all our readers have been keeping up with the appeals for the support of our orphanges that have appeared from time to time in the Advocate. These orphanages are institutions that care for the wards of the church. They are not just ideas that can exist on words and thin air; they are piles of brick and stone and mortar, designed for the most practical uses and employed every minute of the day in taking care of fatherless and motherless children. These children must have clothes to wear and food to eat, and an efficient corps of workers must be maintained to care for them in sickness and in health. It takes real money to do all these things.

This is a glorious task in which Methodism is engaged—taking care of helpless children and giving them a real chance in the world. We have not the exact figures at hand, but we feel sure that Louisiana and Mississippi Methodists are thus caring for approximately four hundred such children in their two institutions—the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston and the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home at Jackson. Think of it—four hundred young boys and girls, with all the possibilities of life before them, dependent upon the love and care and generosity of Methodism in Louisiana and Mississsippi for a chance to realize those possibilities! We believe these Methodists will respond as they ought, and these children will be given the chance they deserve. He is close-fisted indeed who clings tenaciously to the money that ought to be given for the support of helpless orphans.

ANTI-EVOLUTION LAWS.

When the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its recent meeting in Memphis, Tenn., went on record "as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges," it did, in our opinion, an entirely proper thing.

We do not suppose the thought even remotely entered the minds of the members of the Association that they could speak officially for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; as the resolution states, they simply spoke as members of the Association—a thing they certainly had a right to do.

The editor of the Advocate realizes just about as fully as anybody else in the world can realize that he cannot commit the church officially to any view, attitude or position on any subject on which he may express an opinion—he knows that the editorial position does not carry with it that function or prerogative.

The fundamental objection to legislation that specifies what shall and what shall not be taught in tax-supported schools lies in the fact that such action makes truth simply a matter of legislative majority. That evolution is involved in the present agitation for legislative action is simply an incident—such agitation could very well be carried on concerning any other subject taught in our schools.

Rev. Wilbur Glenn Voliva, general overseer of Zion City, the successor of John Alexander Dowie, was a visitor to New Orleans a few weeks ago. In an interview with one of the local newspapers, he is reported to have said, in effect, that he does not believe that the world is round, but that it is flat; that there is no scientific proof that it is round, and that to hold that it is round is to go contrary to the plain teaching of the Bible. If the Rev. Mr. Voliva should start an agitation against the teaching in our schools that the world is round and should bring a majority of the members of any State Legislature to his way of thinking, it is easily conceivable that that majority would pass a law prohibiting the teaching in tax-supported institutions that the world is round. Thus the truth of a generally accepted fact would be overthrown by a legislative majority.

While the present agitation has to do especially with the subject of evolution, it might very easily pass from the field of science to any one of several other subjects. For example, there are doubtless teachers of history in some of our schools who ignore or decry any such thing as Providence in the control of human events; there are probably teachers of sociology who likewise take no account of the divine plan in the development of society; there are probably also teachers of psychology and of philosophy who leave God out of their thinking and teaching. If it be a function of a legislative body to determine by a majority vote what shall and what shall not be taught in tax-supported schools, it has fulfilled its mission logically only when it has declared by a majority vote exactly what the whole curriculum shall be and exactly how it shall be taught.

It is utterly foreign to the genius of Christianity to demand the propagation of its teachings or the defense of its doctrines by legal means. In our opinion, the church in this day that, as such, demands legislative control of the search for knowledge, might as well withdraw from the field of education and religion both.

Personally, we know so little about evolution, which is a highly technical subject, that we have very little right to an opinion. We believe man is a special creation of God—a view that is, we think, both Scriptural and orthodox.

The best way, in our opinion, to preserve the religious faith of our students and to promote the development of their moral character is to see to it that our teachers are men and women who themselves believe in God. If we have to have a law to protect our children from materialistic atheism, we should favor one like this: "No teacher shall be employed in any of our schools who does not personally believe in God and in the supreme moral validity of his laws." As we had occasion to say about two years ago: "A Christian teacher can present even materialistic theories of evolution without destroying the faith of his pupils, simply presenting them as theories and pointing out their weaknesses. An infidel teacher is not fit to teach science or any other subject to our children."

MEMORIES!

The other day a blind man stood on Camp Street, near Canal, playing some of the old and familiar airs on a violin. It was a busy time of the day, and hundreds of people were coming and going. Most of them, however, took the time to stop a few moments to listen to what was really good music, and not a few dropped a coin into the cup attached to the player's waist.

Standing near him, with drooped head, was a shabbily dressed young man—faded shirt, coat and trousers that had seen better days, and shoes that were worn through on the sides. He appeared to be in a deep study, entirely oblivious to what was going on around him. Yet he was listening intently, a look of sadness on his face. Suddenly he reached into his pocket, pulled out a small, well-worn purse, took one of the very few small coins it contained and dropped it into the cup of the player, tears gathering in his eyes as he did so.

What memories must have stirred in his mind as he listened to those old, familiar tunes!

MY EYES ON HIM.

By Mrs. Laura M. White.

If Thou be Christ who callest me,
Oh draw me Lord, dear Lord, to Thee:
Across the waves, across the sea,
Reach out Thy hand to me.

The sea is rough, the waves dash high,
I cannot see or feel Thee nigh!
"Lord, save my sinking soul," I cry,
"There's none to help but Thee."

"Oh child, why is thy faith so small?
Dost thou not know I'll heed thy call?
But look to me—thou can'st not fall;
Look up, my face to see."

"THE BIGGEST FAILURE IN AMERICAN EDUCATION."

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The caption above indicates the subject discussed in a recent address by Dr. Henry Louis Smith, the distinguished president of Washington and Lee University.

Dr Smith discerns in the prevailing moral conditions of our country nothing less than "the breakdown of our American civilization," and says:

"This disastrous moral breakdown of our American civilization emphasizes the third item of our discussion—the fatal one-sidedness of our elaborate system of American education which offers to every American free intellectual training at the public expense from the kindergarten through the university.

"During the past half dozen post-war years our American system of universal tax-supported education for all citizens has experienced an outburst of zeal, expansion and unprecedented liberality never known in the history of civilization. We have invested a billion dollars in new high schools, another billion in enlarging our colleges and universities, a billion a year in teachers' salaries and equipment and have doubled and trebled the number of high school and college graduates.

"That this outburst of educational activity, this spectacular triumph of our American system of free education for every citizen should fill the whole land with highly trained and daring criminals, dedicating their trained powers to robbery and murder and openly scorning and nullifying our elaborate system of police and courts and penitentiaries—this appalling combination of universal education and universal crime is to my mind the leading educational problem of America, the most insistent call to our educational statesmen, the severest and most unanswerable indictment of our present American method of operating our vast tax-supported system of training schools for our future citizenship."

The source of this "moral breakdown of our civilization" he traces to "the fatal one-sidedness of our American education," concerning which he says:

"The third item of our program is the fatal one-sidedness of our American education, the fixed American tradition that tax-supported education must confine itself to the development of the intellect alone, that education in honor, honesty, morality and human brotherhood must be left to the churches and Sunday schools of the nation.

"Of all our hateful and harmful American traditions none in my judgment is so devilish and destructive as the openly expressed belief that to teach American children the laws and customs of righteous living is so sectarian and theological that it must be omitted by all the training schools supported by taxation."

By this "fatal one-sidedness of our American education" he believes intellectual power has so outrun moral culture as to threaten the stability of the whole social system, and he goes on to speak as follows concerning the menace to civilization which is thus incurred:

"As long as the diffusion of intelligence, morality and religion kept pace with this steady diffusion of power and liberty the sum total of human welfare and human happiness increased with the progress of demoocratic self-government till the very name, Democracy, became a religion.

"The world war, however, broke up this beneficent equilibrium between diffusing power and diffusing morality. It checked every process of education and religion, taught murderous hatred as a holy duty, set free every hellish passion of lust and cruelty and undermined all the machinery of law and government while it transferred to the ignorant and lawless the fatal gifts of power without wisdom and liberty without morality or self-government."

In the want of moral training in schools, colleges and universities, he sees the capital defect of the American system of education, and concludes his address with these pointed and appealing paragraphs:

"This, my fellow-citizens, is the biggest failure of our American civilization, the most inexplicable blunder of our Christian citizens, the most fatal defect in our elaborate educational machinery—this utter neglect of definite and effective moral training of our nation-wide system of tax-supported schools and colleges and universities.

"This is America's call to every right-thinking citizen.

"Let the teachers and preachers and leaders of the nation exert every effort to make the moral culture of our swarming millions catch up with their inventive genius, their miracles of applied science and their marvelous advance in organized industry and world-wide commerce.

"Then instead of Russian anarchy and Italian despotism and carnival of defiant crime, we shall see millions of enlightened freemen rising together into the privileges of co-operative citizenship and dedicating their new-found powers and accumulating wealth to the cause of human happiness and human welfare in our thrice-blessed America!"

Dr. Smith does not overstate the peril which arises from a strictly secular type of education which imparts more power than it quickens conscience to direct and control the intellectual force that it generates. When men become more skillful than virtuous, more powerful than conscientious, the most ruinous results are bound to follow. And to this end secularized education always moves.

What prevails in colleges and universities penetrates into high schools and schools of all lower grades; and American education in all grades is promoting sportiveness and unspirituality at the expense of moral character and religion.

"The intercollegiate idea" in all its manifestations diverts from the real purpose of education and produces unwholesome distractions among students by even its best and least objectionable forms. It sets up competitive struggles instead of cultural efforts as the goal of school life.

In the form of intercollegiate games, which is its worst form, it yields actual demoralization as well as scholastic dissipation. In this view the ablest educators are agreed. Among many others who thus believe may be mentioned President A. Lawrence Lowell, of Harvard University. He says:

"Having great intercollegiate games every Saturday throughout the autumn, filled with many thousands of spectators, is not well either for members of the team or for the student body. It tends to disturb seriously the work of education and still more to distort in the minds of the public and of the alumni the real object of the college."

While these "sports that kill" go on, there is a certain class of professors in some educational institutions who seem obsessed with the notion that they must by their teachings weaken rather than strengthen the faith of their students under their instruction. They seem to believe and teach almost anything provided it is not the Bible. They approach scientific speculations with superstitious credulity and confidence while they treat revealed truths with suspicious skepticism and derisive doubt.

And now some among them have come even to repudiate any standard of morality whatsoever. One can hardly characterize too strongly the pernicious effects of such instruction on the minds and morals of youths.

Out of this welter of infidelity among instructors come to students unbelief and despair, moral disorders and suicides.

A reaction against such education is springing up, which, let us hops, will bring a reformation that will cleanse our schools of it. Most certainly tax-payers and philanthropists will not continue to support schools from which spring such deleterious effects upon orderly society and such dangerous results to good government.

The conditions existing to-day in many colleges and universities are not unlike those which prevailed in the educational institutions of the young Republic just before "the great revival of 1800." Of the state of things at that time Bishop Meade declared, "I can truly say that then, and for some years after, in every educated young man in Virginia whom I met I expected to find a skeptic, if not an avowed unbeliever;" and the College of William and Mary, founded to promote Christianity, he said, was "the hotbed of French politics and infidelity."

When Timothy Dwight came to the presidency of Yale College in 1795 the institution had fallen under the same evil influences. Lyman Beecher, who entered the college as a student about that time, says it "was in a most ungodly state," and he adds, "most of the class before me were infidels."

But the revival of 1800, one principal center of which was Yale, through the forceful and fervent ministrations of President Dwight, cleansed the colleges (Harvard excepted) of this evil leaven. From the hour when he entered upon the presidency of Yale he waged warfare upon the skepticism there, until, according to Lyman Beecher's testimony, "all infidelity skulked and hid its head." During his presidency "thirteen revivals" blessed the institution, and out of them more than two hundred young men went into the ministry.

We need another Timothy Dwight to remedy present-day conditions in American colleges and universities. What cleansing and elevating would great revivals bring to them!

How glorious it would be if a revival of continental extensiveness should begin in Washington and Lee University, of which General Robert E. Lee said at the beginning of his heroic presidency of the historic institution, "Our great want is a revival of religion which shall bring the young men in the university to Christ!"

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 2.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will be reverent in the house of God.

"The Lord is in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him." Hab. 2:20.

When any church fails to become the house of God, its spiritual significance is destroyed. The action of Jesus in driving the traders out of the Temple is proof of the fact that it is not the Lord's will that his house be turned into a museum, gymnasium, or mercantile establishment. Sports, cheers, vaudeville, and the like are positively out of place in the house of God. We are not encouraging hypocrisy; but we do mean to emphasize the importance of reverence in the church.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. Army, Retired.

Number 8.

Nothing stirs a man to action like the responsibility of providing for a wife and children. The mustering out of my regiment would leave me without income, and Conference was eight and one-half months away.

I wrote to my best friends among the bishops, telling them my situation. Bishop Candler replied asking me whether I would be willing to go to Santiago, Cuba, to inaugurate our mission work there. Santiago at that time had a bad reputation. So many of our soldiers had died there from yellow fever and other tropical diseases, I am free to say, I was afraid of the place. I felt sure that my going there for such a work as that meant my early demise. However, I wrote the Bishop saying that if the men who had been my presiding elders thought that I was the man to go to Santiago to start our work, I would go. I wrote Brothers Honnoll, Standefer and Burroughs, who had been my elders, and told them what I had written the Bishop and asked them to write Bishop Candler direct, enclosing my letter, and tell him their opinion of my fitness for the work he had suggested. I do not know what they said, but the Bishop wrote that he would want me for the place in the event the man originally selected for the place could not go. Not long after that I had a letter from the Bishop saying the first man appointed had arranged his affairs so that he could go.

That made the second time that it looked like I was sure to go to Cuba—once as chaplain with the Third Mississippi Volunteers, and then as missionary; but both plans fell through.

Some days before we were mustered out I had a telegram from Bishop Candler saying: "The American Bible Society has asked me to recommend a man to represent them in Cuba. Would you be willing to accept the place, and if so what salary would you expect?" I replied that I would go if they desired my services. In a few days I had a letter from the Society saying Bishop Candler had recommended me for their Cuban work, that it would be necessary for the Executive Committee to pass on the recommendation, but I might make my preparations to go; however, they would write me again after the meeting of the Executive Committee the following Monday. This was written on Friday. Now I was sure I would get to Cuba. There seemed to be no way of keeping me out. The Executive Committee met on Monday, and about Thursday I had a letter to this effect: "After writing you last Friday, we had a letter from our representative in Central America asking to be transferred to Cuba. As he is familiar with the work and has mastered the Spanish language, the Executive Committee thought it would be wise to grant his request." For the third time my plans for getting to Cuba were wrecked.

When we learned that we were to be mustered out, I had applied for appointment as a chaplain in the regular army. I got letters from numbers of prominent Mississippians and others, and sent them to Mr. W. V. Sullivan, who was then the Junior Senator from Mississippi. I had known Mr. Catchings from the Delta district and had written him a letter in regard to my appointment. He had replied that he had found it easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than to get a Southern minister appointed to a chaplaincy in the army. So I had not counted on getting that place. Only thirty chaplains were provided for by law, and all the places were filled. That was the most unpromising line I had thrown.

However, just about that time the ratification of the Peace Treaty with Spain had come up in the Senate, and my friend, Mr. Sullivan, had voted with the administration, and that, of course, pleased Mr. McKinley, who was then President. Then a Chaplain Siebold, who was past sixty-two, thinking he might be called to foreign service, had asked to be retired under a section of the law authorizing the President to retire officers over sixty-two years of age. Just at that psychological moment, Mr. Sullivan took my papers and went to see Mr. McKinley about my appointment. Mr. Sullivan wrote me what took place.

Mr. Sullivan stated his business to the President and made his little speech. The President said: "Senator, do you really want this man to have the place, or have you brought this matter to my attention simply because you have been asked to do so?" Senator Sullivan replied: "I very much desire this appointment, Mr. President. This man is my personal friend, he has given up a fine appointment to serve his country. He is now being mustered out of the service and he has a family dependent upon him for support. I know he is a good man and he is recommended by Bishop Galloway, of Mississippi, and a host of other leading citizens, and I trust you will appoint him, if you have a vacancy." Then Mr. McKinley said: "Very well, Mr. Sullivan, a vacancy has just occurred by the retirement of Chaplain Siebold, and your friend may have the place."

I was mustered out of the volunteer service on March 17, 1899, and at Macon, on the 21st, I received my commission as a Post Chaplain, United States Army, which dated from March 6.

A CHINESE VIEW OF THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

"The present Nationalist movement in China is not a Cantonese movement, but it is a rising tide of the hopes and opinions of the Chinese people," declares the Rev. W. B. Nance, president of Soochow University, in writing to the Board of Missions of the Chinese situation. Speaking of the idea, which he believes is held by many people, that the present trouble in China is merely a question of conflict between two leading militarists of the North and South—Chang Tso Lin and Chiang Kai Shek—Dr. Nance says that Chiang Kai Shek, leader of the Cantonese, is simply one of the channels through which the Chinese people are seeking to express their hopes and purposes, and that if he should cease to be an open channel another leader would be chosen, possibly from Chekiang, Canton, Chihli, or some other town, who would help to bring about the realization of the Chinese hope of nationalism.

Dr. Nance reports a recent interview with Dr. Y. C. Ma, outstanding political economist of China, who since his return to that country six years ago from a period of study at Columbia University, New York, has been a lecturer on public finance and related lines at the National University at Peking, and has also lectured on economic problems at Shanghai, Soochow, Wusih, Nanking, and Wuchang, and during the past autumn delivered a series of lectures on this subject at Canton. Dr. Ma is now head of the department of issue of the bank of China, with headquarters at Peking. At the recent celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of Soochow University, Dr. Ma was honored by that institution with the degre of Doctor of Laws. Dr. Ma was formerly a student at Soochow University.

In speaking of Dr. Ma's observations during his month's stay at Canton and of his interview with Borodin, Dr. Nance says:

"People who have been accepting the statement constantly made by the North China Daily News and other foreign papers that the Russians are running the whole show and are using the simple-minded Kuomintang for their own selfish ends, would have gotten an entirely different view of the matter could they have heard Dr. Ma. He threw a new light on the relations between the Nationalist movement in China and the Russians.

"Dr. Ma interviewed Borodin and found him, somewhat to his surprise, a very retiring, scholarly person, who speaks perfect English and who was educated in one of the middle-western universities of the United States. He is the greatest authority on the Chinese land-tenure, having made the only thoroughgoing investigation of that subject. Upon Dr. Ma's question as to what he would suggest as to a solution of the present Chinese problem, Borodin replied: 'The nationalization of the land.' Great was his surprise when Dr. Ma explained to him that this plan had been tried seven separate times in China and that each time it had proved a complete failure. Dr. Ma believes that communism, although it may be well suited to Russia, is utterly unsuited to conditions in China. He pointed out that in striking contrast to Russia, there had never been any serfs in China and there are none to-day. Instead of the land belonging to great land-owners, as was the case in Russia, in China the land is owned by those who cultivate it, and the farmer throughout Chinese history has been at the top of the social ladder, with only the scholar-statesman above him. A proposal to confiscate their land would make no appeal to the farmers of China, declared Dr. Ma, especially as the farmers constitute more than 80 per cent of the population of the country. Neither would such a proposal appeal to the remaining 20 per ecnt of the people, who are artisans and merchants, and have always had a reputation for fair play.

"Dr. Ma added that no thoughtful Chinese would consider the Russian communistic proposals seriously for a moment. Consequently the Cantonese can see no danger at all in accepting financial or other help from Russia, since they know that communism can never make any appeal to the people of China unless it be to a small unpractical extremist group.

"The reason," said Dr. Ma, "that the majority right wing of the Kuomintang, which is the hope of the Nationalists of China to-day, allows itself to be associated with Russian Bolshevism and an extreme communistic, anti-foreign, anti-Christian left wing is because they have an immediate objective in common, and the Nationalists are willing to use the help of the Bolshevists and the extremists to obtain this. If it is true, as is commonly reported, that the Russians are spending $20,000,000 a year in China to-day, it is because they are carrying on the age-old struggle with Great Britain and they believe it is worth any sum to break the prestige of Britain in Eastern Asia and thus weaken her hold on India and elsewhere. Weakening Britain's hold on concessions in China is one of the immediate objectives of the Nationalist movement, and the advice of Russian military experts helps the Cantonese to train and hold together their military forces, and thus furthers the carrying out of their plans against Britan.

"Also, the right wing of the Kuomintang is so absolutely sure that communism can never be made a practical issue in China that they are willing to make use of the intense nationalistic activities of the left wing for the time being to help carry out their purpose, knowing full well that the time must come for a settlement between the two wings of the party. They believe, however, that the good sense of the Chinese people will neutralize the effects of communism in good time.

"Dr. Ma emphasizes the fact that the present trouble is in reality a revolution of the Chinese people, who are endeavoring to take such measures that the wealth of their country in natural resources shall be guarded and developed for the benefit of the whole people of China and not exploited by any small class.

"In conclusion, Dr. Ma said: 'We feel we have a right to expect that Christian people shall appreciate our position and not do anything to stand in the way of the realization of our national aims. No revolution can avoid suffering and injustice to individuals. But the end to be gained is worth all that it costs, and we ask that our friends shall understand and at least not make it more difficult for us.'"

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHAN'S HOME.

By Rev. John D. Ellis.

The Methodists of Mississippi are trying to be as kind to the orphan children as their fathers and mothers were.

To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction is a big part of every man's religion. It is a good commentary upon Christian profession, and is religion's best ritual.

All the orphans in the Home have a history: The principal history is that they followed father parents to the grave.

To look upon them in the Home is but to learn that they are like unto other children, innocent and playful, golden-haired, or curly-headed, with eyes of brown, gray, or blue; children who are fond of their friends, and respond to kind treatment. A few, more advanced in years, did not learn obedience back at home, and these are not quite as innocent as others; but they soon respond to kind treatment, and become dutiful, happy inmates.

An Egyptian emblem of charity is that of a boy, naked, his heart in his hand, giving honey to a bee that has lost its wings. Many children in Mississippi have become as helpless as a bee without wings, and to supply their need is noble, and beautiful.

The Orphanage at Jackson is an imposing, three-story, fireproof, steam-heated building, where nearly two hundred children are fed and clothed, and given every advantage, religious and educational.

The building is new and modern, and cost $200,000. It is noticeably massive and majestic, and adorns the undulating portion of north Jackson.

There is room for 300 children. Both dining-room and chapel have capacity for 400. The building has a hospital room, which is being adequately furnished, also parlor, library, reading room, etc. The basement contains cold storage, and ice plant.

The Manager can sit in his office, push a button, and get a response from any part of the building. By the turning of faucets, water can be made to squirt wherever needed.

There are kitchen and dining-room matrons who teach and develop the girls in domestic science.

The older girls of the Orphanage have rooms to themselves.

The children are instructed from 8:30 a. m. to 3 p. m. by six teachers. The teaching is from kindergarten up to the highest grades. Some have been sent to college to complete their education.

One teacher has special charge of their religious education, and the children of the Home have chapel service, Sunday school, Epworth League, the Quiet Hour, etc.

The larger children worship at the Galloway Memorial and Capitol Street Churches, where they enjoy the same pabulum as Jackson's most intelligent citizens.

Two or three miles from the Orphanage proper, there is the Orphanage Farm, where more than forty of the larger boys are maintained under efficient management. The farm contains more than 300 acres, where the boys raise cottton, corn, potatoes, vegetables, hogs, etc. They also milk about two dozen cows. Some of what the boys raise is theirs, and they spend the money from the sale for their own pleasure and profit.

A recent gift of $20,000 from one friend makes possible the erection on the farm of a new modern brick building.

The boys attend worship at Capitol Street Church and Galloway Memorial, where they hear the best the city affords.

A concrete street leads to the very grounds of the Methodist Orphanage. Recent gifts by friends have made possible the beautifying of the grounds.

Directly across the street is the campus of Millsaps College, beautiful for situation, to which the children have access.

It is pleasing to know that the Orphanage is under wise and efficient management, and that the entire discipline is splendid.

The institution has turned out some good business men, and nearly one hundred young women from the ipstitution are teachers in public schools, professional nurses, stenographers, etc.

The Orphanage maintains a Field Secretary, Mrs. Alma G. Riley, who finds out about children before they are brought in, who secures homes for many among citizens, and who is watchful of their welfare after they are placed in homes.

The job of Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintendent, is as the name implies. He is on the ground, or in the office, to manage, direct, and supervise.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, Field Commissioner, travels in the interest of the Home, giving forth information, and taking subscriptions.

There is an indebtedness of nearly $40,000 on the new building, which the friends of the institution will wipe out shortly. The debt will be met by the co-operation of the people generally.

The children are maintained by gifts from individuals, Sunday schools, churches, and by Work Day contributions for many who give annually as much as one day's wages, or salary.

After the indebtedness on the new building is paid, the biggest expense will be off hand, and the Methodists will be occupied simply with the maintenance of the institution.

There was a man by the name of Richard Roe who, when he grew sad about his piety, put on his hat and went out among the poor. He came back a gainer. Remember the orphans.

METHODIST EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION AND THE PROPER TEACHING OF SCIENCE.

I was in attendance upon the Methodist Educational Association in Memphis, Feb. 8-10, but owing to the very serious illness of my wife in the Methodist Hospital at Memphis at the same time, I had but little opportunity to attend the sessions of the Association. I was able to attend but one of the sessions of the Conference Board Group, which Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Natchez, Miss., so well reports in the March 10 issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. I was privileged just a few times to drop in on the sessions of the general assembly of the Assocaition. The discussions that I heard were opportune and were pitched on a basis that is calculated better to unify the educational program of the church.

On the morning of Feb. 10, I walked into the assembly hall just as the Association passed the resolution against legislation that would prevent the proper teaching of science. After the passing of the resolution, protests were made by members of the Association against it, and it was urged by some members of the Association that language be incorporated into the resolution that would take away the ambiguity of the resolution anent the Darwinian theory of evolution. The framers of the resolution sat like adamant against any such move.

Some of the framers of the resolution claim that all that the writers of the resolution had in mind was a protest against the passage of legislation that would prohibit the proper teaching of science. But their failure to take the ambiguity out of the wording of the resolution, after they were asked to do so, naturally leaves us in just a little doubt as to their alleged purpose, or we must conclude that they think they are under no obligation to make known to us common folk just exactly what they do mean, or they just failed to sense the fact that there was dynamite wrapped up in that resolution.

I submit that since the legislatures of Tennessee and of Mississippi passed laws against teaching in State schools the Darwinian, or brute origin, theory of evolution, and since the Arkansas Legislature, then in session, was thought to be preparing to pass laws against the brute origin of man, similar to those laws passed in Tennessee and Mississsippi, therefore it behooved the Southern Methodist Educational Association, assembled in Memphis, Feb. 8-10, to make plain to all parties concerned that they did not endorse the Darwinian theory of evolution. This the framers of the resolution refused to do.

Personally, I am opposed to any kind of legislation that will prevent the proper teaching of science, or any other subject taught in our schools and colleges. But when I give voice to a sentiment like the above I must be allowed to define just what I mean by the proper teaching of science. As I would interpret the phrase, "The proper teaching of science," as I above use it, I simply mean the teaching of those facts (not theories) of science that have been discovered and are undisputed. I do not believe that the teaching of the Darwinian theoery of evolution is the proper teaching of science, because said theory of evolution is but an hypothesis without foundation of fact upon which to rest. Besides, said theory of evolution teaches the brute origin of man and brands as false the Bible doctrine of the Divine origin of man. On the other hand, if there be a disposition on the part of our educators, either of the church or State, to teach as a fact an alleged theory of atheistic science that is but an hypothesis, I am in favor of taking any fair and constitutional means whatsoever to prohibit said agnostic and atheistic teaching. Epecially am I thus disposed when said scientific theory brands as false the Bible doctrine of the Divine origin of man.

As I understand language, in my limited scholastic attainment, the framers of the resolution under discussion should either have ignored the question altogether, or they should have taken the ambiguity out of the resolution so that there could be no mistake as to their exact meaning, or they should have boldly declared for the Darwinian theory of evolution. Like the oracles of Delphi, their pronouncement is ambiguous. The daily press did not hesitate to interpret it to mean an endorsement of the Darwinian theory of evolution. Unless the framers of said resolution desired an atheistic interpretation of the resolution, it strikes me that their boasted scholarship showed but little judgment either in their selecting of words to express their thoughts or of the disposition of human nature to make whatever merchandise possible of what men say. When issues are as clearly drawn as they are between the Darwinian theory of evolution and the Bible doctrine of the Divine origin of man, it is all but unpardonable for representatives of the church of Jesus Christ to fail to make exactly plain their pronouncements anent science.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The date for holding the Hattiesburg District Conference has been changed to April 12 and 13.

The conference will begin at 9 a. m., at Sumrall, Miss., April 12. The opening sermon will be preached the night of April 11 by Rev. B. H. Williams. All delegates are urged to be present at the opening sermon.

The committees will all be elected by the conference and announced at the opening on the first day. So it is both desired and greatly important that all preachers and delegates be present promptly at 9 a.m., April 12.

Let all pastors push the matters in hand, and then be able to make good reports of their work.

All pastors and delegates are earnestly urged to pray that our district conference shall be a spiritual uplift.

May the Lord bless you, preachers and laymen, of Hattiesburg District.

J. R. JONES, P. E.

THE CHURCH DISHONORS HERSELF WHEN SHE PERMITS HER WORN-OUT PREACHERS TO LIVE IN PINCHING NEED AND HUMILIATING POVERTY

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

"WHEN THE PREACHER NOW SUPERANNUATED ENTERED THE MINISTRY OF THE CHURCH HE AGREED TO CONDITIONS WHICH HE KEPT, AS FOLLOWS:

"To go where he was sent. No other man agrees to any such conditions, but is free to give his services where he pleases, and where, perhaps, the conditions suit him better.

"To accept whatever was paid for remuneration. He makes no bargain as to what his salary shall be, and knows perfectly well that at the end of the year he will not be in a position to sue for any portion that remains unpaid.

"To give his full time and energy to the work. Other men in other walks of life are allowed to supplement their regular income by taking up side lines. The preacher, even though he knows that his salary will be insufficient to meet his requirements, has already made a solemn promise that he will not in any way seek to supplement that income by engaging in any secular pursuits.

"To move when the Church asked him to do so. He may be at the very zenith of his success, and may have plans which will mean greatly increased financial success, as well as greatly increased spiritual success for the Church he serves; and yet he has no say in the matter. When the Church asks him to move, he must move.

"To quit when he was told.. Not when he considers that he has given all of his best to the Church, but when the Church decides that his days of usefulness are past. No other citizen in the community enters into a contract which so completely and utterly deprives him of taking advantage of opportunities, as they arise, for bettering his financial conditions and of making sure that when the period of old age comes he will have made ample provision for declining years.

"THE CHURCH, ON THE OTHER HAND, AGREED TO THE FOLLOWING CONDITIONS:

To find him a field of service; to provide for him a sufficient support; and to provide him with an adequate retiring allowance."

COUNCIL ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT.

Abstract of an address delivered Thursday morning, March 10, by Mrs. F. F. Stephens, president of the Woman's Missionary Council, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to that body in session at Shreveport, La., March 9-16:

"And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto the inhabitants thereof; it shall be a jubilee unto you."

Preparing the way for the "Year of Jubilee," 1928-29, plans for celebrating which were announced at the session of the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Shreveport, March 9-16, Mrs. F. F. Stephens, president, in her annual message to the body Thursday morning, March 10, told how in the past forty-nine years the woman's missionary movement had grown from a little group of fifty-four women to a constituency of nearly 300,000, and how Southern Methodist women had developed in their thinking as they had grown in numbers.

The plans launched in Shreveport will climax a movement begun two years ago when the Council, in session at Tulsa, Okla., authorized a year of jubilee.

Mrs. Stephens outlined five objectives which she said should be goals for the "jubilee year," as follows: A higher spiritual standard; an appreciation of the missionary inheritance of Southern Methodist women; the extension of the missionary organization; a re-evaluation of the missionary task; and a missionary thank-offering by means of which the work of the Woman's Missionary Societies may be extended.

She strongly emphasized the hope that the approaching jubilee will be international and interracial. She said in part:

"On Wednesday, May 22, 1878, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, then in session at Atlanta, Ga., acted favorably upon a petition asking that the women of the church be authorized to work for missions under a distinct charter and for specified purposes. That memorial was sponsored by two groups of women: one in Nashville, Tenn., under the leadership of Mrs. D. H. McGavock; the other in Baltimore, Md., headed by Mrs. Juliana Hayes. Dr. D. C. Kelley, then assistant secretary of the Board of Missions and son of Mrs. M. L. Kelley, who in Bethlehem, Tenn., organized the first Missionary Society in the church, was influential in presenting the memorial in committee, and it came to the General Conference in Report No. 4 of the Committee on Missions. Its adoption was by unanimous vote of the Conference.

"At 10 o'clock the next day in the First Church, Atlanta, the women met for organization, fifty-four being enrolled as members. The College of Bishops appointed the officers: Mrs. J. Hayes, president; Mrs. D. H. McGavock, corresponding secretary, and the wives of the eight bishops as the eight vice presidents. Twenty-three women living in different sections of the South, who were expected to secure members and organize auxiliaries, were named as managers.

"Because of profound gratitude for God's leading and blessings during the half century and with great joy in the privilege and achievements of the years, the Council at its meeting in Tulsa, Okla., in March, 1925, authorized a year of jubilee. The year will begin with the Council meeting of 1928 and close with that of 1929.

"Careful thought has led the women to the conclusion that the celebration shall be so planned as to fit into the regular program of the year's work. In a general way, all the gatherings of women during the year, in district, conference, and Council, will be jubilee meetings. New auxiliaries which may be organized will be known as jubilee auxiliaries; new members will be listed as jubilee members. Facts and statistics showing the beginning and progress of the organization are to be collected throughout the church at home and on the mission fields and presented in the literature and program of the year.

"It is hoped that the jubilee will be international and inter-racial, so that every group of Southern Methodist women throughout the world may have participation. In the mission fields and among the foreign-born groups in America it should furnish an opportunity for facing an adequate program for Christian women.

"The united thinking of the various committees has resulted in formulating five objectives, toward the realization of which the activities of the year will be directed. The first of these is a higher spiritual standard. The conviction grows and deepens that this may be the time of a great spiritual awakening. Emphasis is to be placed on the spiritual aspects of the jubilee and an effort made to quicken sacrificial living.

"An appreciation of our inheritance, is one of the goals of the year. It is fitting that a survey be taken of the work of the organization. The memory, the achievements, the spirit of the women whose lives have made the history of the societies should have fitting honor. Historical records for the information of present and future generations must be provided, and there should be an expression of joy because of the wonderful inheritance that has come to the women of the church.

"There is reason for gratitude that the Missionary Society has found its place and work in so many of the charges throughout the Conferences. The aim now should be the extension of the organization along two lines: the formation of new auxiliaries until there is one in every church, and the enlistment of all the women instead of the fifty per cent that are now enrolled.

"The fourth objective is a most vital one, which may be expressed as the re-evaluation of the task. It has been pointed out that the world to-day is a vastly different world from that in which the women first formulated their task and began their work fifty years ago. They have tried to keep abreast of changes during the decades; but is it now time to change both methods and contacts? Only careful study can tell. The church has grown and developed along lines not in the thinking of a half century ago. Trained leadership is available as never before. Money power and woman power have multiplied. One of the greatest jubilee tasks is to re-evaluate the situation so as to find the plan of God for this organization in the future.

"Last of the goals is the thank-offering. In love and gratitude for the pioneers, for what they have wrought, for the spiritual values of the organized, united Christian womanhood, let there be during one week of the year a great thank-offering to be used in developing the program which emerges from the 'Year of Jubilee.'"

LOVE FOR SOULS OR MONEY, WHICH?

Dear Brother Carley: The first preaching I ever did was to the neglected people. God poured the Spirit upon me and I felt that "He anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor." I have always been conscious of my calling to "Go out into the highways and hedges and bring in the poor, the maimed, the halt and the blind."

Pastors have a pretty hard time on charges that do not give them an adequate support. Any circuit now that pays only $800 or $1,000 is in the same class of charges that many years ago paid from $300 to $500, as the cost of living now is two or three times more than it was then. Stewards should not overlook these facts. If many pastors were better supported, they could do better service. This writer has mixed with pastors on hard works a great deal, and knows something about their difficulties in making tongue and buckle meet. No board of stewards on circuits should assess less than $1,500 or $2,000. We have known assessments doubled. Any ordinary circuit can pay that much or more if they were trained.

One of the best ways on earth to train a membership is through the literature of the church. A pastor need not hope to build up his charge until he succeeds in putting church papers into the homes of his people. The New Orleans Christian Advocate is one of the best papers in the church, and I pray God it may soon be a weekly visitor to all the Methodist homes in its territory.

Preaching the gospel of tithing and Christian giving is a good way to train people. But it's an admitted fact that pastors are handicapped when it comes to preaching on a subject that includes their own living.

There is no more important agent that could be appointed than some preacher, capable of doing the work right, to visit a few days each in those charges that are not giving their pastors a living, and preach the gospel of tithing and greater liberality in such a spiritual and effective way that the churches and said fields would receive it, and be influenced voluntarily to take better care of their pastors. It could be easily and successfully done, and thus lift those charges out of the old ruts into new life and happier living along all the lines. It requires consecrated tact to develop church finances. But people have never been so easily led in the matters of greater liberality as now, if properly taught. It's a sin for any people to let their pastor live hard on a big circuit now.

The very fact of short salaries precludes the idea that men are preaching for love of money. They are preaching because God called them to the work. That is the biggest reason why the people should receive them and their messages of truth.

The fields I covet most to develop are those communities of possibilities that are without regular pastors—or that the regular pastors have not been able to develop to their satisfaction. We can save the people and build houses of worship, and put the membership on a self-sustaining basis, which could be done in a short time, by giving it special and deserved attention. That was the original work and divine intention of the evangelist—to save the people. God makes no mistakes, and changeth not.

I care nothing about helping where churches are already in good running order, and paying good salaries. However, I have held many great meetings in good charges. I prefer to administer to those who fell into bad hands on their way to Jericho. My calling is to the work of a missionary evangelist. I love to help pastors on hard works if they have plenty of people. If given time and a clear deck, I can develop almost any hard place into a good church. I don't consider the financial outlook—I never did get much of that sort of thing. I study the people. Plenty of places need and will appreciate the type of work that I and others are successful in doing. If the books should be thrown open at the judgment now, this scribe would expect to have twenty thousand souls or more to the credit of his humble ministry.

Presiding elders or pastors of any churches name the fields that need development, and through the power of Christ the writer or some other revivalist will raise any spiritually dead community to new life, build a new church house, and put the membership on a self-sustaining basis. By proper attention, undeveloped fields would be built up and blossom as the rose. I am not so much concerned as to who does the work, just so it is done. My friend and brother, W. M. McIntosh (God bless him!), or that good man, H. M. Ellis, and others, will all render you fine service. Let's make this a great soul-saving year.

CHURCH DEDICATION AND HOME-COMING AT COAHOMA.

On the 24th of April, which is the fourth Sunday, we are planning to dedicate formally the new church at Coahoma. In connection with the dedication we are going to have a home-coming service. Every former pastor of this church and all former members and friends who live elsewhere are very cordially invited and expected to be present for these services. Come and spend the day with your old friends.

R. G. LORD, Pastor.

ABOUT FACE.

Don't grumble, don't bluster,
Don't dream and don't shirk,
Don't think of your worries,
But think of your work.

The worries will vanish,
The work will be done.

"LET 'EM OFF FIRST."

"When you were a boy, Dad, were you always polite?"

"What's up now?"

"O, I'm sick and tired of being told how to act! Why can't we all just be natural and let it go at that?"

"Because it's natural for a lot of us to be rather obnoxious. However, tens of thousands of folks feel exactly as you do about it and act accordingly.

"Why don't you ally yourself with that crowd? They'll welcome you with open arms."

"I think you're kidding me, Dad! Where are there 'natural' people?"

"Almost everywhere. Some of their shining lights are always to be found in subway trains. A notable example of their kind blocked my exit at Times Square the other morning, insisting upon getting into the car before I got out of it, although two brass-lunged guards were howling: 'Let 'em off first!'"

"I don't mean that I want to be like that, Dad."

"I know you don't.

"Now, jumping right into the heart of the subject, Dick, just what is politeness? Rather, what is courtesy? For courtesy is what your mother and I wish you to understand, so that it will become natural to you."

"Why—er—not acting like a rough-neck, and—"

"Courtesy is showing of consideration for others. Back of it, to say the least, must be a sense of justice—'You have some right as well as I'—and common sense that tells us what a state of pandemonium we'd be in if no one gave a thought to law and order; but the truest courtesy springs from a genuine feeling of kindliness for our fellow-men. It's the Golden Rule, prompted by the heart as well as the mind."

"That's all so, Dad; but I was kicking against the hundreds of little things a fellow's supposed to remember, like going upstairs ahead of a lady—"

"More easily to protect her from any one or anything coming down."

"And down an aisle behind her—"

"Because there's an usher ahead."

"Well, why do we take off our hats and shake hands? How'd the idea ever start?"

"A man's 'hat' used to be part of his armor, often protecting his face, as you must know. He never removed it in the presence of an enemy—if he could help it. Holding out the empty hand proved that he held no weapon. Don't you see, Dick, that all these little customs have sense back of them?"

"I begin to, Dad. Being polite—I mean courteous—will be more interesting after this. What about touching a napkin to my lips every time before I drink? That seems—"

"Do you like to see a greasy mark left on a glass?"

"That's so. And I must say, 'I beg your pardon!' as I climb past the knees of people in their seats."

"You must not! That expression is now considered only one point better than the awful 'Pleased to meecha!' we use to hear. 'Sorry!' is not only proper but sensible. One can hardly be pardoned who has not been sentenced."—From "Say Dad," a Revell book.

SKATES CHANGED TO TULIPS.

By Clara Langdon.

Out in the street it was as snowy and blowy and cold as it could be. "It surely is a blizzard or a cyclone," thought Cliff. He struggled along against the wind for a square or two. Then he turned a corner and there in the little cross street where he didn't get the full force of the gale, he stopped to get his breath.

Right in front of him was a scene that didn't look a bit like winter. It was a florist's window filled with cut flowers and potted plants, in bloom.

"Aren't they pretty! I wish Irene could see them!" he thought generously. The next thought was a generous thought, too.

"Why, she could see one of them, if I bought it and took it to her." But strange to say, he frowned over that thought.

"I won't! Let some one else buy her flowers. I have only enough money for those new skates. I've been saving all winter. Now it's getting late and they are selling them cheaper. I'm going to have—"

What was he going to have? He fingered his skate money in his pocket. He was on his way to buy them. The store was around the next corner. If he would take a few steps, say a few words, and jingle the money on the counter, he wouldn't have to wear his old, worn, outgrown skates the next time that he went to the lake. Just ahead were the new skates.

But back a couple of squares was Irene, the little cousin who had been ill all winter. She was so tired of staying in the same old room, and looking at the same old things.

A potted, blooming plant! How she would like it! Cliff could see her eyes shine; he could see the pink come in her thin little face.

"How much for the big pot of red flowers in the window?" he found himself asking over the florist's counter. The answer, and what happened next left him with just ten cents in his pocket, a big, well-wrapped package in his arms, and a jolly, warm feeling under his sweater.

"Hurry before the frost nips them! Hurry and see Irene's eyes shine. What do you care about skates?" were the thoughts running through his brain. "There will be lots more ice and skates and fun ahead; bnt now is the time Irene needs those cheer-up red tulips. Don't dare tell her, though, that you met a magician—only he called himself a florist—who changed your skates into red tulips for her."—Sunbeam.

SAILING AWAY KIM'S SINS.

By Edythe Major Davis.

Kim lived with his father and mother far across the ocean, in Korea. They were poor, and the little house, or "chip," as they called it, was in the worst part of the town.

One day a terrible sickness broke out in the village and Kim's parents were taken sick and died. The little boy was unhappy and lonely because he had no kind friends to care for him. The people of the town, knowing nothing of God and his love, thought Kim was a sinful boy, and they would not take him into their homes.

It is the custom in Korea for the children, every New Year's Eve, to put their shoes and a sieve outside the door. They believe that the evil spirit goes from house to house and leaves bad gifts in each shoe. If the sieve is there also, the gifts are sifted and the owner of those shoes does not receive any. Poor little Kim had forgotten to put his sieve out, so he was supposed to be filled with all kinds of bad gifts or sins. Because the people believed him to be so wicked, they would not give him work. As he hadn't any money with which to buy food, the little boy had to beg on the streets of the village. He was often tired and hungry.

One day Kim thought to himself, "I will put all my sins on the tail of a kite and let them fly away."

When he had made the kite ready, he tied many pieces of paper to it, and putting his name on it also, he let it fly.

"Now my sins are all gone," cried Kim as he watched the kite sail away over the treetops.

Later in the day he was a disappointed boy, for a stranger brought his kite back to him. Kim thought all his sins had returned. The kind stranger told him about a loving God who is the only One who could take his sins away.

Soon after this Kim was sent to a mission boarding school, where he learned about God and his wonderful love. He was happy with so many loving friends around him. When he grew up, he taught other little children to love his God, and not to be afraid of an evil spirit who put bad gifts into their shoes.—The Sunbeam.

WHAT BENNIE LEARNED.

Little Bennie ran into the house quite out of breath. His first day at school had just ended.

"Where's mamma?" was the first query.

"Here, darling! How is my big boy, and what did he learn to-day?"

"Didn't learn anything but 'm-e,' me, and I already knew that," quoth Bennie, scornfully.

"'Me,' that's the easiest word for most of us to learn, and the most important," muttered Uncle Tom, cynically, behind his paper.

"But I did have the best time," went on the eager little voice. "So many boys to play with. I didn't know there were so many boys in the town! We played games at recess—and, mamma, don't send the automobile for me any more; I want to walk home with the other fellows."

Uncle Tom eyed him curiously over his paper.

"And, oh, mamma!" he cried, coaxingly. "Please put a lot more sandwiches and things in my lunch box."

"But, dear, I'm afraid you will be sick. I put in too many this morning, and—"

"Oh, I don't want to eat all of 'em myself! I divide them with the fellows, and they eat them quicker than a wink! So I want a dozen—two dozen, maybe!"

"I will put in plenty," said mamma, softly, her hand smoothing the damp curls.

Bennie smiled happily.

"You're the bestest mamma in the world!"

"Humph!" muttered Uncle Tom, aloud. "He didn't learn 'me' after all."

Now, what did he mean by that?—Selected.

"TIME OUT."

The Magistrate—"But why did you pick a quarrel and fight with this man—a total stranger?"

The Drunk—"Well, Your Honor, all me friends were away."—Exchange.

"Why is the little fellow crying?"

"Because he can't have a holiday."

"Why can't he have a holiday?"

"Because he doesn't go to school yet."—Exchange.

"What did the professor say in yesterday's lecture?"

"Shall I leave out all unnecessary details?"

"Yes."

"He didn't say anything."—Albion College Pleiad.

A fly and a flea in a flue were imprisoned.
Now what would they do?
"Let us flee!" said the fly.
"Let us fly," said the flea.
So they flew through a flaw in the flue.

"I'm sorry to see you unwell," said Brown. "Have you seen the doctor?" "Yes; I'm having three baths a day," replied Smith. "Whatever for?" "Don't know; doctor's orders. He gave me some medicine and told me to follow the directions, which read: 'One tablespoonful to be taken three times a day in water.'"—Exchange

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.
Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop Warren A. Candler is announced to be present at the Seashore District Conference, Pascagoula, Miss., March 30-31.

Dr. Eric M. North, son of Dr. Frank Mason North, has been elected Associate Secretary of the American Bible Society.

Mrs. J. T. Lewis, wife of our pastor at Tupelo, Miss., has recently been desperately ill, but is now on the road to recovery, we are glad to learn.

The building committee has been authorized to employ an architect and proceed with plans for the building of the Sunday school annex of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss.

Rev. G. B. Love, our pastor at Mooreville, Miss., writes: "Everything is moving along very well with us here at Mooreville. We are serving a fine people."

Rev. G. A. Morgan, our pastor at Arcadia, La., recently underwent an operation for appendicitis. We are glad to learn that he stood the operation well and is on the road to recovery.

Dr. Mark Terrell, general evangelist, has moved from Sherman, Tex., to 2918 Reagan Avenue, Dallas, Tex. Dr. Terrell is now in a community-wide revival at Eldorado, Tex.

Brother P. A. Cooper, now of Mhoon Valley, formerly of West Point, Miss., writes: "I have taken the paper for thirty-seven years. I will be 81 in September. I love my church and all its interests."

Rev. Benjamin P. White, Field Secretary of the Pennsylvania Children's Home Society, a member of the St. Louis Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Saturday of the past week.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, remains practically the same as previously reported. With the coming of warmer weather, it is hoped that he will begin to regain his strength.

According to the Jackson Daily News, Mr. O. L. Biedenharn and his three brothers have made an offer to the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage to erect a building, to cost about $20,000, on the orphanage farm, in memory of their mother.

The Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Church Extension held a meeting in New Orleans on Tuesday of last week. The committee is composed of Rev. E. C. Gunn, president; Rev. B. H. Andrews, secretary, and Mr. R. J. O'Neal, treasurer.

We learn from the Southern Reporter that a pipe organ recital was scheduled for the Methodist church at Sardis, Miss., on last Sunday night, Mrs. P. W. Woodward, an accomplished organist of Memphis, presiding at the organ. Special vocal music was also on the program.

Rev. Henry T. Young, general evangelist, member of the Louisiana Conference, has two open dates—March 23-April 3, and April 3-May 1—which are available for the brethren. Brother Young can be reached by wire at Noble, La., during this week.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Strange announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Sunshine Young, to Rev. J. A. Knight, the wedding to take place in the Methodist church at St. Landry, La., at 8 o'clock p. m. on April 1. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

Many of our readers will be interested in the communication from Rev. Charles F. Smith, appearing on another page of this issue of the Advocate. A native of Misssissippi, Brother Smith has served the church most efficiently in Texas, for many years as presiding elder and pastor of important churches.

Brother G. P. Comer, song evangelist, has recently held two great meetings in Huntington, W. Va., the first two weeks being spent at the Guyandotte Church, and the second two weeks at Johnson Memorial. There were more than two hundred additions to the churches. He is now in a meeting at Irvine, Ky.

There has just come from the Cokesbury Press a new book, "St. Mark's Life of Jesus," by Dr. Andrew Sledd, of Emory University. The devout spirit and the acknowledged scholarship of Dr. Sledd are guarantees that the book is worth reading. The volume is one of the Bible Text Series, and it is priced at $1.

Rev. E. C. Driskell, pastor of the Fulton circuit, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "We raised $200 for the mission special on the Fulton circuit, nearly half the membership contributing. In Fulton, where we carried out the program, only eight families failed to contribute something to this great cause."

Rev. Claude K. Smith, pastor at Pineville, La., was appointed "Anniversary Day Secretary" at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, to promote the observance of Epworth League Anniversary Day, the fourth Sunday in March. Brother Smith is sending a communication to all the pastors, with a self-addressed postal card for a report. Let all the brethren give heed to his request.

Mrs. J. G. Moore, of the Old Soldiers' Home, Biloxi, Miss., writes as folllows: "The New Orleans Christian Advocate is to me an old and valued friend, and I cannot afford to do without it. It has been making its almost unbroken weekly visits to my house since I was a baby, which has been sixty-nine years ago, and from its dear familiar face I learned my alphabet, so I am told by my mother."

Rev. W. L. Broome, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Muskogee, Okla., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, says: "I am having a great pastorate here at First Church. We are receiving new members almost every Sunday. That prince among Sunday school men, Dr. A. E. Bonnell, is Sunday school superintendent. We expect to begin a revival on Easter Sunday, with Brother E. R. Smoot, of the North Mississippi Conference, to assist us."

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, writes, under date of March 12: "The following is the report on the mission special from the Columbus District to date: Ackerman and Weir, $200 Artesia and Shaeffers, $85; Crawford and Mayhew, $30; Columbus, First Church, $450; Louisvills, $100 Macon station, $100; Brooksville, $200; Mashulaville, $25; McCool, $12; Shuqualak, $27; Starkville, $330; West Point, $300. Others to report later. About $2000 has been reported up to the present."

During the six months Rev. A. J. Gearheard, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, has been pastor of the First Methodist Church, Charleston, W. Va., he has taken in 130 members, and all the obligations of the church have been met. Brother Gearheard was to have been assisted in a revival recently by Rev. Dan Kelly, but sickness prevented the evangelist's filling the engagement. His singer, Rev. Otis Spinks, was with the pastor in the meeting, Brother Gearheard doing the preaching, and there were eighty additions to the membership—sixteen by certificate and the others by baptism and vows.

Mrs. Emma Siebe, of Crystal Springs, Miss., writes: "I am writing to try to find the address of J. J. Baird, of the Louisiana Conference, and also of Rev. B. T. Pierson, who was once pastor of the Georgetown circuit, composed of Georgetown, Gallman, Old Crystal Springs, and Mt. Pleasant, living in our town four years or more; also of a preacher named Tally, who preached at old Providence camp meeting, this county. I had a message of inquiry from a friend in Georgetown, Texas. I want to hear from any one, or all, for an estate calls for one fmily to settle for heirs of Brother Tally and Rev. B. T. Pierson." Mrs. Siebe will greatly appreciate any information that may be given her.

DEATH OF MRS. T. S. RANDLE.

Just as the Advocate was going to press, we received this note from Mrs. I. J. Newton, of Mineral Wells, Texas: "Mrs. T. S. Randle died at San Antonio on Feb. 26, and was buried at Yoakum, Texas, on Feb. 28."

Sister Randle had a multitude of friends throughout Louisiana, who will hear with great sorrow of her passing. She was the widow of the late Rev. T. S. Randle, of the Louisiana Conference. She was enthusiastically loyal to the church and all its interests, being especially devoted to the cause of the superannuated preachers. All who knew her know that she was ready for her translation. We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

THE TRAVELS OF A CENTENARY CHECK.

A check was given to a pastor in the Mississippi Conference the last of December to pay on a Centenary pledge made very near the Tennessee line in the North Mississipi Conference. This pastor to whom the check was given sent it to the pastor of the charge where the pledge was made; he, not knowing what to do with it, sent it to another pastor on the other side of the Conference; he forwarded it to the Missionary Secretary of the Conference with request that he handle it; of course the Missionary Secretary forwarded it to my office (to which it should have been sent by the subscriber). It reached here March 9, after traveling 574 miles, over four different railroads, chaging trains seven times. Though it traveled in a very indirect route, it kept coming until it reached the Treasurer's office.

There are two morals to this story, and for fear you might have some difficulty in discerning them, I am going to tell you:

Moral No. 1: Be sure to pay the balance due on your Centenary pledge.

Moral No. 2: Send remittance to W. D. Hawkins, Treasurer for the Misssissippi and North Mississippi Conferences, to whom all Centenary money is to be paid from both these Conferences.

I am glad to announce that I am collecting some Centenary money every month. Many of our people are still faithful to their pledges.

W. D. HAWKINS.

IS HE A FRIEND OF THE ORPHANS?

Dear Dr. Carley: Here is another letter, a sample of only a few I receive as I endeavor to carry out the wishes of the church in my official position as Commissioner for the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home:

"Rev. S. A. Brown, Winona, Miss.

"My Dear Sir: Some time ago you told me of your wish to come to ———— and take an offering for the new construction work that is going on at the Home. I am under the sad necessity of informing you that we will be unable to carry out this project at the present time.

"———— was raised all along the line this fall; in the presiding elder's salary, Conference claims and district parsonage fund, and then, too, they raised my salary. There is a revolt on here against all special collections. I have just finished my special Missionary offering, and some of my best members would have nothing to do with it.

"We have voted to add Sunday school rooms to our church and to brick veneer it, which will cost a considerable sum.

"We usually pay about $150 to the maintenance fund of the Home, and will do that this year, I am sure, but our stewards are united in their stand against any special offering for the purpose you mention.

"This is but a poor community, and they are bravely trying to do the Lord's work the best they can, and will stand by the Home to the best of their ability. I believe that you will grasp the situation here and will understand why we cannot put through this matter just at present.

"Yours very truly,

"....."

One does not have to look very far to see what disaster would come to the helpless and dependent children of our State if any considerable number of our pastors should close their churches to the Orphanage representative because their members were opposed to collections, and had all they could do building churches and raising salaries of the presiding elder and pastor. It will be a sad day for us if our people turn a deaf ear to the cry of the orphans. There are those in every congregation whose hearts go out to the orphans and who delight in donating to this cause. Many of them do not belong to the church. I do not think they should be deprived of the privilege of hearing the appeal and responding to it.

S. A. BROWN,
Commissioner for North Mississippi Conference.

AN APPEAL FOR THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

Dear Brother: Just a few words to state the condition that confronts the Orphanage, and to urge you to present to your congregation our needs and appeal to them for the financial help we must have if we are to keep our work going as it should and prepare our people for a big Easter offering.

We have 180 children in the home and over forty on our waiting list, pleading to the great Methodist church for a home and a chance. Our treasury is empty, with one month's bills due before Easter. The Easter collections are our only dependence for the necessary means with which to carry on our work during the dull summer months. Our monthly expenses run between four and five thousand dollars. You can readily see that we must have at least thirty thousand dollars this Easter if our work is to go on as it should.

The children keep reasonably well and happy. Two of our girls have secured their college degrees and are teaching since Conference. We have over 150 others in the process of securing their education, and most of them are doing excellent work and developing into splendid characters. It would be worse than criminal to take from them the exceptional opportunities and care we are now giving them. It is pitiful beyond expression to deny to many others the chance they need. May I not plead that you present to your people an earnest appeal for this great work and that you urge them to be as liberal as possible in their Easter contributions?

Remember Easter Sunday, April 17, is the time set apart by the Conference when collections are to be taken in church and Sunday school for the Orphanage, and begin now to prepare your people for it. Thanking you,

I am, gratefully,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN, Superintendent.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother Carley: I regret it becomes necessary to make a correction in the Journal of the North Mississippi Conference, but in justice to all concerned I am doing so. In the Coffeeville charge, Grenada District, the Minutes give Received on Profession of Faith, 1. But the correct number is 23. This is the first corrrection I recall to have made in thirty-eight years, but it is involving too great a distance from such achieved victories in which we rejoice, and I felt constrained to correct it.

Let me say to our brethren of our Conference that I am much improved in health; in fact, I feel better than in years.

Sincerely,

H. M. YOUNG.

Chester, Miss.

"LET'S DO IT!"

Dear Dr. Carley: I have just read your article under "Editorial Comment" on first page of the Advocate of the 10th with reference to the "Special Offer" expiring April 1. I hope our people are interested in the circulation of our church paper, and so much so that every church will take advantage of the very liberal offer you are making them. If our people are to be interested in the program of the church to the extent "they will care," they must know about it; therefore the Advocate is indispensable in any plan or cultivation period to let our people know.

Our General Conference has arranged for the "Mission Special" and other campaigns for this quadrennium; the success of each is largely dependent on giving the information and inspiration to the people; the Advocate not only aids in giving this information, but loyally supports the program of the church both editorially and through its news columns.

But the service rendered is measured by the number who subscribe for and read the paper. We have special times set apart for cultivation by the various agencies of the church, and the Advocate renders valuable assistance in all these periods of cultivation, but the cultivation in these special periods is often spasmodic and temporary, while the cultivation carried on by the Advocate is constant and faithful. Therefore, if we are to do our best, in any or all departments of the work of the church, it is necessary and imperative that our people subscribe for and read the Advocate.

If we do not know what our church is doing or plans to do, how can we do our part in carrying out the plans? The Advocate should be in every Methodist family. Suppose every pastor should make a list of the families in his church, and on Sunday, either at 11 o'clock or in the evening service, make a short statement about the worth of the Advocate to the membership of the church in every way, but especially in keeping them in touch with the work of the church in all its departments; tell them of the plan; appeal for subscriptions; then appoint a committee of three or more to take the list and personally call on each one who did not subscribe at the church, and give them an opportunity to do so. I believe if this was done, it would at least give you the 20,000 subscribers this year, and it would prove a great blessing to the readers, the church and the kingdom.

Let's Do It!

W. D. HAWKINS.

TO THE SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS AND WORKERS OF THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

Almost half of the schools in the Greenville District have ordered Sunday School Day Programs. If you have not done so, send your order to me at once. There are two kinds of programs, one for the small school and one for the large school. Order the one suitable for your school. We are expecting every school in the district to observe Sunday School Day. During the month of April is the best time. Let us make a record by every school in the district observing this day. Be sure and order your programs from me at once.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA UNHARMED.

Southern Methodist missionaries in China have not suffered any harm as a result of troubled conditions in that country, according to cable advices received Thursday morning, March 10, at headquarters of the Board of Missions at Nashville.

The cable, dated Shanghai, China, March 10, 3:40 p. m., reads as follows: "Conditions remain much the same. Our own missionaries have not suffered any harm." The message was signed by Dr. J. W. Cline, presiding elder of the Shanghai District, who has been engaged in missionary work in China for thirty years.

Every effort is being made by Dr. W. G. Cram, General Secretary of the Board of Missions, and Dr. O. E. Goddard, foreign secretary, to keep in touch with missionaries in China, and to inform their friends and relatives in the States as to conditions in that country.

I. W. MARTIN was born in Connecticut, Nov. 24, 1844. When he was two years old his parents moved to Laporte, Ind., and there he spent his boyhood days. At the age of ten he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. To this church he was faithful seventy-two years, the remainder of his long life. He joined the Federal Army during the Civil War. The spiritual army to him was the greatest of all treasures possessed in earthen vessels. He prayed and worked for the ongoing of the kingdom. His faith, prayer, studious habits and long experience equipped him for service above the average layman. Since the age of twenty-five he was almost continuously superintendent of his Sunday school, and at his death was teacher of the ladies' Bible class. The Sunday school bought a nice wreath of flowers for his funeral as a token of appreciation for his service. We came to this charge Nov. 25, 1926, and I met him first on Nov. 26, in his home. His brother-in-law, Mr. Shafer, was present We had prayer, Brother Shafer leading. From that time Brother Martin was one of my counsellors concerning the church work. Brother Martin was seriously ill about four weeks. During this time he would smile and say, "Well, I don't know how it is going, but either way will be all right." He retained consciousness to the last. The end came on Sunday, Feb. 27, 1927, at 4 a. m. During the last hours he would reach his trembling hand to those coming in, whom he thought might not know the Lord, and say, "I hope you will meet me in Heaven." He married Nettie Valentine in 1866, just after returning from the Civil War. To this union six children were born. Four of these and their mother have gone into eternity. He leaves a son, Leroy Martin, and a daughter, Mrs. W. V. Frink, both of Los Angeles, Calif., and his widow, Mrs. Emma Martin, a noble Christian woman, to whom he had been married eighteen years. Their loss is great, and we pray God's blessings upon each of them; but as we think of their loss, we are reminded of his everlasting gain.

His pastor,
G. A. BROADUS.

BISHOP CANNON'S APPEAL.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., chairman of the Board of Temperance and Social Service, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has issued the following statement from Washington:

"Passage of the prohibition reorganization bill was a foregone conclusion when a cloture resolution was adopted. Passed by an overwhelming majority in the House of Representatives nearly a year ago; demanded by the treasury department; declared necessary for efficient enforcement in the annual presidential message; its passage was blocked by obstructive tactics of a few noisy nullificationist senators especially from Maryland, New Jersey and New York, who, like the Philistine Goliath of old, almost daily on the Senate floor defied prohibition sentiment both within and without the Senate, declaring in one breath that prohibition was a failure because unenforceable, and in the next breath that no legislation should be passed to secure more efficient enforcement.

"It is exceedingly gratifying that these boasts and denunciations alike were swept aside as chaff by a vote of seventy-one to six, Senators favoring efficient enforcement, and refusing to violate their official oaths either by the policy of nullification or by refusal to pass legislation necessary to enforce the Constitution. They had sworn to uphold this again, when a real issue squarely met the country through the properly constituted representatives, and Congress declared itself overwhelmingly favorable to prohibition and determined to secure efficient enforcement.

"Surely decent, respectable citizens and newspapers must denounce bootleggers, their patrons and defenders, demanding that all violation of prohibition law be adequately punished, and all violators ostracized as enemies of society by all patriotic men and women who place good society above personal selfish indulgence. Pulpit and press should strongly emphasize to-day the evils of prohibition lawlessness and resulting drunkenness, urging law-abiding citizens to use their influence to secure better observance and enforcement of prohibition law."

THE HOWARD WILLIAMS MEETING AT UNION, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a word about the Howard Williams meeting in our town. Mr. Williams came to us on Feb. 2, and stayed until Feb. 20. I have waited to write this that I might see some of the after-effects of his meeting before I did write.

He came, opened fire on sin and worldliness of every form among our church people as a whole everywhere. While his messages fought sin in every form and showed men where they were bound, except they repented, yet every message and act of the man was one of a heart full of love for lost and backslidden people. The Lord came in a mighty way and there was a general straightening up of many of the church folks in the town. Men quit buying and selling on Sunday, women quit their bridge clubs and burned their cards, etc., high school boys and girls confessed and returned to God, who forgave.

We organized a men's prayer meeting that is being remarkably attended; the prayer meetings in the churches are more than doubled. There are several outstanding conversions in the community, with others that are just on the brink of turning over for God, if this continues. Even the unsaved have a different expression on their faces, and there is a different atmosphere in the town. We recommend them to any community for a community-wide effort in a revival way.

ANNUAL MEETING, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference will meet in Brookhaven, Miss., for its sixteenth annual session, March 22-25. This promises to be one of the best meetings ever held by this conference.

Rev. J. L. Neill, of Yazoo City, will have charge of the noonday Bible hour, his general theme being, "Citizenship in the Kingdom of God."

Several Council visitors and deaconesses will be our guests.

Send all delegates' names at once to Mrs. D. E. Bennett, Brookhaven, Miss.

ELLA WAYNE ORMOND,
Secretary.

FROM CONFERENCE TO COUNCIL.

One of the preachers, on looking in the church door at Mansfield and not finding a vacant seat, remarked, "Truly the women are taking the earth." We feel sure that if any of our citizens were roused from their slumbers in the wee small hours Tuesday morning and looked out to see taxis and autos flashing by, they must have wondered if all the town was going away. And at the depot! The babbling voices, the avalanche of grips, the busy agent selling tickets and giving certificates! It was some lively time, and when the women passed into the train with bag and baggage, the few men on board were routed and beat it for the smoker.

Just two days of Conference this year, but such full days—business galore, and yet a feast of good things that filled mind and heart and soul to the brim; and yet the great Council days to come. What a privilege!

At noon to-day, March 9, 1,100 women will gather at the hotel for lunch. What is on the menu, do you suppose? The men will say, "Tongue." Yes, there will be plenty of that, and it would take a thousand tongues to tell of the inspiration of a Council meeting. I would that everybody could go!

The last night of Conference we had as our Council guest, Mrs. Copeland, president of the Baltimore Conference, and she gave a wonderful talk, full of humor, on "Cast Your Nets on the Right Side of the Ship." It is the earnest prayer of the officers and delegates of the Louisiana Conference that we may go home with the right kind of bait and cast our nets among the stay-at-homes on the right side of the ship, that we make them understand the possibilities of the year 1927 in our Conference Societies and inspire each and every one to greater efforts in winning souls for Christ and telling the glad tidings to all the world of Jesus and his love.

MRS. GEORGE S. BROWN.

CONFERENCE-WIDE SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING.

There will be a Conference-wide meeting of Methodist Sunday school workers in Jackson, April 5 and 6. This meeting, to be held at Capitol Street Church, should be attended by pastors, Sunday school superintendents, officers and teachers, and interested pupils. If you are included in any of these groups, make your plans to be present at what promises to be the largest gathering of Methodists ever held in our Conference.

Every school in the Conference should be represented. At least one worker from each department should attend in order that your school may get full benefit from the group meetings that will be held on the morning of April 6.

The meeting will open on the evening of Tuesday, April 5, and last through the evening of Wednesday, April 6. Further announcement as to the exact program will be made later. Watch for these announcements.

The General Sunday School Board of our church is sending its best workers to make this meeting a great success. Dr. John W. Shackford, head of the General Sunday School Board; L. P. Sensabaugh, head of the Department of Administration; Robert H. Ruff, head of the Department of Adult Work, will be with us. Miss Margaret Patterson, Secretary of the General Elementary Council and Superintendent of Elementary Work in the Alabama Conference, will take part in the Elementary Section meeting.

The music for the Conference, with singing from the Methodist Hymnal, promises to be an interesting feature. On Wednesday morning, two-hour group meetings will be held for workers in various departments. An interesting program will be provided in each of these groups of workers in that department. Mr. Sensabaugh will have charge of a meeting of check men to discuss the Program of Work. Mr. Ruff will meet with those interested in the work with Adolescents. Miss Maggie May Jones, Conference Elementary Superintendent, will have charge of the Elementary Section. Miss Patterson and Miss Virginia Thomas, Elementary Superintendent of the North Mississippi Conference, will add much to the interest of this group of Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary and Junior workers.

Mr. H. T. Newell, Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, will preside at all ssesions of the conference. Rev. J. Loyd Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District; Rev. T. M. Brownlee, pastor-host, and others interested in Sunday school work in the city of Jackson, are giving all assistance possible for the success of the meeting.

There will be no free entertainment, but entertainment can be secured at rasonable rates for this occasion. If you wish entertainment at a reasonable rate during your stay in Jackson, April 5 and 6, write to Mr. O. H. Wingfield, Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., or to the Conference Sunday School Board.

Any information desired can be secured by writing to Rev. John C. Chambers, Conference Superintendent of Sunday Schools, 401 Millsaps Building, Jackson, Miss.

FROM TRENTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our first quarterly conference was held at Trenton on Feb. 4. Brother L. E. Alford preached a most excellent sermon touching on the mission special work, and what a great opportunity the church had to answer the call. Brother Alford said that this was the best first quarterly conference in his four years for the Trenton charge, in the Newton District. Every church on the charge was represented with a good report, the attendance was splendid, and much interest was shown.

We have raised our mission special quota in full. I believe it was the easiest money I ever raised, and I want especially to mention New Prospect, as I was water-bound and could not be present, but they met and took the free-will offering.

This is my secod year at Trenton, and we received a hearty welcome on our return. We appreciate the kindness of the good people, who have stood behind us in every Christian movement.

We have already done some repair work, and have other started. We are praying for our revival at the different churches, and wish the prayers of others.

Cordially and fraternally yours,
R. M. GIBSON.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Miss Virginia Thomas and I are scheduled to teach a school at Winona, March 20-25, and at the same time work with the pastor in doing some personal work in winning souls. The survey has been carefully made, as well as all other preliminary preparations that are needed for such a piece of work.

A Standard School is to be held at Greenville for the benefit of all the churches in that section of the Greenville District, to begin Sunday, at 2:30 p. m., and continue until Friday the 8th. The following courses are to be offered: Bible (New Testament), J. E. Stephens, instructor; Principles of Teaching, Prof. J. F. Walker, instructor; courses on Worship and the Home are on our list if we can secure instructors. Following this school one is to be held at Clarksdale, April 10-15, beginning the afternoon of the 10th, at 2:30. Principles of Teaching, Mrs. W. W. Templeton, instructor; Bible (New Testament), Rev. B. F. Lewis, instructor; for Primary Pupils and Intermediate-Senior Department Administration, instructors have not been secured. A school for Ruleville, April 17-22, with the following courses: The Church and Its Work, R. H. B. Gladney, instructor; Bible (Old Testament), Rev. B. F. Lewis, instructor; Beginner Pupil, Mrs. W. W. Adams, instructor; Primary Worship, instructor to be secured. Schools are scheduled for Iuka, May 2-7; Aberdeen, May 9-14; Sardis, May 22-27; Grenada, June 6-11.

We are making an effort to have 3,000 questionnaires to be used in the study of adolescents at our school to be held in Grenada, June 6-11, filled out. Five hundred have been sent out, and those for girls and boys of the older group have been delayed by the printer. They are past due, but as soon as they are received I shall mail them out to the teachers who have agreed to have them filled out. The need for prayerful, close, scientific study of our young people is more imperatively needed to-day than at any time in the past. Their hearts are hungry for God and they will never be satisfied until they find peace in Christ; but the fact is, we are not leading them as we should to him. This study will not settle everything concerning them, but the effort is in the right direction. We must, we will do this much for them.

The Brotherhood class at Sardis has made a notable record during the months of January and February. The work they have done in building up the class has stimulated the entire school, so the attendance of the school has made the best record in its history. Of course we have had the same kind of weather here that has been all over the Conference. The weather is not in the way; it is something else.

Miss Virginia and I held an institute at Dubbs for Brother Thrower and his people. The attendance was good despite the rain and roads, and the response was all that could be expected. The workers are lined up to carry out all the points in the Program of Work for the C type school.

Reports from the seven district superintendents are to the effect that orders for Sunday School Day programs are coming in rapidly. The nearer these programs are carried out as written, the better will be the result. If every circuit superintendent would take time to study the Small Sunday School, and every superintendent of the larger schools would study the Organization and Administration of the Sunday school, our progress would be still greater. The superintendents are behind the procession simply for lack of study. The superintendents are good men, but they do not know the magnitude of their task; they are content with doing too little study. A leader must know how to lead and must be in the lead in consecration and information. Wake up, superintendents, and read, pray, and work like putting out the house that is on fire.

Mother!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! Even constipated, bilious, feverish, or sick, colic Babies and Children love to take genuine "California Fig Syrup." No other laxative regulates the tender little bowels so nicely. It sweetens the stomach and starts the liver and bowels without griping. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs. Say "California" to your druggist and avoid counterfeits. Insist upon genuine "California Fig Syrup" which contains directions.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE MONROE CONFERENCE.

We are only a few days from the State-wide Sunday School Conference at Monroe, March 29-31, and all of the pastors are urged to put this matter before their congregations, stressing the importance of sending delegates to the meeting. The Adolescent Superintendent is especially anxious for the Young People's section to make a good showing. All of the District Superintendents have been asked to cooperate in getting representatives from the different churches.

The Young People's banquet has been planned for Tuesday night. Dr. J. B. Mitchell will be the principal speaker. All who plan to attend should send their names to Rev. A. S. Lutz as soon as possible, that reservations may be made.

Wednesday will be a full day, and the following program has been planned:

Morning Session.

Devotional, led by the presiding officer.

Recognition of districts and churches.

"The Project Principle and Missionary Education," Miss Fannie Norman, New Orleans.

"Challenging Youth Through Worship," President Raulins, Mansfield.

"Modern Youth and Present-Day Religious Problems," Mrs. R. E. Smith.

A discussion to follow each of the speeches.

Bible hour, Dr. Frank Parker.

Afternoon Session.

Round Table, led by Rev. H. L. Johns, Natchitoches.

Subjects for discussion:

Music and its value.

Programs of Work.

Programs of Worship.

What shall we study?

Plan now to have one or more representatives from your church at this meeting. It will strengthen your church, your Sunday school, and the community will be helped. Meet us at Monroe.

TRAINING SCHOOL AT MORGAN CITY, LA.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, of Alexandria, has been conducting a training school in the Morgan City Sunday school, beginning Sunday night, March 8, and closing on Thursday night.

This training school is primarily for the teachers and officers of the Sunday school, as well as those who are preparing to teach; but the class is not limited to these persons, as any one who is interested in the work of the Sunday school is most welcome.

Fourteen persons have taken the full course, not all of whom are teachers or would-be teachers. Quite a large portion of the regular Teacher Training Class of the Morgan City Sunday school is taking this work.

The course of study is based on a book written by L. F. Sensabaugh, entitled, "The Small Sunday School, Its Plan and Work."

In addition to the studying of this book under the able and enthusiastic direction of Mr. McLellan, a set of comprehensive written questions is given to the students each night, and at the close of the five-day school the papers answering these questions will be sent to headquarters at Nashville to be graded, and certificates will be given to those who merit them.

Besides the information derived from the study of this book and the supplementary questions, Mr. McLellan has supplied his hearers with samples of literature for their inspection, which offer suggestions and material for every phase of the Sunday school work.

This course of study covers the problems of practically every need of the small Sunday school, and is most helpful and inspiring.

Like every one who has something worth while, we wish to pass this help along to those Sunday schools about us who haven't had this opportunity, and to urge those Sunday schools who do have this privilege offered them to accept it.

We hope that this training school which has been a real awakening to those of us who have been fortunate enough to take it, will be like the mustard seed, and be the means of the same kind of growth.

Thin Men Rejoice

Put on Pounds of Solid Healthy flesh in 30 days

Get That Manly Figure

Why continue to be behind the times—Surely you have heard of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—the modern vitamine flesh food that has done so much for skinny, scrawny men and women.

They put on weight where weight is needed—not only that, but they improve your general health—bring strength—energy—more vitality.

Druggists everywhere sell McCoy's—60 sugar coated tablets 60 cents and if any thin person doesn't gain 5 pounds in 30 days money back—Ask for McCoy's.

A CHALLENGE ACCEPTED.

By Rev. O. E. Goddard, D.D.

The challenge of the Rev. W. B. Lee, of Sao Paulo, Brazil, sent out a few weeks ago to the preachers of our church, is being accepted. Brother Lee contributed $100 toward the Million Dollar Special for January and February and challenged any 7,000 of our preachers throughout the denomination to do the same. And those loyal Methodist preachers are taking up the gage that was flung at their feet, with the faithful missionaries leading the van.

The following letters have been received recently in the office of the Board of Missions:

Rev. J. L. Hendry, a faithful missionary who has spent thirty-eight years in China, writes:

"My dear wife and I have gladly determined to donate $100 to help in raising the Million Dollar Special. Enclosed find a check for that sum."

From Rev. and Mrs. V. R. Turner, Korea missionaries, comes this message:

"Put us down for $100 on the free-will offering to be paid within the year. We will do it even if it means 'soaking' another life insurance policy."

Dr. Eugene W. Potter, pastor of Francis Street Church, St. Joseph, Mo., says:

"I will accept the challenge of my brother in Brazil and will head the list of my church with $100."

Let the good work go on.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store fer a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Well-known druggists say it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

A FINE MEETING AT MELVILLE, LA.

The Bowden Evangelistic party, of Dallas, Tex., came to Melville Saturday, Feb. 12, and began a revival the next day, Sunday, Feb. 13. It rained all day Sunday, the first day of the meeting; practically no one there Sunday morning and but small crowd that night. From the very beginning, it was necessary to pull for a crowd to work with, and Brother Bowden, with his long experience with this work, began to organize the children, and worked with them until he had them working all over the town getting folks to come to church and singing as they never had sung before. It was wonderful to see how they were interested in singing and working. A great many of these children were Catholics and had never been inside the Methodist church before. It wasn't long till the church was filled to its capacity with one partition cut out to accommodate the crowd.

Brother Bowden preaches interesting and, sometimes, cutting sermons that reveal sin in all its forms, surcharged with Gospel truths that produce results even on hardened sinners. His is the kind of preaching that our church needs to-day, as it has always needed. His organizing ability and preaching and the orchestra composed of his four children, three daughters and one boy, turned toward the sins of any town, will produce good that eternity alone can reveal.

I am glad to say that this revival has meant a great deal to our town. With 60 per cent of the population Catholic and a host of bootleggers, gamblers, and what-nots, this revival has given our church twelve additions and a church much alive and alert about the Master's business. We have seen things in a different light and understand better now what we have to do to bring about God's kingdom in a larger and bigger way.

We turned the upper story of the large and spacious parsonage over to him and his family, and they have taken care of themselves without any trouble whatsoever. It was a delight and pleasure to have this man of God and his splendid family with us. We feel as though we have been entertaining angels unaware.

Sincerely,
JAS. A. KNIGHT, P. C.

FROM FAYETTE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have just completed and moved into our Sunday school annex. We are rejoicing. The exterior is of brick veneer, and throughout the workmanship is indeed beautiful.

We expect results, having followed the plan as best we could, for special missionary offering.

Have received several members since Conference. The work moves on well.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM TEXAS.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am to-day remitting my forty-fourth annual subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. If I am not one of your "old" subscribers I'll venture the statement that most names now on your mailing list have been placed there since mine first appeared. Then, too, my name has never been off, and in all these years I have missed seeing two numbers.

In Steve Davies' recent article about preachers he had known, Dr. J. B. Walker was named. This brought to mind a "Fifty years ago" item I clipped from the Galveston News—oldest of the Texas dailies. The item:

"Dr. J. B. Walker, pastor of St. John's, dellvered an address. The subject was: 'The Clothes We Wear.'"

That was fifty years ago. It may be since then others have discussed "The clothes we do not wear," or "The clothes we should wear."

Some months ago there was unveiled at Newton, Tex., a monument to Rev. Henry Stephenson, the first itinerant preacher to work in Texas. This may be of interest to your readers, since he was sent out from the Mississippi Conference.

The first Protestant to preach in Texas was William Stevenson, a Methodist minister. This was in 1817. His son, James P. Stevenson, was admitted into the Mississippi Conference in 1831, held meetings in Texas prior to the "official appointment" of Henry Stephenson, who, at the Conference "held at Clinton, Miss." (1834), was read out "to the Texas Mission." This was the first "distinctive appointment" to the new country. "Texas Mission" was included in the Louisiana District, and the presiding elder was Preston Cooper. Texas was at that time a distant field; however, it remained a part of the Mississippi Conference until 1839. The appointment in 1834 read: "Texas Mission, Henry Stephenson." In 1839 there were two districts. Included in this list of appointments will be found the names of Littleton Fowler, Robert Alexander, Thos. O. Summers and Abel Stevens.

Henry Stephenson died in 1841. His grave, in a country burial ground, was unmarked till last summer. The Texas Conference has placed a marble slab at the grave and erected a suitable monument, which stands in the public square in Newton, the county seat of Newton County.

From the date of that first assignment to Texas, till the organization of the Texas Conference, there was a period of six years. This, too, was a "Christmas Conference."

PALE & PEAKED

Texas Lady Was Advised by Her Mother To Take Cardui, Which She Did With Good Results.

Hamilton, Texas.—Mrs. Gladys Poitevint, of this city, says: "At times I suffered awfully with pains across my back and through my sides. I would have to go to bed and stay two or three days at a time. It was very worrisome. I managed to keep going, but . . . did not enjoy myself at all.

"One day my mother remarked on how bad I looked. She said: 'You look so pale and peaked, why don't you take a bottle of Cardui?' She had taken it herself a number of times, and it had always improved her health, so she thought I had better try it.

"I got the Cardui and began taking it, and from the first dose or two I could see a change for the better. The first thing I noticed was that my appetite was improved. I began to be hungry and I enjoyed my meals. I slept better at night. My rest was so much quieter that I got the benefit from it. I kept on with the Cardui and took it for several months. The pains in my back and sides grew less until they finally quit bothering me."

Try Cardui for your case.

TWO WOMEN PRAISE SAME MEDICINE

Both Helped by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"After the birth of my little daughter I was very badly run-down. I could not think of going to a hospital, but grew steadily worse, being compelled to stay in bed two or three days each week. A friend of my sister's told of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done her, and my sister bought me two bottles of it. I had not taken all of one bottle when I was up and able to do some work. I am truly a booster for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you may use my testimonial."—Mrs. Mayme Lynch, 1119 Island Ave., Ext., McKee's Rocks, Pa.

Mrs. Hope L. Smith, a farmer's wife of Route 3, Floyd, Va., says she was ill for ten years with a good deal of pain in her side and so weak she could hardly work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her so much she is telling her friends about it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY NOTES.

A study of the checking of Elementary Departments in the Mississippi Conference since June, 1926, shows some interesting results. Since that time fifty-six elementary certificates have been issued to ranking departments—thirty-three to Progressive Departments, twenty-two to Advanced, and one to a Standard Beginners Department.

A good many other groups have been checked, and are working on the Program of Work, with prospects of attaining rank this year. In several instances a department, on being rechecked, has been found to have higher rank than at the first checking.

Every Elementary Department—Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary and Junior—should be checked every year. A number of the departments checked last year will have higher rank when checked this year. The groups who are working hard on the Programs of Work derive great benefit from it. There follows a list of Progressive Departments checked this year: Brandywine—Beginners and Junior; Magee—Primary; Broad Street, Hattiesburg—Primary and Junior; Yazoo City—Beginners; Union—Primary; Holly Bluff—Beginners and Pirmary; Hermanville—Beginners and Primary. These departments have attained in full six of the ten points on their respective Programs of Work. There are others who have the possibilities of doing the same who should be checked.

The departments checked since Jan. 1 who have attained eight points on their Programs of Work and merit the Advanced rank are: Magee—Beginners; Mount Olive—Cradle Roll, Primary, and Juniors; Collins—Junior; Court Street, Hattiesburg—Primary; Galloway Memorial, Jackson—Primary. To the Beginner Department, Mount Olive was awarded the first Standard certificate to be awarded in this Conference.

If you are interested in having the work in any one of these Elementary departments in your church checked, call on the Elementary Superintendent of your Conference or your district.

Plans are about complete for the Elementary section meeting of the Conference-wide meeting to be held at Capitol Street Church, in Jackson, April 5 and 6. The section meetings will be held from 9 to 11 o'clock on the morning of April 6. The program will be practically as follows:

Report of District Elementary Superintendents, statement of goals set for year, and of attainment thus far.

Children's Week, Miss Virginia Thomas.

Address, Miss Margaret Patterson.

Group meetings for discussion of problems and Programs of Work, groups to be led as follows: Cradle Roll, Miss Virginia Thomas, Elementary Superintendent of North Mississippi Conference; Beginner, Miss Maggie May Jones, Mississippi Conference Elementary Superintendent; Primary, Miss Margaret Patterson, Secretary of General Elementary Council and Superintendent of Elementary Work of Alabama Conference; Junior, Mrs. C. W. Sullivan, Superintendent of Elementary Work of Hattiesburg District.

Every Elementary worker in the Conference should find a great deal of information and help in this meeting. If you work with children under 12 years of age—as an officer, teacher or helper—be sure to attend this section meeting. The rest of the program of the Conference will also be of great interest and importance to Elementary workers.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

On Thursday night of last week I visited Marksville in company with the pastor, Rev. Clarence White. There was a fine attendance, and much interest was shown by the Sunday school teachers. We had supper with the superintendent, Mr. Gaspard, and his estimable wife.

Sunday last was spent in New Orleans. We attended Sunday school and 11 o'clock service at Algiers. A delightful courtesy was extended us by the pastor and superintendent, and we enjoyed every moment of our visit in their midst. The wide-awake young superintendent, Edgar E. Cayard, is thinking in terms of a new annex for his growing Sunday school.

In the afternoon at 3:30, we attended the quarterly meeting at Felicity Church of the Sunday school workers of the district. In spite of the bad weather, practically every pastor and superintendent in the city attended, with fine reports from each. The district secretary, Mr. J. H. Carter, presided at the meeting, and one of the outstanding addresses was on "Sunday School Evangelism," by Dr. Mitchell, of Rayne Memorial. The Board of Managers of the 1927 Standard Training School was announced. This district is developing a fine constructive work.

After the meeting the writer spent a pleasant hour or so with the young pastor of Felicity, Rev. R. L. Armstrong. I look upon this young minister as my son in the gospel, as I was his first presiding elder; in fact, he says that I was the first elder he ever saw.

On Tuesday of this week I met the leaders at Opelousas in the interest of the Standard Training School there, March 20-25. Although the weather was exceedingly inclement, there were representatives from Melville, Port Barre, White's Chapel, and Washington. The pastor, Rev. D. B. Boddie, is hard at work to make this school the success it should be. The presiding elder, Rev. C. C. Wier, presided at the meeting.

* * *

The program for the State-wide Conference at Monroe has gone to the press, and will be sent to each Sunday school soon. The Conference staff is putting forth every effort to make the group meetings the best ever. We have in our office recent communications from Mrs. W. W. Holmes, of the Elementary Department; Rev. B. C. Taylor, of the Adolescent Group; Mrs. R. E. Smith, in charge of Parent-Teacher work, and from Dean Smith, who heads our Adult Departmtnt. In fact, the program and everybody taking part in it, promise a splendid gathering. The local committees at Monroe, headed by Dr. Monk, have things in fine shape, and we are looking forward to a conference filled with blessings.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Inc., Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING ACTION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

Chunky, Miss., March 6, 1927.

Whereas, the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its meeting, Feb. 8-10, 1927, in Memphis, Tenn., adopted a resolution in which it "put itself on record as opposed to all legislation prohibiting the teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges;" and,

Whereas, the statements of Dr. W. E. Hogan, secretary of the General Board of Education, indicate clearly that by "scientific subjects" the Association referred specifically to anti-evolution legislation; and,

Whereas, in the adoption of the resolution in its official capacity the Educational Association presumed to speak for the Southern Methodist Church; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Chunky Methodist church, in church conference assembled, enter our protest against the action of the Educational Association, because we believe said resolution has political tendencies; and further, because we do not believe that the Association had any right to speak for the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

2. That these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed:

F. E. REYNOLDS, Secretary.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A Retired.

Number 9.

"There is a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough-hew them how we will."

My appointment as a chaplain in the regular army, as I stated in my last article, was as much a surprise to me as anything could be. No minister of our church had ever been able to obtain a chaplaincy in the army, nor, so far as I know, had any Southern white man of any denomination. There were more than two hundred applications for the vacancy to which I was appointed, I have been told. Of all the lines which I had cast for a position, I looked upon my application for a chaplaincy with least hope of success. My appointment came as a surprise. So did my assignment.

Several days after I had received my commission, I had a telegram from the Adjutant General of the Army, ordering me to report to the commanding officer of the Sixth Infantry at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, for duty with that regiment. I reported for duty April 2, 1899. Colonel E. R. Kellogg was in command.

As I look back now, I can see into what a distinguished group I was thrown. Seven of the officers on duty with the regiment at that time have since been made general officers. Colonel Kellogg was made a Brigadier General soon after I joined the regiment. Colonel Miner, who was Lieutenant Colonel when I joined, succeeded General Kellogg as commmander of the Sixth Infantry, and was made a Brigadier General in 1903. Captain Omar Bundy was quartermaster of the regiment in 1899. He afterwards rose to the rank of Major General and commanded the Second Division at Chateau Thierry in the World War. Captain Benjamin A. Poore was adjutant of the regiment. He also rose to the rank of Major General and commanded a division in France. Captain Charles G. Morton was absent on mustering out duty when I joined, but soon returned to his regiment. He, too, became a Major General and held high command. S. J. Bayard Schindel and Oliver Edwards were then lieutenants, but afterwards rose to be brigadiers.

I at once became interested in the history of the regiment to which I had been assigned. I knew it was called "The Fighting Sixth," and I was anxious to know how it obtained that name. I found that the regiment was first organized in 1798, and that it had participated with distinction in every war in which our country has been engaged. In 1903, two enterprising young men of the regiment compiled its history, and asked me to write the introduction. I then had opportunity to express the conclusions I had reached in regard to our organization. I said in part:

"We have presented in this volume the heroic example of the long list of worthies who have composed the Sixth United States Infantry during its hundred years of history and history-making, that those of this present and coming generations may be put in touch with these heroic spirits and imbibe from that contact some of the lofty patriotism and sublime devotion to duty that have characterized the officers and men of the Sixth Regiment from its organization. It is believed that familiarity with the history of the regiment will contribute in no small degree to the development of that esprit de corps so necessary to an army organization. We are to make good the sobriquet which the regiment has won—'The Fighting Sixth.'"

ABERDEEN DISTRICT METHODIST MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Aberdeen District Ministers' Association met at Ebenezer Church, on the Buena Vista charge, Thursday, March 17. The house was called to order by the president, Rev. J. J. Baird, who immediately appointed the program committee, Revs. W. C. Newman, W. M. Hester and W. R. Liming. An informal discussion followed.

Brother Baird preached at 11 o'clock a good and profitable sermon, after which dinner was served on the church ground by ladies of Ebenezer church. The activity exerted by every one during the lunch hour attested his enjoyment. Thanks to the good ladies!

The afternoon session was opened by the singing of hymn 101, "Take My Life and Let It Be," after which the prayer was led by Rev. R. G. Moore. The following subjects were discussed:

1. "How to Prepare for a Revival," by Rev. W. R. Lott.

2. "The Pastor His Own Evangelist," by Rev. W. N. Dodds.

3. "The Assistance of the Professional Evangelist," by Revs. B. F. Bullard and W. C. Newman.

The program committee made its report and recommended that the Association convene at 11 o'clock for preaching and that the further exercises take place in the afternoon session. The report was accepted.

Collection was taken to cover the expense of the Secretary, which amounted to $3.35. A previous invitation was accepted a month ago to go to Aberdeen for the April meeting. A rising vote of thanks was given to the people of the Ebenezer church for their excellent entertainment, which was followed by the benediction.

We are taking this opportunity through the Advocate to insist that every minister within the Aberdeen District attend these pastors' meetings, especially the next one, which will be at Aberdeen. You will feel well paid for your time regardless of any effort it may cost you to attend. We have just mentioned the subjects discussed. It would be fine, if space would permit, to cover each, for every talk on these subjects was full of information and cheer, which helped us all to get a new grip on our work. Moreover, come to the April meeting at Aberdeen during the Howard revival.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH, Secretary.

MEETING OF SOUTHERN GROUP, JACKSON DISTRICT.

The Southern Group of the Jackson District Ministers' Association met in the new Methodist church at Clinton, Miss., at 10 a. m., March 10, 1927.

The following preachers were present: J. L. Decell, presiding elder; H. J. Moore, Bolton; John D. Ellis, Brandon; M. H. McCormack, Clinton; J. O. Ware, Edwards; N. S. Loftus, Fannin; S. B. Watkins, Florence; J. B. Shearer, Harrisville; T. M. Brownlee, Capitol Street; W. A. Terry, Grace; V. G. Clifford, D'Lo; R. E. Rutledge, Terry; J. M. Morse, Jackson; J. H. Foreman, superannuate, Pelahatchie; Claude Jones, Hattiesburg. A number of laymen were present.

A most impressive program was executed as follows: Devotionals, L. B. Watkins; "Pastoral Visitation," J. B. Shearer; "The Pastor and Christian Literature," by John D. Ellis; "The Pastor and Personal Evangelism," by H. J. Moore.

At 11:15 o'clock Brother T. M. Brownlee preached a most excellent sermon from the text, "That I May Know Him." Phil. 3:10.

The ladies of the church served a most delicious and abundant lunch in the church.

At 1 p. m., R. E. Rutledge conducted the devotionals, after which J. O. Ware spoke on the pastor and the Epworth League. The chairman, V. G. Clifford, emphasized this great work with a few words.

W. A. Terry spoke on "The Pastor and the Wesley Brotherhood."

J. L. Decell conducted a round table discussion on "The Methods and Value of Missionary Cultivation," and all the pastors reported on the Mission Special and the success of the campaign.

J. M. Morse spoke on "The Superannuate Endowment."

The next meeting of the Southern group will be April 19, at Pelahatchie.

Every pastor in this group was present at the last meeting, and was greatly benefited by having been present.

W. A. TERRY, Secretary.

A VISION—GET IT AT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: On April 5 and 6 there will be held in Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., a Conference-wide Sunday School Conference for all Sunday school workers of the Mississippi Conference. We are especially anxious for all who are interested in the missionary work of the Sunday schools of the Mississippi Conference to attend this meeting.

It may be of interest to our Mississippi Conference to know that new schools are adopting the Dual Extension plan of the Sunday School Board every week, and interest is growing every day. Pastors and superintendents are urged to attend this meeting and try to have at least one delegate from every Methodist Sunday school. The Sunday School Board is planning and praying that this may be the banner year of the Conference and that when we go to Conference we can not only report a "Good Year, Bishop," but also be able to say every Sunday school is supporting the missionary program of the church. Go to Jackson, get a vision, and you will see your task, and by God's help you will accomplish your task.

We are counting on you. Don't disappoint us, for we are looking to see you at this the greatest meeting of the kind ever held in the State.

P. L. BLACKWELL,
Superintendent Missionary Education.

"GOD'S POEM."

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

The Greek word, Poiaema, from which we get our word poem, is found twice in the Bible; and in both instances, Paul wrote the passage in which it occurs. Our versions of the Bible translate the word as handiwork, or creation; yet all the Greek lexicons indicate that the word poiaema's first definition is poem; a secondary sense is workmanship or something created. Let us think of the learned and thoughtful Paul using the word in its first and highest sense.

"God's Poem!" What does it mean? God speaks to us in works as well as in words—in works oftener than in words. "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech"—the speech of God—"and night unto night showeth knowledge"—God's science. The life of nature is his science, the rolling worlds are his philosophy, and the records revealed by the rocks are his history.

"Nature paints not in oils, but frescoes the great dome of heaven with sunsets, and the lovely forms of clouds and flying vapors;" and all of these are for God—

"Earth is but the frozen echo of the silent voice of God,
Like a dewdrop in a crystal throbbing in the senseless clod;
Silence is the heart of all things. Sound the fluttering of its pulse,
Which the fever and the spasm of the universe convulse."

All of these are the words of the Creator, the literature of God: his history and his science, his philosophy and his essays, his drama and his romance—and "we," says Paul, "are his poem"—his poetry.

There is glorious significance in the fact that we are his poetry rather than his history or his philosophy, or his science, or his romance, or his drama. The oldest literatures of all the races of men are poetry. The first chapters of Genesis in their original were poetry. It was evidently true of the beginning of every race, when writing was scarce and printing was unknown; and so only the best of their literature was written and so was preserved; and only that best has come down to us in poetic form. Poetry, with its higher thought linked with the music of rhyme and rhythm, and lofty imagery and deep feeling is the best literature possible to human genius. "We are God's poetry"—the noblest and best, the highest and loveliest creations of God. We misread the Eighth Psalm when we make it say: "Thou hast made man but a little lower than the angels." As David wrote it, inspired of God, it says: "Thou hast made him but a little lower than God."

We will catch more surely Paul's meaning, if we will think of some of the sublime characters that have passed on earth as living poems: Moses, the romance of whose birth and babyhood was a rich background for the splendid life he lived, stands out in epic grandeur, a living song, sublime and harmonious, with a sweep of kingly character and glorious destiny; Elijah, rugged and stalwart, brave and strong, cowing kings by his intrepidity, and swaying vast multitudes by the daring presentation of great truth; then weeping like a woman—then catching from God mighty revelations voiced in storm and earthquake—sweeping into the skies at last, fire-charioted to his eternal home. What a thilling poem was Elijah! Away yonder in the dim morning of history there was a man, of whom we know only that his name was Enoch, that "he walked with God, and was not, for God took him," and thus we catch the measure of a splendid poem, an epic of olden time, radiant and rosy and royal.

Out of this thesaurus of things divine we learn of other living songs of a tenderer form and measure—lyrics soft as love-songs and lullabies, and sweeter than those the angels sing. One of these was Ruth, born and nursed amid the wild mountains of Moab, and nurtured on the paganism of a crude and awful time; yet, catching in a romantic way the melody of truth and the beauty of purity, born only of the Bible, she followed with beautiful womanly feet, and a woman's high devotion until God linked her into the genealogy of the kingly David and the coming Christ. Oh, she is a lovely lyric of life, a love-song first sung on the hills of old, old Bethlehem, and heard with rapture down all the millenniums since, and on all the shores of earth. Another of these was Esther, the pure-hearted, high-souled Jewish maiden prisoned in the harem of Artaxerxes, who, following the beckoning hand of God, was led to be Israel's deliverer. Another was Mary, the mother of the Christ, the woman most blest of all her sex. There were other Marys: she of Magdala, the Christ's dearest female friend, the paragon of devotion, the Niobe of the New Testament, living her lovely transfigured life only for Christ; and she of Bethany, who in unwitting rivalry of hearts was Magdala's holy rival. What lovely lyrics these were, fragrant with the breath of roses and radiant with rainbow tints!

"We are God's poem." These are Paul's words. We will not think of ourselves as separate poems, but as parts—some epic, some lyric—of one grand poem of redeemed humanhood. An old Greek philosopher had a splendid dream of the Music of the Spheres, a harmony of world-movements, so perfect and so supernal that it grew into a mighty diapason that trembled through all the world spaces. Paul's concept of God's great poem, made up of splendid manly lives and lovely womanly lives, and of the sweet and pure baby lives that Christ loves and treasures, is a concept vastly greater than that old philosopher's dream. In this "Poem of God" are associated with us the noblest company ever dreamed of: the princely Moses of Egypt and Midian, and Elijah of Gilead, and Ruth of the valleys of Moab and the hills of Bethlehem, and Esther from the palaces of Shushan, and the lovely Marys of the Christ time—aye, and Daniel, the princely boy of Babylon, and little Samuel, the boy prophet at Shiloh—aye, with millions of others the noblest men of all the ages, and the loveliest women and sweetest children of all lands and times, we unite to make God's Poem, the sublime poem of redeemed humanhood. "We are his poem," says Paul.

As the years roll on this, God's Poem grows grander—

"The hands upon the cruel tree
Extended wide as mercy's span
Have gathered to the Son of Man
The ages past and yet to be:

"One reaching backward to the prime
Enfolds the children of the morn;
The other to a race unborn
Extends the crowning gift of time," and so out of the past so far away, and out of the present so great, and out of the future so big with hope, the children of Adam are wrought by Christ's Redemption work into "God's Poem."

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I have just finished reading a remarkable book by E. Stanley Jones, called, "Christ of the Indian Road." I fully agree with the author in making Christ the great central fact of our holy faith. Also that the Christian religion is pre-eminently a religion of a Person, and is not dependent upon ritualistic or theological interpretation for its acceptance and its saving grace and life. I also rejoiced with the author that the wonderful personality of Jesus, historically and spiritually, is winning his way into the hearts of India's peoples.

Most of the questions concerning the truths of Christianity which the author said were propounded to him by the cultured Hindoos are not new to the Western mind. However superior, as Mr. Jones thinks, these Orientals may be in spiritual thought and acumen, the keen analytical mind of Europe and America has long since grappled with these questions and answered them as well as they could be answered. If India has better and clearer answers, again will we rejoice. I also believe in the brotherhood of man. But I know as well as I know anything that there are weaker brothers, that are not now improving, and have not in the past improved the opportunities and privileges of life, such as culture, social and material betterment, as have other members of the race.

Thought indeed rules the world, but it must be the right kind of thought, not vapid dreams. Religion molds men and races to higher things only when predicated on righteousness. I have little patience with the doctrine so prevalent now in many quarters that the Western mind has perverted and misunderstood the Christ of the New Testament. I hold without fear of successful contradiction that the conception of Christ as held by the enlightened Christendom of Europe and America to-day is the truest and highest conception known to the world. If the Christ of Wesley, Moody, Brooks, and countless other saintly souls, is not the Christ of God, I do not know where one may find him. Surely not in caste-ridden India, where an upper man is polluted by the falling shadow of a lower man, or the very highways are forbidden to certain low orders of humanity. Yes, sir, if I had to live among these folks, I would want some Western life and civilization along the Indian road.

There are spots on the sun, frozen wastes of ice and snow on the earth, thorns on roses, and fair dreams are akin to nightmares. Imperfection, temptation—the thorns and briars on life's way—seem necessary to call forth effort and maintain discipline. No human relation is perfect, whether it be social, civil or religious. But there is one thing for which I am grateful: the spots are not the sun, desert wastes are not the fair earth, nor roses, thorns, or fair dreams all nightmares. So with our great country. I am sick and tired of these critics at home and abroad continually fulminating concerning these United States, and printing screeds about our social, civil and moral conditions. Now every loyal, law-abiding American citizen deplores crimes of violence against the body politic. One mad dog in a community will cause more fear and general confusion than one hundred faithful Fidos watching the homes by day and night. So with crimes, lynchings, feuds, gun men, and gun women; they are not America; they are excrescenses on the body politic. Millions of us go about our every-day affairs, or travel from Maine to California, and keep this up for a half century or more, with perfect safety and equanimity. In fact, these untoward citizens are usually caught in the machinery of the law, or kill one another. So comfort you, my people. God is on his throne, and there are tens of thousands of good people leading righteous lives in his sight, and these will stand by, and if need give their best to maintain the peace and welfare of our country.

The point I especially wish to emphasize is this:

our homes and firesides are safe for the most part. Americans are still on guard, for this is our country, and by the grace of God neither violence, nor crime, nor lawlessness can ever overthrow it just so long as we are vigilant and care for our own, the critics and censors to the contrary notwithstanding. I fear there are too many alarmists among the newspapermen. Thunder is not music, sensational writing is poor literature, and the thrills it engenders are so short lived, they have to be renewed every day. Let's have fewer scareheads and more level heads.

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 3.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will join heartily in the worship of his church.

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name." Ps. 100:4.

"I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing the understanding also." I Cor. 14:15.

Does your pastor have to think twice before calling on one of the congregation to pray? Every one should prepare himself, both spiritually and mentally, to take part in the worship of his church. We should go to church to worship, not merely to hear the music and sermon.

POWER, NOT NOISE.

By Cora S. Day.

"My, what a racket!" Jane laughed as the noisy little car squeaked and clattered its way down the street.

"Dreadful!" agreed Bertha. "Now, here comes my idea of a car."

Both girls half paused to look admiringly at the big automobile passing them, its powerful engine purring so softly and smoothly that it could scarcely be heard.

Power, not noise! That is what we want in our lives—power for good work, without fuss and feathers. Let us try to gain it.—Exchange.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

A swish of skirts, a flutter of elegant gowns, a vision of fair women! Big women, little women, fat women, slim women, pretty women, homely women. Their hats seen in a mass reminded me of milady's pansy bed. Some had skirts long enough to please the Pope, and some short enough to please the devil. Some wore their hair after God's style, and most of them had the "Parisian bob." The majority were elderly women—some old maids—no telling how old! The trick of the "vanity case" camouflages wrinkles and freckles, and one never knows just what he is looking at.

It was the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference. The Mansfield ladies expected and provided for 175, and 300 delegates and visitors arrived! But Mansfield hospitality is elastic, and I did not hear of any sleeping on the street or going away hungry. Milady's cottage was honored by three ladies from Baton Rouge, and they left behind them a fragrant memory. Bad weather kept me indoors, but I ventured out once just to pay my respects to the occasion. I found the church jammed with the sisters, and all seemed happy. The weather! It was about the worst we have had the whole season, raining hard and cold enough to make milady ask if I thought it would freeze at night. Her flowers, of course. It didn't freeze, but it made us shiver and pull up the cover.

One reason for the large attendance in Mansfield was probably that a number of them were on their way to the Council meeting in Shreveport. Milady attended the "banquet." She gave a glowing report of the occasion, and was especially impressed with the splendid womanhood of Methodism as it appeared assembled at the banquet board, twelve hundred plates! As I am no longer a "dignitary" I am shy of such occasion. It is true, I helped to start the work fifty years ago, and next to Dr. Alpheus W. Wilson and Dr. D. C. Kelley, did more, perhaps, in co-operation with Mrs. Juliana Hayes, to set it going than any one man in Southern Methodism. But the pioneers are back numbers now. The work Mrs. Hayes and I planned in my Richmond study has grown to vast proportions, and one can truly exclaim, "What hath God wrought!" I am not reporting the meeting of the Council. They probably have their own reporters who will write it up; but it was a great occasion, and its work will have a far-reaching influence. The missionary work was never in such a perilous situation as it is now. It may be set back by the storm, but it cannot be permanently arrested. The moral effect of the Centenary failure has doubtless been fearful, especially in the Orient. Why, it is hard for me, sitting here in my Den, with my hyacinths blooming at my door, and milady rebuking any shadowy despondency that I may express, not to feel the blighting effect of inconsistent Christianity. How the pagans must exult in the conspicuous failure of the church to pay its vows!

The bad weather saved me from what might have been a little embarrassing compliment. Milady returned from one of the meetings here in Mansfield, and said I must fix up my Den! Fix up my Den? Why, the beauty of the Den is its freedom from the daily attentions bestowed on the rooms in milady's cottage. Books, magazines, papers, pictures, literary junk, are all piled about, or rather jammed together, in the orderly disorder of a work-shop. When I asked why she wanted me to upset my Den by fixing it up, she said that only the rain prevented a group of ladies coming over just to visit my Den! Great goodness! Didn't I miss it—or rather didn't they miss it! I have been hoping to enlarge it and get it in at least a shape where I could do my work with a little more ease! but, alas, every time I put my hand in my pocket the few pennies I have scamper away to the remotest corner of the cage, crouch, and snarl, and growl, and clutch the cloth in terror, just like a monkey I saw in a cage, who seemed to think I was going to call on him for a collection! This threat of elegant ladies to visit and inspect my Den startles me. Milady says quit writing about it if I'm ashamed for folks to see it. That's good hard horse sense; but I forget the advice, or deliberately ignore it, as I see I am doing now.

I'll keep on trying till I get it enlarged and set in some sort of order, and at least have room for a chair or two for the ladies. Just outside of it I have planted scuppernong grapevines, which, when they grow up, will give me an ideal arbor where I can receive my visitors. Meantime, I'll keep the typewriter clicking. I have no pulpit now; but through the Memphis Sunday Commercial-Appeal I reach a larger audience than perhaps I ever spoke to from the pulpit or the forum. Now and then I write for the church papers. I don't think they care for my scribbles, except a few of them, and I know I'm a goose for imposing my pieces on them; but I get many letters asking me why I don't write. That tickles my vanity, and I pitch in and send a letter to some Advocate, whose editor, I expect when he receives it says, "Here he is again. Is there no way to squelch that old man in the sticks? I hate to hurt his feelings by throwing what he writes in the waste basket." Let her go, brother. I at least have got it off my mind, and can now turn to more serious work.

Work? Yes, I work at least eight hours a day. I recently preached twice a day for two weeks, and felt about as well at the last service as at the first. If I had my life to live over, I would make a few changes. For one I would do my level best to get to be a bishop. I like the "divinity that doth hedge" him about, and the revenue he has, and above all, the opportunity his office gives him. But, come to think of it, I wouldn't have my Den, and the spur of necessity to keep me busy, and the exemption from income tax, and the beauty of dignified poverty with all the graces that cluster about it, and my hoe and spade and "gyarden" to dig in. Then a bishop plays golf, and that would let me out. Speaking of my garden, two grasses vex me, bermuda and cocoa. I call the bermuda the fundamentalists, and the cocoa the liberalists. They are mortal enemies to each other, and both do all they can to oppose my evangelical modernist beans. The fundamentalist bermuda says the liberalist cocoa is barren and sterilizes the garden, and with this I am obliged to agree; the liberalist cocoa says that nobody with brains will feed on bermuda—it is good only for cattle. So I take my sharp hoe, common-sense, and make relentless war on both of them. Yes, there are modernist beans that are no good; the variety I like is the evangelical sort. They are nutritious and are worth cultivating.

TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS A MINUTE.

That's how Bay Springs contributed to the Missionary Special. It was done without any special pressure beforehand, too. The pastor was engaged in a meeting the week before and came in Sunday night and talked awhile on the first recorded words of Jesus, and called for contributions, and it came in on an average of $25 per minute. Quite a few had previously studied Dr. Rawling's book, which was one reason for the quick and generous response. You can count on Bay Springs!

The other churches of the charge have responded well, considering existing conditions. The charge will pay its whole quota.

Just now there is a flourishing Senior Epworth League doing fine work at Bay Springs, just recently organized. You might pray for the young man who is the capable and enthusiastic leader.

Feeling refreshed,

J. A. WELLS.

Bay Springs, Miss.

THE MISSION SPECIAL IN THE CORINTH DISTRICT.

Dear Advoocate: On our Missionary Special: Booneville, $350; Burnsville, $5.09; Hickory Flat, $3.50; Mooreville, $15; Wheeler, $15; Belmont, $32; Ripley, $213.50; Iuka, $125; Corinth, First Church, $500 (canvassing incomplete); New Albany, $700; Corinth circuit, $14.

New Albany leads the district with $700 cash, notwithstanding they are completing a new church with approximate cost of $75,000.

The work was delayed in the rural churches, but is being completed and reports will come in later. This is by no means a complete report.

The cultural work was well done and our people are delighted and strengthened with the great missionary program of our church.

THRIFT OF TIME.

Believe me when I tell you that thrift of time will repay you in after life, with usury of profit beyond your most sanguine dreams; and that waste of it will make you dwindle alike in intellectual and moral stature, beyond your darkest reckoning.—Gladstone.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL—NINETEENTH SESSION, JUNE 14 TO 28, 1927.

By Rev. H. M. Ellis.

The nineteenth session of Seashore Divinity School will be held on Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., June 14 to 28, 1927, and again a rich and rare intellectual and spiritual feast awaits those who can attend.

Platform Addresses.

Bishop W. A. Candler, always full, clear, brilliant, forceful and ready, who has delighted all on each of his former visits, will again occupy the platform at the morning and evening hours of the first week—a sufficient guarantee of strong meat and inspiration.

Dr. Harold Paul Sloan, of Haddonfield, N. J., President of the Methodist League for Faith and Life, will lecture at the same hours for the second week. His ripe experience and scholarship, and his record of splendid service rendered his church, make sure that it will be a week well worth while and long to be remembered by the fortunate ones who are present.

Study Courses.

All the Undergraduate Courses of Study required by the Discipline, including that for Admission on Trial, will be conducted under competent instructors. Examinations accepted by Annual Conference examining committees will be given those who have carefully read their entire course (for that year) previous to the session of Divinity School.

Undergraduates will find this the most helpful and happy way to take the Course of Study.

Accommodations.

Keller Lodge, managed by an experienced and competent lady, keeping neat rooms and serving ample meals, offers the low rate of $1.50 per day where two occupy a room.

The White House, one of the choicest hotels on the coast, makes a very special rate of $2.50 to all ministers and their families attending Seashore Divinity School.

The restaurant, on the grounds, will furnish excellent meals at special rates.

Cottages and apartments on the grounds may be secured for families or parties by writing to Rev. Randolph Saucier, Seashore Camp Grounds, Biloxi, Miss.

Who Should Attend.

All Preachers. The School was instituted for the instruction, inspiration and fellowship of all preachers, the old who can still learn, as well as the young.

Undergraduates will find here the best opportunity to get the most out of their Course of Study—and much more.

Laymen—the sisters, of course, included—will find strong spiritual meat in the lectures, and the finest fellowship in the goodly company attending.

All intellectual and religious folks should come and bring their families.

Recreation.

The afternoons are given to fellowship and recreation. Bathing, boating and fishing—now just come and see.

Sailing excursions to the islands.

The "bus" will take you anywhere along the coast.

Baseball and tennis will be arranged for. Also other games.

Be Sure

to be at the opening lecture by Bishop Candler Tuesday night, June 14, and stay through the closing address by Dr. Sloan, Tuesday night, June 28, 1927.

Be sure not to miss this chance of the year!

A HISTORIC SUNDAY SCHOOL IN LOUISIANA.

(We are indebted to Dr. F. C. Wren, superintendent of our Sunday school at Winnfield, La., and president of the State-wide Sunday School Conference, for this interesting note.—Editor.)

The Pine Grove Sunday school, on the Sibley charge, Louisiana Conference, eight miles north of Minden and eight miles from a railroad, was organized in 1854 by a Mrs. Perkins, who had been a missionary, a Presbyterian.

The school began as a union school, but became a Methodist school during the war between the States.

The school has always been evergreen except when the school house was burned some years after the war; but during much of that time school and church were held in the different homes until a new house was erected. The present building is some bit over forty years old; but a few years ago it was remodeled and is now a four-room building, with movable partitions.

No one is able to say how long Methodist literature has been used, but they know it has been coming regularly for over forty years.

The finest library the school ever enjoyed was in the early days of its existence. Mrs. M. C. Griffith now has in her possession a Testament, given her by Mrs. Perkins seventy-three years ago, for memorizing for the school the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments.

Mrs. M. C. Griffith and Mrs. E. C. Wren, who are members of the Home Department, were little girls at the organization and called charter members of the Sunday school.

Miss Ava Wren is now superintendent of this school, and writes that on last Sunday their records showed seventy-one on roll, sixty-four present, seven absent, three 100 per cent classes, every officer and teacher present.

G. L. P. Wren (deceased), the father of the present superintendent, was superintendent of this school for over thirty years.

Rev. R. R. Alexander was the first Methodist pastor of this congregation.

TO THE ADULT SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Conference Sunday School Conference to be held at Capitol Street Church, Jackson, is without question the greatest effort that our Conference has ever made in a Sunday school way. The whole program promises to be very helpful. No part will be greater than that in which you and I are very definitely interested—the Adult department. From 9 to 11 a. m., on the 6th, Rev. R. H. Ruff, Superintendent of Adult Work of the General Sunday School Board, will lead the adult group in their section meeting. This ought to be a very large group. You will have the opportunity of getting helps at this meeting that will greatly aid you in your work.

And another thing—probably as good piece of service as you can render this year will be to arrange for and urge the workers of your Sunday school to attend this conference. Would it not be a fine thing for every adult class to send, by paying the small expense, at least one worker from among the other departments? Come on—let's do our part to make it a great success. Let us pray much for it.

J. L. CARTER,
Conference Superintendent of Adult Work.
Mount Olive, Miss.

SCHOLARSHIPS AT WHITWORTH.

The Peripatetics Club, one of the social organizations among the women of Brookhaven, Miss., undertook a few months ago to raise a thousand dollars with which to endow a scholarship, which should be used for assisting some worthy Brookhaven, or Lincoln County, student in her education.

The club, through its treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Bowen, has paid to W. D. Davis, Treasurer of Endowment Fund, about half of the total sum, and expects to have the remainder in the early future.

This endowing of scholarships to assist worthy young ladies in their education is a noble enterprise, and we can recommend such as a worthy undertaking for any social club, or Sunday school, or Epworth League, or Missionary Society.

Why should there not be more of these scholarships? One thousand dollars is a modest endowment. A scholarship of $2,500 would give more substantial help. Individuals and societies, by endowments of this kind, can perpetuate their influence and work. People will die every week, and leave estates worth thousands of dollars, in some instances many thousands. If these people, while they live, would invest half of a fortune in endowments of this kind, their lives would be happier, and their influence for good would be perpetuated.

H. G. HAWKINS.

Brookhaven, Miss.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE—EAST END CHURCH—APRIL 7-8, 1927.

The first service of the conference will be conducted at East End Church, Meridian, on the evening of April 6, at 7:30 o'clock.

The sermon will be preached by Dr. Rolfe Hunt, after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. It is very important that all the pastors and local preachers be present for this first service, and as many of the lay members as possible. This first service should be a spiritual uplift to the entire district through its representatives.

I am announcing the following committees, to be added to as occasion calls for:

Local Preachers: Rolfe Hunt, J. A. Moore, H. E. Raley. Local preachers need to have their reports, with a request for renewal of license, if they wish it, in the hands of this committee before the conference convenes.

License to Preach and Orders: W. B. Jones, W. B. Alsworth, J. W. Ramsey. At least one applicant will be before the committee for license to preach. The committee will please be prepared to hold this examination. Some local preachers should be before the committee for orders.

Missions: A. M. Broadfoot and others.

Education, Sunday Schools, Epworth League: A. F. Watkins, J. A. Moore, W. J. Dawson, Miss Phillips.

Financial System and Lay Activities: District Board of Lay Activities.

Every member of the conference should make it a point to be present for the first session on Thursday morning, the 7th, at 9 o'clock.

ROBERT SELBY, P. E.

NEWTON DSTRICT CONFERENCE—ANOTHER CHANGE IN DATE.

Because of Tuesday, the 26th of April, being graduating day of the high school in Walnut Grove, where our conference is to be held, request has been made from that community that we convene one day later. We will comply with the request, and the conference will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, April 27 and 28.

Let all pastors, local preachers, and delegates take note thereof and govern themselves accordingly.

L. E. ALFORD, P. E.

THE SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: Please announce again: The Seashore District Conference will meet in Pascagoula, March 30-31. The opening sermon will be preached the night of the 29th by Rev. H. A. Wood. The conference will begin Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock promptly. Let every pastor and delegate be at the opening service. Let every charge have the Mission Special in full by that time. We are expecting Bishop Candler to be with us. Let us pray and believe for a deeply spiritual and helpful conference.

THE FLOWERS YOU MEAN TO SPREAD ON THE COFFINS OF SUPERANNUATES WOULD SMELL SWEETER TO THEM IF GIVEN NOW IN TERMS OF QUOTA PAYMENTS

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

THE PREACHER'S GETHSEMANE

Time. At the close of an average of thirty-five years of active service for the Church.

Place. A small town, where he has gone to attend his Annual Conference and to receive appointment for another year's active work.

Conditions. No bank account, no home, health impaired, unfitted for any other character of work, aged and sickly wife waiting for news of his appointment, children married and having a hard time to make ends meet, and maybe an invalid child or loved one depending upon him for support.

Appointment. Superannuation, with an annual allowance so small that it scarcely pays even the rent for an humble cottage.

The Return. When you have made it, you will ever remember it as "The Preacher's Gethsemane." You say, "Why make a scene of all this; anyhow, he is comfortable." Is he? Could you be comfortable under similar circumstances? Could you? This man has served the Church all his life with utter abandon to her interests. He has given her all his affection, energy, thought and devotion. "God has been his Master; the Church has been the field of his unremitting toil." I do not protest against his retirement, for it must be so. But when his Annual Conference votes him to the list of superannuates, allows him a mere pittance annually for his support, and quiets its conscience by singing "E'en down to old age," I say, "Justice is lame as well as blind among us."

The Result. Today, many of those who have traveled this via doloroso are sick, lonely, and in great need of the bare necessities of existence. Some of them are compelled to depend on the charity of others to keep the wolf from the door. It sometimes happens that when one of them closes his eyes upon this world, it is necessary for friends to provide the funds to give him a decent burial. It is painful to read these lines, but it is much more painful to realize that the Church so neglects to provide a proper support for her old preachers that such words can be written.

PULL UP THE THISTLE OF CARE THAT INFESTS THE SUPERANNUATES' GARDEN AND PLANT A ROSE OF QUOTA INSTEAD--- DO IT NOW

AGREES WITH THE RESOLUTION OF THE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

By Rev. W. T. Bazzel.

In the Advocate of March 10, Brother John W. Ramsey enters a vigorous protest against the Educational Association for their action in adopting the following resolution:

"We, the members of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 10, 1927, hereby put ourselves on record as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges."

Now, I am not an "evolutionist," but to save my life I cannot find anything wrong with this resolution. It does not profess to represent the opinion of the whole Methodist church, but it is, "We, the members of the Educational Association," etc., who are placed on record in the resolution. Now, I am a minister and member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, but I am not a member of the Educational Association, so that the resolution does not necessarily represent me.

However, I am ready to state that I agree fully with the sentiment expressed in the resolution. I, too, am opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in our schools and colleges. Does any one favor legislation that will interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects?

But let us quote the second paragraph of the resolution, and get the record complete:

"Whether or not we have been in position to form opinions on current scientific theories or whatever opinions we may have formed on these subjects, in any case, we are opposed to such legislation because we believe it will be futile and can serve no good purpose."

So the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not express itself as either for or against the evolution theory; it is simply opposed to legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects, because it (the Association) believes that such legislation is futile.

Now, I am just a little circuit rider away out here in the country, and I may get a badly distorted view of things from this perspective; but it really seems to me that all this acrimonious controversy between "fundamentalists" and "modernists" is likely to do more damage than the teaching of evolution in our schools and colleges. Not that I undervalue the importance of sound teaching during the formative years of youth; its importance cannot be overestimated.

But it is said that teaching evolution undermines the faith of students and makes atheists of them. Maybe so. To explain man's origin by the evolution hypothesis alone is certainly unscriptural. But if studying scientific theories produces infidels, are not we, preachers and religious teachers, largely responsible? How? Why?

Well, we have insisted upon a literal interpretation of the first chapters of Genesis as a fundamental of the Christian faith. We teach our children that the earth was spoken into existence a little over 6,000 years ago; that in six days of twenty-four hours God created all things; that he divided the light from darkness the first day; made the firmament the second day; that on the third day he divided the land from the water and caused the land to bring forth grass and trees; that on the fourth day he created the sun, moon and stars; that he made all living creatures the fifth day; and finally, on the sixth day, made man in his own image. Now our children are not only taught that all this happened in the six days, but that this literal account is a vital part of Christianity, and that to doubt or deny it is to deny the faith of the fathers!

Having set ourselves up as defenders of the faith, especially of the first chapter of Genesis, we raise the hue and cry that "evolution contradicts the Bible"—"Evolution means atheism"—"Down with evolution"—"Pass laws! Make it a felony to teach anything contrary to our literal, six-day interpretation of Genesis!" "The whole plan of salvation hinges upon the Genesis account of the creation and fall of man!"

Our children go to college with the din of this controversy ringing in their ears. There they study geology, and find a record written in the rocks that carries the history of this earth back so far as to make the 6,000 years seem but a trifle. They follow the footprints of marching aeons through epochs and upheavals until the literal six-day theory becomes untenable. Astronomy shows them a vast universe in which the earth is comparatively a small speck, and demonstrates that the sun existed prior to the earth.

Now, if their faith in the Christian religion must stand or fall with a literal interpretation of the first chapter of Genesis, what happens? And if it falls, who is to blame? Is it the teacher that guides them in the study of science, or the theologian who bases the whole scheme of redemption on the first chapter of Genesis?

The student of history also learns that champions of revealed religion have made many pitiful blunders trying to defend their faith against the teachings of science. For a while it was rank heresy to teach that the earth is round, and that it moves around the sun, because such a theory "contradicted the Bible!" Science has compelled us to revise our interpretations of the Bible again and again; and we may have to do some more revising some day, in spite of the fact that we are so positive that we now understand truth in its completness and finality!

My readers—if I should have any at this point—may conclude that I am a rabid evolutionist and modernist, but I insist that I am not. I am just an obscure seeker after truth, and I somehow feel that the crisis in the life of a student comes when he feels that he must choose between demonstrated truths of science and the teachings of his religion. Such a choice ought never to be necessary! It would not be necessary if religion and science were each assigned to its own proper sphere in the thinking of the student.

Why not cease our raging against the theories and findings of scientists, and teach our children that the Bible is of divine origin and contains a revelation of God's will, but that it was not given us to teach us geography, mathematics or astronomy; that men have often misunderstoood and mis-applied some of its teachings, and that all should be careful not to condemn any one for differing with them in the interpretation of Scriptures. Above all, let our teaching in religious matters center in Jesus Christ. Make the Living Christ a reality in the lives of our children, and they will not be easily disturbed by any sort of scientific—or unscientific—theories.

Personally, I feel no apprehension in behalf of the Bible. It is God's Word, and will stand. It needs not the support of any prop I might set up. I do not wish to call on the State Legislature to enact statutes to protect its truths.

Scientists, too, have often blundered ridiculously. They will probably blunder more. Scientific truth and religious truth cannot possibly be in conflict. Both alike are from God, and must agree. But the theory of the scientist often contradicts the theory of the religionist; then I know that one or the other is mistaken, but I sometimes do not know which; I have even suspected that both might prove wrong in the end.

Intolerance of the opinions of others has been one of the deadliest foes to the progress of Christianity; but it is so natural and so human for each man to feel that his own creed is the only true one—that he has attained unto ultimate truth, and that any one who dares differ with him is a heretic. Intolerance has brought about all our sectarian divisions, caused religious (?) wars, and driven more people to infidelity and atheism than any other one thing.

I do not know, but I think perhaps if we could send our children to school thoroughly imbued with the spirit of tolerance and charity, with a real acquaintance with the Living Master himself, they would find, in the first chapter of Genesis, the most sublime epic poem ever given to men, and their faith would soar to new heights as they read it. And, too, they would see the footprints of the everlasting Creator in the eternal rocks, and in the stars they would find his handiwork!—"Sermons in stones, books in running brooks and good in everything."

True, we need a positive faith; men must believe something. And thank God, the eternal verities of our holy religion can never be disturbed by any sort of scientific investigation! Here is the first one: "In the beginning God—!" No inquisitive investigator will ever get beyond that.

Here is another: "All we, like sheep, have gone astray." Man's sinfulness and need are proven everywhere every day.

Then this: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life!"

And this: "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Finally: "In my Father's house are many mansions * * * that where I am there may ye be also."

Can evolution, or the nebular hypothesis, or the Einstein theory of relativity, or any other fad or ism discredit the foregoing sublime principles?

MAKING EDUCATIONAL HISTORY.

By Dr. W. E. Hogan.

Two recent events in Southern Methodism may prove to be epochal in the future history of higher education by the church.

At their last sessions, the two Annual Conferences of Arkansas requested the presiding bishop to appoint a commission of ten—five from each—to study the higher educational work of the church in that State and "to report to the next Annual Conference their findings regarding a larger educational program for Methodism in Arkansas." The Commission began its work at once, and within three months recorded its findings. The recommendation of the Commission is that the three colleges now belonging to the two Conferences be merged under one board of trustees and all become junior colleges and that a great central college or university be established at Little Rock as a fourth institution of the church's unified educational system of Arkansas. The city of Little Rock is to furnish a suitable site for the new institution and one million dollars in cash. As soon as Little Rock has made good its offer, a general campaign is to be launched for two million dollars additional. The Commission's proposal has been approved by the boards of trustees of Galloway, Hendrix, and Henderson-Brown Colleges and by the Boards of Education of the two Annual Conferences. Bishop Boaz is to direct the campaign.

The other history-making event took place in Texas a few days ago. At its session in November, the Northwest Texas Conference appointed a commission of twenty-six "to look carefully into the matter of the permanent location of Clarendon College," and instructed this commission to report its findings to the presiding bishop—Bishop Moore—not later than March 1. This commission has also acted with a promptness and dispatch not usually displayed by such bodies. At a meeting in Amarillo, Feb. 28, the commission voted to recommend to the Conference that Clarendon College, now located at Clarendon, be moved to Amarillo, which city is to give approximately two million dollars to secure the permanent location of the college. At a special session of the Northwest Texas Conference, which Bishop Moore has called for March 29, the commission's report will be considered.

The findings of these two commissions, both coming in the same month but representing widely separated territories, seem to indicate that our church is turning to large and growing and wealthy cities for the location of its larger educational institutions.

SUCCESS.

This is success: to live beyond deceit,
Too big to play the liar or to cheat;
Too big to lean when burdens heavy grow;
Asking no favor from a friend or foe;
Standing to life and all that it may mean,
With head erect and hands and conscience clean.

This is success: to live from year to year,
Not asking always sunny skies and clear,
But wise enough to know and understand
Life never runs exactly as we've planned;
Seeking the best, but when the worst is met,
Taking the blow without too much regret.

This is success: with all to play the friend;
Willing and singing whensoe'er you may,
But walking bravely through the rainy day;
Giving your best throughout the passing years,
Neither deceived by flattery, nor by sneers.

This is success: the love of friends to win;
To taste no pleasure that may lead to sin;
To take no profit from the hand of shame,
But by a fair fight win or lose the game;
To get from life such triumphs as you can,
But still, through good or ill, to play the man.

THE LIGHT OF A GIRL'S CANDLE.

By Clarence.

Off the coast of one of the Orkney Islands there was a large rock jutting out into the bay opposite the harbor. It yielded no food or shelter for beast or bird, but had often caused shipwreck and death. They called it Lonely Rock.

There lived on this island with her father, who was a fisherman, a young girl named Margaret Freeman. Father and daughter were tenderly devoted to each other, as so often is the case where people are poor and dependent upon each other.

One wild, murky night the father sailed away in his frail fisherman's boat, leaving his daughter to keep house and to await his return on the morrow. She did her chores, and then took out her spinning wheel to while away the dreary hours. Every now and then she would look out on the dark, driving clouds and listen, tremblingly, to the shrieking wind and stormy sea.

The morning light dawned at last. She had kept an all-night vigil, and the hour was approaching when her father's boat could be seen coming up the harbor. At last, as she scanned the now calm and placid water of the bay, she could see only tiny specks in the distance, but her heart gave a great bound, for she knew they were fishermen's boats, and that her father's was one of the number.

They drew nearer and nearer until she could recognize each boat and its owner. It did not look as if her father's boat was with them.

Bareheaded and full of wild misgivings, she hurried down to the shore, and was met by a kindly fisherman, who told her that they had never spent such a terrible night, and that in the darkness her father's boat had struck Lonely Rock and had gone down about midnight.

Dry-eyed she went back to their lonely cottage and hastily swallowed some food; then went back to the bay. She started to follow the shore, and one of the kindly fishermen neighbors feared she might be so overcome with grief as to follow her good father into the watery grave.

But no. She was not made of that kind of stuff. She had not gone more than half a mile when she discovered the body of her father, which the ebbing tide had left upon the shore.

She was now all alone, scarcely more than a child, poor, humble and weak of constitution; but when she returned to the cottage after her father's burial she made a strange resolution. She said:

"I will not give up to grief and loneliness, but as long as I live no more boats shall be wrecked on Lonely Rock, if a light shining through my window will guide them safely into the harbor." Then, through utter weariness of body and mind, she slept all through the day.

When night fell she arose, and lighting a candle placed it in the window where the returning fishermen could see it and be guided by it safely into the harbor. She prepared and ate her evening meal. She sat by the candle all night and trimmed it and sang. Then, when day dawned, after she had done her work, she went to bed and slept.

As many hanks of yarn as she had spun before each day for her daily bread she spun still, but did one more for the nightly candle.

How many lives she saved by this candle, and how many meals she won by it for the families of the fishermen that would have possibly starved if the boats had gone down, it is impossible to say, nor how many dark nights the fishermen, depending on that light, went forth and returned in safety cannot be told.

For fifty years—through youth, through young womanhood, and on to old age—she turned night into day; and in snowstorms of winter, through driving mists, deceptive moonlight and thick, black darkness, that harbor was not once without the light of her candle.

There it stood as regular as a lighthouse, steady as constant care could make it. Always brighter when the nights were darker, the fishermen had only to keep it in view and they were safe.

How those poor people loved her! They would gladly have contributed from their scanty stores to help her buy those candles, but they knew it was a labor of love on her part, and to offer to help her bear the burden would have deeply wounded her.

When she began to grow old many a fisherman, as he brought his boat in by that light in the window, blessed the white-haired woman sitting at the spinning wheel, spinning away to pay for food and candle.

Often they would lay a number of their choicest fish on her doorstep, and leave a child to watch until she awoke. Sometimes their wives would drop in and spin a few hanks of yarn for her while she slumbered. Every kindness and consideration were shown her that the minds of those simple folks could devise.

One peaceful night when it was so calm that no contrary winds tossed the boats toward Lonely Rock, the fishermen who were coming into the harbor noticed that there was no light in Margaret's window. As soon as they landed they and their wives hurried to the cottage.

The candle had not been lighted. The tired old hands which had trimmed and kept it burning for more than fifty years were still. The faithful woman had gone to her reward.

All the children had been taught to pass her home noiselessly lest they wake her from her tired day-slumbers. Now the old folks, too, walked softly, and laid the body to rest beside that of her father.

She had no relatives. On a piece of paper she had scribbled, "Keep the light go—"

They did keep it going, for they made Margaret's small possessions the nucleus for a fund to build a lighthouse. They told the story to every incoming and outgoing seaman and stranger, so that the fund grew and grew until it shaped itself into the Margaret Freeman Lighthouse, showing Lonely Rock and its danger far out into the bay.—Exchange.

WHEN JOHN HAD TO DECIDE.

"Mother," said John Roberts, one Friday morning as he started off to school, "I've never asked Billy Dobson out here to spend a Saturday, and he wants to come so bad. May I ask him?"

"What sort of a boy is he?" asked the mother.

"Well, he seems to be a good-hearted chap," answered John a little nervously, remembering some of the things he didn't like about Billy; "but he looks kind of neglected, and I know he wants to come the worst kind."

John's mother smiled. She knew he was to be trusted, so she said: "Certainly, dear; bring him out if his mother is willing."

"His mother is dead," said John, choking over the words as he thought of their meaning.

And then John's mother stooped and kissed his hair as she said: "Be sure to bring Billy with you to-night if they will let him come."

That was how Billy came to be at Oak Ridge, for that was the name of John's home. Friday night John's father played games with them, and his mother read them a story. When she went up to show Billy his room she had made everything ready for him as carefully as if he had been her own boy.

Saturday morning the boys were raking the leaves in the yard when they broke the rake, and John's mother said they could go to the store and get another one.

John telephoned to the store, and the man told them that the rake would cost thirty-five cents; but his mother didn't have the change, so she gave him a dollar to get the rake.

When they got to the store the man found that he had made a mistake, and the price of the rake was twenty-five cents instead of thirty-five cents.

"What are you gooing to do with that other ten cents?" Billy asked eagerly, and John replied shortly: "Take it home. What do you think?"

"I wouldn't," said Billy; "you bet I wouldn't. Your mother thinks the rake cost thirty-five cents, and she wouldn't care, and besides she won't ask anything about it."

For answer John laughed good-naturedly in order to keep from saying anything rude to Billy, and then turned to go home.

"Aw, come on, kid; I want some candy," said Billy, beginning to whine.

But John kept on his way.

Then Billy tried a new game. He went up to the storekeeper and said: "Give me ten cents' worth of stick candy."

The storekeeper gave it to him, and when Billy got the bag he stuck a piece of the candy into his mouth at once and said: "John's got the money to pay for it."

John looked up and heard what Billy had said and saw what he had done. He knew that if he asked his mother for the ten cents she would gladly give it to him, and he also knew that she would not ask about it anyway; but John was honorable to the very core of his being. He knew that Billy was his guest and that he was partly responsible for Billy's doings on that account, and he didn't want the storekeeper to take the candy back and so lose what Billy had eaten. Just for a minute he didn't know what was right to do, and then he remembered that, no matter how kind his mother might be about the matter, the money he carried was not his own; so he said to the merchant: "I am sorry that Billy ordered the candy, Mr. White, for I have no money of my own with me; but if you will charge it to me, I will pay you out of my next week's allowance."

"Certainly, John," said the merchant; "I am very glad to do it for you."

Billy was listening and thinking all of this time, and when they were safely outside of the store he said: "John, I'm ashamed of myself, and I'll bring you that money to school on Monday," and he did.

Billy wanted to be as trustworthy as John was, and that is one way that a friend can help a friend.—Boys and Girls.

"Daddy," said little Willie, "what's a shepherd's crook?"

"It's the only kind of crook you don't find in a big city, son," replied his dad.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Papa was deep in a book, when his wife called: "Dan, baby has swallowed the ink. Whatever shall I do?"

"Write with a pencil," was the reply.—Patton's Monthly.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

We appeal as earnestly as we know how to all our pastors to take advantage of the special proposition for the circulation of the Advocate before it expires, on April 1. The special proposition provides that the paper will be sent one year for $1.25 when it is taken by at least half the families represented in the membership of a church. The price is reasonable, the time is limited. Now is the time to act.

THE DEATH OF GOVERNOR WHITFIELD.

The death last week of Governor H. L. Whitfield, of Mississippi, removed from the public life of that State not only the chief executive, but also—what is of vastly greater moment—a first-class Christian gentleman. When a man holds public office, the estimate of his work in that office will vary according to the views of those who make the estimate concerning the policies that have been followed and the results that have been accomplished; but when the man's character is without a spot and when his devotion to the right is unquestioned and when his practice of the Christian virtues is consistently a part of his daily life, there can be no difference of opinion as to his place in the esteem and affection of the people.

So it was with Governor Whitfield. His whole life was spent in the service of his State—as a public school teacher, as State Superintendent of Education, as president of the State College for Women, and as Governor. He served as a Christian man, always living up to the high conception that public office is a public trust.

The tragedy of his life is that it came to an end so soon; the glory of it—and the glory is greater than the tragedy—is that it was lived nobly. It is a good record—he lived nobly, served faithfully, and died peacefully. His place is secure in the annals of the State.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Guntown charge, Corinth District, has reported $142 on the mission special collection.

Lake Providence, La., Rev. J. E. Selfe, pastor, raised $50 more than its mission special quota.

Bishop Isaac Lane, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, was ninety-three years old on March 3. His home is in Jackson, Tenn.

Tallulah, La., in the Monroe District, Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor, was the first charge in the district to secure the mission special quota in full.

Mrs. E. M. Shaw, wife of our pastor at Cruger, Miss., has been ill for several weeks. We are glad to learn that her condition is improving.

"Methodist Matters" is the name of the interesting monthly bulletin issued by Rev. R. G. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Aberdeen, Miss.

Rev. T. C. Cooper, of Homewood, Miss., writes: "The spiritual condition of the charge is very encouraging. We have more subscribers to our church papers than ever before."

An outbreak of measles necessitated a postponement of the revival services at Mississippi City, Miss., in which Rev. H. M. Ellis, Conference evangelist, was scheduled to do the preaching.

Dr. N. E. Joyner, presiding elder of the Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, will teach a course in the Old Testament at the Standard Training School at Marshall, Tex., beginning on March 27.

Rev. Victor G. Clifford, pastor of the Mendenhall and D'Lo charge, Mississippi Conference, is issuing an interesting monthly bulletin, the Messenger, which will doubtless be helpful in the work of the church.

Rev. George Tucker is in the midst of a great meeting at Okolona, Miss., with Mr. R. E. Turberville leading the singing. The meeting has taken on city-wide proportions. It will continue through next Sunday.

We learn from the Starkville News that a great meeting is being held at the First Methodist Church, Starkville, in which Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of West Point, is assisting the pastor, Rev. V. C. Curtis. The meeting will run through next Sunday.

Rev. D. E. Vickers writes: "We are expecting to begin placing material on the ground this week for the Sunday school rooms to our church at Handsboro, Miss. Our Sunday scchool has grown until we are almost compelled to have more room."

The Fondren Lectures at Southern Methodist University will be delivered this year by Dr. S. H. Wainwright, of Japan, on the general theme, "The Problem of Asia and the Constructive Christ." They will be delivered from March 27 to March 31.

Rev. William L. Robinson, our pastor at Coffeeville, Miss., wrote recently: "We have four churches on this charge, and your special proposition has been accepted at each church. * * * I believe in my church paper, and I insist that my people take it." Amen, Brother Robinson!

Rev. L. W. Smart, pastor of the Crew Lake charge, Louisiana Conference, who secured his mission special quota in full, says: "Easiest task I ever undertook. People responded beyond comprehension. I put on the cultural program and found it paid. Mailing check to Mr. Meyer this morning."

Revival services will be held at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, beginning on Wednesday evening, March 30, and continuing until Easter Sunday. The preaching will be done by Rev. Charles Lane, of Macon, Ga., and the music will be in charge of Rev. A. J. Notestine, of Birmingham, Ala.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, shows very little improvement over last week. The cool weather of the early part of the week apparantly reacted unfavorably. It is still hoped that continued warm weather will hasten his recovery. The sympathetic messages of many friends are greatly appreciated.

Rev. C. Norman Guice, general evangelist, is engaged in a meeting at Poplarville, Miss., to last until March 27. From Poplarville, he goes to Duncan, Okla., and from Duncan to Hollandale, Miss. He has an open date immediately following the Hollandale meeting, and also several open dates during the summer. He can be reached at Poplarville until March 27.

Mr. D. S. Bachman, of Cleveland, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate recently, said: "I have been reading the Advocate for more than twenty-five years—can't do without it." He speaks very highly of his pastor, Rev. J. W. Ward, and commends the work of the business men's class, which has an enrollment of about seventy-five of the leading men of the town.

Mr. T. O. Adams, well known in musical circles in New Orleans, died suddenly on Wednesday of last week. He was an official member of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, and the funeral was held from the church on Friday morning, Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, the pastor, conducting the service. Brother Adams is survived by his wife and a young son, to whom the Advocate extends sincere sympathy.

Dr. S. M. Rainey, a beloved retired physician of Starkville, Miss., passed to his reward on Sunday, March 13, after an illness of several weeks. The funeral service was held at the First Methodist Church, conducted by Rev. V. C. Curtis, assisted by Rev. J. D. Ray, of the Baptist church. Interment took place at Greenwood, Miss., the service there being conducted by Dr. H. S. Spragins, pastor of the Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., a former pastor and close friend of the deceased. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., under date of March 19, writes: "We are closing a week's intensive campaign for our new church with splendid success. A canvass of the congregation and community has resulted, so far, in a total of $71,788, which will no doubt be increased to $75,000, as the returns are not yet all in. With the anticipated sale of our old church property, our resources will be sufficient to justify an early beginning on what has hitherto been a deferred hope. We are all very happy in the prospect. The church plan provides for a Class A Sunday school equipment for one thousand attendance."

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: I would kindly suggest that you finish your Mission Special campaign as rapidly as the success of the cause will allow, and that you make your report using the quadruplicate blank for this purpose. Of course you noticed on the top of this blank to whom these reports are to be sent. I trust every pastor will be able to reach the suggested quota of his church and wherever possible have a surplus.

Some time near the first of April the General Treasurer will furnish us with a standing of the various Conferences and I certainly trust we will have done as well this year as we did last year, as we were the first Conference to pay out in full.

If you have finished the campaign as far as gettting the pledges is concerned but have not collected all the money, make your report, send in what you have to the treasurer.

Yours very sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Missionary Secretary.

A MESSAGE OF APPRECIATION.

The messages of condolence and expressions of sympathy which have come to us in the deepest sorrow which has ever come into our lives, because of the going away of our only child, Mrs. Mamie Gray O'Mara, on the 28th day of February, have been so numerous that we find it hardly practicable to write to each of our friends.

We, therefore, wish to convey to each one, through the Christian Advocate, our heartfelt thanks.

Your messages have helped us a great deal and by them we are made stronger in bearing this awful stroke.

No need to tell you that our hearts are broken; but we are comforted by the Christian's hope.

Our child gave us, repeatedly, assurance that should the Lord call her "it is all right."

We grieve of course, but already the Sun of Righteousness is shining more brightly in our lives than ever before.

Through the dark cloud of sorrow we most surely feel that His hand is leading us, and we are feeling the beckoning hand, unseen, drawing us toward Heaven.

Brethren of our Father's household, we thank you and we love you.

Your friends,

J. EARLY GRAY and WIFE and SISTER and DR. B. B. O'MARA.

SUNFLOWER MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

The March meeting of the Association was held at Glendora, Miss., on the 15th, in the beautiful new Methodist chruch, with A. Y. Brown as pastor-host.

Besides a number of the people of Glendora, there were in attendance, J. E. Cunningham, E. E. McKeithen, J. C. Wasson, T. E. Gregory. J. V. Bennett, W. J. Wood, "Mister Shipman," J. B. Conner, C. T. Floyd, E. M. Shaw, C. L. Rogers, J. J. Brooks, C. L. Oaks, A. Y. Brown and H. P. Lewis. Brother W. L. Robinson, of Coffeeville, and J. D. Walton, a local preacher of Drew, were also with us. The parsonage queens from Itta Bena and Drew also graced the occasion with their presence.

E. E. McKeithen brought the sermon for the day, using Isaiah 40:31 as a text. This was followed by a friendly discussion of the merits of the sermon.

The subjects for discussion were then taken up, which were: "My Program for the Year and the System I Use;" "What is a Pastoral Call and How I do Pastoral Work;" and "Reverence and its Cultivation in the Congregation and Individual." The discussions of these subjects were spicy and helpful.

Our next meeting goes to Lambert, and our program will be as follows: Sermon, by G. E. Gregory; "The Most Effective Follow-up Plan to be Used After Our Revivals;" "Getting Best Results From the Prayer Meeting;" and "Our Superannuate Endowment Fund."

This was our largest attended meeting, and was pronounced to be the best. The Glendora people entertained us royally in their homes at the noon hour.

REPORTER.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE ON EXCHANGE OF TERRITORY WITH THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Committee on Exchange of Territory with the Methodist Episcopal Church met in Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 11, 1927. Bishop McMurry, chairman of the committee, presided, and all the members were present except Judge Nathan Newby, of Los Angeles, Calif., who was detained at home on account of some very important cases in court. The following actions were adopted:

Fully recognizing the disadvantages and hurt to our common Methodism arising in communities and sections where the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, occcupy the same field, and fully sympathizing with our brethren who are suffering from these disadvantages and embarrassments, we declare ourselves as heartily favoring the relief of these conditions by the action of the congregations thus in competition and rivalry, and by an equitable adjustment of property interests.

We believe that, in many places, the time has fully come for such adjustments as will eliminate overlapping and end the friction and waste growing out of this duplication of effort. It is our conviction that, in small communities and even in large sections occupied by the two churches, it is possible, by mutual concession and agreement, to put an end to these unholy rivalries, and to give to a united and harmonious Methodism the opportunity of more succcessfully carrying on the work of the kingdom in their midst.

At its session in Memphis, Tenn., in 1926, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, continued and reconstituted its Commission on Exchange of Territory with the Methodist Episcopal Church; and authorized the said Commission "to effect an exchange of property when it is found legal and practicable, such an exchange being approved by the Annual Conference in whose bounds the property is situated; provided that such exchange shall be made only on the approval of the local congregation expressed through its quarterly conference."

For several quadrenniums and up to their last General Conference, the Methodist Episcopal Church had a similar Commission, but has none at this time. Nevertheless, the Methodist Episcopal Church, through its General Conference, has repeatedly approved the principle of comity betweeen the churches and urged the union of congregations in local communities so as "to remove causes which dissipate our energies and encourage hurtful competition."

The General Conferences of both churches, through repeated declarations, have approved the principle that when either church is doing the work expecteed of Methodism in any community, the other church should not organize a society or erect a church building in that community.

We therefore recommend to our people that the following steps be taken, when conditions seem to justify it, to insure the elimination of the waste of men and money and to promote the growth of fraternal affection between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

1. Ascertain, through a properly constituted church conference, the mind of the congregation as to whether a union with the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church is desirable.

2. If it is agreed that such union is desirable, let the quarterly conference of that charge appoint a judicious committee to meet a like committee from the Methodist Episcopal Church to work out the details of the union and to reach agreements as to the distribution of property.

3. That the Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in whose territory the Methodist Episcopal Church has organized churches, be requested to create Commissions on Exchange of Territory to meet with like Commissions of the Methodist Episcopal Church; that these Annual Conference Commissions be of such size and composed of such representatives as to be granted plenary powers to approve or disapprove the exchange of property, and the consolidation of congregations in the interval of holding the Annual Conference.

4. That when both churches have agreed as to the desirablity and practicability of union, and the quarterly conferences of the respective churches have given their sanction to the union, and the Commissions of their respective Annual Conferences have approved the union and exchange of property, then let the committees of the two local churches complete the transaction by complying with all legal requirements necessary to the transfer of any property involved to the church of which the united congregation is to become affiliated, or elsewhere as may have been determined.

5. We further recommend that the Secretary of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, seek the collaboration of the Secretary of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church in working out a plan for the equitable adjustment of mortgages and other claims of their respective Boards against the properties offered in exchange.

The Commission also adopted a motion requesting Bishop W. F. McMurry, by such method as he may deem proper, to bring the action of our General Conference to the attention of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and to inform them of the actions of this body. The meeting then adjourned.

Signed: W. A. COOPER, Secretary.

"MISTER, I AIN'T NEVER HAD NO CHANCE."

By C. C. Featherstone.

Court was in session. A young boy in his early teens had been convicted of crime, as the result of drunkenness.

The sentence of the law had to be imposed.

The facts in the case showed that he came from a home where whiskey was made and served to grown folks and children, with almost the regularity of an article of diet.

Said the Judge: "Son, if I'll give you a chance to reform and come back, will you take advantage of it and make good?"

"Yes, Mister," said the boy with tears in his eyes and his mouth quivering, "I ain't never had no chance before."

And yet there are many who tell us that the way to make real men is to let boys get whiskey off the old sideboard when they please; place temptations in their way, let them be overcome and, as a result, we will have strong character forever.

If the court could punish the parents instead of the boy, how gladly would it have done so.

But we have no laws for the punishment of fathers and mothers in such circumstances. They can go on making criminals out of their children and go scot free.

Perhaps some day the law will be wiser.

The boy was taken away from home and sent to the Reformatory, where he will have a chance. —Southern Christian Advocate.

LAW ENFORCEMENT.

The way to enforce law is to enforce it. It may be that some legislation needs strengthening to make it more effective; but if the laws we already have were rigorously enforced, they would be found to do pretty well. If judges would get away from the minimum fine and suspended prison sentence complex and impose maximum fines and real prison sentences, the effect, in our opinion, would be very wholesome.

In the passing over of ELIZABETH CHAMBERS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Chambers, Shreveport, La., there is gone another young life to be at rest and to lead the way to older ones. She spent most of her 22 years in the city of Shreveport, and was a graduate of the high school there. She endeared herself to the boys and girls of her classes and continued this friendship to the end. She was a sufferer for many months before her death. She went to New Mexico seeking relief, but the frail body was unable to recover and give back health and continued life. In the midst of her battle for life she was stricken with acute appendicitis, which was the immediate cause of her untimely going. The friends of the family were profuse in their expressions of sympathy, as attested by the elaborate floral offerings and their attendance upon the funeral services, in spite of the downpour of rain. She was the granddaughter of the late Rev. John W. Chambers and the niece of Rev. John C. Chambers, of the Mississippi Annual Conference. She was a member of the Mangum Memorial Church Rev. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, and a lifelong friend of the father and kinsman of the mother, spoke words of loving sympathy which were exceedingly appropriate and heartening.

MRS. J. R. FERRELL, of Batesville, Miss., was born Nov. 24, 1867, to Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hill, in Long Town, Miss., and named Alice. She lived all her life in Panola County. She professed faith in Christ early in life and joined the Baptist church and lived a faithful Christian. She was married to J. R. Ferrell, Dec. 25, 1886. There were born to this happy union seven children, five boys and two girls—Ethel, Viola, Quittie, Clyde, Curtis, Carrye, and Vernon. All are members of the church, most of them with the father in the Methodist church. Mrs. Ferrell had not been in good health for some years. Her daughter, Miss Carrye, had been operated on for a serious malady, and Mrs. Ferrell had gone to Memphis to be with her, and had spent a week with her daughter, expecting to return home Saturday; but Friday night about 11 o'clock she had an attack of heart failure, and died, March 4, 1927, in the home of Mrs. Rosa Carter. The writer was called to Batesville to conduct the funeral, with her pastor, Rev. J. W. Lee, of the Baptist church, Sunday morning, where we met a multitude of people. All knew a good woman had gone to glory. She gave herself to the highest good of her family. She was a mother in a real Scriptural sense, and had won the devotion of husband and children as not often seen. This writer had known Mrs. Ferrell and the family for thirty-two years, and through all these years she was the embodiment of goodness. She leaves an impress on her children for good that already shows what a mother's life in counsel and example and faith may be worth to her children. She will await their coming in heaven.

W. M. YOUNG.

MRS. M. J. OSBORN died at their home in Tchula, Miss., on Thursday night, March 4, with an acute attack of heart failure. She was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Wesley and Mary C. Whittington, near Lexington, Miss., Feb. 4, 1874. She grew up here in the community of Oregon church, where she was buried. Funeral services were held in the Methodist church of Tchula by her pastor, W. M. Young. The floral offerings were great, with a large company present. Mrs. Osborn professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist church at 11 years of age, and lived a consecrated Christian life. She was known as a Bible Christian. She was married to M. J. Osborn, Aug. 12, 1900. To this union were born six children, two boys and four girls. Both boys and two of the girls had preceded the mother to the spirit world. She leaves to mourn her going the husband and two girls, Mattie Odell and Lavenia Elizabeth; also two brothers, T. J. Whittington, of Minter City, and R. B. Whittington, of Bee Lake; also two sisters, Mrs. J. A. Sharpe, of Jackson, Miss., and Mrs. F. H. Rogers, of Gwin, Miss., with a host of kindred. She will be greatly missed in church circles, for she largely gave her life to her church. If she was not at all church services, including the mid-week prayer service, we could know some one of her family or herself was sick. God keep and sustain the dear ones, and may they meet her in heaven.

W. M. YOUNG, Pastor.

On Feb. 24, this scribe was called to Ebenezer to assist Rev. A. A. Martin in the funeral services of MR. WILLIAM THAOAS ELLISON, Brother Ellison having been a warm personal friend of the writer. Brother Ellison was a native of Yazoo County, born Aug. 26, 1850, and died Feb. 24, 1927, aged 76 years, 6 months, and 1 day. In 1872 he was married to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Campbell, and to this union were born eleven children, ten of whom survive his going, the wife and one child having preceded him to the home beyond. Brother Ellison was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and when younger and active was officially connected with the church, and even to the end was interested in the church and its cause; he talked quite frequently and freely to me about the church's interests. For some years he had suffered from high blood pressure, and that suffering was continuous, but he bore it with a great deal of fortitude. He was a man of great integrity, dealt squarely with his fellow-man, and made a great contribution to his country in sons and daughters of integrity whom he left to carry on the work.

ZONE MEETING AT LAMBERT, MISS.

The first zone of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Greenwood District, North Mississippi Conference, held its eleventh session at Lambert, Jan. 25. The zone leader, Mrs. G. C. Jones, of Marks, read the Scripture lesson from Acts, second chapter.

Reports were received from the auxiliaries at Belen, Crowder, Lambert and Marks, showing a creditable advance in the work. Our interest in the Belle Bennett Memorial has not ceased with the close of the special campaign.

Mrs. J. A. Beal made a fine talk for the Missionary Voice, and Mrs. Jones spoke on the use of "Press Publicity" for missionary work, "that he may run that readeth it." Heb. 2:2.

Mrs. Pettyjohn gave a reading on "The Protestant Church in Mexico," and Mrs. Carr discussed, "What the Missionary Council Means to Women," followed by all singing, "If Jesus Goes With Me." Mrs. Black read a paper on "Prayer, the Dynamic Which Works." Statements were made on "Women's Work in the Last Forty-eight Years." Mrs. Dewitt Baker read an account of Mrs. W. B. Lewis, one of our missionaries to Membo Nyama's land, stating that her health is so improved that she expects to return in the spring to darkest Africa to resume her work, where her baby son is buried.

The hostess auxiliary entertained with refreshments for thirty-eight in attendance.

A GOOD MEETING AT BASSFIELD, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of zone 4, composed of Sumrall, Bassfield, Carson, Prentiss, and Silver Creek, met with the Bassfield Society, Monday, Jan. 31, 1927, at 2 o'clock. Members of Goodhope church (Williamsburg charge), Bethel and New Hebron churches (Silver Creek charge) were present. New Hebron and Bethel have organized a Woman's Missionary Society this week, and Oakvale will soon, so we expect to have several new societies represented at our next zone meeting.

All the Societies of this zone were well represented, and we had a fine day together.

There were short but good reports from each Society as to what had been accomplished during the past year.

Mrs. W. W. Applewhite, of Bassfield, gave a report of the Missionary Institute held in Hattiesburg, Jan. 5, stressing the needs of our missionaries in the foreign fields.

The Missionary Society should and I am sure does mean as much to each of us as Mrs. Rawls, of Silver Creek, said it meant to her—a place of neighborly fellowship, a place for Bible and mission study, and where we may meet God and receive power.

Mrs. Chas. Laird, of Carson, told us to have comfortable and attractive meeting places, good leaders, to pray and help answer our prayers by working if we wanted to make our meetings profitable and attractive.

"How to Use the Budget in Our Societies," was ably discussed by Mrs. Livingston, of Prentiss.

Last but not least, Mrs. J. H. Scott, of Sumrall, gave in detail what our missionary opportunity is, basing her splendid talk on the thirty-fifth verse of the fourth chapter of John. Just as the fields were white to harvest when Jesus spoke the above words, so they are white, more than white, to-day at home and abroad. She told briefly of the centers of work at home and the twelve foreign fields we are working in.

The next zone meeting will be with Sumrall.

The Bassfield women served a plate luncheon, while old friends renewed friendships and new friends were made.

MRS. W. C. DALE, Secretary.

MRS. L. E. MARTIN.

OIL CITY, LA., MISSIONARY NEWS.

Friday, March 4, the world's day of prayer, was observed in the Methodist church in a beautiful all-day service, shared by both Methodists and Baptists. Mrs. G. B. Hudson, president of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, arranged the program, and was in charge of same. The Bulletin of Missionary News, which carried a program for the day, was received too late to be used, and the following was given: Song, "I Must Tell Jesus," was sung. Then Mrs. W. S. Farquhar, member of the Baptist church, in her sweet and impressive manner, gave the devotional, using the twenty-third chapter of Matthew, and offered a touching prayer for missions. Then a social hour was enjoyed, with lunch and in friendly intercourse. Then service was continued with the song, "I Need Thee Every Hour," and prayer by Mrs. M. T. Kennedy; then a beautiful piano selection by Mrs. P. T. Alexander. Next, a most impressive discourse was given by Mrs. Charles Webb, wife of a recently deceased pastor of the Baptist church. Her subject, "Our Reliance Upon God," was beautifully emphasized throughout with references from different passages of Scripture. Mrs. Ed. Underwood then sang so sweetly, "Whisper a Prayer to Jesus;" prayer by Hunter Kyle; solo, "Face to Face," by Mrs. Malcomb Tabor. Several sentence prayers concluded the program.

Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, delivered a wonderful sermon at the Methodist church, Sunday, March 6, at the evening hour, using as his subject the life of the world's greatest missionary, David Livingstone.

MRS. J. R. CARROLL,
Corresponding Secretary, Woman's Missionary Society.

ZONE MEETING AT BOGALUSA, LA.

The ladies of the Missionary Society held a zone meeting at the church last Thursday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock.

The meetiing was opened by the zone leader, Mrs. J. E. Cooper, who gave a short talk. Mrs. Love, from Franklinton, led the devotional, her Scripture being from Isaiah. Mrs. Thiac then rendered a beautiful organ solo. After this, Mrs. Cooper introduced Mrs. Hood, the vice president of the Missionary Society of Franklinton, who gave a splendid talk and expressed the appreciation of the Society for the entertainment being given them. Mrs. C. Plummer, president of the Bogalusa Society, then welcomed the visitors and made a short talk. This was followed by interesting talks from Mrs. M. W. Ott, zone leader of Franklinton; Brother Cross, of Varnado, and Brother Tucker, of Bogalusa. Then Mrs. Poole, chairman of the program committee, with her helpers, gave a playlet entitled, "Telling the Tidings," which was very inspiring. All the characters were good and all expressed their enjoyment and appreciation of the playlet.

Every one was then invited to the annex for a most enjoyable social hour. Dainty refreshments were served by Mmes. Lipscomb, Willoughby and Bruner.

There were ninety-six present in all. This was by far the best zone meeting ever held in Bogalusa, and Mrs. Cooper has promised more like it in the future. The ladies will give their playlet again next Sunday morning in Sunday school for their program on missionary Sunday.

MRS. A. L. RODGERS,
Superintendent of Publicity.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys If Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

We are in receipt of a letter from Hon. John R. Pepper assuring us that it is his intention to be with us at the State-wide Conference in Monroe. Due to illness in his family it was feared that Brother Pepper would be unable to come to us, but we rejoice to chronicle the improved condition of both his wife and daughter. We trust that not one of our Sunday school leaders will miss the opportunity to hear the great messages Brother Pepper will bring to us.

* * *

We acknowledge receipt of a copy of the Bulletin of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, of last Sunday, and note with interest the following item: "The annual Sunday school conference will meet in Monroe, March 29-31, opening at 3 p. m. on Tuesday. A rich program is announced. Cars will be driven from here for the accommodation of delegates who can attend. Sunday school workers will do well to plan to go." No doubt similar announcements appeared in other Methodist bulletins on the above date, for there is a wonderful State-wide interest in the conference, and we are expecting a great meeting.

Call to Prayer.

On Sunday, March 27, at 10 a. m., please observe one minute in silent prayer in every school, department or class. This call goes forth from the Conference staff, with the hope that the prayers of men, women and children will help to bring about a most beneficial conference at Monroe, March 29-31, with abundant blessings and lasting good.

* * *

The note of Sunday School Evangelism will be sounded at the State-wide conference in all departments, and the program is indeed rich along this line. The first evangelistic message will come from Hon. John R. Pepper on Tuesday night, at the second general session, and other speakers will carry the great message throughout the conference, and into every departmental group. This is being observed as never before, and practically all of our pastors are preparing classes to be received into the church, and many schools have announced a special decision day for children.

* * *

We were in Shreveport on Sunday and enjoyed a part of the great Missionary Council meeting. The writer attended Sunday school at First Church, the hour being given to a returned missionary from China, who gave in a most entertaining and instructive manner a detailed account of the situation there to-day. At 11 a. m. we were privileged to hear Bishop Hay's great sermon on missions. The pastor, Dr. Goodrich, said to the writer that the Bishop's message was the finest he had ever heard from him. Dr. Holmes, the presiding elder, offered a heart-searching prayer at the opening service. The music rendered by the noted choir was the best we have ever heard in Louisiana. The church was crowded, and many people were turned away. At the close of the service five deaconesses were consecrated. The service was Pentecostal in its effect, and it was indeed a privilege to be there.

* * *

The first Standard Training School of the year will open on next Sunday, the 20th instant, at Opelousas. The faculty is composed of Mrs. R. E. Smith, of Shreveport; Mrs. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans; Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, and Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary.

* * *

With the opening of spring the attendance at all Sunday schools will increase. Alexandria, First Church, reports an attendance on last Sunday of 532 pupils, a number of visitors, and in several departments 100 per cent teachers and officers. Hon. T. W. Holloman, general superintendent of this school, will be toastmaster at the superintendents' supper at the Monroe conference.

* * *

A new feature of the State-wide Sunday school conference this year, will be "a progressive exhibit," and we trust that every school will send a delegate with a poster showing its progress through the years, and see that it is properly placed in the Adult Bible class room where exhibits will be shown. The Findings Committee will no doubt give recognition to the best exhibits. These posters may show progress in equipment, enrollment, organization, training and so forth, and may be accompanied by photographs and other means of exhibit, properly labeled and tagged.

* * *

Bible classes willl bear in mind the federation session at the Monroe conference, on Wednesday afternoon, 2:30 to 4:30, when recognition will be made of class standiings. We have recently learned of two Bible classes forging to the front, these being at Mangum Memorial, taught by Mr. Nelson, and at Mansfield, taught by Prof. Raulins.

* * *

Another interesting feature of the State-wide conference will be the sunrise prayer service on Wednesday morning, when Mrs. R. E. Smith will tell of her wonderful experience on Mount Junaluska at Eagle's Nest. The service will be in charge of the Young People.

* * *

Mr. Grambling is at work on his program of music for the State-wide conference, and we understand that Mrs. Walter Crowder, Shreveport, who was Miss Hanna, of Monroe, has been asked to sing.

* * *

In connection with the State-wide conference, many of the Conference Superintendents have sent out calls for special council meetings. Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Elementary Superintendent, is calling a meeting of her district superintendents for 1:30, Tuesday afternoon in the Sunday school annex; Dr. Drake, Superintendent of Missions, has called a meeting of his district superintendents also, and no doubt other Conference officers are arranging such council meetings for some hour during the conference.

* * *

The many friends of Prof. R. E. Bobbitt will be glad to learn of his recovery, for while improvement is slow, yet his return to health seems hopeful.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. J. T. McCafferty, pastor at Sardis, helped hold an institute at Tyro Thursday. In the midst of a busy time twenty interested men and women spent the day discussing the means of establishing the kingdom. Brother McCall will reorganize the school next Sunday, make a survey, hold the workers' council, observe Missionary Day and Sunday School Day. We arranged for a Cokesbury School to be held for the circuit at Free Springs early in the summer.

Brother Parks is working to have near one hundred in attendance at the training school to be held at Greenville, April 3-8. We hope to have not less than fifty parents take the course on the Home, a course to be taught by Dr. J. M. Williams, of Galloway College, Searcy, Ark. If the American home goes into decay, civilization will fall with it. There is no sane parent who does not feel the need of help in guiding the children in the right way of living in the midst of changing conditions. Every difficulty may not be settled, but it is possible to learn something in the way of keeping our homes sacred and secure for the sake of these children God has given us. This course has not been offered any too soon for our good.

The school at Clarksdale will be held April 10-15. "Principles of Teaching,," Mrs. W. W. Templeton, instructor; "Bible" (New Testament), Rev. B. F. Lewis, instructor; "A Study of the Junior Child," Mrs. Byron Harwell, instructor; "Intermediate-Senior Department Administration," instructor to be secured. We should have a large attendance at Clarksdale.

Bishop Candler is asking the presiding elders, pastors, and all who are interested in saving the people to make special efforts during the months of April, May, and June for at least a ten per cent increase in the enrollment of our Sunday schools. A large increase in the enrollment of the Sunday schools means a large increase in the number of conversions. The first step to take is to call a meeting of the Workers' Council; the second step is to pray; the third step is to make a survey; the fourth step is to go after them, and the fifth step is to be ready to give them the Bread of Life when they come. In plain words, give them Christ.

"Revival Gems Number Two" contains many old favorites, commonly known as the "Moody and Sankey hymns." Only ten cents per copy. Fully orchestrated for 14 instruments. See ad on page 10 of this issue.

The seven district superintendents are eager to have every Sunday school in the Conference observe Sunday School Day during the month of April if possible. Every dollar of this money is to be used in training teachers and other leaders. Lengthen the line and let us go to the limits of the Conference. We want to go as far out as you will let us. People who do least for others want most done for themselves. Do just a little for those who need help most and do not covet all for self. Suppose every man in the Conference should take a notion he would put the offering for missions and the offering for the work of the Sunday School Board in the church budget; where would we be in five years from to-day? No man has a right to ignore the call of his church, no one man has a right to do what all might not do with equal propriety. "In as much as ye did it not unto one of the least of these ye did it not unto me."

Does Ill Health Detract From Your Good Looks?

Birmingham, Ala.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription off and on for eight years and it has never failed to give me perfect satisfaction. Whenever I begin to feel bad I start taking the 'Favorite Prescription' and in a very short time I am back to my normal health. I keep a bottle of it in my house all the time so that I do not have to wait even one day after I begin to feel the need of a tonic. The 'Favorite Prescription' will benefit any woman if given a fair trial."—Mrs. W. L. Sparman, 807 3d Ave. N.

Epworth League

EPWORTH LEAGUE INSTITUTES.

This month is the month set aside for our district institutes. Mrs. Dunning, District Secretary of the Jackson District, is the first to announce the dates of her institutes. One institute will be held in Yazoo City, March 19, and one at Capitol Street Church, Jackson, April 2.

Seashore District has also decided upon the month of April for the district institute. This will be held on April 9 and 10, at Picayune.

The editor wishes to urge every one in these districts to remember these dates, and plan to send representatives to these institutes.

We will announce the dates of the other institutes when the District Secretaries send us the information.

CANTON EPWORTH LEAGUE GIVES INTERESTING PROGRAM.

The Canton Epworth League gave a splendid program Sunday night, March 6. They were very fortunate in having Miss Martha Watkins, Assistant District Secretary. She spoke in behalf of the Intermediate League. Miss Lucy Mae McMullen very splendidly spoke on "The Standard of Efficiency," "The District Institute," and "The Summer Assembly." Miss Amanda Lowther, also of Jackson (Galloway Memorial), spoke on "What We Do in Our League." A splendid crowd was in attendance to hear these young ladies speak.

GULF COAST UNION MEETING AT GULFPORT METHODIST CHURCH.

On Friday night, March 11, the Gulfport Epworth Leagues were hosts to over seventy young people who had gathered for the quarterly meeting of the Coast Union. The place of meeting was the basement of the Methodist church. The devotional service was led by the president, Glenn Rutledge. The meeting began with two songs, "We're Marching to Zion" and "There's Power in the Blood." The president read the Scripture, and Mr. Camp, District Secretary, led in prayer. Mr. Rutledge, Miss Ferguson, and Mr. Netterville each spoke on different phases of the Epworth League emblem.

After the devotional service, the regular business meeting was held. Officers of the Union made reports. Then an election of officers was held, and the following officers were re-elected: President, Glenn Rutledge; vice president, Anderson Netterville; secretary, Eleanor Allen; treasurer, Helen Newcome. At the business session, Mr. Camp presented each League with a new Epworth League calendar, and stressed the importance of remembering the Anniversary Day and the district institute.

The business was followed by an hour of fun. The basement was decorated in green, in honor of that old Irish saint, Patrick. Streamers of green crepe paper and a great many shamrocks were all about the room. Those present were divided into families of Irish descent, namely: The Murphys, O'Connors, O'Learys, and Shenanigans. Each family gave an Irish stunt. Although each family voted that its stunts was the best they had ever seen, the Murphys were given the decision. Their reward was the privilege of being served refreshments first. After the stunts, we formed two lines, the "Whites" and the "Greens." A box (green on one side and white on the other) was thrown down. If the green side was up the "Greens" had to make the "Whites" laugh. Every "White" who laughed became a member of the "Greens." This was repeated when the white side came up. In the end the whites had the most members and were declared winners.

At the end of the games green ice cream and cake were served to the young people. Although we have seen more in attendance at Union meetings, we've never seen a jollier crowd.

FRANCES ULMER, Reporter.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION IN THE SCHOOLS.

By Rev. R. T. Pickett.

A discussion in the Literary Digest of Jan. 22 calls to attention an important subject, viz., the fight between evolution and its opponents with reference to text books teaching evolution being used in our schools.

The American Association of University Professors has taken action to bring about more effective co-operation in opposing the spread of anti-evolution in the States. These men are putting fort the argument of separation of church and State to give them and their adherents the right to put what they wish taught into our schools.

Separation of church and State is all right in its place, but it does not apply here. Our schools are no more, in fact, creatures of the State than they are of the church. It is true they are supported by taxes levied by the State; but who pay those taxes? They are paid by members and friends of the different churches, and these church members and taxpayers and school patrons have a right to say as to the curriculum in these so-called State institutions.

In the sense of all reason and the rights of American citizens, who else has the right to be heard in a matter of so vital importance? These rights have not yet been delegated entirely to school boards and school officials.

We give an article from the Adult Student of January, 1927:

"Many have been following with interest a case which has been before the courts of New York having to do with the legality of excusing children from public schools at the request of parents in order that they might receive instruction in religion.

"The question will not be finally decided until it has been passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States. At present the Supreme Court of the State of New York has decided that it is within the law for children to receive religious instruction in this way. In his decision, Justice Ellis J. Staley laid down certain propositions which state the fundamental issue at stake. He said:

"'That the right of the parent to direct the training and nurture of the child is a fundamental right; that the obligations of citizenship require the promotion of a spirit of patriotic and civic service and the fostering in children of moral as well as intellectual qualities; that religious conscience, conviction, and accountability are the least dispensable foundation for good citizenship and real patriotism; that the right of the State to enforce school attendance does not mean that the mental and moral development of all children must be limited to a common mold, and that all children must be standardized; that the regulation does not create a union between church and State, or teach any sectarianism in the schools or invade the religious freedom or conscience of any individual.'

"What is really before us as God-fearing American parents is the question whether or not we will accept our obligation to see to it that our children receive adequate religious instruction. Those of us who may be inclined to treat the matter lightly should examine closely the attitude of this New York court. In this decision the matter is put strongly—'Religious conscience, conviction, and accountability are the least dispensable foundations for good citizenship and real patriotism.' It is of very great importance that our children know the mind and purpose of God. Nothing in the plans of the home should be allowed to come before the performance of this duty."

FROM GRACE CHURCH, JACKSON, MISS.

Dear Brother: My work here at Grace Church is moving on very well. We are having fine attendance at all the services. We have had thirty-three additions to the church since having come—eight on profession of faith. We need more room in order to do first-class work.

Owing to the fact that Jackson is growing this way, the Grace Church has a bright future. It is desirably located in order to reach the people on both the east and west sides of the Illinois Central Railroad. The members of the church have been real thoughtful of the pastor and family in very substantial ways.

W. A. TERRY, P. C.

A FINE REPORT FROM THE CEDAR BLUFF CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: May I have space again to tell you of our work on the Cedar Bluff circuit? Everything has been moving very nicely since the Annual Conference. We have just closed one of the greatest revivals in the history of the church at Pheba. Brother W. M. McIntosh was with us and did the preaching from Feb. 27 through March 10. Through his inspiring messages men were brought under conviction and to repentance who, perhaps, had not been under conviction for years. At the Agricultural High School we made it 100 per cent for Christ, having forty-two conversions in the school alone. In all, during his stay in Pheba, there were forty-seven conversions; twelve were received into the Methodist church at Pheba, seven of whom were received on profession of faith, and five by letter. Several at the school expressed a desire to join the Methodist church, but preferred waiting until they returned to their homes after school. About thirty-five promised to join some church at their first opportunity after school closed. A large number came forward at the close of his sermon on "Life Service" and rededicated their lives to God, one of whom was for life service in the ministry. The sermon on "Stewardship and Tithing" brought vows to tithe from twenty-four.

The pastor has heard Dr. McIntosh in four revivals, and answered the call to life service two years ago in response to his sermon on that subject, but never has he heard him preach such soul-stirring messages as he preached at Pheba during the past two weeks.

The pastor's salary was paid in full to date, and a nice missionary offering was secured. His sermon on "Family Religion" was an inspiration to all, both old and young.

Mrs. McIntosh was with us, and through her efforts we now have a good Woman's Missionary Society at Pheba.

Let me say to the young pastors of the North Mississippi Conference, if you have any problems that are too hard for you to solve, call Dr. McIntosh at 911 College Street, Columbus, Miss., to hold a revival; then stand by him and trust in God, and you will be a happier pastor.

NEWS FROM THE MORTON, MISS., CHURCH.

Sunday, March 13, was a very busy and profitable day at the Morton church. Sunday school, preaching services and the Senior and Intermediate Leagues took up the hours of worship. The Sunday school convened at 10 o'clock with 116 scholars, teachers and officers present. The teachers presented the lesson, "Making the World Christian," in a very effective and forceful way. Our Sunday school rooms are being remodeled, rearranged and redecorated with the hope that the rearrangement will prove beneficial to the cause of Christian education and that the new work will be pleasing for the eye to behold.

At 11 o'clock, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. T. A. Ferguson, services were conducted by Rev, J. F. McClellan, president of Montrose Training School. Brother McClellan spoke concerning the temptation of Jesus, and pointed out that Jesus won in the conflict between himself and the devil, and admonished his hearers to fast and pray that they may ward off the evil influences of the times. At 7:30 p. m., Brother McClellan took as his subject character building, stressing the fact that the reins of government are now in the hands of the children of thirty or thirty-five years ago, and that the influences of the homes of thirty or thirty-five years ago are now being reflected in the conduct of our governmental and other affairs. He enjoined his audience to do the best they could toward influencing their fellow-men in the right direction, ever remembering that a kind word spoken to a wayward man or woman may in the course of time cause that person to turn to Jesus Christ. Both of these sermons were very forceful, elevating and instructive, and it is the hope of this congregation that Brother McClellan will come this way again.

Rev. T. A. Smoot, general evangelist, will begin a revival meeting here the first Sunday in April. Brother Ferguson, our beloved pastor, who underwent a very serious operation at the Jackson Infirmary about three weeks ago, is back at his home at Forest, and is improving rapidly, and will soon be able to take charge of the Lord's work at Morton and Forest churches. Solicitations for your most worthy paper (the New Orleans Christian Advocate) are now being made, and no doubt but that you will receive subscriptions from more than half of the families of the Morton church in the next few days.

C. C. WINDHAM.

FROM CALHOUN CITY, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: A few words from the Calhoun City church.

We have been pretty busy here since Conference, this being the first year this little flock has maintained "full time" of a pastor; but a pluckier group of Methodists would be hard to find anywhere. They have rallied to the support of the pastor in every way possible. We are proud of a growing Sunday school, the leaders of which are enthusiastic in the work; a finer bunch of Leaguers I haven't seen, and the Woman's Missionary Society has nearly a hundred per cent enrollment.

I want to tell you about the Sunday school training course put on by Brother E. G. Mohler, our Sunday School Extension Secretary. We began the work on the 6th, and ended on the 11th of this month. Ten of us took the examination and received credit for the work. There were sixteen others that took part of the work, but not enough to get credit during Brother Mohler's stay with us; but quite a number are going on with the work and will take the examination, which will be sent to Nashville to be graded. I expect eighteen or twenty to take this unit of work.

I do not know of anything that has been of more value to us here than this work. The book taken is called "The Small Sunday School," by Sensabaugh. It is easy to be comprehended, but is fundamental and will make it plain why all who can possibly do so should put on the standard grade work.

Brother Mohler has the work well in hand, is full of enthusiasm, and I believe will be of incalculable service to those needing such service. His stay in our town was of great value to us. Brethren, call on Brother Mohler—he is willing and ready to give you his best. Let us take every advantage we can to give our people the best training that is possible, for indeed it is true that what we teach to-day, will become to-morrow, and "nothing but our best is worthy."

Hoping for the Advocate the best year of its existence,

Very sincerely yours,

H. H. WALLACE.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING ACTION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

Collinsville, Miss.,
March 13, 1927.

Whereas, the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its meeting, Feb. 8-10, 1927, in Memphis, Tenn., adopted a resolution in which it "put itself on record as being opposed to all legislation prohibiting the teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges;" and,

Whereas, the statements of Dr. W. E. Hogan, secretary of the General Board of Education, indicate clearly that by "scientific subjects" the Association referred specifically to anti-evolution legislation; and,

Whereas, in the adpotion of the resolution in its official capacity the Educational Association presumed to speak for the Southern Methodist Church, South; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Collinsville Methodist church, in church conference assembled, enter our protest against the action of the Educational Association, because we believe the said resolution has political tendencies; and further, because we do not believe that the Association had any right to speak for the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

2. That these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Southern Methodist for publication.

Signed:

INELL ETHRIDGE, Secretary.

Nitrate of Soda For Your Fruit Trees

EVERY orchardist knows that he must give his trees a liberal supply of nitrogen every year to get a good crop. The Experiment Stations all recommend Nitrate of Soda for this purpose.

Your home trees should be treated the same way One pound of Nitrate of Soda to each one inch of tree diameter is the proper amount. Spread it as far as the branches reach out.

Apples and pears do well in sod but the ground under peach trees must be cultivated to get good peaches.

Nitrogen is so universally lacking in practically all of our cultivated soils that it is always safe and profitable to apply Nitrate of Soda to growing crops.

We would like to show you how you may grow more satisfactory gardens. Our pamphlets on fertilizing gardens will be sent you if you will cut out this advertisement, write your address in the margin and mail to R.K.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT INSTITUTE.

The Shreveport District Institute opened Feb. 27 at First Church with a general rally. After a short devotional, the work of the institute was explained, the delegates registered, and assigned to the various classes. Regular work started on Monday evening, when the class work was taken up. Each evening supper was served by the different chapters participating.

The faculty included: Rev. B. Frank Pim, of the Central Office, Nashville; Mrs. Robert Jackson, Jr., Conference Third Department Superintendent; Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder, Shreveport District; Rev. James B. Grambling, Epworth League Board President; Miss Nellie Gill, evangelistic singer, and Miss Cora Varnado, Conference Field Secretary. Valuable assistance was given by Miss Johnnie Van Sandt and Mr. Bennet Huring.

There were forty-eight certificates awarded at the close of the institute.

What Are You Doing For Your Puny Child?

One Boy Gained 11 Pounds in 7 Weeks and is Now Strong and Healthly.

For weak, frail, under-developed children—and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in seven weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust.

Sixty tablets for 60 cents at all druggists—but be sure and insist on McCoy's—the original and genuine.

Give them to the sickly, frail child for 30 days, and if they don't help—wonderfully, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

Mississippi Lady Says She Took Black-Draught for These Symptoms and Was "Greatly Relieved."

Starkville, Miss.—"I have been a user of Black-Draught for about twenty years," says Mrs. C. E. Buntin, of R. F. D. 5, this city.

"I used Black-Draught first for constipation," continues Mrs. Buntin. "I would feel dull, stupid, and have severe headaches, even feverish. I had an uneasy, tight feeling in my stomach.

"I read quite a bit about Black-Draught. I began using it and soon my bowels acted regularly and I was greatly relieved. I used it every once in a while for about eighteen years.

"About two years ago I found I was having indigestion, a tight smothering in my chest, then severe pain, especially after eating sweets. I commenced taking just a pinch of Black-Draught after meals and by doing this I could eat about anything.

"I gave Black-Draught to my children for colds and headaches. I can certainly recommend it."

Thedford's Black-Draught is recommended by thousands of others for the relief of indigestion, biliousness and simple ailments due to constipation. Safe, easy to take. Costs only 1 cent a dose. NC-171

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN BORN IN SAME YEAR

Queen Victoria and Lydia E. Pinkham

MRS. ANNA McHENRY
1005 E. PLUM STREET, MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far-reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindliness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in thousands of American homes.

Marshall, Illinois.—"After my second child was born, I never saw a well day for five years. My father was telling his druggist about my condition, and the druggist insisted that father take a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have me try it, as it had helped his wife. I had given up, but to please father and mother, I commenced taking your medicine and in a week I had begun to feel better. When I passed through the Change of Life, I was taking the Vegetable Compound and I had no trouble of any kind."—Mrs. Anna McHenry, 1005 E. Plum St., Marshall, Illinois.

Another Woman Helped

Philadelphia, Penna.—Mrs. Caroline Nagy, of 2717 Sears St., in a recent letter to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., says that after her child was born she was in a very weak condition. She could not seem to regain her health and went to her mother for advice. She told her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it had helped her when in like condition, and it has helped her mother also. So Mrs. Nagy started taking it. She felt better after taking the first bottle,—after taking six bottles her weakness and other troubles disappeared, and she is never done praising the Compound.

In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

FROM THE STANDARD CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Permit me to submit a small report of the work on the Standard charge to date since Conference.

We were cordially received by our people at each place on the charge. Our folks at Standard and at Olla didn't forge the custom of Methodist people of receiving their new preacher by giving him a first-class pounding on his arrival. And the Standard folks have even repeated it the last month by contributing generously to the wardrobe of the parsonage inhabitants. For all of which we give thanks, and take courage and press on. We have some noble workers here on this charge.

We desire also to mention the meeting we have just closed at Selma with Brother H. T. Young, our general evangelist. He did some good preaching—I should say great preaching. In spite of the weather interfering twice during the time, we closed with good interest and victory for the Lord and his work. This meeting made the sixth that I have had Brother Young with me, and in every one he has acquitted himself in preaching the gospel with power and in bringing the people closer to God. We had eight accessions to the church on profession of faith, and the church was greatly blessed.

The pastor also conducted a few days' meeting at Standard in January, with very good success—good interest, and received seven into the church on profession of faith. We had to suspend on account of illness.

We hope to take care of the Advocate before the time is out for putting it over.

Blessings,

L. E. CROOKS, P. C.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

BY EVERY CONSIDERATION.

We do some things simply from a sense of duty; we do some things simply because we are asked to do them by somebody for whom we have regard; we do some things simply because we are directed to do them by somebody that has authority over us; we do some things simply because we love to do them.

We ought to look after the interests of the superannuates of the church by every one of these considerations. It is our duty to do it—these men have served the church faithfully throughout the whole period of their active lives, and now that they are worn out and dependent, we ought to provide for their necessities.

We are asked to do this thing by our bishops, by the Board of Finance and its General Secretary, and by many others for whom we have the deepest respect and admiration.

We ought to raise the Superannuate Endowment Fund because we have been directed to do so by succeeding General Conferences, the General Conference being the supreme and only legislative body that has a right to speak for the whole church.

We ought to love to make this provision for these honored worn out servants of the church because of what they have done for the establishment, extension, and maintenance of the Kingdom of God. Many of them labored in the hard pioneer days, preaching the gospel in out of the way places, giving themselves unreservedly to the work to which they had been called, serving to the limit of their strength almost always on inadequate salaries. We have entered into their labors—and a glorious heritage it is. These men we ought to love for their own sakes; but if not for their own sakes, for their work's sake. And because of that love, we ought to find a real joy in ministering to their needs.

The months of March, April and May, have been officially designated as the time for collecting the pledges made to the Superannuate Endowment Fund. These pledges were made—or ought to have been made—by every pastoral charge in the connection. Some charges began well in making payments and have continued doing well, bringing up their quotas each year as due; other charges began well, but have lagged somewhat and are now behind with their payments; some charges, unhappily, have made a very poor poor showing thus far. Whatever the situation may be in any charge, this cause should be presented in all our churches during this special period and every possible effort made to secure the payment in full of all quotas due. By every consideration, this should be done.

It has been our observation that the happiest and most successful preachers and people are those that accept loyally the program of the church and carry it out faithfully. Adequate provision for our superannuates is a big item in the program of the church.

THE TROUBLE WITH OUR SCHOOLS.

We sometimes wonder that we have any schools at all, church or public, since they are the target against which so many shafts of criticism are directed from all quarters of the compass. We are told that our whole educational system is wrong; that the courses of study are not what they ought to be; that the teachers are materialists, agnostics, and atheists; that the student body is wild and wicked; that scholarship is an incidental of school life, and that social pleasure and athletic diversion are the main things—merely to mention some of the criticisms that are current.

We do not suppose that any of our schools are perfect. We have no doubt but that our educational system can be improved materially, that the curricula are weak at some points, that some teachers lack a great deal of being all they ought to be, that there are bad boys and girls in our schools, that some students care more for social pleasures and athletic interests than they do for their books—and so on. We do not deny that these things exist in a greater or less degree, nor do we, by the remotest implication, make any manner of excuse for them.

But we believe our schools to-day are better than they have ever been in the past, notwithstanding the attacks that are being made upon them. We are thinking particularly of our church schools, for we are better acquainted with them than we are with State institutions, though we have the same opinion of our State schools. Our belief is based upon a pretty wide acquaintance with the administrative and teaching personnel of our schools, upon a fair knowledge of our general educational system and its aims and ideals, upon a first-hand knowledge of some of the problems of school life and of the devoted efforts that are being made to solve them, and, above all, upon the character of the men and women our schools are turning out year by year. A period of ten year spent as student in prep school, college and university, a further period of seven years as a teacher in a church college, and a still further period of twelve years in close proximity to a great non-church institution, together with the chairmanship of a Conference Board of Education and membership on a college board of trustees, have given us at the least the opportunity for observation; and our belief that our schools to-day are better than they have ever been in the past is the outcome of that opportunity for observation.

What, then, is the trouble with our schools? The answer, to our way of thinking, is very plain. In the first place, we expect our school authorities to carry on the great work of Christian education in the most efficient way with the wholly inadequate resources we provide for them; and, in the second place, we direct against them a criticism that creates suspicion and brings about a lack of confidence that make it impossible for them to function as they should. These schools are ours—they are the children of the church; when they ask for a loaf or a fish or an egg, they deserve better of us than a stone or a serpent or a scorpion.

Our schools are doing a great work. Give them what they need in the way of resources, and support them with sympathetic interest instead of "knocking" them, and they will do a still greater work.

A JOB FOR THE SCIENTISTS.

We have read recently that earthworms are musically inclined, regaling themselves on warm summer evenings with miniature concerts as they lie partly stretched out of their burrows. There seems to be some question as to how they produce their music, one scientist maintaining that they do it by dragging the exceedingly fine bristles under their body across some hard object at the edge of their burrows, while another contends that the worms do their singing with their mouths. This is an interesting subject for investigation, and we trust that the truth will ultimately emerge, as we feel sure it will after a long period of observation and the most painstaking scientific study. We confess, however, that we are not so much interested in how earthworms sing as we are in what they are singing about. We are convinced that there are pleasures that mortals have not yet dreamed of if there are those that set worms to singing. Let the scientists tell us what they are!

THE COST AND THE CURE OF CRIME.

By Rev. M. E. Lazenby, D.D., Editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate.

Few people realize that the cost of crime in the United States mounts to the staggering total of $16,000,000,000 each year. This is more than the total value of the American agricultural output for 1926. If every church building in America should be destroyed by fire or cyclone, this stupendous sum of money could duplicate them at once. With this sum of money all the orphanages of the Southern Methodist Church, at home and abroad, could, at the present rate, be supported for the next 6,400 years. This sum of money—the cost of crime in America in one year—could buy every Southern Methodist educational institution, now valued at about $53,202,000, replace all their endowments, valued at about $67,108,000; pay all their debts valued at $3,902,000, and still be able to give them an aggregate endowment of more than $15,000,000,000.

It is unnecessary to go further with these figures. The cost of crime in America is so stupendous that the figures stagger us. They are past our ability to conceive. If put into good roads, or public libraries, or public schools, each year, the problems connected with these institutions would be forever solved.

More Costly Than War.

Our authority for the statement that crime costs in America soar each year to $16,000,000,000 is Mark O. Prentiss, who writes illuminatingly on this subject in a recent issue of the Manufacturers Record. He views the cost from another angle, saying: "The economic cost of crime to this country exceeds the total of the war debts. Every year the United States loses more money in its war on crime than the $11,000,000,000 advanced to Europe during and since the war. Every year the United States foots a crime bill as great as the money cost of a year of our war with Germany." But there is another phase of the cost of crime that cannot be computed in dollars and cents.

The Cost in Suffering and Shame.

Think of the suffering, the shame, the disgrace, the poverty brought upon the families of criminals. Then, again, think of the danger they face who seek to suppress crime. Mr. Prentiss says: "In Chicago six policemen are killed to every murderer who is hanged." He further states that in seeking to suppress crime 12,500 people are murdered each year, more than 1,000 a month, more than thirty every day, more than one every hour. "Crime is, from an economic and business point of view, the greatest single problem which the United States faces to-day." Think of the clouds of sorrow that must hang each year over 12,500 homes. Think of the tears of widows and the hunger of orphans in these homes. We can, in a way, compute the cost of crime in dollars and cents, but we cannot compute it in anxiety, fear, hunger, sorrow, suffering, disgrace. And, yet, these are a part of the cost of crime.

The Cure for Crime.

We have seen very briefly something of the cost of crime. What about its cure? Is the situation hopeless, or is there a cure? Has the church a remedy? And is she applying that remedy?

We would not underestimate the work done by our law enforcement officers. These brave men hazard their lives for the suppression of crime. We would pluck no leaf from the laurel that crowns their brows. But there is another agency more powerful than these brave men that may be utilized in the suppression of crime. It is the church of Jesus Christ. "It is not by might nor by power, but my Spirit, saith the Lord."

Earth's Most Influential Institution.

At the present time—sometimes we wonder how long it will be so—the Christian church is the most powerful institution in America, or in the world. If the church will unite in one mighty, dead-in-earnest effort, she can bring glory to her Divine Head, and peace and harmony and prosperity to our great nation. The church, as we see it, ought to direct her effort in three different directions.

The Family Altar.

First, the Christian home has been straying. The church has allowed it to stray. The church ought now to make earnest effort for the rehabilitation of the Christian home. The family altar, if fallen down, ought to be re-erected. The attractions of the home ought to be such as to make home the happiest place in the world. God must be honored, not dishonored, in the home. The home and the church must work together. If either falls down, the other is not only crippled but burdened beyond its ability to carry on adequately. The rehabilitation of the home, if made a national slogan, will mean more toward the suppression of crime, the drying of tears, and the saving of taxes than one has dreamed of.

Christian Educational Aims.

The next direction in which the church should use her efforts is in behalf of our public school education. We would not be misunderstood. We shall always earnestly contend for a separtion of State and church, and we do not believe the church ought to direct the public education of the State, except so to use her great influence as to make Christian the lives of her teachers. This will do much to create a Christian atmosphere in every school. There was once a time when every school teacher was looked upon as a Christian. They would teach school during the week, and teach a Sunday school class on the Sabbath. This cannot be said of a majority of our teachers to-day, though it can be said of many. The influence of the church in a community ought to be so strong, so powerful, that no board of education would wish to engage as a teacher a man or a woman who is not actively Christian. In every State, we believe, the Bible ought to be allowed to be read in the schools. But this is not what we mean by the church's exercising her influence in the school. We mean she ought to be so thoroughly active and powerful as to touch directly and with power the lives of the school teachers who each day stand before our children. We do not have it in our hearts to criticise that great body of Christian men and women who are engaged in the teaching of our youth. But it must not, it cannot, go unnoticed that thousands of young people, and some older ones, are engaged in public school teaching who are worldly to the core, and who, though not anti-Christian, are certainly un-Christian. These should be won to the church and to the Christ, and through them we shall help to win our young people back to sane and Christian living.

The Church and Religion.

Last of all, the church can help in this precarious situation by praying and working for a great revival of religion that will sweep the nation. It is not enough to have an isolated revival here and there. A great outpuring of the Holy Spirit upon men and women everywhere will do more to solve the crime situation than anything else in the world. There is nothing like a great revival for the uplifting of society. It will cleanse communities and save men and women and bring good tidings of great joy to all men.

The Anti-Social Group.

Sociologists and economists estimate that from one and one-half to two and one-half per cent of our people must always be reckoned as constantly or habitually or occasionally anti-social, that is, against society, criminal. "In this group are the chronic drunkard, the chronic prostitute and the chronic dependent." We believe that a great revival of religion will do more to save this group for society, than any other force in the world. What says the church?

Is the Church Ready?

Is the church ready for this kind of revival? Does she really want it? Is she willing to pay the price? Crime costs $16,000,000,000 a year. Whether we wish it or not, we are having to pay the price of crime. The church has the promise of the Savior that he will give us the desires of our heart. Do we desire this revival—this revival that will bring joy to our hearts, new vision and new life and new power to the church, salvation to sinners, peace and harmony and prosperity to the community, and joy unspeakable and full of glory to the heart of the great Redeemer and to the hearts of the angels, who, we are told, rejoice over the repentance of one sinner? Such a revival will be worth all that it costs in money, planning, praying, working, preaching. After all, it is one sure cure for crime. Whatever it costs, the cure of crime is worth more than the cost.

Birmingham, Ala.

THE MEMPHIS RESOLUTION.

By President D. M. Key, Millsaps College.

I have had three letters condemning the resolution passed by the Methodist Educational Association at its recent meeting in Memphis opposing all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges. I have also had a very large number of expressions by Methodist people not connected with the colleges commending the resolution. I have no disposition to apologize for the resolution, because I heartily approve of it. Yet, I should be sorry for any one to misapprehend the intentions of the resolution, as possibly some who object to it have done. Having been present when the resolution was formulated and having heard and participated in the discussion of the wording, I feel that I can state accurately what was in the mind of those who presented the resolution. It was intended to express the conviction of the Association that legislative control of the subject matter taught in colleges is wrong in principle and dangerous to that freedom of thought which our fathers came to this country to establish. The word evolution was avoided in order that the resolution might not even seem to endorse a materialistic and atheistic teaching of that subject.

I can hardly see how any one who did not already completely distrust these educators could think that it was intended in this resolution to endorse any purely materialistic theory of evolution as a proper teaching of science. But if there be any possible excuse for misunderstanding of the resolution, it is due, perhaps, to the anxiety not to offend which prevented the framers of the resolution from going on record as opposed to any legislation that would interfere with even the improper teaching of science; in other words, legislation that would interfere at all with full faculty responsibility for the curriculum. Such a statement would, at any rate, represent my own view.

I do not mean by that to say that the State and the church should not have any control over what is taught in the schools, but that it is not proper or even possible to exercise this control through lists of prescribed and proscribed teachings set up by legislation and enforced by the courts.

I believe that the best way, really the only possible way, for the church or the State to "control" our schools and what is taught in them is through the character of the persons that are put in charge of them and that do the teaching. I do not believe that a Legislature or a Conference should undertake to make out a curriculum and specify what shall and shall not be taught, whether it be Bible courses or Biology courses. Teachers and administrators who cannot be trusted, because of their character and their scholarship, to determine these matters should not be employed, and if employed should be dismisssed. A doctor would be unable to do his work if the father or mother of the patient insisted on directing what instrument he should use in each step of the operation.

I have given my whole life and energy for twenty-six years to Christian education in Methodist colleges, and I think I know, from the inside, the process of guiding young people through the doubts and puzzlements that sometimes arise from false and materialistic theories, and sometimes from broadening knowledge as well, into a settled Christian philosophy of life and an abiding faith in Christ; and the chief element in that process is to be sure that all his instructors are men of religious conviction who command his respect for their scholarship and who have kept their Christian faith strong and vital and sincere. Such are the men in the Millsaps faculty. The church's control of her colleges lies in keeping such men there and giving them full confidence as long as they are there.

It seems to me that such an expression of opinion on an educational subject by a group of educators is permissible. Their opinions have only such weight as their scholarship and character give them. Of course the action of the Association would be disapproved by those who advocate the anti-evolution laws; but if this opinion outrages the feelings and religious conviction of the church as a whole (which I do not believe to be the case), it is well that it should be known. For it is the opinion of practically all of the professors and officers of all our Methodist colleges. For seven or eight years, I have attended nearly all educational meetings of our church and of the educational associations, and I do not know of a teacher in a Methodist institution who does not take substantially the position taken by the Methodist Association in this resolution.

The view of the Association as expressed in this resolution was intended to have some weight, and it is to be hoped will have weight, with our people in forming an unprejudiced opinion on a matter that affects the whole task of education. Such restrictive and regulatory laws concerning details of the teacher's task are wrong in principle, they serve no good purpose, and, at least in Mississippi, they are not needed. Soon after the passage of the so-called anti-evolution bill by the Mississippi Legislature, Attorney General Knox rendered an opinion in reply to an inquiry of one of the teachers in a State college, in which he said:

"Inasmuch as it is assumed that the teachers of the university, colleges, normals, public schools, as well as all other educational institutions of the State, are supposed to be intelligent men and women and are supposed to be good men and women, and inasmuch as in Mississippi they are rather inclined to believe that man came from and in fact really is the handiwork of God, I feel that it would be presumptuous on my part in this opinion, to give out any gratuitous statements, or expressions, or suggestions that would in any way enlighten you as to how you are to teach school, and merely content myself with the belief that you will in the future, as in the past, teach your pupils to look through nature up to nature's God, teaching them that he is here, there and everywhere, even in the grand old mountains and in the murmuring rills; in the falling snowflakes and in the flashing cascade; in the Orient with its silver belts, and in the gorgeous rainbow arch that spans the firmament. Yea, teach them that Christ is risen and that God is on the throne and shall reign forever more." If the Atttorney General of the State, in rendering an official opinion on this law, felt that it was gratuitous and presumptuous to instruct a teacher "how to teach," surely, educators themselves are not to be censured for expressing an opinion as to the law itself, which does that very thing.

Atheism and materialism have not been taught and will not be taught in the State colleges of Mississippi, even though all prohibitory laws be repealed. These institutions have always been responsive to the social control of a Christian electorate. They embody the intellectual and spiritual aspirations of our people as a whole. In intimate co-operation with the church colleges of the State, and to some degree influenced by them, they constitute a free and fair field of battle between truth and error. As to the outcome of that conflict, we need not be apprehensive if our faith in the truth of our religion is itself unshaken.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ARMY CHAPLAIN.

By Rev. J. A. Randolph, Chaplain, U. S. A., Retired.

Number 10.

Fort Sam Houston, at San Antonio, Tex., where I reported to the commanding officer of the Sixth Infantry for duty, is one of the largest army posts in the country, and has a wonderfully interesting history. I had seen it in 1896, when, on a visit to San Antonio, a friend had driven me about the city and took in Sam Houston by the way. Little did I then dream that three years later I should report there for duty as a chaplain of the United States Army.

I reported on April 2, and a few days later my family joined me. Chaplains were at that time called "Post Chaplains," and were assigned quarters by the post commander, and no one could rank him out of his quarters. That seems like a regulation much in the chaplain's favor. That all depended on the commanding officer. The chaplain had no choice in the matter, and if the commanding officer was friendly to the chaplain, he gave him desirable quarters, but if not, the quarters were less desirable; but there were few sets of quarters in any army post to which officers were assigned that were not an improvement over the average parsonage, as they were in those days.

At Sam Houston, when we joined, there was only one set of quarters vacant. That was a large house in what is called the Lower Post. Colonel Kellogg said we could move into that set temporarily, and he would assign us regular quarters later. It was a magnificent two-story stone building, fit for a general. What little stuff we had looked like a lone penny in a collection plate. We fixed it up as well as we could with the materials in hand, and the family occupied it for more than two years.

If my experience with the volunteers at Camp Hamilton introduced me to a new world, here was another. The regular army at that time held tenaciously to the old army traditions. We began to learn something of these right away. About the third evening after the family arrived, the commanding officer and his good wife made a formal call upon us. Then followed a stream of visitors, till every family in the post had called. These calls were formal, lasted about five or ten minutes, when the visitors left their cards, bowed themselves out and made way for others. Thus they showed their welcome to the new additions to the community. This is just one of a long list of items known in the army as "The Customs of the Service."

Our next door neighbor was a retired Cavalry Major of a fine old New England family. He saw how unsophisticated I was, and in the kindliest and most diplomatic way undertook my initiation into the mysteries of army tradition and customs. How well he succeeded, it is not for me to say, but in after years, I always felt honored when the commanding officer said: "We shall send the chaplain. He will know how to handle the situation properly."

I had always pooh-poohed social and official customs, because I was ignorant of them and had no conception of their real significance. A more careful reading of my New Testament has taught me that good manners are a Christian virtue, as shown by Jesus' severe rebuke of Simon the Pharisee for his failure to observe the social customs of that day, as recorded in the seventh chapter of Luke, and Paul's declaration that "Love doth not behave itself unseemly." There is an immense satisfaction in knowing what to do on occasion, and there is nothing more humiliating than to find oneself in a situation where one does not know what to do, but must do something, and then find out later that one has done the wrong thing. I join with those who lament the vanishing type of "Old-fashioned Southern Gentleman." He had his faults, but he also had his virtues, and we seem more disposed to practice his faults than to imitate his virtues.

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 4.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will not forget to welcome strangers who come to his church.

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." Heb. 13:2.

A warm handshake and a hearty welcome to some church have been the means of bringing many a person to Christ. This is one of the most effective methods of evangelism. Christian fraternity is one of the most beautiful institutions on earth. We really see no strangers; they are merely brethren with whom we are unacquainted. Let us greet all strangers in the name of our Lord.

A NOTE FROM REV. A. J. MARTIN.

Dear Brethren of the Louisiana Conference: I am indeed glad to state that I am improving right along. In fact, I have been leading singing for the last two weeks. I am engaged for meetings until June 1. Instead of remaining here after the above date, I would rather go back to Louisiana if you will keep me busy singing for you. Due to my pastoral duties, I could not answer all the calls from you to lead singing in meetings for the last three or four years. Now I can give my full time to meetings until Conference convenes. Naturally, I prefer to work in my own Conference, which prompts to the writing of this letter. However, pastors and people in Ohio have been very kind to me, and I could remain here with plenty of work to do.

Those of you who would like my help between June 1 and Conference, can get in touch with me by writing me at 131 South Wayne Avenue, Lockland, Ohio. Kindly write as soon as possible so I can arrange my dates accordingly.

Praying God's blessings upon you and hoping that you shall have one of the best years in the history of the Louisiana Conference, I am,

Fraternally yours,

A. J. MARTIN.

"Stiddy there, lion; take it aisy," quavered the Irish zoo attendant, as the transfer of a wild beast from one cage to another was being effected.

"What's the idea?" asked a fellow attendant. "Callin' that hyena a lion?"

"Have ye no tact? Can't ye see 'tis flatterin' him I am?"—Exchange.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

March, April and May have been set apart by the General Conference as the season in which we are to make our collections on pledges made by our charges on the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and as chairman of your Board of Finance I urge you to do all that you can to collect said amounts.

I note that last year as many as six, nine and ten appointments in varied districts made no collections at all.

By turning to Table No. 4 in last Conference Annual, you can learn how your individual charge stands.

Kindly press this claim, for we owe a duty to these old brethren.

JOHN F. FOSTER.

THE NEW CHURCH AT AMORY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am sure the readers of the Advocate will be interested to know something of church facilities which we have in Amory since finishing the main building on to the Sunday school annex. Doubtless the readers will recall that our church burned January a year ago, leaving only a Sunday school annex, which had just been finished. With the annex we have the following equipment:

The church is Colonial in style, with two fronts, it being located on a corner. The main front has six big fluted metal columns on a porch. These columns are painted stone color. The caps are rather elaborate. The porch has iron balustrade made of two-inch iron pipe, painted black. The brick are smooth red with chocolate mortar, V joint. Exterior work is all white. The other front has four columns. The roof is gray asbestos shingles with red tile trimmed ridges. Whiteway standards are on the fronts, lighting the walk and street all around.

On the first floor we now have the Cradle Roll, Beginner, Primary, Senior-Young Peoeple Departments; Sunday school auditorium or social hall (seats three hundred), kitchen, pipe organ, motor rooom, coal and furnace rooms. The first floor is just grade level on top of the ground. Basements have not proved satisfactory in Amory.

Rather long flights of steps inside and outside with easements lead up to the second floor, where we have main auditorium (seats 450), men's class room (seats 250), Junior Department, pastor's study, office for Sunday school superintendent, with supply room and two more large adult class rooms.

On the third floor we have the Intermediate Department, six class rooms and assembly, and balcony of auditorium. The balcony is made for use, seating 350. It has three rows of seats n each side and six in the rear. It slopes to the front and leads down both inside and outside the auditorium. Thus people can come right down from the balcony to take part in any service. The steps land on the choir platform and thence down to the main auditorium floor.

The woodwork finish in Sunday school section is golden oak, with sand-finish plastered walls, with light gray and dark cream ceilings. The finish in the auditorium is natural red gum. The pews, pulpit furniture, and all panel work are the same. The wall finish is cream, with ivory ceiling. The ceiling in auditorium forms an arch, which is seemingly supported by two fluted gum columns, with beautifully designed Corinthian capitals, on both sides of the pipe organ grille. The choir is at the rear of the pulpit. The floors are finished in natural edge-grained pine. The art glass windows are small. The row below the balcony has the cross and the row above the balcony has the crown as the symbolic figure. The altar is made of heavy spindles.

The people who have had the erection of this church in charge have tried to build something that would be appreciated by the church at large as well as by our local congregation. The church will be opened on Easter Sunday, with Bishop Candler preaching a sermon. We are inviting our friends far and near to join with us in this happy experience. Pray for us that we may enter the house of God with a prayer in our hearts.

We invite you, Dr. Carley, to be with us.

W. R. LOTT, Pastor.

AN APPEAL TO THE INDUSTRIAL LEADERS OF THE SOUTH.

We, the undersigned pastors and officials of churches of the South, address this communication to you because of our interest in the well-being of the people of the industrial South. While we recognize that there are problems similar to these herein mentioned in other parts of the country, yet we as Southern men are addressing this Appeal solely to you because we recognize that the South has social conditions and industrial problems which are peculiarly its own, and which must be met by those who have a full knowledge of those conditions. We are proud of the remarkable growth of Southern industry and we know that you are concerned with us in the welfare of our work people and those dependent upon them.

We bring before you with the greater confidence, therefore, the necessity for the improvement of certain social and economic conditions, especially in the textile industry, but existing also in other industries. These are, to speak briefly: the isolation of population in the mill village; the long working week, extending in many industries even to fifty-five and sixty hours; a certain amount of the seven-day week which still exists in some industries; the employment of women, and of children between 14 and 16, at over-long periods of labor; low wage standards in some industries, with consequent depressed standards of living; the general absence of labor representation in our factories.

Life in a mill village under company control, while an advance of status in the beginning, is not the best training ground for citizenship in that it does not train residents for participation in government. It has generally proved in recent years, however it may have been at first, to be unfavorable to education, to religion, and to understanding and sympathy between the citizens of the mill village and those of the larger community. In spite of the difficulty of the problem, we are convinced that these villages should be merged as rapidly as is consistent with safety into the larger community.

We do not undertake in this Appeal to suggest the forms which employee representation in factory government should take, whether arrangements negotiated with regular unions or forms of workers' councils. But labor is human and not a commodity. Labor gives all that it has, including capital through savings, and since labor also has wisdom, skill and ingenuity to contribute to the greater productivity of our industries, it is desirable and right that it should have a proper share in making and enforcing the regulations by which industrial plants are controlled. The quality and quantity of the product, elimination of waste, regularity of employment, better control of industry as a whole, the wage scale and the fairness of the discipline of the shops are of deepest interest to labor. Higher wages, better schools, shorter hours of labor and the independence of the worker tend to enrich life and to develop a stronger type of citizenship.

We believe that all of these conditions can be steadily improved, and we therefore urge you, as present leaders holding positions of responsibility and vantage, to take the initiative in their improvement. We believe that if you will take the initiative, and if there can be the friendly co-operation of employers, employees, churches, educators and officials of the State, it will be possible to build in the South by united effort, in the lifetime of this generation, a greater and more powerful industry, constructed solidly upon good-will and co-operation, avoiding the waste and bitterness of industrial conflicts and mitigating the intensity of the class struggle.

We cannot allow ourselves to close this statement without saying that the policy which we have presented to you as employers, if it is followed, requires an intelligent and sympathetic appreciation by the public of the difficulties, financial and otherwise, which beset leaders of Southern industry, especially in textile industry, at this time. And it calls for the whole-hearted co-operation of labor, organized and unorganized, if it is to succeed. We pledge our active efforts to secure this understanding and co-operation.

THE LIFE OF BISHOP GALLOWAY.

Following is what Edgar S. Wilson, for a quarter of a century or more a well known journalist of Jackson, Miss., and an intimate and devoted friend of both Bishop Candler and Bishop Galloway, has to say in his Mississippi Comment to the Birmingham Age-Herald and the Mobile Register, of Bishop Candler's great book, the life of the great Bishop Galloway:

"Mississippians from center to circumference are reading with interest the life of 'Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, a prince of preachers and a Christian statesman,' by Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga. The love of these two great Methodist bishops was like that of David and Jonathan. No man was better qualified to write the life of Bishop Galloway than was Bishop Candler. This was the reason why Mrs. Galloway, some time before her death, preferred this request of Bishop Candler. Bishop Galloway was a native of Kosciusko, Attala County, Miss. His life is a part of the best history of the State to which he was devoted and which is better for his having lived in it. Bishop Candler's life of Bishop Galloway is worthy of the subject and the author. It will be read by Mississippians of all callings and will adorn the libraries of members of all churches for years to come because the great Bishop Galloway was so broad and so able that he won the esteem and admiration of all creeds and colors. Among the many interesting things in this book is the correspondence between Bishop Galloway and Jefferson Davis which occurred in 1887 on the subject of prohibition. This correspondence attracted nation-wide attention at the time and, as Bishop Candler says, is still a matter of historic importance on account of the great subject discussed as well as the prominence and high character of the two great men who were parties to it. Here at Jackson where, as pastor and bishop, the lamented Galloway lived and died after blessing Yazoo City, Vicksburg, Brookhaven and other cities as pastor like the lamented Dr. Henry F. Sproles, the great Baptist preacher, every man, woman and child in the community knew him and loved him. Bishop Galloway died May 12, 1909. He left an aching void which has not been filled in church or State."

IS IT POSSIBLE IN THIS ENLIGHTENED CHRISTIAN AGE FOR PREACHERS, WHO WROUGHT TO PRODUCE SUCH A DAY, TO BECOME TOO OLD TO MATTER?

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

Throughout the history of our country the government has been taxing the people to pension those who have served in the army and navy. The people gladly pay such taxes. They believe that one who is called upon to defend one's country, even to the extent of killing the enemy, is justly entitled to a pension for the service rendered. And this belief is all the more pronounced when the defender is himself physically hurt in the encounter.

Preachers of the Gospel are defenders, too. They are Soldiers of the King of righteousness. They battle against the powers of darkness, not to kill the sin-possessed invaders who threaten the common good, but to save them. At length these preachers grow old in the service. They are compelled to retire. Should they not likewise be pensioned? Does the soldier with his repeating rifle do more for his country than the preacher with his piercing Sword of the Spirit? Is it worth more to kill a man who is seeking to kill you than it is to teach and train that man so that he will love you instead?

Every time I see a soldier who bears in his body the marks of his fighting to protect me, I feel that I owe him a debt that will take me a lifetime to pay. And every time I see an aged preacher who is filled with infirmities from a life of fighting in Jesus' name, I know I cannot give too much to Superannuate Endowment for his comfort in the days of his disability.

IF THE CHURCH DOES NOT KEEP HER PROMISE CONCERNING SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT, CAN SHE BE TRUSTED TO KEEP HER PROMISE CONCERNING ANYTHING?

A PASTOR REVIEWS HIS EXPERIENCE IN EVANGELISM.

By W. F. Rothenburger.

In my early ministry I habitually conducted an annual revival, either doing the preaching myself or inviting some neighboring pastor to do it for me. The church always had a goodly number of additions, but I observed that by far the large majority came into it as the result of my own personal contact in the home. Preaching did its part in stirring the conscience and casting the net, but the decision was reached in the home. In nine cases out of every ten, I think I knew exactly who would respond to the invitation each evening.

The next period in my ministry stressed the pre-Easter emphasis on evangelism. Perhaps one week of preaching services would be held, but a group of teachers and a few other interested persons would assist in personal work in the homes. I recall the great joy which came to me and my church when on one Easter Sunday we received eighty-five men, women and young people into the fellowship of the congregation.

The third period of my experience found me adding to the evangelistic program a fall effort of personal household evangelism, with more than half a hundred picked laymen and lay women assisting. Each evening from 6 to 7 we gathered for an informal pot-luck or serve-self supper, during which time reports on the previous evening's work would be received and new prospects assigned. There was no preaching service, but instead fifty men and women were entering the homes of prospects between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock, or sometimes later, discussing the work of the church in all its phases and frankly asking the prospects for their decision to unite with the congregation on the following Sunday. The result of the week's work was more than one hundred decisions.

This fall and spring plan of ingathering has been followed for a number of years, and with great satisfaction to the church and the pastor. Members of the laity have turned evangelists as of old.

This all-the-year-round process makes room for an intensive program of religious education. It may provide for the pastor's instruction class whereby he may supplement the work of the teacher by a series of hours with his boys and girls in studying such fundamentals as God, Jesus Christ, the Bible, the Church, the steps into the Kingdom, the Lord's Supper, stewardship, worship and the joy of Christian service. This makes for an intelligent constituency. It puts the church on the alert for prospects in every department of its life with such necessary information as will enable the personal worker to make an intelligent and sympathetic approach. There should be no reason why every well-organized and growing congregation should not carry a prospective list of from forty to seventy per cent of the numerical strength of its membership. Instead of confining the responsibility and the joy of enlarging the Kingdom to the pastor and the evangelist, it shares it with the laity. What education in stewardship and the every-member canvass have meant to the financing of the Kingdom, personal or household evangelism may mean to the recruiting of our Christian soldiery.—Federal Council Bulletin.

FRIENDS.

If you had all the friends and gold
It's possible for a man to hold,
And if on top of that could claim
The greatest sum of earthly fame,
Yet had to live from day to day
Where never human came your way,
You'd trade the gold you had to spend
To hear the greeting of a friend.

'Tis friends alone that make us rich,
Not marble busts in glory's niche;
Not money, wisdom, strength or skill
With happiness our lives can fill;
With all of these we still should sigh
If never neighbor happened by,
And no one shared from sun to sun
The honors that our work has won.

What joy could come from splendid deeds
That no one ever cheers or heeds?
Fame would be empty and absurd
If of it no one ever heard.
The richest man, without a friend,
Is poor with all he has to spend;
Alone, with all that could be had,
A human being would be sad.

Not in ourselves does fortune lie,
Nor in the things that gold can buy;
The words of praise that please us well
The lips of other men must tell;
And honor, on which joy depends,
All happiness that man can know
The friends about him must bestow.

The Home Circle

IN CHILDHOOD LAND.

By Thomas Curtis Clark.

In Childhood Land what gardens grow
Of happy thoughts and dreams aglow!
No cloud can mar its azure skies
And every dawn brings sweet surprise.
They weary not who frolic there;
They bear no burden, feel no care;
And when the early shadows fall
Old Mother Sleep calls one and all
And tucks them in her downy bed
To slumber till the night be sped.

In Childhood Land who would not stay
To dream forever and a day!
What profits it to strive for gold
Since joy cannot be bought and sold?
What good can come of foolish care
Save weary hearts and dark despair?
So would I turn me back again,
From driving tasks of stubborn men,
To play for ever hand in hand
With those who dwell in Childhood Land.

WHERE BETTY FOUND PET.

By S. L. Bacon.

"Betty," said mamma, "I am going out for a little while; now, don't let any rabbits steal in to lay eggs while I'm gone."

Betty laughed. "I shall take splendid care, mamma; but, oh, how I do wish it was Monday, the time goes so slowly!"

"Think what a beautiful day to-morrow will be," said mamma, placing a big bunch of roses and sweet peas in a basket.

Betty's little face grew grave. "Miss Lizzie said she thought that Easter was the loveliest time of all the year; an' she told us of lots of interest'n' things about it."

"I am sure she did," replied mamma. "Well, dear, suppose you look over your lesson for to-morrow."

She kissed Betty and took up her basket. "I must hurry now, or I will be late."

Betty felt a trifle lonely after mamma had gone; she wished that she had a cat or dog to play with and to be company. There were very few children living near.

After what seemed a very long time to a little girl, she saw mamma coming up the walk. She did not have any flowers this time, but a queer-shaped box.

But mamma shook her head, smiling. "I can't tell; it's a secret, Betty."

Betty clapped her hands—mamma's "secrets" were always nice. She kept wondering what it could be, but mamma only smiled.

When Monday finally did come, Betty hunted all over the big yard among the bushes for eggs. She found a great many pretty colored ones, and several made of chocolate and pink cream candy.

"The rabbits have been so good to me, mamma," exclaimed the little girl, munching a big cream egg. "I've found a lot, and there's no use looking for any more.

"How about the 'secret,' Betty?"

"Oh, I forgot the delicious secret," cried Betty.

She hunted and hunted, and when she was just ready to give up she caught sight of the queer box hidden away under the syringa bush. Betty opened it eagerly, and there lay a little white rabbit fast asleep.

"Oh, mamma!" cried Betty, skipping about the yard, "I am so happy! I wanted a pet more'n anything! I'm going to name it Pet!"

Betty played with her new treasure a great deal. She said it was wonderful how much Pet understood, and she was no longer lonely when mamma went out.

A week passed and Sabbath morning Betty came running to mamma in great distress.

"Oh, what do you think, mamma? I can't find Pet anywhere; I've looked an' looked."

"Why, I'm sorroy, dear! don't stop to hunt for the rabbit now—it's time to get ready for Sabbath school; I was just going to call you."

"Oh, I couldn't go to-day, and Pet lost! I want to hunt again."

Mamma looked grave. "I am sorry about the rabbit, Betty, but I don't think you ought to miss Sabbath school."

Betty stood still in the middle of the room; she was thinking hard and fast. She remembered how Miss Lizzie had begged the children not to miss coming, and how she had promised that nothing, not a single thing, should keep her at home. Was she keeping her word?

She turned to mamma very slowly. "I guess I'll be thinking about Pet all the time," she said in a sober voice, "but I guess that's better than not going at all."

"Yes," said mamma, "when you have promised." Then she fastened Betty's pretty little white coat. "Get your hat, dear," she said.

Betty ran to open the cupboard door, where her big hat box was kept. Then she screamed: "O mamma, come and look!"

The box was on the floor, and it was open; and there, right on top of Betty's hat lay Pet, pink eyes blinking.

Betty seized him in her arms, and danced about the floor. "However did the darling get in? I must have left the top open, and in he jumped. O mamma, I am glad I decided to go to Sabbath school! Suppose I hadn't, I might have hunted and hunted and hunted before I found Pet."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

MATTIE'S BIRTHDAY MONEY.

By E. H. Glover.

Uncle John had given Mattie a dollar for her birthday on Saturday. This was Monday, and now she sat down to decide how to spend it.

"Just get anything you like," Uncle John had said. "I thought perhaps you would rather choose for yourself."

There were so many things that Mattie wanted, it was very hard to know which were the most important. A new box of water color paints would be lovely and a block of water color paper. Those would cost a dollar. But—she hesitated. She did so want to buy that little coral linen dress and embroider it herself. The dress, with the floss to work it, would be just ninety cents, and there would be ten cents left for candy! Then a sudden thought struck her—perhaps she might give the candy to the orphans! She had been wishing she could do something for them ever since she had gone to see them on visitors' day. It was so sad to see so many little children without their mammas! Yes, she would give the candy to them. Then she remembered that ten cents worth of candy would not help many orphans! She blushed when she thought of spending ninety cents on herself and only ten cents on the orphans. It seems, too, so selfish.

"I should think I might go halves, anyway!" she said to herself. "But Mrs. Barr said yesterday that three of them have whooping cough. My! what would I have done without Mamma when I had whooping cough! Oh, I think I'll just give all my money to the whooping-cough orphans! I could buy three little paint boxes and some mint candy, and give them some of my white paper to paint on and some pictures to color! Then they can't go out and there isn't any mamma to read nice stories to them."

Mattie was so pleased with this plan that she ran to tell Mamma about it and they bought the things that very afternoon. Next day Mamma took her in the car to the orphanage and she asked to see the whooping cough patients.

There were two boys and a girl who had it—Julia and Lizzie and Jack—and the matron said: "I'm so glad you came! They are feeling so miserable to-day and I am too busy to stay with them much! As soon as one begins to cough the other two start right away—a regular chorus! The children get along all right as long as they are well, but when they get sick it is hard on them. There is nobody who has time to do much to entertain them."

When Mattie opened the paint boxes and showed the pictures, three very mournful little faces lighted up with pleasure. In five minutes they were all sitting at a table with boxes open and glasses of water at hand, all ready to begin.

Mattie pretended to be the teacher, and they had great fun all the morning.

On the way home Mattie said to Mamma: "I declare that was the nicest birthday present I ever had!"—Child's Gem.

WHEN HERBERT FILLED THE WOOD BOX.

Herbert went reluctantly about gathering up wood and cobs. "O, dear," he thought to himself, "if only I didn't always have so many chores to do! Seems as if the wood-box was always empty, though I know I fill it often enough."

Into the wood-box went the wood and cobs, and Herbert turned about to face his mother.

"Just another arm-load, please," said mother gently. "I want a fire all day to make apple butter."

"All right," answered Herbert with a brave little smile. But underneath the smile there were cross, complaining thoughts, such as these: "I hate chores, and I hate filling the wood-box. And when winter comes, there will be more chores, and, O dear, I wish I could have a new sled for next winter!"

Out to the wood-pile he ran, and soon another arm-load was picked up. But listen! what was this? A faint, far-away sound seemed to come from the wood-pile. Herbert dropped the wood and knelt down, peering cautiously about. Then suddenly he arose and clasped his hands. "Turkeys!" he exclaimed in gleeful tones. "The turkey hen has hid her nest away and hatched some baby turkeys."

As fast as he could he ran to the house.

"Oh, come see the surprise!" he shouted. "I've found a nest of baby turkeys!"

Mother looked up from the apple she was peeling. "I knew the turkeys were there all the time—ten of them," she said, smiliing, "and I've kept the secret because I meant to give them to you as a surprise. If you wish, you may sell them later and use the money to buy a new coaster. What does my son say to that?"

"Oh, mother you are so good!" said Herbert joyously.

"You see," mother went on, "I appreciate how good my boy is to fill the wood-box so often without grumbling."

For a moment Herbert's face flushed with shame. Then two little arms went tight about mother's neck. "O mother," he cried, "I did grumble 'bout filling the wood-box, not out loud so you could hear, but inside! But from now on there is not going to be any grumbling of any kind, because I'll be too busy filling the wood-box and tending the turkeys."—Word and Way.

HIS UNFAILING CARE.

By Laura M. White.

How dare I fail to trust,
When He who e'en the sparrow heeds,
His loving arms around me thrust,
Is ever watchful of my needs?

His love abounding, always mine,
His grace sufficing for each day;
How can my spirit e'er repine,
My faith e'er flag or miss the way?

Nay, Lord, I'll place my hand in thine,
Nor ask for any clearer ray;
I'll neither falter nor repine
When "Follow me," I hear thee say.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The church at New Iberia, La., has paid this year $126.60 more than it paid last year on the mission special. Dr. John F. Foster is the pastor.

Mrs. S. S. Foster, of Mantee, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, kindly says, "The paper is always a welcome visitor in our home."

A revival meeting is scheduled for Greenville, Miss., beginning on April 24 and continuing through May 8. The pastor, Rev. C. A. Parks, will be assisted by Rev. A. C. Fisher.

Rev. T. L. Oakes, of Greenwood Springs, Miss., is serving a fine people, who hold up his hands in the work. He is planning for two tent meetings within the bounds of his work this summer.

The first series of lectures on the S. R. Belk Foundation will be delivered at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., by Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, April 4-7, on the general theme, "Woman in the Modern World."

Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., has enterprised an expansion program involving the raising of three million dollars over a period of ten years. Contracts have been let for seven units of a new building.

Our church at Houma, La., one of the outstanding appointments in the French mission territory, paid its mission special quota in full. Fine! Rev. F. J. McCoy is in his tenth year as pastor at Houma.

Dr. Briscoe Carter preached at the Felicity Methodist Church, this city, on Sunday morning, March 20, and Rev. J. L. Williams preached at the evening hour, the pastor, Rev. R. L. Armstrong, being ill that day.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, general evangelist, Greenville, Miss., is engaged for a series of evangelistic services in the following places: Forest, Miss.; Morton, Miss.; Muskogee, Okla., and Cullman, Ala. He is now at Forest.

More than thirty members were received into the Methodist church at Okolona, Miss., on profession of faith as a result of the revival meeting recently held, in which the preaching was done by Rev. George Tucker.

Mrs. M. L. Lott, mother of Mrs. J. W. Booth, wife of our pastor at Ponchatoula, La., suffered painful injuries in an automobile accident some time ago. We are glad to learn that she is doing as well as could be expected.

Rev. J. W. Booth, our pastor at Ponchatoula, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week. He gave a good account of his work, speaking especially of the progress that has been made by the Sunday school.

Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis expect to sail for Africa from New York on the Pennland, April 2. Mail addressed to them as follows will reach them: Dr. W. B. Lewis, M. E. C. M., Lusambo, Sankaru District, Congo Belge, Central Africa.

Rev. W. H. Lane is having a happy and successful pastorate at Sumrall, Miss. He serves a fine people, who co-operate with their pastor in all the work of the church. Brother Lane will be the host of the Hattiesburg District Conference, April 12-13.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, shows some slight improvement over last week, it is hoped. On last Tuesday, March 29, our father celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday. Though weak in body, he is strong in faith and hope.

We have received Number 1 of Volume 1 of "The Clinton Methodist," the monthly bulletin of the Methodist church at Clinton, Miss. It is an interesting paper. The cover page is adorned with a picture of Rev. J. Lyod Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District.

The Chamber of Commerce at Pascagoula, Miss., gave the delegates to the Seashore District Conference an automobile ride on Wednesday afternoon and finished up with a fishfry on the beach at 5 o'clock—at least it was to have done so according to announcement.

Dr. Henry W. Bromley, general evangelist, of Cynthiana, Ky., recently lectured in Princeton Theological Seminary on "Limits Within the Field of Scientific Scholarship." Dr. Bromley is now engaged in an evangelistic campaign in Trinity Methodist Church, Cincinnnati.

The Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Misss., is now issuing a monthly bulletin, "The Crawford Street Crusader," which is attractive in form and interesting in contents. The front page carries a picture of Rev. Thurston B. Price, who has been conducting a revival meeting at Crawford Street.

The New Orleans District Epworth League Institute held a successful session at Rayne Memorial Church last week. Rev. E. O. Harbin, of the General Office, and Rev. J. B. Grambling were the out-of-town speakers. His many friends will be glad to know that Brother Grambling's health is greatly improved.

A remarkable record is that of the business men's prayer meeting at Nettleton, Miss. It is four and a half years old, meets three times a week, and has not missed a meeting since its organization. Rev. G. C. Gregory is happy in his fifth year as pastor of the fine people of Nettleton.

An encouraging feature of the work at Lucedale, Miss., Rev. J. B. Cain, pastor, is the payment of a debt of nearly a thousand dollars on the church. A third of the quota for the Superannuate Endowment Fund will be in hand within a short time. Other departments of the work at Lucedale are in good shape.

The First Methodist Church, Minden, La., Rev. Leon I. McCain, pastor, has two mission specials – the support of Rev. A. M. Martin, St. Martinville, La., as home special, and the support of Rev. Auguste Mietes, Aerschot, Belgium, as foreign special. The avegare attendance during the school of missions at Minden was above 100.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, Mississippi Conference evangelist, after holding a successful meeting at Braxton, Miss., is with Rev. V. G. Clifford in meetings at Mendenhall and D'Lo, to continue through Easter Sunday. Brother Jones has an open date beginning May 15 that he would be glad to give some brother in Mississippi or Louisiana.

Mr. John Shuttleworth, who recently celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday, is said to be the oldest living member of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., having joined that church in 1874. He is the senior member of the official board, never misses a meeting, and attends all the sermons of the church, including the mid-week prayer meeting.

Rev. James W. Sells, the energetic and resourceful pastor of "The Church with the Amber Lights," Pascagoula, Miss., has prepared a form for reports of pastors to district conference that would greatly facilitate the work of the conferences if in general use. We are sure Brother Sells would gladly answer inquiries from presiding elders concerning the cost of furnishing these forms.

The second quarterly conference of the Chunky charge, Mississippi Conference, Rev. John W. Ramsey, pastor, was held at Suqualena on the third Sunday in March, with dinner on the ground. Brother Ramsey writes concerning it: "Rev. Robert Selby preached a very forceful sermon at 11 o'clock and presided with dignity and efficiency over the business session in the afternoon. Every church on the charge was represented, and all reported pastor's and presiding elder's salary paid in full to date. The presiding elder pronounced the conference the best yet held in the district."

The Commission on Inter-racial Co-operation, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., is offering to American high school students three prizes of $50, $30, and $20, respectively, for the best papers submitted on or before May 1, on the subject, "Negro Progress Since the Civil War." The only conditions of the contest are that papers must not exceed one thousand words in length and must be handed in or postmarked not later than May 1. Suggestions and source materials will be sent to any one interested on application to R. B. Eleazer, Educational Director, 409 Palmer Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. C. F. Smith sends us a clipping from the Houston Post of March 23 which gives an account of the death and funeral services of Judge T. W. Ford, who died in Houston, Tex., at the ripe age of 79. He was a grandson of John Ford, in whose home the first session of the Mississippi Conference was held. An editorial in the Post pays high tribute to him as a man and Christian gentleman. He was the oldest member in point of service of the official board of the First Methodist Church, Houston, and the funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Dr. A. Frank Smith. Judge Ford had a number of relatives in Mississippi, especially around Columbia.

Dr. W. H. Nelson, editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, is bringing out a book under the title, "Alluring Arizona." It will contain descriptions of the Grand Canyon, Painted Desert, Petrified Forests, Indian Picture Writing, Cliff Dwellings, etc. Dr. Nelson has spent thirteen years in the section of which he writes, and knows whereof he speaks. The price of the volume when issued will be $1 plus postage. Nearly a thousand advance orders have already been received. The publication date will be about July 1. We are sure many Louisiana friends of Dr. Nelson will order the book and read it with interest—he spent several years of his early manhood in New Orleans. His address is 307 Pacific Building, San Francisco, Calif.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, authorizes the Advocate to announce that Bishop Candler has appointed Rev. J. A. Bayles as pastor at Heidelberg, Miss., to take the place of Rev. W. P. George, who has been forced to take a rest on account of his eyes.

MISSION SPECIAL, GRENADA DISTRICT.

Abbeville, $18; Ashland, $29; Coffeeville, $18; Duck Hill, $46.10; Durant, $100; Grenada, $250; Holcomb, $78.75 (more to follow); Holly Springs, $453.65 (200 contributors); Lexington, $200; Oxford, $207 (125 contributors); Pickens, $185; Vaiden, $53.95; Water Valley, Main Street, $26.17. Some points will report in a week or two.

SPECIAL MEETINGS IN NEW ORLEANS.

The Methodists in New Orleans will unite in a campaign of special effort during the two weeks preceding Easter. Dr. T. D. Ellis, of the Board of Church Extension, will do the preaching at the union services at the First Methodist Church every morning at 11 o'clock, and gracious results from his ministry here are expected. In connection with these services, cottage prayer meetings will be held in the afternoon throughout the city. These prayer meetings are being organized, under the general direction of Mrs. Harper, by neighborhoods rather than by churches, and are designed to draw their attention and interest from any Methodists and their friends who may dwell in the particular section. In addition to the regular meeting to be held and the devotional service, those interested in the cottage prayer meeting are expected to supply names of prospective members and to do personal work.

Every evening during this season of revival, services will be held in all the Methodist churches in the city. At St. Mark's, the pastor, Rev. W. H. Giles, will be assisted by Rev. P. M. Caraway, of Winnfield, La. At Carrollton Avenue, the pastor, Rev. E. C. Gunn, will be assisted by Rev. Charles Lane, of Macon, Ga., who will do the preaching, and by Rev. A. J. Notestine, of Birmingham, Ala., who will have charge of the music. Several other pastors have expected to have the assistance of a brother pastor or an evangelist, but, at this time, their arrangements have not been completed. A number of the pastors will do the preaching in their several churches, including Rev. J. B. Peters at First Church, Rev. A. M. Serex at Second Church, Rev. B. C. Taylor at Louisiana Avenue, and Rev. R. L. Armstrong at Felicity, so that for two weeks services will be held in all our churches in the city. We feel that gracious results should come from these special meeetings.

A REAL GIFT TO THE ORPHANS' HOME.

Dear Dr. Carley: It looks as if the Methodist Orphans' Home at Jackson, Miss., makes a strong apppeal. This letter gladened my heart:

"Dear Brother Brown: I am an old maid, 84 years old. I have no real estate, I have no income, I made four dollars on my linen crochet. I gave one dollar to the protracted meeting sermons, one dollar to the old preachers, and am sending you this dollar for the Orphans' Home. I don't know yet what I will do with the other dollar. Please pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end.

"Yours truly,"

When I read that letter I thought what an easy task would be ours if men and women all over the North Mississipi Conference who had means only had the spirit of this good sister in Israel. I trust that this letter may inspire some one to send me $100 to match this one dollar from this saint.

S. A. BROWN,
Commissioner for North Mississippi Conference.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The district conference for this district will meet at Oxford, May 4, at 3 p. m. The opening sermon will be at 7:30 p. m., Wednesday, and will be delivered by Rev. J. H. Holder, our pastor at Grenada. All necessary committees will be announced a little later. The conference will likely be able to adjourn at noon Friday. Let all the pastors send in names of delegates to the Oxford pastor, Rev. Shed Hill Caffey, and to the presiding elder, that proper time may be given for all preliminaries. We are expecting a great conference. Let earnest prayers be made for God's blessings upon our meeting.

IF THIS WERE A CHRISTIAN WORLD.

By Rev. W. T. Bazzel.

If this were really a Christian world, what sort of world would it be? As I read Snowden's exposition of the Sunday school lesson for March 13, on "Making the World Christian," I paused and closed my eyes and tried to form a mental picture of this world made Christian. The vision overwhelmed me, and its glory was beyond my power to express; yet a few thrilling facts stand out, distinct and clear.

First, any one can see that a Christian world would be a warless world. Harmony, good will, brotherly love and co-operation would govern all human relationships. The insensate brutality and hell-born horror of bloody strife, wrecked homes and desolate lands would soon become only a revolting memory of the benighted past.

Not merely because Christian ethics would teach us to scrap navies and armaments—for big guns and battleships are not the cause of war; they are simply the expensive and deadly tools for executing the will of men to kill and destroy, and men will continue to devise more deadly weapons, and to squander billions of hard-earned wealth preparing for wholesale murder until selfishness, distrust and suspicion be removed from the minds and hearts of men.

No power in all this universe except that of the Living Christ can ever reconstruct human nature so as to eliminate suspicion, distrust and selfishness. Education and moral suasion can never do it; treaties, leagues and peace courts cannot accomplish it; every human-devised plan is doomed to failure. Only Jesus Christ can remove the cause of war. But he can and he will, when his Spirit dominates the lives of men! Then, indeed, we "shall beat our swords into plowshares and our spears into pruning-hooks!"

Second, a Christian world would be—or soon become—a povertyless world. Not that everybody would "get rich," but that there would be sufficient for all, and a Christian world would quickly devise a system that would abolish stark suffering, grinding poverty. The flood of wealth and vast store of energy now wasted on wars and preparations for war would be turned into productive and constructive uses. The money now spent to maintain courts, police, prisons and reformatories could be used for pleasanter purposes. Our army of criminals, our police officers and our soldiers would all be released to add their strength to the uplift of humanity. All these forces united in a Christian spirit of brotherly love would insure the world against poverty forevermore!

The resources of this world are sufficient to supply all the material needs of many times its present population; and under a genuine Christian system these natural resources would be exploited not for private profit, but for public welfare. Can any one doubt the foregoing statement? If so, he must be a stranger to the principles of Christianity, or else unfamiliar with the bounties of nature. Not that Communism—or even Socialism, as we use and understand these terms—would be adopted. In fact, I do not know how the details of production and distribution would be worked out. No one knows. But I cannot conceive of a Christian world in which 10 per cent of the people own 90 per cent of the wealth; in which a favored few luxuriate in boundless wealth while toiling masses slave in sweat and blood to serve them! "Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them and brought the prices of the things that were sold and laid them down at the Apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need." Acts 4:34, 35.

Then if this were a Christian world, it would be a healthy world. All diseases caused by vice and ignorance would cease. We would provide wholesome and sanitary living conditions for all. Worry and fear (ah, what health-wreckers these be) would be forgottten! All communicable and preventable diseases would speedily be conquered. Indeed, it seems probable that a Christian world might find a way to prevent all diseases. Mortal beings would grow old and die eventually, of course. But the span of human life would be enormously lengthened; all our days would be filled with health and comfort instead of pain and anguish, and old age and death would come along naturally—perhaps painlessly.

And Oh, what a happy world this would be, if it were but a Christian world! No war, or strife; no hate, crime, superstition, distrust or suspicion; no pestilence or famine! No fear, no worry, no forebodings and no dread! This is not a description of Heaven. I am talking about this world of ours as it most certrainly would be if it were truly Christian! And some day this will be a Christian world. God did not create this wonderful world and lavish upon it such wonders of his creative power merely for the purpose of seeing it become a sideshow to hell or an eternal cesspool of sin and sorrow! No! This earth shall some day be redeemed! Every scar of sin shall be healed, every mark of iniquity erased and every footprint of the devil shall be washed away from the sands of time!

Long have the ages been,
And fierce has been the fight;
Yet still the hordes of sin
Engage against the right.

But Christ lives not in vain,
His might shall yet prevail;
Sin's power shall be slain—
Our Leader cannot fail!

This earth shall be redeemed;
Let songs of triumph roll!
Our Savior's love shall shine
As light, from pole to pole!

Isaiah must have had a vision of a redeemed earth when he said: "For ye shall go out with joy and be led forth with peace; the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

On Feb. 19, 1927, at about 4 p. m., the Death Angel swept over the home of Brother Powel H. Bell and summoned the soul of his beloved wife, SISTER SALLIE BELL, to "come up higher" and receive the reward of eternal glory that awaits the Christian life that was hers here on earth. Sister Bell had been in ill health for several years, although the end came suddenly. How sad it is to see our loved ones step from our midst into the Great Beyond; but amidst all we have a comforting feeling in our hearts when we have an unshaken faith and confidence that our friends and loved ones have gone to be with God in a home where sickness, sorrow, pain, tears or death never come to disturb an unbroken happiness. Sister Bell before her marriage was Miss Sallie Brooks, who was born and reared in Attala County, Miss. The date of her birth was Oct. 19, 1865. She joined the Baptist church at Ebenezer when only a girl, and remained a member of said church until the date of her death. She was married to Brother Bell on Dec. 22, 1906. Sister Bell is survived by her husband, his son and daughter, and one brother, Milton Brooks, of Ethel, and one sister, Miss Mary Brooks, of East Lake, Ala., and several nieces and nephews to mourn her going away. While we mourn the loss of Sister Bell, let us bear in mind that our kind Heavenly Father has given his precious Son, by whose helping hand we all may so live that when we, too, have been summoned from this life to meet him face to face, we can be with all our Christian loved ones to separate never more. May God's richest blessings rest on all who mourn her death; and while her body sleeps at Stonewall cemetery, where it was laid to rest, may we all expect to rise with her and be forever with Christ our Lord.

SARAH JANE RICE.

Sarah Jane Rice was born April 5, 1841, near Dead Lake, Miss., and died at Beauvoir, the Confederate Soldiers' Home Hospital, near Biloxi, Jan. 17, 1927. Her life was therefore 85 years, 9 months and 12 days. She was married to Jesse Rice on Feb. 22, 1866, who left her and went Home Feb. 26, 1905. Since his death Aunt Sal, as we called her, lived with her relatives and friends. She had been a cripple for more than twenty years, and could not walk without crutches. She was laid to rest in the Fletcher cemetery, about two hundred yards from where her mother lived when she was born. She had been a member of the Red Hill Methodist church for seventy years or more, and had told the writer that she was ready to go. While her husband lived their home was always open to the preachers and was a gathering place for young people. They always went to visit the sick and to help those in need.

Her cousin and friend,

SARAH B. CAIN.

MRS. J. S. ROLFE.

Mrs. J. S. Rolfe, nee Gertrude Cartey Smith Cooper, was born in Oak Ridge, La., Nov. 18, 1868. She was married to Mr. Joe Sam Rolfe, Nov. 27, 1889. She died shortly after midnight, Sunday morning, Feb. 27, 1927. Mrs. Rolfe was the mother of nine children, six of whom are living, and who, with her inconsolate husband, mourn her loss. Sister Rolfe joined the Methodist church early in her girlhood, and all her life through was a consistent, devoted member of the church. She stood for the higher ideals of life and held true to all the finer traditions of the "Old South." She was a woman of remarkable health, fine physical strength, and her bereaved husband stated that she had never been sick a day since they had been married. I have seldom seen her equal as a mother. Her devotion to her children, and their love for her, was of the deepest kind. No task was too heavy, no sacrifice too great, no self-denial too exacting, if it meant pleasure, comfort and the best welfare of her children. There was nothing that ever took the place of her children in her life—no social function, no form of amusement or entertainment ever interrupted the life of beautiful service and devotion she gave to her home, and the inmates in it. Yet her interest extended to all the concerns of life, and she always maintained a vital interest in the community and church life. She was equally devoted as a wife. Through all the years of their married life there ever abided that fine quality that makes the ideal marital relation the most important factor in our social order—genuine comradeship. To her, her husband was more than a mere husband; he was a comrade in all the affairs of life. In her rare judgment, keen wisdom, fine sense of justice and right, she was ever the unerring mentor and guide to her husband and loved ones. She was a great home-builder. Scarcely have we ever seen just such a home. Love reigned supreme, devotion and loyalty to each other and to all the sacred ties of home life were ever apparent. To the visitor in the home there was the joyous welcome, cordial fellowship that removed all restraint, and made the visit joyous and happy. And what a home it was! Comfort, ease, joy, frankness, devotion, love, fellowship, companionship — these were ever the qualities that made her home a haven of joy to the visitor, and a heaven on earth to the inmate. Quiet, dignified, unpretentious, yet as gentle and unassuming as an angel, she moved among her own, and inspired the lives of those she blessed with her presence. Vigorous and robust in health, she was never associated with death. Then when after bidding her children a fond goodnight, and lingering in that finer fellowship with her loved companion until past the midnight hour, almost without a word of warning, she slipped away to the great beyond. She was sick but a few moments and died almost without a struggle, or a moment's suffering. Assisted by her pastor, Rev. S. W. B. Colvin, and Rev. D. C. Barr, we laid her body to rest under the shade of the stately oaks in the Oak Ridge cemetery. God has need of mothers and home-builders in Heaven, and surely he could have chosen no finer than this noble mother, this devoted wife, this loyal friend, this wonderful woman who has gone to her reward. To the heart-broken family, the grief-stricken husband we point them to God, who doeth all things well, and pray that the comfort they so deeply need may be theirs.

GOOD REVIVAL AT BRAXTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just had Rev. Claude P. Jones, our Conference evangelist, in a revival at Braxton, Miss. This was the second time he has conducted our revival, he having been there five months ago, just before Conference. Though there was a good interest and a gracious revival last fall, even better interest was shown and more substantial work accomplished in the series just closed. And Claude Jones is in demand at Bratxon for a third engagement.

He preaches a sound, Scriptural gospel, which he does not cheapen, nor do his methods cheapen evangelism and leave a bad impression of his ministry when he has left the community. Because of his faith in God and his love for God and man, he gets visible results and he is satisfactory. May God continue to bless his ministry!

May I say that it is a delightful privilege to serve the Braxton church and community? They suffered from a disastrous tornado six years ago, which destroyed their homes, churches and school, but they have rebuilt their town, and our church building there is a credit to the town and to the church. The Braxton Methodists are a forward-looking and forward-going group of people. I love them.

Recently you referred to the fact that you had served Braxton in your early ministry, and I want to tell you that I have heard many expressions of appreciation of you from those you served in those days.

With best wishes for the Advocate and for the progress of our great church, I am,

Yours in Christ,

A MINISTRY TO WHICH GOD CALLS WOMAN.

To celebrate her birthday our National Hospital Week is an American tribute to Florence Nightingale. As surely as God called this honored woman, he is to-day calling Methodist girls to the ministry of the sick.

In opening our own Hospital and Training School at Montgomery, Ala., Dr. Frank Brandon thought he could find rooom for forty student nurses. High school graduation, attested moral character, and sound health were required. He asked for forty volunteers. More than two hundred pleaded to be accepted. Many of them had felt the call from childhood. What is true of Alabama is probably true of every Southern State. God is calling our girls.

Though we have always maintained schools in which to train boys called to preach, heretofore we have had no places to train girls called to minister to the sick. Now we have six Training Schools in connection with our hospitals. These schools have already enrolled 1,375 students, have graduated 605, and every day employ 363 students and 237 graduate nurses. Under the General Hospital Board the work of hospitalizing the South is progressing finely. It is now definitely in the program of Southern Methodism. The whole church has part in it through the Golden Cross Society.

The Golden Cross enrollment is annual. The time fixed by the General Conference is National Hospital Week, May 8-15, embracing the second and third Sundays.

The law of the church makes every Woman's Missionary Auxiliary a recruiting station and every Society president a recruiting officer, and we are sure that every Society in our Conference will function in this work. The Golden Cross button on her coat will show where every woman's heart is.

FOR HIS SON'S SAKE.

D. L. Moody used to tell a story of a busy judge who, during war time, was approached by a soldier who presented a letter. Before reading this the judge seemed disinclined to pay much attention to his visitor, as he was absorbed in an important legal case. Upon opening the letter his whole attitude changed. It was from his own son. He read: "Dear Father: The bearer is a soldier discharged from the hospital, and he is going home to die; assist him in any way you can for Charlie's sake." All the tender emotions of the judge's soul were laid open. He said to a friend afterwards, "I took that soldier to my heart for Charlie's sake; I clothed him in Charlie's clothes; I let him sleep in Charlie's bed, and supplied him with every comfort for Charlie's sake." Moody added, "God will never turn away any needy one, for his dear Son's sake."—A. C. Crews, in Westminster Teacher.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON HOME BASE AND FINANCE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Recommendations.

1. That all districts shall get themselves well developed in district and zone work, so they can make best use of rural worker when she can get to each zone.

2. That every officer and every member of auxiliary give all assistance and co-operation possible to Superintendent of Rural Work and rural worker in whatever district she may be working, and that they may offer to furnish transportation whenever possible.

3. That transfer cards be provided for the use of members of the Missionary Society moving from one church to another, and where the president of the auxiliary knows to what church the member is to move, that she have a letter written to the president of that auxiliary.

4. That in circuits where Missionary Auxiliaries would be weak, we follow the plan of Brother Bonnecarrere, of the Gonzales circuit, Baton Rouge District, and have in each charge a Circle of the circuit Missionary Society.

5. That each zone have a Superintendent of Gibson Auxiliary who can visit the shut-ins and isolated women, carry them literature and collect their offerings every quarter.

6. That the District Secretary keep on a probation list all new auxiliaries until they are strong enough to report regularly, having all members pay their month's dues before reporting; also all auxiliaries dropped after not paying anything for two quarters, but held until the District Secretary is sure they cannot function.

7. That all auxiliaries and zones take active part in carrying out the plans of the Council for the jubilee, by cultivating the Home Base, these plans to be fostered by the Conference vice president for Home Cultivation of auxiliaries and individuals.

8. That all auxiliary officers study the new By-Laws of the Council relative to Junior Work, and try to carry out the plans by finding the proper women for leaders and by gaining the co-operation of preachers and Epworth League officers.

9. That Extension Committees be appointed in every church according to item 4 in Adult Constitution, relative to grouping entire membership of church so that every member may be reached and asked to take part in missionary work of the church.

10. That all Gleaners Auxiliaries consider becoming Gleaner Circles of the regular Missionary Auxiliary so that all women's missionary work in the church will be a complete whole. Each Circle having its own leader and activities will be able to use its own initiative, but will be able to cooperate in a more practical way with other groups who are also working for the coming of the kingdom.

11. That special effort be made to put the Missionary Voice in every home as the organ of the Board of Missions General Department and Woman's Department.

12. That the Day of Prayer for Missions observed by all denominations in every country of the world be observed by our women as far as possible.

Side Dress Tomatoes with Nitrate of Soda at Blossom Time

TOMATOES have such an important place in every garden that they should receive the care to which they are entitled.

They should not be fertilized too richly when set out as this will make spindly and unthrifty plants.

But when the first blossoms appear give them a liberal side dressing of Nitrate of Soda.

Keep pinching out suckers and excessive foliage to throw the trength into the fruit and let the light in. This hastens ripening.

Eggplants and Peppers should be side dressed with Nitrate of Soda just before blossoms appear.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Brookhaven District Standard Training School closed Friday, March 18, with ninety-eight credits awarded, and two planning to take office credits. The largest number of awards ever given in the Conference is ninety-nine, so that the Brookhaven District can be proud of the fine School from that standpoint as well as from the great benefit derived from it.

The Jackson District Training School closed at Galloway Memorial Church in Jackson, Friday, March 25, with seventy-three awards, two duplicate credits, and a possibility of several office credits.

The Meridian District School will be held this week in Central Church, Meridian.

* * *

Mr. H. T. Newell, Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board, will represent the Board at the district conferences this year. Those who know Mr. Newell and know the excellent work he does for the Sunday School Board, will be glad to hear of this plan.

All attention is now being turned toward the Conference-wide meeting to be held in Capitol Street Church in Jackson, April 5 and 6. Every department of every school should be represented at this meeting. The tentative program will be announced in next week's Advocate. An effort is being made to feature every department of the Sunday school work. If, after reading the program suggested, you feel that some department has been neglected, make your suggestion and an effort will be made to meet that need. Pray for the meeting, come, and urge other workers in your school to do the same.

Conference Superintendent Sunday Schools.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

"The Sunday School Work Moves Forward on the Ability for Self-sacrifice." This is our slogan for the Monroe Conference. It may not be a popular one, but there is an abundance of truth in it.

* * *

On March 23 I went to Winnfield to see the President of our State-wide conference, Dr. F. C. Wren. I found him in fine trim for the conference. His wide-awake pastor, Rev. P. M. Caraway, was invited to "sit in" at this interview. Our president said that every one he had written to about the conference replied that he already knew about it. They had a great day in Winnfield last Sunday, with 229 at Sunday school, the highest record in the history of the school. There were fifty-four present in the Adult Bible class. Mr. Wren is superintendent of the Sunday school. The pastor told me that he had an attendance of eighty at prayer meeting. Everybody remembers the way Winnfield Methodism entertained the State-wide conference two years ago.

In a recent letter from Dr. Franklin N. Parker, he says: "I have just returned from a Standard Training School at Little Rock, where I had a most delightful time delivering the devotional and inspirational addresses and enjoying the fellowship of such fine people as Dr. Tom Carter, Dr. Hicks, of Southern Methodist University, Dr. Rice, and others."

In a recent letter from Brother Ledbetter, the new pastor at De Ridder, he tells us that he and his family have been well received by the good people there, and that he expected to have two or more delegates at the State-wide conference. We are glad to hear that Brother Ledbetter is nicely located, and feel sure of his success in this new field.

President Raulins, of Mansfield College, is doing a splendid bit of teacher training in the way of an extension class in connection with the college. He recently taught a class on the "Principles of Teaching," and the following received credits: W. C. Childress, Mrs. John B. Williams, Mrs. A. L. Carter, Mrs. F. H. Bradshaw, Mrs. C. R. Robertson, Mrs. H. Wailstock, Mrs. F. N. Bradshaw, Miss Jennie North, Mrs. John W. Lowery, Mrs. Asa Moore, Mrs. John Griffith, Mrs. D. B. Raulins, and Miss Ruxton. This is indeed a fine showing, and an excellent work.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Baker, formerly of Louisiana, will be glad to learn he and his good wife are pleased with their new home, Orlando, Fla. I hear good things about the Sunday school work they are doing in their local school. Mr. Baker has a fine class of boys. His many Louisiana friends send congratulations.

C. D. ATKINSON,

NORTH MISSISSIPPI EXTENSION SECRETARY BUSY.

Dear Brother Carley: The writer is getting magnificent co-operation and splendid team work from the preachers and superintendents in our extension work. Since my last letter, institutes have been held at the following places: Salem, Chester circuit, and Pickens. Will hold an institute at the following places in April: Ebenezer, Pleasant Hill, and Courtland.

From the 6th to the 11th of March we were with Brother H. H. Wallace at Calhoun City in a training class. Twenty-six workers were enrolled and ten made credits. During the week a religious census was taken and tabulated. The result of the survey was an eye-opener to all the Sunday school workers and revealed clearly the obligations and responsibilities of the school. Friday night, at the close of the school, Brother Wallace, after charting result of the survey, discussed same with his people and enlisted their support and co-operation in the accomplishment of five definite objectives for the year 1927, viz.: (1) forty new church members on profession of faith; (2) twenty-five new members by letter; (3) twenty-five per cent increase in Sunday school enrollment; (4) fifty per cent officers and teachers reading another book; (5) fifty per cent of workers attending Grenada Standard Training School, June 6-11. Wallace is delightful to work with. His people are loyal and devoted to him. Watch Calhoun City.

In addition to the above work, I have visited numbers of schools in an advisory capacity, checking up same and making suggestions for improvements when possible. There is a healthy disposition on the part of most of our preachers to have standard schools. We hope to report many standard schools of the three types by Conference.

In addition to speaking and acquainting our schools with the program of our Conference Sunday School Board, I have had the pleasure of preaching and speaking in auditoriums of our public schools. Thank God for our Christian public school teachers! A set of "Worthies" they are.

Per Brother Lewis' last report, the following schools are observing Missionary Day and making remittance for the support of our home and foreign missionary activities: Aberdeen District—Amory, Aberdeen, Greenbrier, La Grange, Fulton, Houston, Houlka, Mathiston, Shiloh, Okolona, Prairie, Shannon, Brewer, Tupelo and Verona; Columbus District—Ackerman, Weir, Brooksville, Ethel, Shady Grove, Kosciusko, Macon, X Pairie, Starkville, West Point; Corinth District—Booneville, Jacinto, Burnsville, Blue Mountain, Iuka, Mooreville, Rienzi, and Ripley; Greenville District—Arcola, Boyle, Bobo, Birdie, Coahoma, Jonestown, Clarksdale, Alligator, Dundee, Friars Point, Lula, Merigold, Maud, Murphy, Robinsonville, Shaw, Sherard, Tunica, Winterville and Greenville; Greenwood District—Black Hawk, Carrollton, North Carrollton, Drew, Itta Bena, Moorehead, Ruleville, Sidon, Cruger, Sunflower, Tchula; Grenada District—Abbeville, Ashland, Coffeeville, Duck Hill, Ebenezer, Grenada, Holcmob, Holly Springs, Lexington, Pickens, Goodman, Sallis, Vaiden and West; Sardis District—Arkabutla, Batesville, Coldwater, Como, Red Banks, Tillitobia, Oakland and Sardis.

We trust we have not omitted any school that is observing Missionary Day. We feel assured, as soon as all of our pastors and superintendents realize what the Dual Special means in the building of God's kingdom at home and abroad, that 100 per cent of our schools will take part in the vital program. In the Florida Conference during the last six moths of 1926, the Sunday schools contributed to Dual Extension $8,773.44. What if all our schools were to adopt the Dual Special? We, too, would make the same fine showing. Write us and let us send you material for observing Missionary Day. Let us all be "regulars" and work loyally the programs of our beloved church.

E. G. MOHLER,
Extension Rural Secretary.

Epworth League

NEWS FROM GULFPORT LEAGUE.

Optimism prevails among the Gulfport Leaguers as each member continues to strive to have this chapter listed among the Standard Leagues. While each department is functioning efficiently, the third department is doing exceptionally good work by including in its program of activity a Book-a-Month club and a tennis court.

The tennis court is being built by members of the League who are able to devote an hour of their time each afternoon. Work has been in progress for several days, and with the erection of the backstops expected in the near future the court will soon be ready for playing. Twenty-two Leaguers signed as members of the Book-a-Month club, one of the cultural activities of the third department, and a large percentage of them are doing the prescribed reading.

As a move to afford an opportunity for more members to particpate in the devotional programs, the first department recently effected an innovation by having two leaders for the same night, each of the leaders taking charge of half of the program. The venture was successful and will probably be used again.

A mission study class is to be begun next Sunday night as one of the salient features of the fourth department activity. The group discussion method of instruction will be used, one member of the class being selected to lead the discussion each evening. Six weeks will be required to complete the course, the class meeting one hour before regular League service each Sunday evening.

The second department work is progressing nicely and the Leaguers have recently become associated with a group which visits the city jail on Wednesday evenings for the purpose of songs and prayers. Interesting talks are made, and frequently the prisoners participate in the discussions.

The treasurer reports that his coffers are pretty well filled, and the budget made out at the first of the League year has almost been paid. Financing is effected through the pledging system.

Taken as a whole, conditions are good with the Gulfport League, and the members are looking forward to the close of the year with the assurance that they will have an excellent report to make.

PICAYUNE JUNIORS GIVE PROGRAM FOR PARENTS.

On Sunday evening, March 13, the Junior Epworth League of the Picayune Methodist Church gave a very interesting program for their parents. Their superintendent, Miss Coleta Arren, was in charge of this program and read the Scripture. This was followed by several songs by the Junior Leaguers. The chief feature was a pageant, in which a number of the Juniors played excellent parts. The subject of the pageant was "Joseph and His Brothers." We think that this was a splendid portrayal of one of our great Biblical characters. The pageant was followed by several readings and a special song. Then Mr. D. C. Camp, president of the Senior League, made a talk on "What the Junior League Means to the Church."

After this splendid program, the Juniors served a plate lunch, consisting of sandwiches, cake and hot chocolate, to their parents, and all enjoyed a social hour. The parents were all agreeably surprised at the splendid program the Juniors, with the able assistance of their leader, could render.

Mr. Lamont Rowland Addresses the Picayune Senior League.

On Sunday evening, March 13, the First Department Superintendent had arranged a very interesting as well as instructive program for the Senior Leaguers. The chief feaeture was an address by one of the most prominent men of Picayune, Mr. Lamont Rowland. Mr. Rowland took for his subject, "Christ in Business." As this subject was of vital interest to each one present, all listened very attentively, and at the end of his talk all agreed that they would enjoy hearing it again. Mr. Rowland is such a consistent Christian, and such a forceful speaker, and we believe that each Leaguer present received an inspiration from his address. We wish that every Leaguer in the Conference could hear Mr. Rowland.

EPWORTH LEAGUE CALENDAR FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Recently our Dean, Brother W. D. Hawkins, has sent out an Epworth League Calendar. To our knowledge, this is the first of its kind in our Conference, and we think it is fine. This calendar has the month on one side of the paper and on the other the name of the day that we must remember, somewhat as follows:

1927 Calendar for Epworth Leaegues, Mississippi Conference.

Jan. 2 .....Quiet Hour Covenant
Jan. 9 .....Epworth Era Night
March 27 .....Anniversary Day
March .....District Institute
This League to be represented.
Week Before Easter.Fellowship Week
April .....Election of Officers
June 6 to 10,
Assembly Whitworth College and Brookhaven.
This League to be represented.
Sept. 4 .....Rally Day
Oct. 23 .....Mission Study Rally
Every month,
Pay your African Special pledge.
Send to L. F. Alford, treasurer, Raleigh, Miss.
Each month,
Send your dollar to Back Bay Nursery.

The editor wishes to call the attention of every chapter to two points on this calendar. These are Anniversary Day and the District Institute. As soon as you have given your Anniversary program, please send her an account of the program and the amount of money received. As soon as your District Institute is over, report it to the editor in order that it may appear in this column. Other Leaguers are interested in the success of your Institute. If you have not sent in the date of your Institute, District Secretary, do so at once.

Golden Cross Enrollment.

Leaguers of Mississippi, do not forget the Golden Cross enrollment. If you have been reading this page, you have a full explanation of this worthy cause. We quote from a former issue of the Advocate: "The law of the church makes every Epworth League a recruiting station, and every Epworth League president a recruiting officer of the Golden Cross enrollment. The enrollment period is May 8-15. During this period every League president will see that his chapter enrolls one hundred per cent, and every League member will be proud to wear the Golden Cross button."

EVER-READY LEAGUE UNION MEETING.

The March meeting of the Every-Ready Union, Minden District, was held at Bethel church, Sunday, March 13. The Bethel president had charge of the devotional, and presented the folllowing program: Song, Bethel choir; Scripture reading, Oneita Cox, Bethel; prayer, Mr. Cassels, Bethel; offering; oration, "Know Your Methodist Heroes," Miss Lavon Hofmeister, Minden; Junior quartette, Springhill; reading, Miss Christian, Sibley; vocal duet, Misses Laurence, Haughton; vocal duet, Messrs. Paul and Leslie Cassels, Bethel.

At the conclusion of the devotional, a five-minute intermission was given, followed by the business, at which time the contest for the organization was brought to a close, the Sibley League proving to be winner, having organized three Leagues. The new Leagues are Pine Grove, Mims, Yellow Pine. The banner is to be awarded the victor at the next meeting.

Other matters of importance were brought up, and the meeting adjourned to meet again Sunday, April 10, at Springhill. The Bethel Leaguers served very nice refreshments to the large number present.

THE WESLEY BROTHERHOOD AT IUKA, MISS.

Our Brotherhood at Iuka, Miss., is gaining strength daily and is winning a large place in the loyalty and affections of our community. Men who formerly opposed the Brotherhood idea and believed that it would fail in our local church are now its strongest supporters.

A helpful and delightful meeting was held on March 21, when some four hundred people gathered at the Methodist church to hear Congressman T. Webber Wilson, of Laurel, Miss., speak on "Some Forces That Menace Our American Freedom."

There was not a dull moment during the entire lecture. His address was a sample of that oratory that made the South famous, for his great speech throbbed with power, scintillated with light, and rang like a trumpet's call to arms.

He told us of those sinister and un-American forces that are secretly undermining and destroying the moral fabric of our national life.

Much of the success of our local Brotherhood is due to our hustling pastor, Rev. G. C. Schwartz, and our efficient president, Mr. R. A. McRee.

Mr. J. R. Pepper has been invited to address the Brotherhood at our next meeting, and other speakers follow.

Brethren, the Wesley Brotherhood is the greatest men's organization on earth—why not organize one in your church?

How to Gain 5 Pounds in 30 Days

If You Don't Do It, Get Your Money Back.

Ask any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. They cost but little, are sugar coated and as pleasant to take as candy.

It's the new pleasant way to take nasty cod liver oil and will not upset the most delicate stomach.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good, healthy, solid flesh, and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 pounds or more in 30 days. As a matter of fact, all druggists are authorized to return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

One thin woman gained 15 pounds in six weeks.

Be sure and insist on McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—60 Tablets—60 cents.

A REAL METHODIST REVIVAL.

We just closed one of the best revivals I ever had the pleasure of attending.

Rev. Charles Assaf came to me the first Sunday in March and stayed through the third Sunday, at Epworth, our mission church on Back Bay of Biloxi, and we had what I would term a real Methodist revival. Thirty-three united with the church, twenty-three of them by profession of faith. Four infants were baptized, and many came to the altar for prayer and reconsecration. Of course it is not for us to say how many conversions we have in a revival, and I would not attempt to do so, but I do feel that we had several remarkable conversions, from the prayers and testimonies given by them.

I have never seen an evangelist put himself into a revival as Brother Assaf did. He was ready any time from 6 o'clock to 12 p. m. to go and help some one to find Jesus.

We made 102 visits during the meeting, and held services in nearly all the homes.

The pastor received a great blessing from the meeting, and I feel sure that any pastor that will have him for a revival will surely receive a blessing by the association of such a godly man, and I am sure his church would be blessed.

Brother Assaf will be with me in a two weeks' revival at Wesley Memorial Church of Biloxi, beginning the first Sunday in April, and I ask the prayers of the brethren in this meeting.

H. L. DANIELS.

A FINE MEETING AT OKOLONA, MISS.

Okolona is now in the best and one of the most soul-thrilling meetings that we have ever attended. It began March 6, to continue, the Lord willing, through March 27. Preaching is being done by Rev. George Tucker, an ex-railroad man, now residing at 2014 Nelson Avenue, Memphis, Tenn. It is truly a city-wide revival, as the talks and preaching are done at all hours of the day until 10 p. m., and at places uniformly convenient to all, including time set aside for the colored people. He brings messages of conviction and exhortation, respectively, to sinner and saint.

We have never heard the denunciations of sin made more impressive, or the incentive to a better Christian life made more appealing than those made by Brother Tucker, with the aid of his gifted singer, Mr. R. E. Turberville.

Brother Tucker's own experiences as rescued through G d's power from a life of deepest sin, ought to make the vilest of us take courage, remembering that "though our sins are scarlet, he will make them white as snow."

M. B. D.

FROM GREENWOOD, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: Some report of our work might not be amiss. Our Sunday schools at Greenwood and Bethany are growing. I am sure that the Greenwood school has had more than a ten per cent increase since I came on the work, and we have added about ten per cent to the church membership here. We have organized two Leagues, and one Junior Missionary Society.

My meeting at Greenwood is to be held the first of May, with Brother Shaw to do the preaching, and the one at Bethany for the first of August, with Brother Kelly to lead us. We are going to use a tent; and are working and praying that it may be a really great ingathering.

We are planning to add eight class rooms to the Bethany church building. I have visited almost every home in all this territory, and am going again. The people have treated us royally—all the poundings and hearty welcome, etc.—and so on to the present. They even keep on complimenting the sermons.

We have raised a little more than our proportion on the offering for missions, and have some gleaning to do yet.

I attended the greatest meeting in Southern Methodism some. Wife was in attendance all the time, so I looked after the children, the chickens, and the cow, and the incubator, visited several sick people, brought all the correspondence and arrangements for our meeting to a successful finish, and dropped in on the Council meeting at my leisure. I think that I shall take a day off and go hawk hunting this week.

Fraternally,

W. E. AKIN.

LOVE.

By Mrs. Will Marshall.

"Love lightens every burden and sweetens every care;
However dear the world may be, love makes it seem more fair.
The wealth of love hath ne'er been told in any song or story;
Love leads into the mountain top, the mountain tops of glory."

Love is the most divine thing in the world. The law of human love is the law that heart answers to heart. Love is something that cannot be substituted or counterfeited.

The greatest manifestation we have of love is God's gift to the world of his only begotten Son, Jesus. The next greatest proof or manifestation of love was Jesus' sacrificial life and death on the cross for the redemption of the world.

And next to those are the mother's love. It is something that cannot be surpassed or even equaled in earthly love. Think of a mother's devotion for her children. Most any mother would give her life for that of her child. Just think of the sacrificial service mothers lavish on their family and homes, and nothing but love could prompt them to do it.

"And when life's race is over,
And your name's upon God's scroll,
'Twill be in mother's writing
In letters made of gold."

Most parental love is so great and so lasting and so forgiving that it does not change very much with the passing of the centuries.

Love is the standard of Christian living. We are even commanded to love our enemies, and if we sincerely practice the law of Christian love we may expect great rewards.

The example of our Heavenly Father is held up by Christ for our imitation. It is his love for us that makes him merciful and forgiving.

Our practice of the law of love must be without reservation, and he who would serve God must begin by loving him. A grateful loving heart is the mainspring of obedience, and obedience is the beginning of love. If we love God, we must realize that he loves us, too. For he so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life.

The love of God and man is the sum and essence of all sincere religion. The greatest commandment is to love the Lord thy God, and the next is like unto it, to love thy neighbor as thyself. We are very liable to become like those with whom we habitually associate, especially if we admire and love them.

RED EYES Dickey's old reliable eye water cools and heals red eyes. Strengthens weak eyes—relieves sore eyes, helps tired eyes. Relieves sore eyes from gnats and dust. In genuine red folding box at stores or by mail 25c. Over 50 years old. DICKEY DRUG CO., BRISTOL, VA.

That, too, become thou must—
"Whate'er thou lovest, man,
God-like if thou love God,
Dust if thou lovest dust."

Paul said, "for me to live is Christ," and of course he could not have said that had he not loved the Christ.

Now if we live the right kind of Christian lives and follow the Christ as we should, we must learn to love. For love is the dynamic of service, and service is the revelation of love. Then let us love one another, for love is of God.

In our dealings with our fellowmen we are not to judge harshly or condemn unjustly. Justice must be tempered with mercy, and mercy with love.

"What held my Savior to the cross—
The cruel nails?
Nay! Nay! 'Twas love, prevailing love,
That never fails."

Batesville, Miss.

Mother!

Clean Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love the pleasant taste of "California Fig Syrup." A teaspoonful never fails to clean the liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

CROUP AND CHILDREN'S COLDS QUICKLY RELIEVED

Since 1802 or for 124 years mothers have known that Roche's Embrocation is the quickest relief for whooping cough, croup and colds. Just rub it on the child's chest. Phlegm is loosened, congestion broken. Then relief comes.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

WOMAN CONQUERS FEARS

Husband Delighted and Home Happier

St. Paul, Minn.—"Here is a little advice I would like to have you put in the papers," Mrs. Jack Lorberter of 704 Dellwood Place wrote to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company. "If young women want to keep their health and strength for the next thirty years of their lives, it is best to start in right now and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have tried the Compound myself and received fine results from its use." In describing her condition before taking the Compound, she writes, "I was afraid in my own house in broad daylight. I used to lock the doors and pull down the shades so that nobody could see me." One day a booklet advertising the Vegetable Compound was left on her porch and she read it through. In so doing, she found a letter from a woman whose condition was similar to her own. "I bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Lorberter continued, "and have had fine results. My condition made me a burden to my husband. Now I ask him, 'How is housekeeping?' and he says, 'It is just like being in Heaven!' Are you on the Sunlit Road to Better Health?

THIN, NERVOUS

Virginia Lady Tells of Taking Cardui and Says She Has Since Recovered Perfect Health.

Lynchburg, Va.—"I have taken Cardui several times for a run-down condition and have found it perfectly splendid," says Mrs. Lee T. Marsh, 715 First Street, this city.

"About ten years ago," she explains, "I became so weak I could not go about. I looked like a skeleton and . . . was dreadfully worried about myself. A friend suggested Cardui and I decided to try it. . . .

"I kept up the medicine until I had taken six bottles. It regulated and built me up. I improved greatly.

"Last year we drove up here through the country from Florida. I was exposed to the weather and must have taken cold, for I became ill . . . I got run-down, lost flesh, . . . could not sleep and had no appetite at all. I was so nervous that I did not know what to do.

"I thought of Cardui. I began to take it regularly and it was not long before I began to feel better. I took six bottles, one after another, and at the finish of the last one was perfectly well again. Since then I have continued gaining in weight and all winter have been in perfect health."

A SUPERANNUATED PREACHER, LACKING THE COMMONEST NECESSITIES OF OLD AGE EXISTENCE, IS A MOVING PICTURE OF HIS CHURCH'S SPIRITUAL POVERTY

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

There are many otherwise very good people who seem utterly without conscience toward the superannuated preachers. Perhaps these people would think and act differently if they would pause to remember that said preachers were their dearest friends in childhood, led them to Christ, sanctified their marriage vows, walked with them when the clouds were low, helped them in life's most difficult plaaces, tenderly buried their loved ones, and lovingly coaxed back the smiles and sunshine to their bereaved souls. How can men and women be so ungrateful as to be unmindful of these noble friends of yesterday? These dear old preachers sit in their loneliness of superannuation and think over the days when they served as pastors in charge of churches. In mental picture they see the thousands whom they served, and they wonder if these thousands have forgotten. Have they?

A new movement was launched by the War Camp Community Service to keep up the morale of the discouraged soldiers. Means must be taken, said the workers, to avoid despondency on the part of the man who has discarded his uniform. Hitherto he has been praised and treated like a hero, but in his civilian dress he becomes a part of the mass of mere men, and is likely to become BLUE. If this is true about these young, vigorous and physically perfect returned soldiers, what can be said about the superannuated preachers? After having served in the front line trenches of the Lord's army from thirty to fifty years, and receiving merely a bare living, they are suddenly retired on a small allowance to live in poverty and loneliness during the remainder of their days.

THINGS WE LOVE.

By Willie C. Page.

The gleaming stars, the hush of night,
The soft, pale glow of the fading light;
A mother's smile, a penitent tear,
Laughter of little children sweet and clear;
The radiant beauty of youth, the blue hills high,
Deep ferny dells where the south winds sigh;
A glad, welcome smile, willing, helping hand;
The spirit of Spring brooding o'er the land,
Long dreaming days that summers bring;
The kingdom of home, where love is king;
White, billowing clouds that come and go;
The waiting fires, where the home lights glow;
Buttercups, where God's gold is spilled,
Every blossom with thoughts of him is filled;
A slender tree with leaves soft and green,
The trumpet vine blooms like jewels between;
Love notes of thrush, the silver, gray mist;
Dew sparkling on the grass like amethyst;
A lone pine tree in solemn grandeur stand,
A temple built by God's own hand.

INTIMATIONS OF IMMORTALITY.

One of a Series of Lenten Addresses.

By Rev. James W. Sells.

"If any one wants to go with me, he must disregard himself, and take his cross day after day and follow me."—Luke 9:22 (Goodspeed).

The ethics of the Christian religion are essentially simple. They are not complicated, but have been made so. The ethics that we are taught and believe center around the life of Jesus Christ. They consist of self-sacrifice, self-denial, self-less-ness, goodness, patience, virtue, kindliness, courtesy, justice, mercy and love.

At one time Jesus while praying by himself turned and began questioning the disciples concerning the identity given him by the world, also who his disciples thought he was. Peter finally received a heaven-sent inspiration and proclaimed Jesus to be the Christ of God, the Messiah. At this statement of the truth Jesus warned them not to tell the world who he was, and also warned them of the future.

This was the first intimation he gave them of the ignominious end of his earthly life that lay before him. He warned them of persection, of suffering, of ridicule, and, worst of all, of being cast out by the ruling class. Then, his eyes ablaze with the light of eternal truth, he issued a challenge of undying force: "If you want to go with me, you must forget all about yourself, be prepared for shame, for pain and for guilt, but come and follow me."

All the translations save Goodspeed's translate this Greek word, "deny," but Goodspeed says the better translation is "disregard."

Deny—disregard: one asceticism, the other self-less-ness. One has been the battle ground of the Roman church, was the strength of the middle ages, and is the death to all vital physical force.

Deny means: physical comforts refused, clothing, food, shelter, and similar necessities voluntarily given up, so that our inner man might of necessity become nearer the spirit of Jesus. A little of it is good, but too much of it tears the heart out of this message.

But—I wonder if the Christian church has missed the meaning of this thought of Jesus. It is folly for me to stand here and endeavor to reinterpret a passage contrary to the educated fathers of the church. Upton Sinclair says the church is the church of the aged, ruled by them, and the vitality of youth is missed in the ruling councils. To return.

Deny in the sense given before is not what Jesus meant—at least the connotation given the word "deny" to-day.

Disregard is better. Disregard yourself, your future, your present, all the selfish thoughts you have for present ambition; disregard them, plunge into this life with me, throw yourself into it, cast off every mental straint, enlist and forget the cares of life. I can imagine I hear him speaking these and similar words. If I am to be the leader, I will supply the needs.

Deny is physical, disregard is mental. If you want to go with me, throw off these mental handicaps that are limiting you, and come on. Disregard this physical kingdom you are thinking of, with place, honor and fame foremost, and come on—we will see what the Father has in store for us.

If that is the meaning of the first passage, how do you reconcile the message of the cross?

Here, what was Jesus talking about the cross for in this stage of his teaching? How did his disciples react to this? I wonder. What did they know about the cross? They did not know he was going to bear the cross; and what did he mean when telling them to bear a cross? They would look very pitiful now, would they not, if we applied this literally, denying themselves the physical comforts and emaciating their bodies so they might carry heavy crosses? Each one now, emaciated, weak, starving, hungry, thirsty, struggling down the path under a cross? If you are going to interpret "deny" literally, you must so interpret the other. If you are going to demand a life of asceticism and declare it one of the essentials of the Christian life, then prepare to have a body of church people weakened when the onslaughts of the armies of evil approach. And one will fall before temptation, if physically weak.

What did the cross mean?

It was the Roman form of punishment taken over from the Babylonians. It was a slave's punishment, and carried with it the idea of shame, guilt and pain. This, the mental anguish, was greater than the physical.

Jesus said to his disciples: "Can't you see that I am going to be refused by the elders of the church, can't you see that there is nothing ahead of us but pain, suffering and shame? Why, look how the rulers of the church laugh at me and seek to put me to death even now. And this is but the half of it. They are going to put me to death. I will die on the cross also. What good is it going to do man to gain even the whole world—he will only lose it? So take up your cross every day and follow me. See where I go. There will be shame. There will be pain. There will be guilt. There will be ignominy. But ah yes—more than all these, there will be the Father waiting for us. The angels with him, all these will be waiting for us."

Paradox of paradoxes! But it is true. Can pain and suffering, shame and guilt, lead to the house of the Father? He intended that they would—and they will.

If you are desirous of following him now, disregard yourself.

Lent?

Yes, but what does it mean? No bridge parties, few picture shows, no sweets, no liquor (if they bootleg it against the law, they will bootleg it against the church). Lent means but a little of minor self-denial.

But disregard yourself to-day.

Forget about your selfishness, your cares, your business, and come and follow. If this be Lent, then let's obey the Master's real command.

Let's forget about our own desires; let us think of His. Let us launch out on this exploration of personality and see where Jesus would lead us.

Take up your cross.

What shame is there in the Christian religion to-day? What pain? What guilt? What disgrace?

It is popular with the wealthy, with the socially elect, with the landed gentry. But what about the ones Jesus came to find?

Also: Where is the person that to-day dares to live literally the command of Jesus and live according to his social ethic? If one did, there might be more that would have guilt. Guilty in the eyes of the multitude for doing the unpopular thing, for going contrary to the church, to the established idea of the ruling class. Jesus may or may not have been a socialist, but he was an individualist.

Take up your cross. But not in the weak-kneed submission to the little petty cares of to-day; not in pathetic meekness; not with hung head and cowed heart. Not that.

Take up your cross that lies before you and it keeps you from the fullest expression of your faith in service to your master. If you are going to carry your cross, make it serve you. Make it be the medium of asseveration and annunciation of the principles of the Kingdom of Heaven. Make it assist to usher in an era of peace between man and man, home and family, nation and State—an era of friendship, of love, and of good will.

Meek submission to a petty cross? Never!

But masterful submission to a crucifying cross? Yes, always!

This same cross which crucifies you remains a sign post to humanity of a spiritual victory won, and points to a path that leads on to social justice and moral revolution; that leads on to an establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth.

What is a cross for, save to crucify an individual?

Then be crucified every day; forget your self, be self-less, and be crucified in an endeavor to bring the knowledge of the Son of God to this sin-sick and suffering world.

"If any one wants to be with me, he must disregard himself and take his cross day after day and follow me."

But remember, if you carry a cross, you follow him to crucifixion; also, if you follow him to and through crucifixion, you also follow him to the resurrection morn where the Father will be awaiting faithful sons of God.

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 5.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will boost, instead of knocking and criticising his church and pastor.

"Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world." Phil. 2:14-15.

"Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm." Ps. 105:15.

Harmony and concord should permeate the very spirit of every church. Sin is the only thing that makes for discord. We should boost our church; it is a part of the greatest institution on earth. No church can command the respect of the outside world that allows discord to distroy its self-respect.

COMPARING NOTES WITH THE EDITOR OF THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

By Rev. S. S. Bogan.

Dr. Carley, in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of March 17, assumes the role of defender of the action of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in its recent meeting in Memphis, Tenn., and labors hard to justify their revolutionary pronunciamento. He is persuaded that they did "an entirely proper thing," and presumes to understand the saying of these wise men and is able to divine the mind and interpret the words of these gentlemen, both as to motive and action, in this affair. That they did not presume to speak and act officially for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, it was not in their minds to do so. I have access to a number of publications; and I am sure that none of these gentlemen has ever so much as hinted that in their deliberations and actions at their meeting in Memphis they had relinquished their official relation to the church or disavowed their official actions. They acted officially, and to the extent of capacity and authority, and not "ex parte." Therefore their action carried the full weight of the official action of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Had these gentlemen spoken and acted out of conference and as individuals, then their asseverations would have carried the weight of personal opinion and not have directly involved the great name of the church. But these gentlemen did not act and speak as individuals, but as a body of men legally appointed, duly organized and lawfully assembled in conference, and the resolution they passed was ex cathedra, the voice and act of the Association. No organized corporate body of men in lawful assembly can by any strain of the imagination or personal avowal dissociate from their voice and action the weight and influence of their official cognoman.

The gentlemen acted in their official capacity, with all that implies, and if their official designation is not a misnomer and does not belie itself, then the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have presumed to speak officially for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and use its prestige and moral influence to give weight and authority to their official actions.

No man can act in a representative and public capacity within a legal and lawfully assembled body of which he is a member in any private capacity. True, they may incur personal responsibility and express their private views incidentally, in recording and announcing the corporate act of the body. And the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has acted and spoken in its official capacity, and is the responsible party in the transaction.

What shall we say of the resolution that was passsed by an almost unanimous vote of the Association? When we study it parallel with its source and origin, it is in every respect a covert act, and we wonder what the motive purpose back of the resolution. For it expresses, neither by word nor implication, the matter in dispute. Though the teaching of evolution in the schools and colleges was in the forefront of their discussions, and was the subject matter for their deliberation, and was the primary element in the origin of their resolution and its main inspiration, yet the fact appears nowhere in the body of the resolution.

If those of the reportorial persuasion who reported the proceeding of that Memphis meeting were approximately correct, the questions before the house for consideration and passage seems to be, How can we maintain and sustain the teaching of evolution in the American schools and colleges? And how may we circumvent the law, and teach evolution in those States where it is prohibited by legislative enactment? And how can we keep anti-evolution legislation from spreading to other States?

Yet when they came to embody their conclusion in a resolution, lo, the whole subject drops out of sight while they hedge about matters that are not in the least exposed to any attack, in the which they contend for what has never been in dispute. They play up an alarm, and cry fire! then deliberately conceal the location of the fire and the object of attack.

What was the object, if it was not the purpose and aim of these gentlemen who framed and supported that resolution to deceive the church and mislead the public? Why did they take so much pains, and exercise such caution in the wording of it, so as to omit any reference to evolution, and silently ignored the one and only object of attack?

I have read and heard read literally scores and scores of resolutions, but not until now have I read one that was altogether foreign to the subject matter, and contains not a word or hint of the thing it is supposed to boost and protect.

Dr. Carley says: "The fundamental objection to legislation that specifies what shall and what shall not be taught in our tax-supported schools lies in the fact that such action makes truth simply a matter of legislative majority." The Doctor places his emphasis on the word truth, under which he is pleased to arrange the whole subject matter of our school curriculum as taught in our schools and colleges, and with the others he includes evolution, though he admits he knows very little about it. Yet he affirms it to be a highly technical subject. I wonder if the Doctor has ever thought of the probable results to evolution should it be divested of its technical and speculative elements and left to stand on its own merits, and factual basis? One can easily imagine and visualize the clatter, wreck and ruin of the fall of evolution, if its exponents dared to take away just this one prop—Assumption.

Again, the Doctor says: "That evolution is involved in the present agitation for legislation is simply an incident."

Evidently in this, the Doctor's logic is wrong and his conclusion false; for evolution is not in the least sense incidentally related to the present agitation for legislation, but is the primary cause, particular object and elemental source, and involves nothing besides itself. Evolution alone is at stake—none of the fundamental truths or factually established sciences are in the remotest danger.

And as for the Doctor's facetious illustration as a buttress to his argument, the asseverations of Mr. Voliva concerning his belief that the earth is flat, is merely grabbing at a straw to boost an argument. Why capitalize on Mr. Voliva's ignorance? He gave voice only to a peculiar belief and one of the vagaries of his cult; that particular phase of his faith does not compromise and involve any fundamental tract or doctrine of the Holy Scriptures. A man might believe the earth is flat and still be a man, but if he believes evolution and follows it to its sequence, he comes to recognize himself only a highly developed beast of the earth. He goes in a man and comes out a beast.

Again, the Doctor says: "It is utterly foreign to the genius of Christianity to demand the propagation of its teachings and defense of its doctrines by legal means." This is another one of his all-inclusive conclusions, in which he assumes evolution to be a doctrine and teaching of Christianity. Since when was evolution embodied in the standard doctrines of Christianity in general, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in particular? Evolution is the antithesis of Christianity and foreign to both its teaching and doctrines. They have absolutely no point of attachment nor element of agreement. You can no more Christianize evolution and have evolution, than you can evolutionize Christianity and still have Christianity.

Finally, the Doctor says: "The best way, in my opinion, to preserve the religious faith of our students and promote the development of their moral character is to see to it that our teachers are men and women who themselves believe in God." Fine! The Doctor has turned up a hard nut to crack. His plan is admirable and desirable, but under the present school regime it is neither feasible nor yet expedient.

To demand of the applicant for position of teacher in any of our schools his personal affirmation of faith in God, would really be no test of moral fitness to teach, and would fall far short of the exigency of the situation.

The fact is, even now under the present system, a very large majority of our public school teachers not only affirm faith in God, but are members of some Christian church. Nevertheless, the teaching of evolution in our schools goes right on, and is more and more a menace to the faith and morals of our children; and the same condition prevails in our State universities and colleges, to say nothing of the church schools. As long as evolutionary matter is embodied in the text books of our schools, so long will it be taught, Christianity or no Christianity, protest or no protest. The only way out is to bar the text itself from our schools, and that can be accomplished only by anti-evolution legislation. So let us have it.

"AGREES WITH THE RESOLUTION OF THE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION."

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

In the Advocate of March 24, Rev. W. T. Bazzel replies to my protest against the resolution adopted by the Educational Association, and I suppose the editor will allow me space for a rejoinder. Let me state in the outset that I have no wish to engage in a controversy with my brother, and even if I so desired my busy pastorate would forbid. Before I begin my rejoinder I want to compliment Brother Bazzel on the literary style and argumentative quality of his aritcle. He is a good writer, and I only regret that he does not cultivate his writing ability and use it in a better cause.
